7 Faculty Appointed Members

Administration Obtains 5 New Staff Members

President Dabney S. Lancaster has announced the appointment of seven new faculty members and five new administration members for the 1949-50 college year.

Dr. John W. Molnar will head the music department; Miss Fern E. Staggs will be professor home economics; Mr. Thomas A. Malloy, Jr., will assume the position of social studies instructor; Mlle. Suzanne Girard wil be part-time French and Latin instructor; and Miss Betty Spindler will be assistant in the audio-visual education department. Mr. Robert C. Vickers will be assistant professor of art; and Miss Catherine J. Osborne will be assistant professor of physical and health education.

The new staff members are Miss Irving Armstrong, assistant to the librarian; Miss Mildred K .Neale, head nurse in the infirmary; Mrs. Grace G. Slayton ,dormitory hostess; Miss Gwendolyn Cress, assistant to the Dean of Women. Mrs. P. B. Woodward will replace Mrs. Mary M. Province, assistant dietitian.

Dr. Molnar is a graduate of the Cincinnati Conservatory of the University of Cincinnati, holding a Bachelor's and Master's Degree in music and science from that institution. He obtained his doctorate in Education from the University of Cincinnati. Last year he was director of the University of Cincinnati Glee Club and head of the music department in the Hughes High School in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Miss Staggs is a graduate of Baker University at Baldwin Kansas. She holds a Master's degree in home economics from the University of Missouri and is now working on her doctorate at Iowa State College. Miss Staggs has taught home economics both in high schools and in colleges. From 1941 to 1945, she was head of the home economics department at Lindenwood College, in St. Charles, Missouri, and in 1947 taught home economics at Missouri University.

Mr. Malloy, a native of Newton, Massachusetts, has received his Master's degree from Colgate University at Hamilton, New

AKG Will Present First Dance of Year In Rec Tomorrow

The recreation hall in Main building tomorrow night will be the scene of the first juke box dance of the current session, sponsored by the local Joan Circle of Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary leadership society. The informal dance will last from 10 until 11:45 p. m., Jackie Wright, circle president said.

Dance admission will be ten cents per person at the door. A.K.G. members have extended an invitation to the entire student body to attend the dance and bring guests.

Members of the faculty and administration who have been invited to chaperon the affair are Dean Ruth Gleaves, Miss Gwendolyn Cress, Miss Dorothy Daniels, Mr. Raymond H. French, Dr. John W. Molnar, Mr. Robert C. Vickers, and Mr. Thomas A. Malloy, Jr.

Proceeds from the dance will go to the "discretionary fund" which Joan Circle is raising for the use of the College home department staff.

Greetings!

It is with real satisfaction that I welcome our new students as well as our former students to Longwood College. You who are members of this year's freshman class are the first to enter the college under its new name, and I congratulate you upon your opportunity to start a course that will be marked, I am sure, by fine accomplishments. You who are here for the first time will be conscious of the friendly attitude of everyone at Longwood. Learning how to get along with others is the key to success and happiness in life, and you will have every opportunity to learn this lesson here.

All of us on the faculty and staff will consider it a privilege to help you in every possible way. Be sure to call upon us.

Finally, I can wish for you this year nothing better than that you be guided by the inscription that appears on the gateway of my own Alma Mater: "May you seek the way of honor, the light of truth, the will to work for men."

Dabney S. Lancaster
President

I have had the pleasure of corresponding with each of you before your arrival here and of telling that we were looking forward to your coming. However, I appreciate this opportunity to join with others of the college in extending to you a hearty welcome.

We are glad that you are here. We hope that the year ahead will be one of the most pleasant and profitable that you have ever had.

Please call on me at any time for any help I may be able to give you.

Sincerely yours,
William W. Savage
Dean of the College

On behalf of the Home Department I extend a most cordial welcome to our freshmen and transfers from the various colleges. We hope that you will soon feel that you are a part of the College and learn to love it as all Longwood students have done.

It is both a pleasure and privilege to welcome the former students on their return. May this year prove to be a most successful one for all of you.

Most sincerely,
Ruth Gleaves
Dean of Women

Class In Freshmen Problems To Begin

A course in freshman problems will be taught by Dean Ruth Gleaves, Miss Gwendolyn Cress and Mrs. Grace G. Slayton beginning next week. This class will meet once a week at a time to be determined as soon as all freshmen schedules are completed and will continue for the entire first semester. All freshmen will be required to take this course.

This class is to be taught for the purpose of helping the new student to adjust to college life.

Some of the topics to be covered by the course in freshman problems are "Learning to Live with Others and Adjustment to College Life", "Wise Expenditure of Time and Funds", "Learning in College", "Personality Development", and "Leisure Time and Hobbies."

Among the other topics to be taken up are "Developing a Wholesome Philosophy of Life", "Achieving Mental and Physical Health", and "Family and Home Life".

Conditions conducive to good study, use of the library, and notetaking will be taken up under the topic "Learning in College". Under the head of "Personality Development will be included personal grooming, poise, charm, social usage and conversational ability.

Notice

Y. W. C. A. "big sisters" are reminded to arrange with their "little sisters" to attend the reception tonight at 8 p. m. in the gymnasium.

Entertainment in the gymnasium will be provided following the reception. Members of the sophomore, junior and senior classes will present "take-off" skits depicting highlight events on the College calendar.

Churches Acquire 2 New Directors

Two new student directors have taken over the student activities of the Methodist and Baptist churches respectively. Miss Marian Hallock will replace Miss Ruth Bailey as Director of the Methodist Student Center, and Miss Lucille Peak will replace Miss Chris Flint as Director of the Baptist Student Center.

Miss Hallock, who is from Twin Falls, Idaho, received her Bachelor of Science Degree in Pre-Nursing from the University of Idaho in 1946. In the fall of 1946, she entered the Stanford University School of Nursing in California, where she practiced nursing for one year. She received her Master of Arts Degree in Religious Education in June, 1949, from Scarritt College for Christian Workers in Nashville, Tenn.

While at Scarritt College, Miss Hallock was actively associated as an Intern at the Nashville Foundation Center. During the past summer, Miss Hallock attended Garrett Biblical Institute, Northwestern University at Evanston, Illinois, where she was a student in the Methodist Student Worker's Institute.

Miss Hallock has received intensive training and broad experience. She comes highly recommended by her instructors and leaders in the Church. Specifically her work will be to broaden and enlarge the work of the Church with College Students both at Longwood and Hampden-Sydney College. She will also act as a general counsellor and friend to young people in the local church.

Miss Peak, who is from Long Island, Virginia, was graduated from Madison College, Harrisonburg, in 1946, with a Bachelor of Science Degree. She taught mathematics at the Charlottesville High School for a year.

Pres. Lancasater Announces Plans For New Building

New Science Hall Nears Completion

The architects have completed the drawings for the new auditorium and music building to be erected on the north west corner of the campus facing High street, President Dabney S. Lancaster announced today.

The plans have been sent to Richmond for final approval by the state engineers and advertisment for bids is expected to be made within the next ten days. Authorities will be open for bids for thirty days at the end of which time the bids will be reviewed. If a bid within the appropriation from a satisfactory contractor has been received the contract will be let and construction should start as soon as possible.

Preliminary sketches for the new dormitory to replace White House have been completed and detailed plans and specifications are now underway. No date has been set for their completion.

The science hall now under construction immediately behind Cunningham Hall has been promised for occupancy by the beginning of the second semester. Considerable progress was made on this building during the summer months.

Forces are now at work on extending a "Walk-in" tunnel for the heating system. The present tunnel ends between the training school and the dining hall and the extension will take it to the new science hall and the auditorium.

Professor Resigns

President Dabney Lancaster has announced the resignation, effective last spring, of Dr. Francis Butler Simkims, formerly professor of history and social sciences here. Dr. Simkins is now employed as permanent member of the staff of Louisiana State University.

While on leave of absence from the College during the session of 1948-49 Dr. Simkins was a visiting professor at Louisiana State. Of the several historical works Dr. Simkins has authored, his most recent publication is The South, Old and New.

New Students Number 154

Longwood College has enrolled approximately 600 students for the 1949-50 term, Dean Savage said today. He added that registration has not been complete as yet, and exact enrollment figures could not be determined for several days.

Twenty-six men will be among the student body this year, eighteen of whom are veterans of World War II. Freshmen and transfer students together total approximately 154.

The enrollment of 600 has been noted as a slight decrease over the enrollment of 689 for last year. Freshmen enrollment, too, has been reduced slightly from 198 for last year to 133 this year.

College officials account for the decrease in freshmen enrollment by citing the 12-year public school program inaugurated in many counties which drastically reduced last year's high school senior classes in the state. President Lancaster has added that although the enrollment has been lowered this year, he feels this is preferable to lowering the college standards. He expressed the belief that in the future the enrollment will increase yearly.

Twenty-seven out of state students have enrolled this year. They have come to the college from Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Florida, New York, New Jersey and Tennessee. One student, Iva Jean Hearst, has recently come to the United States from Tokyo, Japan.

Hall Presidents Elected Thursday

Hall presidents were elected last night at meetings held on each hall. Nominations were presented and voted upon by the members of the hall. A representative of House Council presided at each meeting, and explained the new system of electing Hall Presidents.

A reelection has been called for on second floor of Senior Main, because there was no House Council representative to preside at that meeting. At press time the results of the reelection were unavailable. The list of assistants to the Hall Presidents has not been completed as yet.

The Hall consisting of the rooms from 96 to 103 on second floor of Main Building elected Amanda Wright as their Hall President; 93 to 87 elected Helen Tanner; 79 to 86, Jane Thomas, 74 to 78, Betty Abbott.

On third floor main Lou Jamison was elected for rooms 117 to 124; Jean Mercer for 125 to 132; Margaret Steel for 133 to 140; Polly Brothers for 141 to 149.

Mary E. Burton will serve as Hall President for 3rd floor Post Office and Betty Ralston for second floor.

First Floor Annex will have Sarah Bowling and June Foreman as Hall Presidents; second floor, Margaret Thomas and Mary Crawford; and third floor, Shirley Livesay and Nancy Walthall.

Third floor Student Building elected Jo Orr as their president, and second floor elected Betty Ralston.

In Junior Building, Lucy Edmonds will serve on first floor; Emma Mae Pittard and Georgia Bailey, second floor; and Mary B. Smith and Jennine Powell, third floor.

In Senior Building, Marilyn Wheeler was elected as president

Seniors of 1950 Reminisce As Last Year Faces Them

By Janice Slavin

How does it feel to be a senior, seniors? Realizing that this is the last return to college brings about mixed feelings—some are glad—some are sad, but for the most part we are joyful that we have outworn the greeness of our Freshman year.

As we turn back the pages of time to our freshman year, we remember what a state of utter confusion we were in.

We entered the Rotunda. Someone said, "You matriculate in Room 22." Matriculate? Was that something to eat?

Then came schedules and classes. Who could find the classrooms? We couldn't. Plop! Somebody was down. Yep, the highly waxed floors made the infirmary casuality list large. Then there is the case of one freshman who couldn't find the door that lead out to the tennis courts. She solved the problem by jumping out the window every day for a year. This was quite a sight to say the least! Incidentally, this particular freshman is no better off today. We won't mention names but her initials are L. E.

Classes were certainly different too. Imagine no one throwing paper wads! What sort of a place was this ANYWAY ? ?

We had a gay time our freshman year, though, in spite of the fact that it took a whole year to find out what the score was. Everything was new, and we looked forward to each event with great anticipation.

After three long, hard years in college, we have lost much of our vim, vigor, and vitality. We are now beat-up wrecks with every qualification of a school teacher. We are also good advertisements for one of these "before and after" jobs. Only the situation would be reversed—the before picture being much better of course.

This year we walked into the building to find a beautiful new paint job. The only thing wrong is that the windows were painted shut, too.

Practice teaching stares us in Words To The Would-Be Wise . . . .

Now is the time for all good editors to come to the aid of freshmen with words of sage advice and comfort. But as we scratch our editorial domes and ponder over the portentous message we should bring, we find ourselves more bewildered than the traditional "bewildered freshman." Selecting tidbits from our store of collegiate experience to soothe the souls of uncertain freshmen proves to be no easy task.

First of all, the Rotunda staff wishes to add a sincere "Welcome" to the many which have already been proferred the new students. They come to a college which though rich in tradition, spirit, and accomplishment is waiting to be still further enriched by their contributions. This year's crop of neophytes will not disappoint their alma mater. Soon however, the welcome mat will be brought in, as happens when the student body settles down to succeeding in studies and social life. Casting back to our own freshman days, we recall this time as the most difficult of the adjustment period. As orientation week drew to a close and upperclassmen busied themselves with their great works, we remember a feeling of complete nonentity settling over us. A complex not unlike our own may take hold of many new students in the course of the next week, and we hereby in all our senior sagacity advise them rout this old freshman bugaboo.

That each new Longwood student is a very vital part of her college cannot be overemphasized. Some students will realize this and lose that "green" feeling in a short time, while others will not quite feel at home until they have become wise and foolish sophomores. Still it's important for every new student to know that her presence here means new and greater achievements for Alma Mater and student body and that this, her initial year is preparing her to play a more active role in the Longwood student body and in life.

Another choice extract from the annals of our sometimes bitter experience which we wish to offer the new students concerns a point of long contention, extra-curricular activities. Freshmen in particular should be cautioned against contracting that dread undergraduate disease, joining fever. Preventive medicine in this instance is a stout resistance to the siren calls and beckoning arms of the multifarious Longwood organizations. Not that we advocate the new student's locking up herself into an airtight shell of intensive study during every waking moment; but if the new student will take care to choose the one activity that appeals to her most and do that job well, she will soon find herself the possessor of a well balanced college life, an acceptable report card, and good health.

And with this we doff all pretensions to world wisdom and eagerly wait for the new Longwood students to demonstrate themselves fine collegians that they show fair promise of being.

I, Jane Doe, ...

" . . . having a clear understanding of the basis and spirit of the Honor Code created and accepted by the Student Body of Longwood College . . . "

But do you have a clear understanding of the Honor Code? Its place and purpose in life at Longwood will be destroyed if you do not. It is important that every student understands as well as accepts this code.

The Honor Code is more than just a high ideal, it is a very real and practical manner of life to live together with perfect confidence. More than one of the oldest and highest traditions of Longwood College, the Honor Code is the essence of life at Longwood.

The Honor Code is your pledge to carry out the high standards and ideals, the commemorable traditions and the spirit of friendliness which pervade our campus.

In your orientation classes the leaders will explain as best they can the Honor Code and what it means. In your handbook is a facsimile of the Honor Pledge. Before you sign this you should thoroughly understand the Code and be willing to accept and abide by it.

Only with each member of the Student Body working together can the spirit which has always been a part of Longwood exist. You are now an important part of the Student body. Uphold its traditions, ideals and standards—begin by knowing your Honor Code.

Thanks . . . .

Former students who have made even a casual perusal of the '49-'50 Student Handbook have noted with approval the improvement and clarification of the current Women's Student Government rules over last year's hazy regulations.

The Rotunda commends Women's Student Council for rising to student demand for rules they can readily understand.

OUR WORLD

Is 1949 to be another 1929? That is one of the current questions facing Americans today. More than one so-called authority has voted affirmative but then others have firmly denied it. The possibility exists, that it admitted by all. That it can be prevented is becoming the consensus of opinion.

In his mid-year economic report to the Congress, President Truman asserted that it would only be a defeatist admission to allow our economy to run downhill and admit that the forces of progress in our economy have become so feeble that we must content ourselves with lower levels of education, health and housing, international and domestic security, and national development.

Many reasons make 1949 unlike 1929; world stock market speculations so prevalent then is now nonexistent, a big backlog of needs still exists, the building cycle is still in the early stage, farm prices are supported by the government, strong unions and minimum wage laws protect wage income.

Employment is still high, production is still high, but both are lower than last year. The 1949 decline has been moderate. Only by all working together in mutual respect and with common objectives can the progress and expansion necessary for the preservation of the American way of life be effected.

Campus Cogitations

Question (Asked freshmen): "How do you feel now that you're here?"

Kitty Hamlet: If this is an example of college life, I love it.

Jessie Amory: I like the atmosphere.

June Morgan: I love it here because everybody is so friendly.

Dot Boswick: I think it's swell. I like the people but I don't know what I'll do when the studying starts.

Winston Johnson: It has the friendliest atmosphere of any place I've heard of.

Rosa Bishop: It just feels good to be here.

Nancy Reed: I'm glad to be here too.

Nell Bradshaw: I just love it 'cause everybody is so friendly.

Margaret Taylor: It's just a wonderful place.

Sis Burton: I'd give a million dollars to be home.

Helen Fores: It's like a second home.

Lorene Wegner: I'm looking forward to a wonderful time.

Jean Partridge: I haven't gotten settled. Home would be pretty good tonight.

Doris Jones: I feel wonderful... better than yesterday.

Janice Pinkard: I feel wonderful, only I'm tired.

Donna Kunkler: I love it and I'm enjoying myself.

Margaret Steele: Everybody is so friendly.

Ann Murphy: I'm a little homesick but due to the friendly people I like it fine.

Mary Ann Johnson: So far I think I'm going to like it.

Pat Taylor: I'm not homesick now that I've gotten settled.

Frances Graube: I feel like I've been here for a year.

Helen Barrow: I'm beginning to get acquainted and I just love it.

Joann Steck: I feel like I was born here.

Julia E. Olivier: I feel like home. It's a nice place.

Bobbie Obenshain: It's like a dream come true.

Alumni Notes

The Alumnae Association welcomes all new girls to Longwood and especially the girls whose mothers or grandmothers were our former students. Mrs. Ruth H. Coyner, alumnae secretary, would be glad if these girls would drop in the Alumnae office so that she might give them a special welcome.

The Alumnae Association is sponsoring the Snack Bar as a service to our college. For your convenience special stationery with a picture of the college is there. On October 1, notepaper with four scenes of the college in hand-drawn lithographs will arrive. Later, Christmas cards will be on sale. If the students like these the Snack Bar will handle them permanently.

We welcome two alumnae of last year's class to our college staff, Miss Gwendolyn Cress, assistant to the Dean of Women and Miss Dorothy Daniel, teacher of first grade in the training school.

Rotunda Will Hold Try-Outs For Staff

All students who are interested in working this year on the staff of the Rotunda will have an opportunity to sign up for try-outs during the next few weeks, Jackie Eagle, editor-in-chief, announced today.

According to Jackie there are vacancies in practically every department. No previous experience is required, though all who have worked on school publications are urged to come out for the staff. A training class for staff members will be conducted by the editorial board, in which all the principals and practices used by the Rotunda will be taught the apprentices.

"This is a splendid opportunity", said Jackie, "for anyone who is interested in journalism to obtain first hand experience in newspaper publication." Besides the openings on the editorial staffs there are a large number of positions open on the typing, proofreading, copyreading and advertising staffs. There is also a great need for girls who have free time Wednesday afternoon to help the circulation manager distribute the copies throughout the dining hall.

402 Attend LC Summer Session

Thirty-two summer students received baccalaurate degrees at the final exercises of the 1949 Longwood summer session last month. Summer session enrollment totalled 402 students, including both men and women. This figure represents an increase of 33 over 1948 summer enrollment.

The four summer workshop courses offered here last session were attended by 173 students. Completed were a Workshop for Teachers, Physical and Health Education Workshop, Workshop in Remedial Reading, and Guidance Workshop. The workshop classes, an increasingly popular feature of the College summer session offered opportunities for special study and assistance to teachers concerned with various problems in the field of education.

Library Shows 21 Watercolors

Twenty-one watercolors by United States artists are on view to the public in the Browsing Room of the Library at Longwood College. This exhibit continues through September 26. It is an exhibition of original watercolor paintings by contemporary American artists and is circulated by the Extension Department of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in Richmond, Virginia.

Many of the country's outstanding painters are represented among the group. Included is Horace Day, professor of Art at Mary Baldwin College in Staunton, Virginia. His painting, "Edwardian Baroque," should be of particular interest to Virginians. Mr. Day's paintings have been chosen for the first exhibition of the season at the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts. This artist's works have been shown in no less than 40 museums and he has had 13 one-man shows. His work is represented in the permanent collection of several museums, including the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts.

The current exhibition in the College Browsing Room appeals to student and layman alike. Included with the paintings is information on watercolor techniques and brief biographies of the artists whose work is exhibited.

This is the first of a series of nine exhibits which is being sponsored by the Library and the Art Department of Longwood College. The work exhibited will be sent out to the college library by the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts.

Other subjects to be covered are: Old Virginia architecture, prints and drawings by Virginia artists, Italian masters, Recent paintings of Virginia artists, Charles Smith's Zoo, Colored woodcuts by Prasconi, Three Mexican artists, and the human figure in child art.

Students Register For Night Classes

Registration for the second session of the Evening Division of Longwood College has been held this week. Any persons interested in evening classes may register at the Office of the Dean of the College until Saturday. Registration will also be held in the West Wing (the building directly across from the library on Pine street) Monday night, September 26.

Present students at Longwood College may enroll in the evening classes, provided they will not be carrying more than 18 credits, including day class credits.

Classes for the first semester will begin during the week of September 25, 1949, and will end during the week of January 29, 1950. Each course will be sixteen weeks in length, meeting on week nights in the West Wing. No classes will be held during the weeks of November 20, December 18, or December 25 because of holidays.

The courses offered in these evening classes will be the Old Testament taught by Mr. Charles F. McRae, assistant professor of Bible at Hampden-Sydney College. Beginning Typewriting taught by Mr. Norman O. Myers, associate professor of business education at Longwood College; Beginning Shorthand taught by Mr. Christy Snead, assistant professor of business education at Longwood College; Elementary Accounting taught by Dr. M. L. Landrum, head of the Department of Business Education at Longwood College.

Also English taught by Miss Mary Nichols, associate professor of English at Longwood College; American History to 1865 taught by Dr. Marvin Schlegel, associate professor of history and social sciences at Longwood College; and Public Speaking taught by Robert C. Beale, professor of English at Hampden-Sydney College.

The Evening Division opened for the first time in January, 1949, and has proved so successful that the College now continues it as an important part of its program for this session.

Most classes will meet one night per week. The tuition rate in each course is $20.00. Persons may enroll for no credit, high school credit, or college credit.

Miss Craddock Will Return After Illness

Announcement has been made that Miss Ottie Craddock, assistant professor of business education is convalescing from an illness at Retreat for the Sick in Richmond. She will return to resume the instruction of her classes here next week.

Nurse Announces New Regulations

Several changes in the Infirmary rules have been announced by Miss Mildred K. Neal, College nurse. In a talk to the freshmen Wednesday, Miss Neal explained the new rules which concern hours and small changes in the former regulations.

Sick call hours will be from immediately after breakfast until lunch, and from 5:00 p. m. until 6:00 p. m. There will also be sick call every day after lunch except Sunday. Students are asked not to report between the hours of 2:00 p. m. and 5:00 p. m. or after 6:00 p. m. except in cases of emergency.

Class excuses will not be granted to students for any illness unless the student reports to the infirmary. Roommates or friends can not sign excuses for others.

No food will be issued from the dining hall to students sick in their rooms. Any student who cannot come to meals should report to the infirmary.

These rules will go into effect immediately. A list of sick call hours will be posted on the bulletin board in the hall of the Main building.

SPORTIN' AROUND

As a new school year begins we welcome all the new students—Freshmen and transfers especially, and all the old familiar faces, too. Whether you're Red 'n' White or Green 'n' White we know you'll soon be right in there supporting your class all the way. "The A. A. is yours, and we know you will start from the beginning supporting your class". Ray Phillips said in a talk to the freshmen, but we hope that every student new and old will take her message to heart.

At the A. A. demonstration on "Sport's Day" you will see a little of the ole Longwood Spirit. There will be demonstrations of basketball, hockey, modern dance, softball and other major sports.

Hockey season will be here before you know it and we hope to see lots of new faces on the field. The fall tennis matches are just around the corner, too—so drag out that racket. You'll hear a lot of talk about getting in your eight practices, and we know you're going to have oodles of fun doing it.

We hope the freshmen will catch the friendly competitive spirit which is a tradition here at Longwood College.

Till next week then . . .

A. A. Holds Exhibit

The sport demonstration to be given by the Athletic Association has been postponed until Thursday, September 29, according to the announcement of Ray Phillips, president of A. A.

New students are asked to assemble on the athletic field at 4:45 p. m. on the above date to preview the sports offered by the college.

Representatives Attend Conference

Representatives of Longwood College met with several county superintendents, directors of instruction, and members of the State Department of Education at Natural Bridge September 10-14. Madison College and Radford College were also represented.

Among those from Longwood who attended the conference, were Dr. J. P. Wynn, professor of Education and Philosophy and Director of Teacher Education, Dr. Dabney Lancaster, president, and Miss Alice E. Carter, Associate Professor of Education.

At this conference plans were made to work rather intensively for a year or so on the curricula for teacher education in the state of Virginia, using not only the college facilities, but also representatives in public schools, the State Department of Education, and outside consultants.

Men Formulate Sports Plan For '49-'50 Session At LC

Tennis Tourney Will Be Played

All men and women tennis enthusiasts will have in the near future a chance to present themselves in the planned fall tennis tournaments, which primarily will be held for the possibility of obtaining an approximate idea of who will make positions on the spring varsity squad.

The tournaments will consist of men's and women's singles. The varsity squad, however, will be formed from the best potential players from both men and women equally. Intercollegiate competition is being scheduled by college officials.

Tournament notices and announcements will soon be placed on the bulletin board. All students are urged to take an active part in the fall tennis tournaments. Lester Smallwood will direct the fall tennis tournaments.

11 Students Assist In College Library During '49-'50 Term

Eleven college students have been engaged to work as part-time assistants in the College library for the coming year, according to Dr. M. Beverly Ruffin, college librarian. The library staff has also been subjected to several changes.

Mrs. George W. Jeffers is now working on a full time basis. Miss Irving Armstrong has rejoined the staff after an absence of two years during which time she studied library science at the University of North Carolina. She also served as librarian at the John Marshall High School in Richmond.

For the benefit of the freshmen and new students a course of six lessons on how to use the library will be presented in connection with history III and geography 141. Before beginning this course each student will be required to purchase Martin's How to Use the College Library.

Myers, Malloy Sought as Advisers

By Les Smallwood

Out of thirty co-eds at Longwood College come some bright hopes for well organized athletic activities by the men students. Plans now are being made for the formation of men's basketball and tennis teams in the coming year.

Potential basketball stars are Ned Orange, 6' 5" junior from Farmville, and Bill Beaman, 6' 4" freshman from Crewe. Lester Smallwood, another experienced six footer, should round out an aggressive offensive and tight defensive team by controlling virtually all backboard rebounds with height. Some flashy guards would supposedly provide all that is necessary to form a well balanced team that should be more than respectable in its class. Prospects for those flashy guards are good, with Jimmy Thompson, Jimmy Clark, Hunter Benidict, Frank Vaughn, Doug Paulson, John Huegel, and Stuart McGhee out for all varsity positions packing past court experience. College officials have promised a good collegiate schedule.

The tennis prospects will be led by Lester Smallwood, past No. 1 man and captain elect of Randolph-Macon College tennis team. A good varsity tennis team is expected with all positions open to both men and women players. Experienced hopefuls are Jimmy Thompson, Stuart McGhee, Ned Orange, Madison McClintic, Calvin Hatcher, and Doug Paulson. A few of the women players who will give more than one fellow a run for the team are Clem Allen, Nancy Gillie, Ann Langbien, Clara Borum, Helen Agnew, Romine Mahood, and Patsy Ritter.

In the past there has been very little sports activity by the recently instituted Longwood coeducational system. In 1947 a basketball team was organized with fair results. Stuart McGhee is the only remaining member of that team now at Longwood. This year marks the first serious concentration on an athletic program for

Mrs. Lemen To Supervise Regional Art

LC Will Be Sectional Seat

In September of this year, Mrs. Janice Lemen will become the Regional Supervisor of Art, with headquarters at Longwood College. She will be a resource person with supervision duties in a prescribed area and with part-time teaching duties at Longwood College.

The Special Instruction Division of the State Department of Education has felt the need for a special regional supervisor in art, music, and health education. The Regional Supervisors of these three divisions will provide a systematic way of carrying on the work of each subject in colleges and secondary schools. Eventually it is hoped that a resource person in each field will be placed in every teacher's college. At present, one Health Education Regional Supervisor will be placed in Virginia State College at Petersburg, Virginia. A regional Supervisor of Music will begin work at Radford College this fall.

Mrs. Lemen received her B. S. degree from State College, Cape Girardeau, Missouri, and her M. A. from Peabody College, Nashville, Tennessee. Mrs. Lemen, for the past five years, has been teaching art in Longwood College and has spent one summer in the Eliot O'Hara Water Color School in Maine. For the past two years, she has been taking private lessons from Charles Smith of Charlottesville, Virginia. Both in and out of Virginia, Mrs. Lemen has exhibited her art work in oils and water colors.

Orientation Heads Named By Hylton

Martha "B" Hylton, vice-president of the Women's Student Government has announced the names of the 26 seniors and junior students who have led orientation classes for the new students. The orientation leaders were chosen for personality and record made here at Longwood.

Senior orientation leaders are Helen Arrington, Puckett Asher, June Banks, "Lizzie" Bragg, Robbie Cromar, Frances Dodson, Delores Duncan, Jackie Eagle, Lelia Mae Ferrit, Barbara Grizzard, Helen Harden, Nancy Lee Maddox, Ann Nock, Ray Phillips, Louise Redd, Patsy Ritter, Barbara Sours.

In the orientation classes this week the leaders will explain College rules, customs, and organizations. "B" stated that new students will be tested on the course at a date to be announced later.

Church Directors

In May, 1949, Miss Peak received her Master's Degree in Religious Education. Although she is not a stranger in Farmville, this is the first time that she has worked here.

Miss Peak has been highly recommended by her former associates, and comes well equipped to her directorship. She has begun a full program for the students, and will act also as counsellor to both Hampden-Sydney and Longwood students.

Church Councils Hold Retreats

Executive Council of the local Baptist Student Union held its annual pre-school retreat last week end at the Longwood Estate.

Plans were formulated for welcoming the freshmen and making them feel a part of the church group.

The Methodist Student Council held a retreat September 16 through 18. Several Longwood students returned early to attend the retreat held at the Methodist Center. Among them were Sue Walker, president of the Council, Andy Amas, Dot Dunford, June Foreman, Earl Agee and Stuart McGhee.

York. He did his undergraduate work at Washington and Lee Univeristy and at the University of Virginia.

Miss Irving Armstrong, a Farmville native, and alumna of the College, returns to Longwood College as assistant librarian. She has been librarian at the John Marshall High School library and has taught in other public schools in Virginia. She will have charge of the library public services. Miss Armstrong is a graduate of North Carolina Library School.

The head nurse of the college infirmary will be Miss Mildred K. Neale. Miss Neale attended Madison College and the University of Virginia.

Mlle. Suzanne Girad of Lyons, France, will be a part-time instructor in the French department. Mrs. Grace Slayton of Rocky Mount will be the director of sophomore hall this year.

Miss Betty Spindler, who was graduated here last June, replaced Miss Anna Headlee as assistant in the audio-visual department during the summer session and will continue in this capacity this fall. Miss Gwendolyn Cress, also a member of the Longwood Class of 1949, returned to the College as Assistant to the Dean of Women.

Mrs. P. B. Woodward of Powhatan will replace Mrs. Mary M. Providence as assistant dietitian in the dining hall.

Other changes in the college staff have been announced by Dean Ruth Gleaves. Mrs. Cynthia Green will be Executive housekeeper of the Main building. Replacing Mrs. Eva Warren as executive housekeeper of Cunningham Hall will be Mrs. Katherine Tabb. Mrs. Louise Dugger wil replace Mrs. Tabb in the Tea Room.

Local Professor Authors History

The first copy of Virginia on Guard by Dr. Marvin W. Schlegel, assistant professor of history and social sciences here, will come off the press next month, the author recently announced.

Virginia on Guard which the author calls a "history of the home front," deals with the roles of civilian defense and the State Guard in Virginia during World War II. Published by the Virginia State Library, this book was completed during the summer of 1948 while Dr. Schlegel was working as research associate for the War History Division of the State Library. Virginia on Guard will be cloth bound and profusely illustrated with photographs obtained from files of the Virginia Office of Civilian Defense. The State Library will distribute copies of the book to Virginia libraries, and later it will place the book on sale.

Doctor Schlegel has already had a great deal of experience in writing the history of World War II. As assistant state historian for the Pennsylvania Historical Commission from 1942 to 1947, he was in charge of collecting records of Pennsylvania's participation in the war and shared in the authorship of three war history bulletins issued by the commission. He also prepared a pamphlet, Writing Your Community's War History, published by the American Association for State and Local History as a guide to local war historians.

Since coming to Virginia, he has been associated with Virginia's war history program during the summer months. He was one of the contributors to Pursuits of War, the history of Charlottesville and Albemarle County during World War II, and currently he is writing the history of the city of Norfolk during the recent war for the Norfolk War History Commission.

Vickers, and Dr. Schlegal.

The Robert Fraser Memorial Fund committee will be made up of Miss Ottie Craddock, Miss Foster, and Miss Stubbs.

In charge of Assembly Programs will be Miss Carrie Sutherlin assisted by Dr. Jeffers, Mr. Molnar, Mr. Coyner, Dean Gleaves, Miss Iler, Miss Gwendolyn Cress, and Miss Elisabeth Spindler. Elisabeth Bragg will be the student representative on the committee.

On Dr. Ruffin's Radio committee will be Miss Emily Clark, Mrs. Mildred D. Davis, Mr. Thomas A. Malloy, and Miss Catherine J. Osburn.

Aiding Miss Elizabeth Burger with Schedules of Activities and Entertainments will be Dr. Brumfield, Mrs. E. K. Landrum, Miss Cress, Mr. Molnar, and Miss Girard.

Serving on the Publicity and Rotunda committee, headed by Dr. Schlegel, will be Dean Savage, Mrs. Watkins, Miss Staggs, and Miss Mary Nichols.

Miss Lucille Jennings, associate professor of English, has taken a 90-day sick leave. She plans to be back on duty at the beginning of the coming year.

'STC' Hour Name Change Given By Committee

AA To Present First Program Thurs. at 4:30

Dr. Beverly Ruffin, chairman of the Radio Committee has announced that the W.F.L.O. radio program, formerly known as the "S.T.C. Hour" will henceforth be called the "Voice of Longwood".

The program will be heard at the original time, 4:30 p. m. each Thursday afternoon except during official College holidays.

The program tomorrow is being given by the Athletic Association. Ray Phillips, president of the A.A. is in charge of the broadcast which will be transmitted from the A.A. field during the annual A.A. sports demonstration.

On October 6 will be presented a review of Scott Hart's "Eight April Days", which tells the life of the camp followers accompanying Lee's march from Amelia Court House to Appomattox.

On October 13, Miss Emily Clark will sponsor a piano recital by several of her students. Miss Helen Draper and Mlle. Suzanne Girand, of Lyons, France, will be featured on the program October 20.

The Spanish Club, the Home Economics Department and the Future Teacher's of America Association are planning programs to be presented in the near future.

Recruits are needed to try out for announcing and other positions. All students interested should see Dr. Ruffin as soon as possible.

The "Voice of Longwood" has as its policy the interpretation of campus life to friends and relatives of the College and students in southside Virginia.

Church Groups Announce Plans

Methodist Conference

Officers of the Methodist Wesley Foundation will attend a statewide conference near Harrisonburg this week end. The conference is being held to formulate plans for Wesley Foundations throughout the state for the coming year.

The Wesley Foundation of Cumberland will visit Farmville Methodist church Sunday night. They will present a program to Longwood College and Hampden-Sydney students at the regular meeting of the Foundation, 6:45 p. m.

A get-together was held for Hampden-Sydney and Longwood freshmen last Sunday at the Methodist Student Center. The informal party was held to acquaint the new students. A similar party has been planned for this coming Sunday at which refreshments will be served and entertainment will be planned for those attending.

Presbyterian Supper

The local Westminister Fellowship, Presbyterian youth organization, will hold a supper meeting Sunday evening at Hampden-Sydney College in the old gymnasium, Martha Alice Wilson, Fellowship president, announced yesterday after council meeting.

Dr. W. M. Thompson, who recently assumed the position of minister of the College Church at Hampden-Sydney will lead the worship program, Martha Alice said. Martha extended a cordial invitation to all College students to attend the supper meeting.

Busses carrying local students to the affair will leave from the rotunda Sunday at 5:30 p. m. A

Director States Tryouts For Choir Will End Friday

Work Begins Soon On Xmas Concert

Tryouts for the College Choir will be completed Friday of this week, Dr. T. A. Molnar, director of the choir, stated recently. The applicants will be chosen namely for musical ear and voice quality. Names of the students chosen will appear in the next issue of the Rotunda.

Dr. T. A. Molnar, director of the Choir, plans to begin practice right away on the annual Christmas Concert. After the holidays, the group will begin work in the Spring Concert. Although these two programs will be the main presentations of the year, the Choir will sing at College chapels and similiar meetings.

Probably the Choir will appear on some occasions with the Hampden-Sydney choir, stated Dr. Molnar, and they will also do some work over the radio. Two concert trips, one each semester, have been scheduled for the group.

The choir will meet on Monday and Wednesday at 4:05 in the small auditorium.

No Class Changes Allowed After Friday

No further changes will be permitted in class schedules after 5:30 p. m., Friday, September 30th, Dean William W. Savage announced today.

According to Dean Savage this means that no course can be added after that date. Courses may be "dropped" at any time up to the preparation of grade estimates at the middle of the semester. However, any student withdrawing from a course after that time will receive an automatic grade of "F".

Changes in class schedules may be made only with the approval of Dean Savage.

Summer Class Leaves Gift

To Be Installment On Painting Fund

The summer graduating class of 1949, as their parting gift to the College, left a sum of money to be used as a "painting fund". This money was left as the initial installment of a fund to be used to buy pictures painted by Virginia artists to hang in the College.

Members of this class expressed the hope that the fund would grow steadily and substantially so that the College, in the near future, would own a fine representative collection of Virginia art. Dean Ruth Gleaves, when interviewed, stated that she believed the gift to be a well-chosen one, and encourages the fulfillment of the desire expressed by the recent summer graduating class.

Officials Hold 'Smoker' For Male Students In Lounge To Get Acquainted

Thursday night a men's "Smoker" was held in the student lounge by the college officials for the purpose of getting the fellows together in order that all men students at Longwood may become better acquainted with each other, student and faculty alike.

Cigars, cigarettes, and pipes were in order as the men "chewed the fat" for over two hours. Afterwards Dean William W. Savage brought the gathering to order and introduced every man to the group, giving a thumb nail description of his past, present, and probable future.

The president of the men's student government association, Stuart McGhee, announced that this year's student government officers will be elected in approximately two weeks.

Dr. John W. Molnar, head of the music department, promised the men that he would see that a new song was produced that could be used by the men at Longwood College as their own characteristic anthem. He pointed out that the words should be written by men students. Upon the request of the men students, Dr. Molnar stated that he would meet with the men each Friday afternoon at 4 p. m. and organize a men's chorus.

President Dabney S. Lancaster introduced the new male members of the faculty to the group which included Dr. John W. Molnar, Mr. Thomas A. Malloy, Jr., Mr. Robert C. Vickers. Dr. Lancaster described some of the problems, benefits, and hopes of the college program for men in the past, present, and future. He gave vivid descriptions of the additional male facilities to be installed at the college in the near future. He also expressed the opinion that the co-educational system is here to stay and that eventually he expected that the male-female ratio to become almost half and half. He stated that the co-educational system is both a necessary and desired condition educationally and socially.

Dr. Lancaster pointed out that

Longwood's 'Pert Brunette' From France Enthusiastic About American College Life

MLLE. SUZANNE GIRARD

A true cosmopolite, with a zest for learning and living, is Mlle. Suzanne Girard, recently arrived student-assistant in the College French department and instructor in Latin. Diminutive Suzanne, a native of Lyon, France, is what cliche fanciers would call a "pert brunette"; but Suzanne's personality, full of sparkle and contrasts, prevents her being classified under any common cliche head.

While chatting a literal blue breeze, Suzanne intermittently bemoans her inability to express herself in English, yet she manages to keep her companion entertained for quite a spell. Our money says that that sort of language performance is facility, rather than inability.

Although a large part of her life so far has been devoted to the pursuit of knowledge in France and elsewhere on the Continent, she still believes that academic schools are a poor substitute for the school of life. The holder of the French equivalent of the master's degree (Licenceen Letres) in history and the history of art from the University of Lyon at the age of 19, Suzanne might be expected to compare the American college system unfavorably with the rigorous continental academic scheme. Yet quite the reverse is true. She is enthusiastic about American college programs, replete with extracurricular activities, which she claims better prepare the student for living in society than does the mere acquisition of book knowledge. "After all," she asks, "which is more important?"

Only so diligent a student of life and people as la Girard could have covered some thirty of the forty-eight United States in twenty-four days which she did last May.

Typically, Suzanne rejected train in favor of the bus for most of her trip because it offered a better view of the countryside. Suzanne vows that she knows the American countryside better than that of her native France.

One of Suzanne's choice anecdotes taken from her tour of the States occurred in an Arizona bus. She and her French companion were chatting away in their native tongue when Suzanne, feeling a tap on the shoulder, turned to face a brawny Navajo brave who promptly demanded, "Parlez vous francais?"

No newcomer to this side of the Atlantic is Suzanne who last year was employed as a secretary with the Public Information Department of the United Nations Secretarat. In her work with the French press and radio section of the Department Suzanne was required to divide her time between the Lake Success headquarters and General Assembly and Security Council sessions at Flushing Meadows. Suzanne enjoyed the cosmopolitan atmosphere of the U.N.O., the friendly camaraderie of the secretarial corps, the excitement of "going to Press", and yes, even being attendant on many of the historic Russian vetoes.

Yet even after being a part of history in the making Suzanne is glad to be here in Virginia, whose countryside with its white Colonial-type houses reminds her of "old England". Happy for the contrast of Farmville with New York life, Suzanne maintains that one could live years in New York without getting to know the American people.

It has taken Suzanne only the few days she's been here to decide that she likes life and the people at Longwood. From the reports circulating about the College, it's a certainty that Longwood feels the same way in relation to Suzanne.

Athletic Association Program, Broadcast Tomorrow 4:15 P.M.

Male Students Get Advisors

Plan Formation Of Men's A. A.

Mr. Thomas A. Malloy and Mr. Norman O. Myers will serve the coming year as faculty advisors of the men's athletic association. Their duties and responsibilities will be in directing as much as it is possible for them to do so, the athletic interests of the men. A men's athletic association will soon have to be formed and they will serve in an advisory capacity in its formation as well as in its continuational procedures.

Mr. Myers was graduated from Grove City College in Grove City, Pa., and received his master's from the University of Pittsburgh. He played four years of varsity tennis working himself up to the No. 1 position. He also played one year of varsity golf. Mr. Myers is a U. S. Navy veteran of the last war.

Mr. Malloy was graduated from University of Virginia and did graduate work at Colgate University receiving his graduate degree in history from that institution. He played varsity football and track at Washington and Lee University. He then played semi-pro football and also golf on the side. Mr. Malloy married in '42, enlisted into the Navy and served eight months over seas, and is the proud father of two sons, six years and nine months old respectively.

The men students deem themselves fortunate in having on the staff these two experienced men and their hopes are high for a good athletic program.

Notice

Heads of all College organizations will meet in the small auditorium tomorrow afternoon at 5 p. m., Miss Elizabeth Burger, chairman of the Committee on Scheduling Student Activities announced yesterday.

Students are asked to bring their Student Handbooks with them to the meeting which has been called for the purpose of explaining the activities schedule and regulations of the Committee.

Veterans To Receive Check In October

Veterans who enter or re-enter training in school or college under the G. I. Bill in September may expect to receive their first subsistence check from the Veterans Administration early in November.

These will represent subsistence allowance for the period from the beginning of school through October 31. The next checks should be received the first week of December, covering subsistence for the month of November, and thereafter each month through the school year.

In some cases of early registration, veterans will receive their first checks in October, covering subsistence for school attended in September. These will be cases where the school term has opened early and registration has been completed early enough for the veteran's registration papers to be received by the VA on or before September 30.

AA To Make Blazer Awards

Tomorrow at 4:15 p. m., the annual Athletic Association Demonstration will be held for the freshmen.

The program is to be broadcast over WFLO beginning at 4:30 and will last for 15 minutes. In charge of the radio show will be Ray Phillips, president of the Athletic Association; Patsy Ritter, president of the Monogram and H 2O Clubs, Hilda Edwards, president of Orchesis, and Francis Allen, vice-president of the Athletic Association. Stuart McGhee, president of the Men's Student Government, will represent the men students on the program.

The demonstration will begin with the indoor sports, basketball, volleyball and swimming and will move to the A. A. field where there will be exhibition games of hockey, tennis, archery and softball.

Student Body Picnic

The highlight of the day will be a picnic held on the A. A. field for the student body, at 5:30, at which time the blazers will be awarded.

The blazer winners will be announced in next week's Rotunda. To be entitled to a blue blazer, a girl must have a total of 20 points by the end of her Junior year in sports. White blazers are awarded to those who have won 30 points in a variety of sports. A tabulation of these points can be found in the student handbook.

Patsy also stated that the names of the new Monogram Club members will be revealed after the A. A. Demonstration tomorrow. This honorary society recognizes those students who have shown outstanding sportsmanship in the field of College athletics.

Student Government Reelects Dr. Moss

At the first regular meeting of the student body held last night, Dr. C. G. Gordon Moss was re-elected as advisor to the Women's Student Government Association.

Betty McCree, junior from Richmond, was installed as her class government representative at the same meeting. Betty, who is replacing Louise Taylor, who did not return to College, as representative, was the delegate for her class to Student Standards Committee last year.

During the meeting, several student regulation were emphasized by Government and by Jackie Wright, president of House Council. They were: Freshman and Sophomore students may not date Hampden-Sydney boys or boys coming to the school within a fifty-mile radius on week nights. Second, freshmen may not spend the night in Junior or Senior buildings during the first semester. Finally, study hour on Sunday nights will be observed from 9:00 p. m. to 10:00 p. m.

Elizabeth Bragg, president of Woman's Student Government, stressed the fact that students should no leave wallets containing money lying around. She also stated that a girl should keep only a small amount of money in her room.

A large percentage of the student body was absent from the Student Government meeting last night. Both Dean Ruth Gleaves and "Lizzie" Bragg urged all students to attend the next meeting so that they may participate in discussion of school affairs.

Wanted: College Vandals . . .

New students on this campus have doubtless been impressed, as were their forerunners, with the attractive and well equipped library which is one of the truly bright spots of the Longwood College plant. As the year progresses and new students are called upon to visit the library more and more frequently, they will begin to really appreciate the extensive services the library offers to students here.

Among the many features which combine to make the College library a place for pleasant pursuits are a wide selection of books for reference and for every need, a large collection of current magazines and newspapers, as well as files of back issues, timely and interesting exhibits on current and cultural affairs, a capable and helpful staff, voluminous files of pamphlets and clippings, not to mention the soft chairs and spacious tables. Its pleasant contrast to the uninviting, tomblike libraries many of us have known gives us cause to marvel.

Yet in recent years a few students here have demonstrated a complete lack of appreciation of the library by practicing a type of vandalism there which one would think unlikely, if not impossible, to find among students of college age. With childish disregard for themselves, for their fellow students, for the College honor code, and for Virginia state law, these students have blithely helped themselves to library materials, mutilating and snipping books and magazines at will. Evidently the culprits were unaware of the expensive, often irreparable, damage to the library and of the consequent loss to other students of material necessary in their work. Such vandalism as this cannot and must not be longer tolerated in a student body such as ours in which each woman has bound herself to uphold the honor code in every aspect of college life.

The preservation of the College library as an institution of invaluable benefit to all students is an absolute necessity. But this cannot be accomplished unless each student takes personal responsibility for the task. It is to be hoped that the current year will see an all-out effort by the Longwood student body to put an end to library vandalism.

A Protest . . .

In the past week many students have made the painful discovery, upon attending certain classes for the first time, that these classes required more periods per week than was stated in College catalog and class schedules listings. The busy student, after carefully arranging his schedule to accommodate all required classes and activities, finds the shock of an extra class period hard to sustain. One extra period a week may seem a trivial thing to zealous instructors, but it can overburden the student and upset his routine.

The Rotunda protests this practice of "springing" more class periods on the student than he bargained for, after it is too late to all practical intents to change his his schedule. We wish to respectfully suggest that next year faculty members take care that the number of weekly meetings required by their classes is stated exactly in the catalog and schedule of classes, or if a change is necessitated after publication of the schedule, that they at least give students fair notice of the change.

Co-education–Here We Are . . .

With the installation of a men's dorm Longwood is well on the way to recognized co-education. The State Normal School for Females is only a memory of the past. Although this is not the first year that members of the male sex have attended the College this is the first year that they have become an integral part of almost every phase of life here.

Many of the men are attending Longwood College for the same reason that the majority of women students are—to obtain a teachers' degree. The need for more men in the educational system of Virginia has long been apparent and at least a start toward meeting this need seems to be established.

The social value of a co-educational Longwood College needs no comment. Academic values are present also but these are more subtle in their nature.

The establishment of an active mens' sports program has already been formulated by the male students. Obviously a successful program of this nature will serve to attract even more male students and make an even more extensive program possible.

With men in the class rooms, men working on the publications, a male student government organization, a men's athletic association, a male chorus and even a few male "Granddaughters" Longwood looks forward to a promising future as a co-educational college.

OUR WORLD

By Nellie Hart

Our world is a hard world to admire. Entangling alliances, racial disputes, love of brutality and oppressive force, are only a few of the numerous destructive institutions which prevail universally. Where is that love that most individuals say that they have for their fellowman?

The atomic bomb, long a controversial issue of the world, has once again blasted its way to the front. Soviet Russia has suddenly officially announced that she has had the secret of the bomb since 1947. Why should this disclosure be such a surprise to the American people? True, American scientists did not expect the Russians to secure the data until 1952, but, one should have known that there could be only one inevitable outcome.

Regardless of the facts, Russia firmly sticks to her primary belief that the United Nations should outlaw the atomic bomb, that it should be placed under international control and its production halted. Yet she refuses to give her side of the question. U. S. politicians have been studiously at work since President Truman's report last Friday that there had been an atomic explosion in Russia, giving speeches and writing articles, reporting the danger involved. Senator John Dulles from New York announced, "We must not get panicky. War is less likely today than a year ago."

Speak for yourself, John—

Pedro's Pocket

By Jean Turner

Editor's Note: For the benefit of the freshmen and other new students we reintroduce "Pedro's Pocket". We hasten to add that the opinions expressed in this column are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the opinions or policies of the Rotunda.

Because I have been informed that many of my readers have not had the pleasure of previously becoming acquainted with Pedro, it is only fair to attempt an explanation so that they may not get any more confused than is absolutely necessary. This column is brought to you through the courtesy of a recent exchange made between the Rotunda and Pedro. Pedro is from Mexico and since the comments made hereon are straight from him, the reader will please assume a Mexican accent. A variety of things are found in Pedro's pocket—in fact you never can tell what you may find here. However, the contents have been duly raked over the coals, censored, et cetera, and if anything worth reading is left, it is purely coincidental. Now on with the show!

One day you're telling every one goodbye, have a nice summer, write to me and all that stuff—then wham!—you're right back at school. Back to the old grind. But now that you think about it—it was a fairly decent summer, lots of parties, lots of people—even if it was hard on the boy friends. Now don't you all go yappin' at me and saying you're still mad about the same old one and only—I'm speaking collectively and collectively speaking a lot of boy friends that we all thought strong and able just fell by the wayside. Oh well, what the heck, you're back at Longwood now and who even wants a boy friend when she has to study—Ohhhh Mercy!

Right about here I'd better say a big welcome to all our new girls. We're mighty glad to have you and hope you'll like it here as much as we do. Usually in a column of this type the writer would have to say "the timid little freshmen trouped in, gaping and bewildered, homesick and—just plain sick". Not so with the '49 freshmen. Never in his life has Pedro seen a more sophisticated bunch. "What is this younger generation coming to?" Well, maybe a couple of them did shed a tear or two, but what do you want from freshmen? Blood? Don't answer that, Sophomores!

Speaking of new students—how could Pedro possibly overlook Longwood's new co-eds now established in the Men's Dorm, formerly referred to as Richardson Hall. Co-education—here we are! First thing you know Longwood will be defeating Duke in the hottest football brawl of the season! (Season of 1952 that is, let's get 'em acclimated first.)

It was really nice to see such a turn out at the Juke Box dance. Freshmen were in there kicking and taking the H-S boys away from the upper classmen, as usual. (Is this column boring you?) Those Juke Box dances are pretty nice shindigs. Maybe if I could get enough of you interested I'd give one for a very good cause—a fund call the P.F.P.P. or Please Fill Pedro's Pocket (you don't have to read it, you know) Editor's Note: Oh Yeah!

I think I'll come to the end of my rope. There doesn't seem to be anything to write about (I know

Y Lines

By Dot Wood, Y Vice-president

New students, did you know that you're a member of the Y. W. C. A. now? You became a member automatically when you became a student at Longwood College.

The Y. W. C. A. officers and cabinet are planning a big year in "Y" work. They will have a retreat at Longwood Estate October ninth to present their year's program.

Soon after the retreat, each new student will have the opportunity of joining the committee which interests her most. Learn now the nature of each committee's work and plan to help make this year outstanding in the history of the Y. W. C. A. Remember that it is your "Y", because the "Y" is you.

It's Getting Late

Campus Cogitations

Question (asked student-teachers): "What has been the crowning experience of your practice teaching career so far?"

Dot Carter: Walking to the high school one day before I had to.

Lois Stevens: Trying to teach science with a college major in History and English.

Hope Duke: Lack of experience.

Barbara Andrews: Trying to teach Dr. Jeffers' son biology.

Katie Boudurant: Teaching children I've always known who aren't so hot on this "Miss" idea.

Patsy Kimbrough: Telling them they should have hobbies, then discovering I don't have one of my own.

Barbara Sours: It has all been a crowning experience!

Charlotte Vaughey: That long hike to Rice every morning. Woe is the life of a phys. ed. major!

Ann Nichols: That G. I. night class in advanced calculus.

Margaret Beasley: Finding out I've got all the high school brains in my geometry class.

Lou Alyce Shelor: Discovering that they weren't kidding when they told us freshmen that we'd be teaching some day.

Lucy Ann Edmunds: Planning to attend a Parent-Teacher's Meeting!

Dot Dodd: Having to teach a story called "The Red Head Club" the very first day! (Editor's note: Dot is a carrot top herself.)

Louise Redd: Trying to answer questions that I don't know.

Robbie Cromar: Having one of my children say "O. K., Honey." (Editor's note: Robbie teaches kindergarten.)

Carol Stoops: Teaching with Susie.

Patsy Ritter: Trying for three hours to get a Saturday class so I could do my practice teaching. After three years of Saturday classes I just couldn't live without one.

Irma Allison: Having a pupil with the same name as mine. Every time the supervisor calls her name I remember my trying days in the third grade. Also having thirty little tricks always popping up with the question "Why"?

Helen Holbrook: Getting all the dumb ones in bookkeeping class. Janice is lucky enough to get the bright ones.

Susie Bowie: Teaching my music teacher's son--me a monotone!

Festivals, Conventions Make LC'ers Vacations Exciting

Now that we're back to the routine of classes, and studying, the summer seems an era in the far distant past, but to many of the Longwood students the short time between June and September proved to be a wealth of wonderful memories and a boon to bulging scrapbooks. The halls are still ringing with accounts of conventions, festivals and other highlights of exciting vacations.

Longwood can surely out-boast any other college this year with its bevy of beauties. June Banks will be a shining example to any doubters. June was elected queen of Alpha Sigma Tau sorority at the fiftieth anniversary convention in Detroit, August 23. As president of the local chapter of A.S.T., she was the only delegate at the convention from Longwood. Chosen the first national queen of the sorority, June will return to a similar convention in 1952 to crown the next queen who will carry on this newly established custom. The highlight of the convention, June said, was a trip to Greenfield Village, recently restored by Henry Ford, with a visit to Deerborne Inn.

One of the newest additions to Longwood's array of "good-lookers" is Miss Suffolk—Margaret Taylor. After being selected to hold the title of her home town, Margaret traveled to Hampton, where she participated in Balls, parades, feasts, and banquets as a princess in the court of the Sea Food queen.

From a group of 32 locally sponsored girls in Emporia, Romine Mahood was chosen attendant to the Peanut Queen. At the festival, she participated in parades, and attended banquets, football games and other exciting celebrations. Romine also served this summer as president of student body here at Longwood during both semesters.

Winnie Beard was selected as one of the two attendants to the queen of Theta Sigma Upsilon sorority. At French Lick Spring Hotel in Indiana. She was "wined and dined" during the national convention held there.

Taking a lead in the field of beauty wasn't the only excitment that happened to Longwood girls this summer, however. Three L.C. students, Betty House, Harriet Bowling and Lucy Ann Edmonds, took part in a state wide caravan sponsored by the Presbyterian Westminster Fellowship. Following a week's training at Massanetta Springs, the group of twelve boys and girls was divided into two sections, and from there went in different directions on their tour over the state. One group traveled to Fairlawn, Norfolk and Fredericksburg, spending a week at each place, while the other group journeyed to Narrows, Arlington and Clifton Forge. The purpose of the caravan was aimed at promoting interest in youth

Miss Burger Leads Team To Victory

Miss Elizabeth Burger, assistant professor of science, Sunday led the United States Hockey Team to a 3-2 victory over the U. S. Reserves in an exhibition game at the Marion Cricket Club in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Sunday's game was the initial one of the season for the national team.

Elected captain of the U. S. Team at the close of the season last year, Miss Burger, who plays goalkeeper position, was chosen to the national team after a series of regional and national contests in which she captained both the state and southeast lineups. Miss Burger regularly takes care of goalie duties with the Richmond Club.

Baptist Open House

The Baptist Student Council will hold open house Sunday from 3:30 p. m. to 5:30 p. m. The open house will be held at the Student Center.

Members of the faculty, Baptist students at Longwood College and Hampden-Sydney College will be welcomed. Several guests from Farmville will also be present.

Scanning the Field

By Les Smallwood

(Author's note—We feel that at Longwood College there may be many college students who lack a fundamental and basic knowledge of the world of sports today. We think that an all-around American education should include a knowledge of some of our national games, their heroes, and the stories behind their fame. In this column we shall endeavor to keep you up to date with most of our state sporting events, with a few more important national sports events also added that to us seem interesting and worthwhile.)

The World Series of baseball is but a matter of days away, but the decision of which teams shall play is yet a long way from being settled in either the American or National League. In the American League the New York Yankees are trying desperately to outlast the Boston Red Sox, but the tired Yankees are slowly losing ground; and the hot Red Sox have accumulated 10 straight wins, three of which have been over the league leading Yankees. With the American League all knotted up the schedule at this point of the game seems to me to favor Boston. The Red Sox and the Yankees face each other two more times in the series that will just about tell the tale.

However, the Red Sox have three more games with the cellar dwelling Washington Senators and the Yankees three with the respectable Philadelphia Athletics. In the National League the St. Louis Cardinals have been playing pretty consistent ball and the Brooklyn Dodgers have been doing only slightly better recently which is not enough to overcome the Cardinals at this stage. So I predict a Cardinal-Red Sox World Series come October fifth.

Ralph Kiner of the Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League has now clouted 53 home runs—that is only 7 shy of the immortal Babe Ruth's world record. However, Kiner is a dread man at the bat and he is receiving too many intentional walks to be able to perform the feat of breaking Babe's record this year.

In college football circles there is gloom practically all over the State thanks to many disappointing opening game upsets. Hampden-Sydney fumbled away a ball game in Greensboro as Guilford avenged their '48 loss by a score of 19-13. Wm. and Mary may have leisurely flown out to Houston, Texas, a 5 touchdown favorite, but they certain came back in no similar condition. They edged Houston 14-13. Randolph-Macon did not show up badly against Richmond but when they went down to Newport News as a two touchdown favorite over Apprentice they came back with a 14-7 loss despite their new power, weight, and effective passing. Richmond didn't look too smashing against Randolph-Macon in the opening tilt and Duke literally tore them apart 67-0.

Virginia Tech just doesn't believe in being consistent in sports so they begin another luckless early season. Virginia is one of the few bright spots this week with Papit looking Tomorrow the sportin' spirit of Longwood College will again be prominent as the annual Athletic Association Demonstration will be presented. This is just a sample—just wait 'til the matches between the Red 'n Whites and Green' 'n Whites begin!

A reminder to anyone wishing to use the gymnasium for any reason throughout the year—Please see Miss Iler if you wish to use the gym, so that there will be no conflicts in scheduling events.

Clem Allen has announced that recreational swimming will be held every Friday from 4:00 to 6:00 p. m. Incidentally, this is a good time to make up swimming periods and also any third periods in other physical education classes.

A new event this year is the A. A. picnic, which is to be held Thursday at 5:30 on the Atheletic field, so see you there.

College Will Publish Longwood View Book

"Longwood College", a view book which is designed to give a visual description of local college life, will arrive from the printers' around November 15, Dean William W. Savage announced today.

Edited by Dean Savage, the new pamphlet will be sent to prospective Longwood students. It is profusely illustrated with photographs depicting L. C. campus scenes, classroom sessions, athletic events, and other College activities. A professional photographer was commissioned last summer to take these photos.

The view book illustrations will be supplemented by short descriptions of Longwood academic and social life. The pamphlet will be bound in antique-finish cover board, lettered in blue.

Dean Savage stated that when the view book is off the presses, students here will be able to obtain free copies from his office.

Strong Eleven Almost Certain

The 1949 edition of the Longwood varsity hockey team has in its grasp again this year two veteran District winners, Frances "Clem" Allen and Anna Famuiatte. They were two of five chosen from Longwood to play on the Eastern District Team last year.

On October 29 the Longwood girls will venture to St. Catherine's in Richmond to play in a tournament during which the judges will select the members who will compose the District team this year.

So far this year the hockey team has been scheduled to play Roanoke College in a match at Roanoke. The date has not yet been decided. Other colleges will be contacted for varsity matches as soon as the team is well organized.

The hockey team has eight returning veterans this year, so the possibility of formulating a strong Longwood eleven should be almost certain. The team is ably coached by Miss Olive T. Iler.

Monday night the Woman's Athletic Association met and appointed Edith Kennon manager of the intramural class hockey contest, for the coming year. The matches will be held the week preceding Thanksgiving holidays. Last year the class of '50 walked off with the top hockey honors and are favored again this year.

Advanced hockey practice will be held each Tuesday and Thursday at 4:05. Beginners' hockey will be held at 3:05 on Monday and Wednesday afternoons, and if this section is overloaded another section will meet at 3:05 p. m. on Tuesday and Thursday.

The men's basketball hopes received another big lift as Edward Parks entered the portals of Longwood College. Parks will make the fourth experienced six footer at Longwood and the team predictedly seems to be planning with a great deal higher average height than six feet. Ed comes from Accomac County where he teaches science and history in the Tangier High School. He played four years of basketball in high school and three years in the army so he comes to us packing seven years of experience. He displays his talents at either guard or forward position.

Theta Sigma Upsilon Wins Scholarship Cup

The local Tau chapter of Theta Sigma Upsilon sorority recently won the sorority's gold loving cup, awarded the chapter holding the highest scholarship average.

Winnie Beard and Anne Langbein accepted the award for Tau chapter at the sorority's national convention at French Lick, Indiana, last month.

Longwood Graduate Takes College Job In North Carolina

MISS RUBY ADAMS

Miss Ruby Adams, of Richmond, Va., has assumed her duties as instructor of girls' physical education at Elon College, according to President Leon E. Smith.

A native of Richmond, she received the Bachelor of Arts degree from Longwood College, and has pursued graduate study at the University of North Carolina.

She was formerly teacher of physical education in Manchester High School in Richmond, Va.

there are many good opportunities opening in the teaching profession for men. He added that the present time indicates an increased trend in men entering the profession and resultingly space must be opened in the teacher's colleges over the nation for them. He explained how desperately needed are men in the elementary and secondary grades in order that a more psychological balance may be maintained in teachers. Dr. Lancaster informed men that Longwood College was fully behind the men's program in each and every respect and added that an able men's sport director would be acquired as soon as the male enrollment increased.

Dean Savage closed the informal discussions by telling the men that in his honest opinion he believed that no group of men on any campus, large or small, could excel the quality of men that Longwood College now has.

Refreshments were served and the men gathered around the piano with Dr. Molnar and sang songs. The "Smoker" was a tremendous success and continuations of such events was desired by all present.

'Far Flung Corners of Earth' Contribute Students to LC

The Longwood campus seems sprinkled with cosmopolitan figures this year, as students from Japan, France and Puerto Rico become a part of the College.

The reputation of Longwood is widespread and impressive to judge from the far flung corners of the earth from which the student body is assembled.

Julia E. Olivieri, freshman from Puerto Rico, was born in New York City but has lived in San Sabastain, Puerto Rico since she was two. Julia who wished to study in the United States says that she feels perfectly at home here because everyone is so friendly.

From Yokahama, Japan, comes Iva Jean Hurst as a Longwood freshman. Being the daughter of an American Army officer, Iva Jean can well claim the world as her home, since she has lived in so many parts of it. Before she moved to Camp Lee her last home was Fuchinobe, Japan, about twenty miles from Yokahama where she attended the American high school. A member of the first graduating class from that school, Iva Jean was taught there by American teachers in the usual high school subjects.

Madame Rothe and Mlle. Suzanne Girard both claim Lyon, France, as their home. Madame Rothe is now a resident of Farmville and is attending Longwood College to perfect her English. Suzanne in addition to her studies here will instruct Latin classes and assist in the French department.

work in the Presbyterian Churches. Each group attempted to stimulate interest in Westminster Fellowship groups at the towns they visited, and set up a youth program where one was needed. Following a month of travelling, both groups ended their journey in Richmond, where they compared notes, planned for future caravan, and celebrated their success during their trip.

Conventions seemed to be the fad of the summer this year, and Longwood was well represented at most of them. Winnie Beard and Ann Langbien attended a national convention of Theta Sigma Upsilon at French Lick Springs, Ind. Ann Nock and Nancy Lee Maddox travelled to a Regional Meet of Sigma Sigma Sigma at Camp Strawderman, near Harrisonburg. Frankie Dodson represented Kappa Delta at the national convention of that sorority in Duluth, Minnesota, and June Banks served as delegate to the Alpha Sigma Tau convention in Detroit, Michigan. Louise Redd attended the P. Kappa Sigma convention at Grand Canyon, Arizona, and Marion Breeden and Martha "B" Hylton journeyed to Port Huron, Michigan, for the Alpha Sigma Alpha convention.

The "pasteurization" process of heating fermented liquors to prevent their deterioration was known in ancient Greece.

better than ever before. Last week against George Washington he rolled over 203 yards while his team netted 198 in total. Looks like another Glenn Davis. Virginia trounced GW 27-13. The Washington and Lee Generals do not seem to show the early season "fumblatics" that the rest of the Virginia teams seem to have caught. The Generals upset Furman 27-7.

VMI look good this year despite the loss of Bobby Thomason who last year was the nation's third ranking passer. They suffered a 14-7 loss at the hands of the Quantico Marines but then who isn't losing to the Marines this year who have plenty of skill, experience, depth, power, and reserves—what more could you ask for?

All American Charlie Justice from North Carolina is naturally back in the headlines in Carolina ball games. Last week he ran the ball for one touchdown, passed one and all but kicked a field goal as UNC defeated NC State 26-6.

In the finals of the US singles tennis championship at Forest Hills, New York, two top amateur players, Ted Schroeder and Richard "Pancho" Gonzalas, fought out a grueling match. Despite the fact that Gonzalas had taken the crown last year, Schroeder was ranked first. Schroeder had taken the Wimbledon title earlier. A record breaking first set came in the duel with Schroeder finally winning one of Gonzalas' serves taking the set 18-16. Gonzalas, however, began working after the first two sets and won the match 16-18, 2-6, 6-1, 6-2, 6-4. Schroeder had beaten Pancho seven out of eight previous times. Gonzalas beat Schroeder again, however, 6-3, 9-11, 8-6, 6-4 to clinch any doubts. Gonzalas immediately announced that he would turn professional and a nationwide tour is being planned with big Jake Kramer top "pro". Kramer polished off cocky Bobby Riggs last year in a 65 match tour. Riggs will promote the Kramer-Gonzalas tour and pocket himself a nice little purse since he no longer is in the limelight as a "pro". Schroeder, who has demonstrated some terrific tennis in the past few years still denies that he will ever turn professional. His Davis Cup heroic features every year have earned him a high distinction in the tennis world. Schroeder has already polished off Eric Sturgess of South Africa to retain his hard court title and he now practically stands alone in the amateur world until the association can dig up another "21 year Gonzalas" or else get Schroeder to turn professional and release the amateur ranks for a new king.

Jackson Announces Date Of Short Story Contest

November 5 Deadline Set

The annual Colonnade short story contest will begin October 8 and run until November 5, according to an announcement made today by Maria Jackson, short story editor of the Colonnade.

Any student at Longwood College is eligible to enter any number of original stories in the contest. Manuscripts submitted to the contest may be placed in the Colonnade box under the main bulletin board or may be submitted to Maria or to Anne Langbien, editor-in-chief of the magazine.

English classes doing creative writing during this period will select the best of their efforts to submit to the judges.

The board of judges will consist of four faculty members and three students.

Winning stories will be published in the Colonnade during the 1949-'50 session.

Any subject in short story form will be accepted, and Maria urges all students to contribute to the contest.

Anderson Appoints LC Fire Marshals

Fire Chief Urges Rule Adherence

Claudia Anderson, student fire chief, has announced that all men and women students alike are required to abide strictly by the fire regulations outlined in the student Handbook. Appointments have been made of fire marshalls on each hall to see that these regulations are fulfilled.

In senior building-Mary Crowgey will serve as marshall on first floor main; Joyce Webb on second floor main; and Jenny Powell on third floor main. These three floors have as their exit the front door to senior building.

Jane Williams will serve as fire marshall on first floor senior annex, Lelia Mae Ferratt on second floor senior annex, and Katherine Buck on third floor senior annex. Students on these three floors will leave the building by the annex side door.

Serving as marshalls in junior building will be Lillie Langford and Mildred Carter on first floor, Jeanne Farmer and Nancy Gillie on second floor, and Betsy Gravely and Anne Kemp on third floor. Students living on the front end of these halls will exit through the front entrance to junior building; those living on the rear of these halls will leave through the back door.

Ann Rosson and Peggy Harris have been appointed as marshalls on the post office halls from which students will exit through the biology department.

Fire marshall on second floor east Main is Maria Jackson. Students living on "Dead-end" of east Main will leave by the door beside room 22, others on east Main will exit through the rotunda.

On second floor west Main Shirley Livesay has been appointed fire marshall. Residents of "Tacky-Alley" of west Main will exit through the door by room 24, other students living on west Main will leave by the rotunda doors.

Dolores Hoback will serve as marshall on third floor east Main. Students living on this hall will use the same exits as those on second floor east Main.

Serving as fire marshall on third floor west Main will be Pat Tuggle. Residents of these halls will follow the rules concerning exits which have been set up for second floor west Main.

Dramatic Club Executives Confer

Freshmen Invited To First Meeting

The executive board of the Longwood Dramatic Club met with the Faculty Advisors Committee on Dramatics Monday afternoon to determine the policy the club will follow in the coming year. The newly appointed faculty advisory committee consists of Miss Emily Barksdale, associate professor of English, and Mrs. Janice Lemen, assistant professor of art.

Despite their decision not to present the traditional fall and spring three act plays, because of lack of proper facilities, the club has begun plans for a full year in varied dramatic fields.

Virginia Spencer was elected by the board to serve as head of the staging department, since Jean Cunningham, former head of this department, did not return to school. Carol Stoops was chosen to replace Josephine Johnson, who also failed to return, as head of the Properties department.

The first meeting of the entire Dramatic Club will be held October 20. At this meeting freshman will be invited to become acquainted with the club and sign up as apprentices in the various departments.

Betty Ferguson, president of the club, and Betty House, vice-president in charge of Production, will participate in a program to be presented on the Longwood Hour, Thursday afternoon.

Registrar Releases Final Enrollment Statistics as 577

Final College enrollment figures, as released this week by Miss Virgilia Bugg, Registrar, total 577. Of this number 551 are women students and 26 men.

Since registration for the evening division is incomplete, final figures on evening enrollment are not yet available.

New Budget Plans Given For College

Increase In Faculty Salaries Requested

Information regarding financial grants which Longwood College will request from the Virginia Legislature when it meets in January has been released by President Dabney S. Lancaster. These requests were agreed upon at a recent meeting of President Lancaster with the State Budget Commission.

Heading the list will be a request for sufficient funds to put faculty salaries on a comparable basis with similiar institutions.

Dr. Lancaster has asked for additional funds to be used for maintenance, equipment and supplies necessary to heat and maintain service in the new science building and the auditorium-music building.

Other requests that will be presented to the legislature will include:

1. $500,000 to refurnish 110 dormitory rooms in the Main building of the school. This includes all buildings except Cunningham and Student.
2. Approximately $40,000 to complete equipping the science hall and auditorium.
3. $300,000 for remodeling and fire-proofing the east and west wings of Main building.

Concerning the request for funds for faculty salaries, Dr. Lancaster said that a uniform salary schedule for teachers colleges was adopted during the summer which we could not meet. Governor Tuck of Virginia has stated that we can put the schedule into partial effect this session and into complete effect after the legislature meets.

If the request for funds to remodel and make fire-proof the east and west wings of Main building is granted, the College plans to tear out the insides of these rooms and to put in fire-proof floors and petitions in addition to steel stairs. Also the sprinkler system between the wings will be completed. Such a program, says Dr. Lancaster, will give the College not only a modern but a fire-proof plant.

President's Office Announces Spring Term Dean's List

114 Students Make B-Plus

The Dean's list for the spring semester of the 1948-49 session has been released from the President's office. One hundred-fourteen students attained the B-plus (2.25) average requisite for the Dean's list. Eighty-four names appeared on the Dean's list for the preceding semester.

Students whose names appear on the Dean's list are entitled to unlimited cuts. New students will be eligible for this scholastic recognition next semester.

Upperclassmen who are recognized on the Dean's list are Gloria Majorie Agee from Schoolfield, Virginia; Frances Allen, Richmond; Mary Puckett Asher, Newport News; Flora Ballowe, Farmville; June Banks, Sandston; Hilda Bauserman, Luray; Catherine Bondurant, Farmville; and Betty Scott Borkey, Bowling Green.

Others who made B-plus averages are Doris Conner, Gloucester Point; Ann Scruggs Critzer, Farmville; June Divers, Norfolk; Dorothy Dodd, Dry Fork; Sarah Kerosis, Richmond; Edith Duma, Portsmouth; Lucy Ann Edmunds, McKenney; Joyce Etheridge, Back Bay; Frances Everett, Bon Air; and Elizabeth Ferguson, Prospect.

Also on the Dean's list are Laralee Fritts, Nineveh; Nancy Garbee, Lynchburg; Penick Gentry, Crewe; Barbara Grizzard, Drewryville; Helen Hardin, Richmond; Elizabeth Harris, Emporia; Ruth Hathaway, Churchland; Rena Mae Hayes, Norfolk; and Margaret Dee Hoover, Portsmouth. Nancy Hounshell, Culpeper; Elizabeth House, Norfolk; Julia Hughes, Charlottesville; Maria Jackson, Lexington; Jacqueline Jardine, Farmville; Frederic Jenkins, Farmville; Lucy Jones, Rustburg; Helen Kerosis, Winchester; Nancy Kibler, Arlington; and Nina Ruth Lacy, Farmville, are also on the Dean's list.

Class of' 53 Selects Mr. French as Advisor

New Freshman Classman

Begins 4th Term As 'Green & White'

Mr. Raymond French, associate professor of chemistry and physics, was unanimously chosen by the freshman class to be their faculty classman in a meeting held Monday night. For the fourth consecutive time Mr. French, who is better known to the students as "Charlie Hop", will sponsor a green and white class.

He was elected class sponsor for the first time by the class of 1941, and has since then served the classes of 1945 and 1949 in the same capacity. Mr. French also serves this year as advisor to the Northern Neck Club and to Chi as he has done for the past several years.

As freshman Classman, he will act as advisor to the class in all their college activities. Besides attending and counselling all meetings, he will aid them in presenting such projects as annual Circus skits, productions, "sings", dances and other class undertakings.

Mr. French has served for twelve of his nineteen years here at the College as a green and white Classman, and in the opinion of the students have proven succesful in each attempt. Members of the class of '53 have expressed the feeling that their class is destined to enjoy four happy, profitable and successful years with his able sponsorship.

Webb Announces New Annual Rates

Deadline Will Be Noon, November 12

Joyce Webb, editor-in-chief of the Virginian, announced today the prices of the 1949-'50 annual. Deadline for subscriptions will be noon, November 12.

According to Joyce, the plain cover annual will sell for $7.00 if paid at the time of subscribing and $7.50 if paid in installments. The padded cover annual without the name stamped on the cover will sell for $7.40 cash, with the name it will be $8.00. The plain cover with the name is priced at $7.55.

All annuals must be paid for in full at the time of subscription with the exception of the plain cover without the stamped name.

The photographer for the annual will arrive at the College at 1 p. m. on Monday. Joyce reminded all students not to forget their appointments. All students who did not make their appointment yesterday or today should see Joyce immediately.

Men Students Make '49-'50 Nominations At Gov't Meeting

At the first Men's Student Government meeting of the year, held Monday afternoon, nominations for officers of the Men's Student Government for the current year were in order. Presidential nominations included Calvin Hatcher, Frank Vaughn, and Shepard Elmore. Nominated for vice-president were Ned Orange and Lester Smallwood; and for secretary-treasurer, John Huegel and Calvin Hatcher. Other nominations for any office will be permitted until the elections are held which will be on Thursday and Friday October 6th and 7th.

Stuart McGhee, present president of the student government, appointed Jimmy Thompson, Ed Parks, and Doug Paulson to serve with him on a committee that will temporarily represent the men in joint student council meeting between the women and men. He also announced that the swimming pool will be open to the men from 4:15 to 5:15 each Monday and Wednesday afternoons from now on, in order to prevent conflicts between the men's basketball practice and swimming hours. The men practice basketball between 7:00 and 8:00 p. m. on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons.

Buddy Gentry was unanimously elected manager of men's athletics for the comng year.

College To Purchase New Library Material With Goldman Fund

Literature in the field of American history and government will be purchased for the College library by the Goldman Memorial Fund, Dr. M. Beverly Ruffin has announced. This fund was established in the summer of 1949 by Miss Frances Idear Goldman in honor of her parents Rabbi Benjamin Goldman and Rachael Caplan Goldman.

Each year on the anniversary of the death of her parents, Miss Goldman will send a check to be added to the Goldman Memorial Fund. A memorial book plate is placed in each book, Dr. Ruffin said.

Miss Goldman, an alumna of Longwood College, is a teacher in the Richmond public school system. She is the sister of Dr. I. H. Goldman, who is connected with Johnston-Willis hospital. Two other sisters, Rose and Rebecca, complete the family circle.

Rabbi Benjamin Goldman was born in Yunachih near Riga, May 9, 1862. His wife was born in Latvia, June 20, 1864. The Rabbi came of a family of consecrated Jews who all became rabbis. Mrs. Goldman's family produced both teachers and rabbis. The Goldmans were married in Riga, came to America and settled in Baltimore where the Rabbi was prominent in religious and civic affairs. Later, the Goldmans moved to Hampton to be Rabbi of a synagogue there. Rabbi Goldman became a citizen of the United States May 9, 1901. He was a member of an independent order B'rith Abraham, U. S. Grand Lodge, and other philanthropic organizations. In March 1910, he moved to Richmond where he became the Rabbi of Sir Moses Montefiore. He died June 20, 1922. His wife survived until September 3, 1934.

Faculty Advisers

Freshmen and sophomore transfer students will be assigned faculty advisors, Dean Savage announced yesterday. Advisers, who are picked from among the individual student's professors, will contact students to arrange the initial interviews with them, Dean Savage said.

Dr. Moss Questions Commission Findings Concerning Teaching of Virginia History

"Have Virginians no appreciation of individual liberty and representative government? Is America to become socialistic?" The questions were being asked by the General Assembly after an inquiry into the teaching of Virginia history and government in the state public schools. Apparently they said, neither of these subjects is being taught.

From questionnaires given to 902 Virginia-educated college freshmen, it was found that only 11 could name the eight Virginia-born Presidents of the United States (83 missed George Washington). Only 15 per cent could name five battles of the War Between the States which occurred on Virginia soil, and 25 per cent could name not more than one such battle. Slightly more than 10 per cent were able to identify George Mason, author of the Bill of Rights. Whereas 619 knew who Carter Glass was, only 63 could tell anything whatever about George Rogers Clark. This shows, the investigating committee said, that fleeting quality of fame.

The committee found that teachers of American history in the high schools are not required to have any college or even high school training in that subject. Elementary teachers need not have any college or high school training in either history or government.

The committee drew attention to the "mandate of Section 688" of the Virginia Code, which includes specific requirements as to the teaching of Virginia history and the "great documents," such as the Declaration of Independence and the Bill of Rights, which the Old Dominion gave to the nation. They declared that there is not even a satisfactory text devoted to Virginia history or Virginia government.

Dr. C. G. C. Moss, head of the department of history at Longwood College, believes the tests administered by the Assembly to be inaccurate guages of state history knowledge. Objective tests, he pointed out, do not measure a persons' knowledge of the important aspects of history. They only measure isolated bits of information.

As an illustration of this, Dr. Moss cites the instance in which few of the freshmen could name battles of the Civil War. The freshmen may have had an adequate knowledge of the causes of the war and the effects of the war, but the type of questions used did not reveal this kind of knowledge.

Dr. Moss admits that in the elementary and secondary curricula at Longwood College, American history is not required. However, he states, the choice of subject matter here is such that very few graduates leave without having been exposed to at least a year of that subject.

In our courses, he adds, emphasis is put on Virginia history and government because only then can one obtain a full understanding of American government and history. Because after all, says Dr. Moss, a knowledge of the relationship between federal, state, and local governmental units is all-important in assuring that the government may continue to be democratic. The committee's report, in other words, cannot be taken too seriously because there is a question of the validity of the tests .

'You Talked Us Into It!' ....

Since the Administration changed the class hours last spring there have been innumerable complaints among the student body concerning the omission of the 10 a. m. "mail call."

In changing the schedule the authorities acted for the best interest of the student body. By omitting the 10 a. m. break they were able to move the lunch hour and enabled afternoon classes to start at 1:05 p. m. instead of 1:45 p. m. This change prevents the majority of students from having classes that last until the supper hour.

Since few students have four consecutive classes any morning of the week the "mail call" break was considered unncessary. Considering the compactness of the campus the long break was superfluous.

Few, if any students find it necessary to forego getting their mail until noon. Despite the absence of the "mail call" most students find time to collect their mail during the morning hours.

A new situation usually provokes some complaints. If this is the case it may be taken for granted that no student is placed under undue hardship due to the schedule change.

The Administration, in the eyes of the Rotunda, is to be commended on the change which allows the inclusion of more afternoon classes thus distributing the load carried by the students.

Although the Rotunda took the opposite view of this situation in the spring, since the system has been put into effect the Rotunda has seen the necessity of retracting its former statements and recognizes the efficiency of the new schedule over the old.

Not Unpardonable ....

Self-righteous upperclassmen have been fuming with indignation since last week when several "paint-happy" freshmen indulged in a spree of decorating various College fixtures in their class colors. Smug in a sophistry which is the particular earmark of veteran college students, upperclassmen have hurled dire threats and spoken sharp denunciations of the wrong-doers. Although this paper does not by any means condone the recent freshman fracas, still we feel that it's time someone took the stand to defend the transgressors.

Indeed, the upperclassmen who haven't let the freshmen forget their misdemeanors are due for denunciation themselves. If these upright citizens will search the dusty cavities of their memories of days when they too were college neophytes, looking for a lark, they will be surprised and chagrined to recall some of their own freshman antics. They will unearth closet skeletons of bell rope slicings, midnight stampedes over Main building, coke bottle bowling, and similar escapades, equally as destructive as last week's capers.

It is our view that the guilty frosh have been thoroughly chastised for their thoughtless and puerile deeds. They've been doubly chastised, both by their own consciences and by the storm of criticism lowered on their heads. It's time now for upperclassmen to forgive and forget, allowing the castigated freshmen to prove once more that they can acquire and perpetuate the true "Longwood spirit."

More Destruction ....

Mild complaints were forthcoming from the Student Lounge maid Monday morning as she bent over her task of cleaning up the green leaves that littered the floor. Her explanation of the situation was that the mess had been made by "courtin' folks" who would idly tear leaves off the house plants as they "courted."

Come, come, Student daters! Is it necessary to tear the greenery to shreds when you "court"?

Letters To Editor

Dear Editor:

After reading the enjoyably interesting Rotunda thoroughly each week we men are gratified to see that our activities are not neglected; however, we have noticed that almost invariably we are referred to as the MALES. Now, we know that we belong to the male sex, and we certainly have no regrets whatsoever, but yet there are times when we do not like to be thought of so specifically and our interrelationships here at Longwood constitute one of those times. Almost all of us try to be gentleMEN, but at least we are MEN—we do wear clothes, you know ? ? ?

We want to become a part of Longwood, an integral part, and it is little things just like this that determine how close we feel to Longwood. I know that every man likes it here because we are assimilating the glorous traditions of the past that Longwood has always stood for—friendliness. We want you to like us and feel that WE are YOU.

MEN or MALES ? ? ? ?

Sincerely yours,
Lester H. Smallwood, Jr.

Pedro's Pocket

By Jean Turner

Once you're back at Longwood it doesn't take much time to get into the swing of classes again. However, since there are such stimulants, too numerous to mention herin, in that direction, it is not surprising.

For days, Pedro's habitual siesta has been disturbed by hurrying hunks of femininity who dash madly by, tripping over him with hardly even a "pardon me please", and rush on—to what?? Finally, Pedro's curiosity got the best of him, and throwing aside all his native inhibitions to move at this time of days, he followed one of his tormentors.

She went flying across the street to the training school, and into the classroom—"So these are the student teachers", thought Pedro. He sighed gratefully that being a "batch" he had no children to subject to the administrations of these newest of teachers, and left the poor girl to her fate of coping with thirty odd individuals with fiendish capacities for asking unanswerable questions.

Pedro has heard some complaints, and this isn't the first time, about the lack of things to do on week ends in Farmville. Granted that quite a few of you do find something to do, the question remains, what about the girls whose dates arrive minus the lush convertible with the plush upholstery? (Pedro would settle for an A-model Ford). They can always go for a walk, or sit on the lawn, or play ping pong, and that just about does it for the afternoon.

Breathlessly they can look forward to the theater in the evening, and if you've seen the show at the State, there's always the shoot-em-up. It's not to be supposed that this constitutes the perfect date. When a gal has a guy up for a week end, it sorta strains her brain thinking of things to do—so Sunday afternoon you find them walking again. Now don't get 'em wrong, they love to walk, it's so healthful, but shoes don't grow on trees.

Maybe some of our ingenious friends could come across with some ideas for the "un-car-ed" for gals.

OUR WORLD

By Nellie Hart

Russia recognized the Communist government in China on October 3. With this announcement, Russia also served formal notice that she was ceasing all diplomatic relations with the Chinese government in Canton. After the exchange of ambassadors between the two nations, the world assumes that the communists will ask the United Nations to recognize it as the government of China and to receive its representatives.

A bitter conflict between Russia and a fifty-nine member committee in the United Nations Organization is scheduled to come off this week. The conflict, which originated with the question of religious persecution in Hungary and Bulgaria, and violations of human rights, is expected to produce heated debate.

The many problems which face us today are a challenge to us as individuals, as future teachers, and more immediately, to our College. Once we begin to realize that we are substance of the world, we can make it work for that world which we want. Only when we realize that we are making history can we escape repeating it. We have seen in our history the mistakes of the past. We can evaluate our actions and social institutions by their reactions. When they serve the interests of mankind, they are good. When they fail to promote human welfare they are bad.

The choice really lies with us, if we but take it—each of us.

Y Lines

The Y.W.C.A. held its installation service for the freshmen and new students last Monday night in the Methodist church.

After devotions by Margaret Thomas and an inspirational talk by Dolores Duncan, president of the local Y.W.C.A., the students, dressed in white, lighted their candles from the candles of the cabinet members. Leaving the church, the procession, singing "Follow The Gleam", made its way into the darkened rotunda of the College where the program was concluded by a solo sung by Dorothy Doutt.

Now the new students are officially members of the Y.W.C.A.

Two American Red Cross field workers are still serving U. S. troops stationed in France.

Campus Cogitations

Question (asked upperclassmen): "Do you miss the twenty-minute "mail call" period that we had between morning classes last year?

Norma Roady: I surely do. I'm running my head off going from classes to the high school and then back to classes. Ask "B". She'll tell you.

Betty Jane Spencer: Ah yes! I don't have time for a cigarette.

Kat Buck: There's a lot I miss, kid!

Carol "Bird" Stoops: All I want to know is when am I going to eat breakfast?

Helen Connelly: Nope... I don't miss it because we get out earlier.

Bobbie Pollard: Yes. Eight 'till twelve is too long a period for people with four straight classes.

Nellie Hart: What an asinine question!

Cab Overbey: No, I'm lucky. I have a vacant period.

John Cook: Yes, you don't even have a chance to smoke A cigarette or get THAT needed cup of "joe".

Betsy Gravely: I have a vacant period then but I think everyone that doesn't could surely use it. "Yo"!!

Nancye Gillie: A little time to get mail sure helps. Too bad they had to change it.

"Rabbitt" Parry: From the looks of the girls here the 20 minute recess period was the secret of their perpetual youth.

Frances Turner: Yeah! I sho' do miss that "fag".

Jo Phipps: No, cus' I don't have any classes before that, anyway.

Nancy Lee Maddox: My opinion is biased.

Lucy Jones: Hecko, yes. Period.

Laura Buchanan:.. I think we need it because I really don't have time to get all my mail through that crowd in such a short time.

Janice Slavin: Yeah! I miss it like blazes.

Pat Walker: I think, it's right stinking not to have it.

Sue Walker: Doesn't bother me. I have a free period then.

Ellen Moyer: Nope. I never get any mail anyway. (Modest, isn't she?)

Peggy Covington: Yeah! I miss the early morning sun's greeting.

Marian Breeden: I sure do. Like everything.

Eloise Hodges: A letter in the early morning helps.

Sally Brickman: No time for my morning weed and coffee.

Fran Franklin: You don't even have time to breathe.. as it is.

Connie Rice: Yes 'cause it takes me so long to read all my mail—the Staunton paper.

Barbara Hawkins: I'm not very cute. I don't get mail anyway. But I miss it.

Jean Wilson: I miss the 20 minutes and the mail I DON'T get too.

Nell Dalton: I don't get any mail anyway but I still miss the trip to the mailbox.

Ann Motley: I don't have time to go to my empty box.

Francys Thomas: It causes a lot of confusion not having it.

ALUMNAE NEWS

The Longwood College Alumnae Council will meet here on October 28 and 29, Mrs. Ruth Coyner, Alumnae Secretary said today. The Council which is composed of fthe Alumnae Association Executive board and a representative from each alumnae chapter, meets annually to plan Alumnae activities and policies.

Registration for the Council meeting will be held from 4 to 6 p. m. on October 28 in the College reception hall and again from 8 to 10 a. m. on October 29.

Miss Helen Costan national president of the Alumnae Association, will preside over the meeting. Miss Costan, a member of the class of '39, was elected president at the annual meeting of the Association held at the College last June.

FLASH! Lucille Sweeny, all-star athlete of Yippahoony College in Dripwater, Florida, scored five touchdowns in seven plays Sunday as they trounced the undefeatable Blizzard Tech "Polar Bears" from Icicle, Maine, 65-28. Coach "Weepy" Jones still insists that his tem is not worth representing the college despite the 176 points that they have scored in the first two games of the year. For further details watch Buz Sawyer in the comics.

Seriously now, the pennant battles are over in the baseball world and the world series tickets are almost unpurchaseable. The victors are the New York Yankees and the Brooklyn Dodgers, the heart broken runner ups are the Boston Red Sox and the St. Louis Cardinals.

The flags are won but yet there was much more involved than just the winning of the American and National League pennants. Boston came from 13 games behind New York only to lose the American League pennant on the final day. Last year Boston lost to the Cleveland Indians in a play off game. Similarly Brooklyn came from behind and took the National League flag on the last day. Yep, Boston and St. Louis will be watching the series from the side lines but with probably a tear in many eyes. It was just a case of four terrific teams battling it out right down the line to the very end. When we sense the spirit involved we then know why America is such a wonderful place in which to live.

An interesting notation in baseball was how closely the batting title was won by George Kell of the Detroit Tigers. After commanding the lead all season Ted Williams of the Boston Red Sox relinquished the title on the last day by .00033 of a percentage point. Below Williams was Robinson, the sensational Negro Dodger star, by .00017 of a percentage point. Brother, that is really calling a title closely.

In college football circles over the state things seem to be in much better condition than this time last week. Johnny Papit, of the University of Virginia, collected another 200 yards and scored two touchdowns as the Cavaliers beat the University of Miami 21-18. There were many anxious moments and the game turned into almost an individual battle of two opposing stars, Papit of Virginia and Johnny Pont, rising sophomore star of the Ohioans. Pont covered 178 yards and set up two touchdowns. Papit has taken the ball over 400 yards in the last two games with the team netting approximately 500 yards. I wonder what would happen to Virginia if someone knocked out Papit? He is terrific this year. The Washington and Lee Generals lost their 25th out of 33 football games to the University of West Virginia last week 28-20. The Generals do not look bad at all this year—they just hit a brick wall. The Hampden-Sydney Tigers were never seriously troubled as they turned back ECTC 20-7, and the William and Mary Indians impressively ran over 400 yards in defeating Virginia Tech 39-13. Apprentice seems to have a much better ball club this year as they turned in another victory, this time against ACC 32-13. The consistently strong University of Delaware squad posted a 21-7 win over the Richmond Spiders to further the gloom at Richmond. VMI got back in its winning stride as they turned back GW 14-7. The Keydets' successor to Bobby Thomason, little Joe Veltri, was disappointing in early action but finished the game with 9 out of 18 passes completed for 122 yards. It was the second time in three years that Veltri has pitched VMI to a win over GW at Lynchburg. Coach Nugent has happily found that he can depend on some freshman hopefuls. Last week Petree and Powell scored the two VMI touchdowns—neither were starters. Randolph Macon has yet to win a ball game. They lost as expected to Waynesburg 38-6 and most likely will have their losing streak extended to another game when they face Guilford next week.

LC Library Displays Collection of Flowers

The current exhibit in the college library is a display of native wild flowers collected and arranged by Miss Vera Baron, instructor of biology at Longwood. The flower specimens, which were selected to appeal to botanist and laymen alike, are labeled with both popular and scientific names.

Last spring Miss Baron exhibited a similar display of spring flowers, which attracted many students and visitors to the library. Library officials have extended an invitation to Longwood students to inspect this and other features of the College library.

Halls Hold Meetings To Elect Assistants For Hall Presidents

Assistant hall presidents were elected at meetings held on each hall by the students last week. A member of the House Council was present at each meeting.

On second floor Main, the students elected Betty Clay Skinkholser, Celeste Bishop, Jean Jinette and Mary Winston Johnson.

Third floor Main will have Robbie Mantiply, Katherine Anderson, Betty Jean Ayers and Barbara Caskey.

Nell Gillie and Bonnie Gerralls will serve as assistants on first floor Annex; Pat Tuggle and Gay Powers on second floor; and Jean Ridenour and Shirley Livesay on third floor Annex. Jo Ann Yow is replacing Shirley Livesay as hall president on that floor.

Edith Goff and Peggy Livesay have been elected assistant presidents on second and third floors student, respectively.

In Junior Building, Margaret Robertson has replaced Lucy Edmonds as hall president on the first floor. Students have also elected June Divers for their second hall president. On second floor Georgia Bailey has surrendered her position to Ruth Gills.

The assistants in Junior Building are Millie Carter and Alma Bedinger on first floor; Jeanne Gilman and Frances Harper on second floor; and Ann Kemp and Martha Kitchen on third floor.

In Senior Building, Helen Trayham, Laura Lee Stickler and Judy Hughes will serve on the first, second and third floors of Annex respectively. Allie Jean Felton, Joyce Webb and Connie Marsdon have been elected for Main.

Edward V. Parks has been elected president of Richardson Hall, men's dormitory.

Practices

Hockey practice will begin on the athletic field Tuesday, October 11, Ray Philips, president of the Athletic Association has announced. Students interested in participating in this sport should report to the field for practices on Mondays and Wednesdays at 3:00 p. m. and on Tuesday's, Wednesdays, and Thursdays at 4:00 p. m. weekly.

Again we bring you the latest news in the A. A. front. The demonstration given by the Athletic Association last Thursday went off with a bang. We hope that this will boost the interest of all Frosh and upper classmen in sports and dance through the coming school year. The weather man wasn't kind, but we hope that the rain won't keep you from coming out for the outdoor sports—tennis, hockey, and archery. Remember all of these count on points toward the color cup.

There is a poster on the bulletin board now for all those who can handle a tennis racket. The single matches will be played off this fall, and we know that there will be plenty of active competition on the tennis courts.

Congratulations to Edith Kennon who was elected to fill Pansie Parham's position as class hockey manager at the A. A. meeting held last Monday night. We have great confidence in Edith's ability and we know she'll do a good job.

Other members of the A. A. Council who failed to return to us this year are Jean Webb, who is now a student at Roanoke College, and Jean Cunningham, who is at Strayer's College in Washington, D. C.

Men's basketball practice is being held in the gymnasium every Tuesday and Thursday night from 7:30 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.

Blue, White AA Blazers Awarded 5 LC Students

Five senior students were presented with blazer jackets by the Athletic Association at the sports demonstration last week. Blazers are traditionally awarded girls demontrating outstanding participation in athletics. At the same time Patsy Ritter, president of the Monogram Club, announced the names of new Club members, chosen to this honorary organization sportsmanship in College athletics.

Patsy Ritter received the only white blazer awarded. White blazers are given for at least 30 points, earned by participation in a variety of sports. Ray Phillips, Winnie Beard, Frances Allen, and Norma Roady were awarded blue blazers for a minimum of 20 points in several sports.

The eight seniors receiving Monogram Club bids were Hilda Edwards, Anne Langbein, Mary Lou Woodward, Mary Elizabeth Watson, Ellen Moyer and Jo Ann Phipps.

New junior members, who number nine, are Romine Mahood, Betsy Gravely, Sue Brewbaker, Pat Walker, Marion Riggs, Nancy Gilye, "Chick" Ritchie, Mary Crowder and Anne Lynch.

Episcopal Supper

Both Longwood and Hampden-Sydney students are invited to attend the supper. The group will meet in front of the Episcopal rectory at 4 p. m.

The price of the supper is 25c which may be paid to Helen Fones in Main Building or Lillie Langford in Cunningham hall before Friday noon.

The Canterbury club of the Episcopal Church will hold an outdoor spaghetti supper on Sunday afternoon.

Ferguson To Appear On 'Longwood Hour'

Betty Ferguson will give a review of Scott Hart's, "Eight April Days" on the Longwood hour, tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 over radio station WFLO.

The Longwood Hour, which was formerly the S.T.C. Hour, is the College radio program, and will be presented each Thursday afternoon during the year except during official College holidays.

Each week a few students will be invited to visit the radio station to watch the broadcast and gain, by observation, knowledge of broadcasting techniques.

Student announcers are still needed for this program, and anyone interested is urged to see Dr. Beverly Ruffin, College Librarian, who is chairman of the radio committee.

Longwood Library Gets Book Memorial

Mrs. Evelina G. Ranson, of Emporia, Va., an alumnus of Longwood College, has presented to the college library a collection of seventeen books, most of which deal with the subject of flowers.

She made the gift with the understanding that any book which is a duplicate and not needed by the college be turned over to some public school in the county.

The gift is a memorial to Mrs. Ranson's brother, J. M. Binford, a native of Prince Edward county.

Fire Marshals

Men's Council Has Elections Of Officers For '49-'50

The men's student government association held their election of officers for the coming year on Thursday and Friday. Calvin Hatcher is the new president. James E. Orange is the vice-president and John Huegel the secretary-treasurer.

Calvin Hatcher, a local boy, was graduated from Farmville High School in 1942. He was business manager of the high school paper. Cal went to the Fork Union Military Academy before entering Washington and Lee University. He entered the United States Navy and served for three years in the hospital units. Calvin is not new to student government activities because he has twice served on the government organizations in the summer terms here; last summer he was vice-president. Cal is a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity.

James E. Orange was vice-president of his graduating class at Farmville High School. He served on the news paper staff and was secretary-treasurer of the Monogram Club. "Ned" was on the SCA Council and annual staff. Ned was also an honor graduate.

John Huegel was graduated from Lancaster High School in Lancaster, Penn., where he was on the school paper staff. He entered the Army and served for 4½ years, two of which were in Brazil. He later went to Georgetown University and was in the school of foreign service before coming to Longwood.

Rotunda Receives High ACP Rating

Associated Collegiate Press judged last semester's issues of the Rotunda First Class (Excellent), according to the report received this week by the newspaper staff. The Rotunda rated 785 points in the scorebook by which A.C.P. grades college newspapers. 900 points are necessary for All-American, the only A.C.P. rating above First Class.

A grade of "excellent" was given the Rotunda on news coverage and organization of news stories. The editorial page also was given a favorable report. On news values and sources the Rotunda scored 205; news writing and editing 205; headlines, typography and makeup, 185, and department pages and special features, 190. Various suggestions for improvement were noted in the scorebook.

Of the 43 college papers entered in the same class with the Rotunda, 4 achieved the All-American rating; 22 First Class, and 12 Second Class. The Rotundas entered in the recent survey were edited successively by Betty Spindler and Jacky Eagle. Janice Slavin suceeded Anne Orgain as business manager, and Mary Leigh Meredith followed Jacky Eagle as managing editor of last semester's issues.

The purpose of the Associated Collegiate Press serves not to create rivalry among college publications, but to provide an agency through which staffs may be aided in giving their college better publications, and to help student journalists with their problems.

4 Make Straight A's

Four students received straight "A" grades for the spring semester of 1949; Miss Virginia Bugg, Registrar, announced today.

Of this number two were freshmen, Jackie Jardine and Ruth Lacy, both of Farmville. Willard Leeper, a member of the junior class and also from Farmville, also received all "A" grades. Anne Norman, special student from Chatham, was the fourth to receive this perfect record.

Duncan Announces Assembly Speaker, Rev. M. Thompson

Topic To Be 'This Is My Task'

Tomorrow's Speaker

Tomorrow's assembly, which is being sponsored by the Y.W.C.A. this Thursday, will feature the Rev. W. McIlwaine Thompson, pastor of the College Church at Hampden-Sydney.

Mr. Thompson, a former Bible professor at Davidson College, N. C., will use as his topic "This Is My Task". His text will be taken from Luke 12:48.

Born in Petersburg, Mr. Thompson lived in several southern states before coming to Richmond in 1920, when his father, a Presbyterian minister, moved there as a professor in the Union Theological Seminary.

He was awarded the Bachelor of Arts Degree from Davidson College. While at Davidson, he was president of the Y.M.C.A., and a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Omicron Delta Kappa and several other honor fraternities as well as Kappa Sigma, social fraternity. He played football and tennis for the College and was a member of the Monogram Club.

Mr. Thompson received his Bachelor of Divinity Degree from Union Theological Seminary in Richmond. Following this, he taught English for two years at the Episcopal High School in Alexandria.

From Yale University, New Haven, Conn., he received the Doctor of Philosophy Degree, and in 1943 he became Chaplain in the army. He served in Africa and Italy with a general hospital, an armored reconnaissance battalion, a tank destroyer battalion and an infantry division. After four years of service, Mr. Thompson had received the purple heart and the bronze star.

AKG Regional Meet To Be Held Here

The regional convention of Alpha Kappa Gamma will begin on this campus Friday, October 22, announces Jackie Wright, President of the local A.K.G. Circle.

There will be delegates here from Queens College, Charlotte, North Carolina; the University of South Carolina, Columbia, South Carolina; and Columbia College, Columbia, South Carolina. Several alumnae will also attend the convention.

Jackie has appointed the following committee chairmen to assist her in making plans for the convention: banquet committee, Dolores Duncan; meetings, Ray Phillips; rooming, June Banks; meals, Lizzie Bragg; registration, Helen Kaknis; social, Martha B. Hylton; sightseeing, Norma Roady; hospitality, Jackie Eagle; and program, Patsy Ritter.

Sophomores Set Rat Day For Tuesday

Rat Day will be held Tuesday, October 18, from 6:00 a m. to 6:00 p. m., Maria Jackson, sophomore head of Ratting, announced today.

Little Rat Court will be held at 10:00 p. m. Tuesday night, in the assigned rooms.Each court will be headed by those girls who received "orchids" and honorable mention in Big Rat Court last year. These girls will also make up the Big Rat Court which will be held in the Rec' of Main building Wednesday night at 10:00 p. m.

The sophomore class has compiled the the following list of rules which will be imposed on the freshmen on the day of initiation.

Rat Rules

Freshmen must:

1. Not go to the post office until after 6:00 p. m.
2. Bow and kneel to Joan of Arc, saying "Hail to thee noble Joan, thou seemest stately as a sophomore."
3. Report to main floor rotunda immediately before lunch, and to the library steps immediately after lunch.
4. Report to the gym at 6:00 a. m. fully dressed as stated below.
5. Not smoke until after 6:00 p. m.
6. Make up a song in honor of the sophomores. (This will be done by the entire class.)
7. Not wear any jewelry or makeup.
8. Learn the sign-off, which is printed below, and be able to repeat it whenever requested by a sophomore.
9. Wear a sign with "Praise '52" on front and name, address and rat picture on back in red ink.
10. Know all sophomores by name and call them "Miss".
11. Carry books, chewing gum, candy, matches and cigarettes (Lucky Strikes, Camels, Phillip Morris, or Chesterfields) in a shopping bag for sophomores.
12. Carry a tooth brush and a shoe shine rag.

Print the letters "Praise '52" on the shopping bag.

14. Report to Little Rat Court if notified. All freshmen will report to Big Rat Court wearing red and white.
15. All rats must resemble "It" girls. The hair must be parted in the middle and greased down at either side of the forehead. There must be one "spit" curl greased to either side of the face.
16. The black hair must be wirred in five pig-tails in a straight line from the crown to the nape of the neck. These pig-tails must

Sophomores Compile Rules For Student Lounge Dates

Since privilege of dating in the Student lounge on Saturday and Sunday nights was recently granted to the sophomore class, a committee of six women students, one from each sophomore hall, has formulated, with the approval of Dean Ruth Gleaves and Mrs. Grace Slayton, sophomore house mother, the following set of rules governing dating in the founge.

1. Girls are requested to ask dates not to go beyond the French doors in the lounge and not to go out of the lounge unless going to the movie, the Main Rec' hall, to church, to ball games, and similar places.
2. Girls are requested to sign out in the date book in the lounge before going to the movie, church, etc., giving their names, the names of their dates, and their destination, signing in when they return.
3. When dating in the Rec' on Saturday night, sophomore girls are requested to leave the Rec' with their dates by 10:30 p. m. in order that all dates will have left the Student lounge by 10:45 p. m.
4. Girls are requested to sign in Student lounge when returning from the movie, church, etc., before going to the Rec' with their dates. They must sign out to go to the Rec' from the lounge.

Two student hostesses will be on duty in the lounge from 7 until 11 on Saturday nights and from 7-8 and 9-11 on Sunday nights.

1949 Circus Chairman

YWCA To Present Chapel Programs

Tuesday chapel exercises will be sponsored by the College Y.W.C.A. beginning next week, October 18, Dolores Duncan, president of the Y' stated recently. This arrangement will continue through this semester, Dolores said.

The interdenominational exercises will feature each week messages by local ministers, and Mrs. Marian Herrington, local Methodist organist, will provide organ music. The Farmville Episcopal church, across the street from Main building, has donated the use of its auditorium for chapel exercises.

Dolores pointed out that chapel exercises will be designed particularly for student life and problems, and she expressed the belief that the programs would be of great inspirational value to students here. The Y' will place a poster, announcing the chapel speaker and his subject, in the Main hall each week.

Old Virginia Photos Currently Exhibited In College Library

The Longwood College library is displaying an Exhibition of Photographs of Old Virginia Architecture from the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in Richmond. This exhibit will be displayed from October the tenth to the twenty-third. This is the second in a series of nine exhibitions being sponsored by the college library and the college Art department. Students will remember the watercolor display which was held earlier in the year.

Notable in this exhibit of Old Virginia Architecture are photographs of: Pohick Church, Fairfax County, where George Washington was once a warden; Greenway, Charles City County, the birth place of President Tyler; and Scotchtown, Hanover County, home of Patrick Henry, bought in 1771, where he was living when he was elected governor of Virginia.

LC Radio Hour To Feature Pianists

"The Voice of Longwood" which is the student radio program heard each Thursday at 4:30 p. m. over WFLO, will present a piano program this week. Miss Emily Clark is in charge of this program. Those giving piano selections on the program will be: Nancy Kibler, Roberta Wilson, Peggy Dee Hoover, and Puckett Asher. Donna Staples will be the student announcer.

The student body and the faculty are reminded that the "Voice of Longwood" can be heard by radio from the browsing room of the library each Thursday at 4:30 p. m.

Student Chairmen Elected By Classes

Ray Phillips, senior from Williamsburg, has been named general chairman for the Alpha Kappa Gamma circus to be held in the gymnasium on October 29.

Assisting Ray will be Lizzie Bragg and Jackie Wright in charge of the class stunts, Jackie Eagle supervising the circus parade, and Dolores Duncan and Norma Roady in charge of animals and costumes. Patsy Ritter is in charge of advertisement and tickets. Helen Kaknis will supervise decorations while June Banks and Martha "B" Hilton will be in charge of the queen and her court.

Norma Roady and Helen Hardin have been elected co-chairmen of the senior stunt. The juniors elected Betsy Wilson as chairman of their stunt, the sophomores elected Fran Franklin and the freshmen Roberta Browning as chairman of their respective class stunts.

Ray will give each chairman a copy of the schedule of practices and will also post it on the various bulletin boards as soon as the schedule is completed.

The theme of the 1949 circus will be announced in the next issue of the Rotunda. This theme will be enacted by the queen and her court.

To Elect Queen

Class meetings will be called sometime during the current week to elect the circus queen and her court, according to an announcement by Ray. The elections will be conducted by secret ballot and the results will not be revealed until the circus performance. The circus queen will be the representative from the senior class and each of the other classes will furnish a member of the court.

College To See Variety Dance Sat.

The Rec of the Main building will be the stage for something new in juke box dances this Saturday night. The Westminster Fellowship of Longwood and Hampden-Sydney College will sponsor this affair, which those in charge say will be entirely different from any previously held at the College.

Among the featured dances will be an Orange dance, Flashlight dance, Elimination dance, Paul Jones and Cake Walke. A contest which will include shagging, jitterbugging and ballroom dancing will highlight the dance. Prizes will be awarded to those judged best in their field. Bill Pulliam and Warren Brannon of Hampden-Sydney will lead the dances.

Mary Crawford and Betty House, co-chairmen of the affair, have announced the admission price of ten cents per person. The dance will last from 8:30 to 11:45.

Dr. Molnar Names Members of Chorus

Regular practice of the newly formed Longwood Men's Chorus will be held weekly on Friday at 4 p. m. in room 17 of Main Building, Dr. W. P. Molnar, director of the Chorus, has announced.

Dr. Molnar urged that all men students interested in the Men's Chorus report to practice Friday.

A Second To The Suggestion . . . .

Whereas: It has been brought to the attention of the editor by Mr. Richard McCraw of the Class of '49, in a letter printed in the next column, that this institution does not confer on its graduates diplomas worthy of a baccalaureate degree, and

Whereas: Although Mr. McCraw's statements are somewhat exaggerated, inspection of a 1949 diploma reveals that its 7 by 8½ inch dimensions are a rather scant representation of four years' academic and financial effort, and

Whereas: The diploma recipient's name is handwritten on the document (not "scrawled" however) in blue ink hardly lends it the dignity it merits, and

Whereas: As an official, lifetime credential and as tradition decrees, the baccalaureate diploma should be of sheepskin, or some reasonable facsimile thereof, which this institution's diploma is not, and

Whereas: Most graduates would be willing to pay an extra fee for a handsome bachelor's certificate,

Therefore: Does the Rotunda maintain that one of the "rights and privileges pertaining to that Degree" cited on the diploma is the privilege of owning a certificate of which the recipient can be proud, and we hereby suggest that the administration endeavor to confer on its future graduates diplomas meritorious of the College's noble traditions.

Don't Be Anonymous . . . .

Long has this column plied students, faculty, and administration with editorial pleas for items and suggestions by way of the Rotunda box in the hall of Main Building. And so it was with exceeding great joy that we scooped up a handful of notes which the box yielded one night last week.

But alas, our joy was short-lived, for every one of the ten notes was anonymous, and the messages they carried were strikingly similar from the standpoints of carrying almost identically worded messages and being written on the same type of memo paper. Be it understood that the staff appreciated those vague rantings about the dining hall and sophomore regulations, but we must insist that contributions be signed by the submitter. In this way we are assured that the box isn't "stuffed," making what is in reality the opinion of a few to appear the opinion of many. We are happy to withhold names in publishing letters to the editor, but to protect ourselves from libel suits, we must know who the writer is. This is accepted journalism ethics.

Again the Rotunda wishes to state that its sole "raison-d'etre" is to publish news and opinions of the people who are Longwood College and to reflect life here. Suggestions, news items, and opinions will be given the utmost consideration if the donor will please sign his name.

'Dry' Era Is Ended . . . .

Judging by consumption of milk here Longwood students should be unusually healthy this year, for they are drinking proportionately more of the body-building liquid than last year. This has been attributed to the fact that students are attending the dining table more regularly, in itself an encouraging sign.

Spurred on by a volley of complaints at the first of the session that there was insufficient milk to be had in the dining hall, the Rotunda started an inquiry which led us to the dietitian's door. This good lady, who with the limited funds allotted does remarkably well toward keeping some 600 epicureans comparatively happy, explained that when enrollment fell some nine per cent this fall, that she decreased her milk purchases accordingly. However, she too was not deaf to the numerous complaints, and since last Wednesday there has been as much milk in the dining hall as there was last year for a larger number of consumers. Students have been pleased, too, to find milk on the tables at every meal. Happily, there is no longer cause for complaint.

But, unfortunately, there is cause for complaint concerning the means which students took to demonstrate their dissatisfaction over the "dry" situation in the dining hall. Instead of straightforwardly putting the matter directly to Mrs. Hammond, the dietician, or to Dean Gleaves, who always welcome students' complaints, some students took the somewhat cowardly way of airing their complaints on a bulletin board. If students have the courage of their convictions, surely they should be able to face the authorities and state their gripes without hesitation. They'll find, too, that the direct approach will infallibly bring more satisfactory results.

OUR WORLD

By Nellie Hart

Russia has been making plans to officially recognize the new East German Republic. If this arrangement is completed, it will be the second time within a week that Russia will have succeeded in her slow process of spreading (communistic ideas) throughout Europe.

Communistic leaders in the German State have made known their faith in the formal recognition of their State.

A propaganda sheet has been issued in Germany accusing the Allied - sponsored West German Government of merely being a puppet government. This article, which has been carefully edited, further states that not only is the government not working for the general welfare of the people, but also that it does not have a voice in Germany's foreign affairs.

If the government is recognized by Russia, it will request that all occupation forces be removed and also seek to establish friendly relations with the new Chinese Communist Regime.

Letters To Editor

Editor of the Rotunda:

After four years work in college everyone looks forward to receiving a degree that he or she can own with pride. The oversized postage stamp given by Longwood College and called a 'degree', is one few people could be proud of. The name of the graduate isn't printed but is scribbled on the top in BLUE INK. If you happen to be a man, then the words 'she' and 'her' are marked out with the same blue ink, and 'he' or 'him' are inserted.

I know that someone will up with the statement that it doesn't matter what the degree looks like, it's what you have in your head that counts; but you can't frame your head and hang it on the wall.

You members of the class of 1950 had better go to work on someone if you want to get diplomas that will compare with the ones given at the U. Va., V.M.I., and other colleges.

Pedro's Pocket

By Jean Turner

In my interview with our minister of good will from Mexico this week he related to me an exceptionally sad experience—that of being one of the few who remained on campus this past week end. Tables were closed, rooms were darkened and hardly a soul was seen about our usually gay campus. Pedro has made up his mind not to be lonesome next weekend tho'. It seems that there is to be quite the gala affair in Richmond Saturday—the first annual Tobacco Bowl game. This Pedro has got to see.

Pedro also thinks that congratulations are in order for Miss Kitty Hamlet, who is representing South Boston, and we might add, Longwood College in the forthcoming festival as a tobacco bowl princess.

We had considerable trouble restraining Pedro the other day. He was all set to lynch the weather man for this nonfootball (an old word Pedro just made up) football season. It seems that one of his main reasons for leaving Mexico (except to be a co-ed at Longwood, of course) was to see lots of football. Now gaily bedecked in his beaver coat and beebop hat he is roasting in grandstands all over Virginia.

There is sad news tonight, boys and girls. What are we to do? There is something dreadfully wrong with the gold fish population herabouts. Many of our students are perplexed and horrified over their little pets, seeming unillingness to put forth the effort of living. Pedro was personally informed of the demise of one student's little darling of the fish bowl, Gin. It seems that Gin had been quite happy and not sick a day in his-her life when all of a sudden he-she curled up his-her fins and dropped dead. It was then the bereaved owner's unpleasant task to have the body removed the best and quickest, if not the quietest, manner possible.

It seems that this untimely end is what most of our little pets have to look forward to. Fishlovers—I implore you one and all, lets get together and decide what's to be done for our fine finned friends. Why this is the worst disaster of its kind since the burial of Nebuchadnezzar, the piscine pet of 3rd floor Junior in the fall of '48. Scientific research, however, has made the disposal of the bodies quicker and less heart-rendering than the customary burial services.

The talk on "Freshman Philosophy" which Dr. G. W. Jeffers, professor of biology, delivered at the freshman Y Club meeting last week was very unusual and quite interesting. Another highlight of the Club's first meeting was the presentation of a chocolate nut sundae as door prize.

This freshman Y Club is not a club in the usual sense of the Question: "What are you saving your class cuts for this semester?"

Mary E. Watson: For Thanksgiving. It will be the first time I've been home in eight years for turkey time.

Betsy Wilson: What cuts?

Hilda Edwards: It's taken me almost three years to get cuts. Now that I have them I don't know what to do with them.

Mary Lou Alphin: Might as well not save them. I usually sleep them away anyway.

Jean Turner: I don't have any. I can't think of anything intelligent to say now.

Joyce Hamlett: Didn't know I was saving them.

Mary Lou Woodward: I'm saving mine for homecomings the 22nd at Brown University in the heart of lil' ole' Providence, Rhode Island.

Mary Jane Stansbury: I'm saving mine to get married on.

Mary Crowder: To have a big one Thanksgiving.

Helen Holbrook: So I can go to Harvard.

Sue Brewbaker: I don't know! I'm not sure I've even got any.

Helen Kaknis: TOMMY!

Helen Arrington: I want to use them to go to Florida. I hope! I hope!

Lucy Thrift: Next semester! I'm teaching now.

Peg Perry: What cuts?

Jane Gray: Nuthin' particular. I may not even use them.

Frankie Dodson: Boy! I'm saving mine for Boston!!

Ray Phillips: For a week end that's free!

Marian Avedikian: I'll never tell!

Elsie Baker: Loads of fun.

Gay Palmer: To paint the town red!

Joan Pritchett: Would that I had some!

Mary Moore Karr: To W&L for a week end, I hope!

Jesse Amory: I'm saving mine for my sister's wedding.

Kitty Hamlet: I'll use mine for the "Tobacco Festival" in Richmond.

Dot Boswick: I'm saving mine for home and Dick.

Standards Group Cites Necessities

Pencil sharpeners in dormitories, a larger slot on the College post office mail box, and electrical repairs on the second floor Senior building troning facilities were some of the College plant necessities cited by the Student Standards committee at its regular meeting last week.

Margaret Beasley, Student Standards president, stated that the group also decided to request a progress report from College authorities on similar committee recommendations made in the past. These suggestions include reading lamps for the library, a light on the sidewalk which leads from the library entrance to the street, and repairs on the steps leading from the Library hall.

Student Standards committee, composed of both students and faculty, meets monthly for the purpose of recognizing College needs and calling them to the attention of the proper authorities.

Home Dept. Staff Announces Changes

Mrs. Eva H. Warren, formerly College hostess, has retired after many years of service to the College. She has recently been ill, and is now living with her sister in Washington, Virginia.

Mrs. Warren was graduated here in 1904. After teaching in the Farmville public school system several years, she left to be married. Mrs. Warren returned here in 1924, and has served the College in many ways since.

Mrs. McCoy On Sick Leave

Mrs. Mabel McCoy, a College hostess for several years, is currently taking one year's sick leave to convalescence from a recent illness at her home in Monterey. She is expected to return to the College staff next session.

Churches Make Plans For Coming Week

Canterbury Club

The Canterbury Club cordially invites everyone to hear Mr. Robert C. Vickers speak Sunday night, October 16. Mr. Vickers will use the church's stained glass windows as his topic.

Wesley Foundation

The Wesley Foundation is sponsoring a hayride on Saturday, October 15. Sunday night, Miss Sonja Grodka, representative for World Student Service Fund, will speak at 7:00.

Newman Club

The Newman Club held its first meeting on October 10. Anna Famulatte, who was elected president last spring, did not return this fall, and Carrie Ann O'Loughlin was elected to represent her in this position.

Baptist Speaker

Miss Augustine, from Louisville, Ky., will speak at the Baptist Student Center next Wednesday afternoon at 5:00 p. m.

Students To Use Late Light Blanks

Jackie Wright, president of house council, has announced that beginning Friday students will be required to fill in blank forms for late light permissions, for out-of-town visitors, and to visit overnight between dormitories. These blanks can be secured from hall presidents and will have instructions printed on them, Jackie said.

Dr. Ruffin Heads Association Group

Dr. Beverly Ruffin, Longwood College librarian, was elected as chairman of the College and University Section, Virginia Library Association, at sessions of the Association Oct. 7 at Charlottesville.

Members of the College library staff who attended the meeting with Miss Ruffin were Miss Marian Terry, Miss Irving Armstrong, Mrs. G. W. Jeffers and Mrs. Fred Jenkins.

The Meeting was held at the Monticello Hotel. The outstanding event was an address by Merle Miller, noted critic, author, and lecturer.

The New York pitching and hitting power brought the Yankees baseball's world championship Sunday as they defeated the Brooklyn Dodgers 10-6 in what turned out to be the final game of the series. The first three games were thrillers to the very end with the accent on tight pitching by both teams, but the timely Yankees exploded in the final two games for 16 runs, which was just too much for the Dodgers. As a whole the series turned as expected—hotly contested but all Yankee. Vic Raschi, ex-William and Mary ace, wound up as one of the "pitchers of the year' 'as he rolled up 25 victories for the Yankee club this year.

The Emory and Henry Wasps have taken little time to show the world that they pack a powerhouse football squad this year. Saturday the Wasps polished off the respectable Hampden-Sydney Tigers 28-0 for their third win in as many games to remain tied with Virginia on the undefeated state list. The Wasp Miller-Davis combination has really begun to make a name for itself. Miller leads the entire state in scoring with 36 points, and Davis follows in a tie for sixth. Davis, however, pased three touchdowns in Saturday's encounter with the Tigers. The Wasps specialize in speed and power to back it up. There should be little question as to Virginia's top little team.

Sportin' Around

By Ann Lynch

A little work has been done toward recreational activities this week. Monday a badminton net was put up behind Senior building and is now ready for use. The broken ping pong table is being fixed and will be put in the "Rec" sometime this week. For information as to where to find equipment, look on the bulletin board. There will also be a badminton set put between annex and the Colonnade.

Tennis singles are to be played off by Thursday of this week. We'll be sure to let you know the outcome—just in case you miss the game.

Frances "Clem" Allen deserves a bit of recognition for getting on the Richmond All-City team. Clem played on the Jordon - Palmore team and was named as catcher on the All-City team. The team played all over the state, including such places as Charlottesville and Farmville. If you see Clem "sportin around" with a little gold softball, you'll know how she got it.

Jones Gives Names Of Committeewomen

Two representatives from each class have been appointed to serve on the Assembly Committee, Charlotte Sears Jones, student chairman of this committee, announced today.

From the freshman class Sara McElroy and Margaret Taylor will serve on the committee, Martha Alice Wilson and Sue Nelson will act as sophomore representatives, Ella Sue Smith and Sally Droste will represent the junior class, and Barbara Grizzard and Jean Hogge will act for the senior class.

Charlotte has asked that students who would like to suggest programs for future assemblies contact their class representatives and discuss their ideas with them.

Winner Will Add Points For Cup

The Women's fall single tennis matches are to be played off Thursday, Oct. 13, Hilda Edwards, tennis manager, announced today.

Nancy Gillie, Challice Haydon, Romine Mahood, Martha Kitchen, Barbara Obenshain, Clara Borum, Betsy Gravely, Lou Jamison and Helen Agnew will try to run the score up for Green and White.

Battling for the Red and White's will be Patsy Ritter, Clem Allen, Ann Langbein, Ray Phillips, Hildh Edwards, Dolores Hoback, Jackie Jardine, Marion Becknor and Jean Eidenour.

The winner of these matches will score 5 points toward the Color Cup for her colors. Any participant who is unable to play at the appointed time will forfeit that match to her opponent.

YWCA Reveals Theme For Year

"Doubts or Certainties" is the theme which the local Y.W.C.A. will develop in its program this year, Dolores Duncan, president of the Y.W.C.A., announced following the retreat which the 'Y' cabinet held at Longwood Estate last week end. Another outcome of the retreat was the announcement that the weekly student study groups which have been sponsored by the College Y.W.C.A. in the past will be resumed this year.

Dolores stated that the first of the study groups, to which all students are invited, will take place next Wednesday, October 19, in the 'Y' lounge from 4:30 to 5 p. m. With "You and Your God" as October's study topic, discussion in next week's study group will center on the question, "What is your God, His place in your life, and your responsibility to Him?" Faculty members, ministers, church student secretaries, and local ministers will be asked to speak at these sessions, Dolores said. Patty Walker, chairman of the 'Y' library committee will have charge of securing speakers for the study groups.

The recent retreat, an annual meeting of 'Y' officers, cabinet members, and advisers for sessions of planning, devotional exercises, and discussion, was attended by local pastors and the church student secretaries. The Reverend John Myers, Farmville Methodist minister, led one of the discussions. Other retreat activities were a picnic supper Saturday evening and early morning watch Sunday.

Dean Will Interview High School Students

Dean William W. Savage will spend several days next week interviewing prospective students at high schools in the southern part of the state.

After delivering an address on "The Mutual Problems of Colleges and Public School Teachers" to the Sussex County Education Association at Waverly next Wednesday, Dean Savage will visit high schools in Waverly, Stony Creek, and Jarrett.

On Thursday, October 20, Dean Savage will interview students at the Emporia, Lawrenceville, and La Crosse high schools. Students at the South Hill, Boydton, and Clarksville high schools will meet him Friday, October 21.

To Give Blackstone Sermon

Dean Savage will conduct the morning service at the Blackstone Methodist Church Sunday, October 16, in the absence of the Rev. Freeman, the regular Blackstone minister.

7 Invited To Join Biology Seminar

Seven students have been invited to join the biological seminar for this semester.

Seminar, which is a discussion group meeting once a week, is composed of a number of students selected by the staff and Dr. George W. Jeffers ,head of the biology department, Dr. Robert Brumfield, and Miss Vera Baron.

Anne Langbien, Juanita Weeks, Barbara Andrews, Mary Leigh Meredith, Lila Easley, Martha "B" Hilton and Helen Arrington are the student members of the seminar this semester.

In December the seminar will present a program on the "Voice of Longwood" over the radio station WFLO.

The biological seminar is open only to a few qualified students subject to the approval of the head of the department.

Poetry Association Gives 1949 Deadline

The National Poetry Association has announced that November 5 will be the closing date for the submission of manuscripts for the Annual Anthology of College Poetry.

There are no charges or fees for the inclusion of verse in the Anthology. Each entry must be on a separate sheet bearing the following statement; "Verse entitled'.... .....' is my own personal effort". Name, college attended and home address are also necessary. Entries should be sent to the secretary-t of the National Poetry Association, Dennis Hartman at 3210 Selby Avenue, Los Angeles, 34, California.

"A Truth" by Barbara Andrews, senior from Newport News, was included in the last Anthology.

The Anthology is a compilation of the finest poetry written by the college men and women of America, representing every state in the country. Selections for the Anthology are made by a board of judges.

The Randolph-Macon Yellow Jackets lost decisively to Guilford as expected Saturday 36-13. One of the few bright spots for the Jacket club was in their blocking all six placement kicks.

The Richmond Spiders finally turned in a good ball game as they upset Furman 12-0. The Spiders were without their backbone combination, Suttenfield and Billingsley, so they have come a long way since the beginning of the season. The Washington and Lee Generals absorbed a 36-0 drubbing last week from Georgia Tech and from here on it will attempt to remold the team around a passing attack. The Bridgewater Eagles returned to the gridiron Saturday after an absence of over a decade, but they lost the opener to Shepard 30-0.

Johnny Papit, Virginia sensation, did not continue his 200 yard average in the VPI game in Roanoke but nevertheless he now needs only 73 yards to break Dudley's all-time Cavalier ground-gaining record of 1,627 yards for a three year period; Papit has 1,554 yards.

The National football ratings really took a revision this week as underrated Army celebrated its greatest victory since the fall of Japan and Notre Dame in beating the top-rated Michigan 21-7. The Michigan Wolverines had a string of 25 victories but Army was not to be denied and took their 14th. At the time Army was rated seventh nationally. The revision: Notre Dame wit hits undefeated string of 31 games and last impressive 25-12 victory over mighty Purdue took the top spot with Army close behind in second place. Michigan fell to seventh.

Northern Neck Club Fetes New Members

The Northern Neck Club honored its nine new members last Thursday with a hamburger feast held in Mr. S. L. Graham's yard.

New Northern Neck students who attended the affair were Helen Fones, Ann Conely, Catherine Anderson, Lina Blackwell, Lillian Shelton, Joyce Richardson, Nan Bland, Jeanne Mercer, and Ann Biddlecomb. Mr. Raymond French, faculty adviser to the Club, was also present.

LC Faculty Studies College Curricula

At the last faculty meeting plans were made for studying the curricula of the College. According to President Dabney S. Lancaster this will be a continuous process since as Dr. Lancaster said, "A college owes it to the student body to keep its curricula as up to date as possible."

Following the recommendations made at the conference at Natural Bridge held by the State Department of Education and the various teachers' colleges of Virginia the faculty elected a steering committee to direct this study of the College program. Selected to this committee were Mr. Robert H. Ballagh, Miss Virginia Bedford, Dr. George W. Jeffers, Dr. Edgar M. Johnson, Dr. John W. Molnar, Miss Fern E. Staggs, and Miss Kate G. Trent.

Dr. John P. Wynne will serve as coordinator between this committee and the State Department of Education as well as similar committees in other colleges concerned with this same program.

Longwood To Honor Dewey With Week-long Celebration

Dr. Balz To Speak Before Students

Longwood College will join in the nation-wide celebration this week and next marking the ninetieth birthday anniversary of John Dewey, father of progressive education and world-renowned philosopher and teacher.

The celebration at Longwood will begin with announcements at assembly tomorrow Dewey's anniversary date. The John Dewey books will be displayed in the library during the week following. There will be three junior-senior programs in the auditorium of the elementary school at 8:05 A. M. on October 21, 24, and 26 at which time important phases of Dewey's philosophy will be considered.

The program for the week will be culminated with two addresses by the distinguished philosopher. Dr. Albert G. A. Balz, Head of the Corcoran School of Philosophy at the University of Virginia. Dr. Balz is the author of a two-volume work, "Descartes and the Modern Mind," and has kept in direct contact with Dewey for many years. He will speak to the faculties and administrations of Longwood College and Hampden-Sydney colleges in the Lounge of the Student Building at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening, October 26. His subject is "John Dewey and the Modern Mind."

Final Event

The final event of the celebration will be at 1:05 p. m., Thursday, in the Methodist church, when Dr. Balz will address the student body and the college staff. His subject will be "John Dewey and his Philosophic Vision." To this meeting friends of the College are invited.

College To Offer Course In Violin

A string class will be organized for students interested in the study of violin, if sufficient interest is shown, Dr. John W. Molnar, who will instruct the class, announced Monday. No previous experience or training is required. A year's work in the class, which will meet two times a week, will prepare the members for performance in the orchestra to be organized next year.

Freshman and sophomore students are particularly urged to enter the group. Students majoring in music, or who are thinking of entering the new music education course to be offered next year should be especially interested, as membership in this class will give them advanced standing in one of the required courses in the new curriculum, Dr. Molnar pointed out.

Students will have to furnish their own instruments. The music professor expressed the belief that many undoubtedly have families in which a violin is to be found. Those not having one can purchase a practice violin called a "Fiddle-ette" for $12.50, which includes the instrument and bow. Music for the class will cost approximately $1 a semester; there will be no fee for instruction.

Dr. Molnar cited the increasing emphasis being put upon the teaching of strings in public schools throughout the country and in Virginia as a compelling reason for music majors in particular to enter the class. "An elementary teacher who is capable of starting string classes in her school would be a valuable member of any faculty," Dr. Molnar said.

All students interested in the class should see Dr. Molnar as soon as possible, in order to get the class underway within the shortest possible time.

Students Start Practice Teaching

Majority Teach In High School

Fourty-four students have begun their practice teaching in the Farmville high school this semester also.

Among those teaching in the high school are Jean Anderson, who is teaching English 8B and American history 11; Barbara Andrews, biology laboratory 10 and general science 8C; Puckett Asher, Chorus and English 8B; Jeanne Baltes, typing 12; June Banks, English 10 and Spanish 11; Margaret Beasley, trigonometry and solid geometry 13 and algebra 9; Winifred Beard, physical education; Catherine Bondurant, English 11 and personal problems; Marion Breeden, typing 12; and Page Burnett, English 9 and English 8B.

Others who have begun their student teaching are Dorothy Caldwell, general science 9 and biology 10; Dot Carter, home economics 11 and 12; Patricia Davis, American history 11; Dorothy Dodd, English 8A and Spanish 11; Dorothy Doutt, typing 11; Hope Duke, home economics 11 and 12; Allie Jane Felton, government 12 and English 9; Helen Holbrook, bookkeeping 10; Helen Kaknis, Spanish 12 and English 8C; and Patsy Kimbrough, home economics 10.

Longwood Alumnae Council To Meet At College To Make Plans For Year

The tentative program for the annual meeting of the Longwood College Alumnae Council to be held here on October 28-29 was released today by Mrs. Ruth H. Coyner, executive secretary of the Alumnae Association.

The council, which is composed of the Alumnae Executive Board and a representative of each alumnae chapter, is holding this meeting to exchange ideas and to make plans for the coming year.

On Friday, October 28, from 4 to 6 p. m. registration of the delegates will be held in the Rotunda; at 6 p. m. dinner will be served in the College dining hall. An executive board meeting will be held at 7:30 that same evening in Dr. Lancaster's office.

Breakfast will be served the delegates at 7:15 a. m. on Saturday in the College dining hall. From 8:30 to 10 a. m. further registration of late arriving delegates will be held in the rotunda. Also at 8:30 the executive board will again meet.

At 10 a. m. Miss Helen Costan of Roanoke, national Alumnae president, will greet the council and conduct introductions for the group. Following this, President Dabney S. Lancaster will speak to the assemblage on "Longwood College, Present and Future." Mrs. Coyner will then present a report on the chapter activities.

On Saturday afternoon luncheon will be served to the delegates, followed by a business meeting at the College snack bar at 12:15 1:30. Dr. and Mrs. Lancaster will entertain the council at a tea in the President's home from 4 to 5.

The annual Alpha Kappa Gamma circus at 8 p. m. Saturday night will climax the council meeting.

2 Curricula To Be Added To Courses In 1950-'51

LC Will Provide Courses For B. A., B. S. In Music Ed.

Two new curricula in music education will be added next year to the seven existing courses of study at Longwood College, according to Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, President of the college. The new courses will lead to the degrees of Bachelor of Science in Music Education and Bachelor of Arts in Music Education.

The music curricula are being set up under the direction of the newly appointed head of the department, Dr. John W. Molnar. Dr. Molnar came to Longwood College this fall after a wide variety of experience in all phases of music education both in the public schools and in college. For a number of years he was on the faculty of the Teachers College of the University of Cincinnati as well as that of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music.

The music instruction staff of Longwood College will be enlarged to meet the expected increase in enrollment of music students.

The new music curricula call for expanded courses in theory, applied music, and music education classes. The new theory courses will include structure of music, choral, church choir, and instrumental conducting.

Music education classes will cover the fields of materials and methods at all levels of music education, training in supervision, and in operetta production. Applied music will include instruction in piano, organ, voice, and orchestra and band instruments, starting at elementary levels and carried on to artist standards, by either class or individual instruction. Ensemble work now offered in choir and chorus will be expanded to include band, orchestra, men's chorus, madrigal singers, and string, woodwind, and brass ensembles.

Plans for the new music-auditorium building call for a three-manual organ in the auditorium which will seat 1200, two practice organs, piano and instrument practice rooms, a large orchestra-chorus rehearsal room, studies, classrooms, offices, and library facilities. The stage will be complete; operettas and concerts will be presented by the music department with the most modern facilities. Present equipment in the College library will be used to demonstrate and teach recent developments in audio-aid techniques in music instruction.

Phillips Announces '49 Circus Theme As 'Four Seasons'

Stunt Practice Schedule Posted

Ray Phillips, general chairman of Alpha Kappa Gamma Circus, announced today that the theme for the 1949 Circus will be "The Four Seasons."

The theme will be carried out by the queen and her court who were elected last week by secret ballot. The names of these girls will not be revealed until they make their entrance at the Circus performance.

The Circus queen, a member of the senior class, will represent the winter season. The freshman, sophomore, and junior members of the court will represent the other three seasons.

The queen and the three members of her court will each make their entrance while music appropriate to the season which they represent is being played.

The schedule of practices for the class stunts has been posted on the bulletin boards. Each stunt chairman also has a copy of this schedule and it will be found printed elsewhere in this issue of the Rotunda. The class stunt chairmen have been notified that should their class wish to forego one of the scheduled practices no "make-up" practice can be scheduled.

Juke Box Dance

An informal juke box dance will be sponsored by the Rotunda staff Saturday night, October 22, Jackie Eagle, editor-in-chief, announced today. The dance, which will be girl-boy break, will be held in the Recreation hall of the Main building.

Admission will be ten cents per person at the door. A door prize will be awarded.

anice Slavin, business manager of the Rotunda, is general chairman in charge of the dance. Calvin Hatcher and Lester Smallwood have been appointed co-chairmen of the publicity committee. Longwood Professor Will Attend Meeting Of Education Group

Dr. John P. Wynne, director of teacher education and professor of education and philosophy at Longwood College, will leave tomorrow for Chapel Hill, North Carolina, where he will attend the third annual meeting of Region III of the National Philosophy of Education Society. Dr. Wynne is the regional director of the area which includes the District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, and Tennessee.

The Society has appointed regional directors to develop a systematic plan for the improvement of philosophy courses in teacher education programs throughout the country. An advisory committee which Dr. Wynne has appointed to work with him includes Dr. Samuel Engle Burr, American University; Dr. Orin B. Graff, University of Tennessee; and Dr. Franklin H. McNutt, Woman's College, University of North Carolina.

On October 27, Dr. Wynne will leave the College to attend the annual meeting of the Virginia Philosophical Association. He will address the association on the topic, "Mind and Education" from the standpoint of John Dewey, the noted American Philosopher who is being honored all over Virginia this month in celebration of his ninetieth birthday.

Joan Circle Announces Theme For Convention Of AKG at Longwood

MISS LEIZE CONNER, of Columbia, South Carolina, regional president of Alpha Kappa Gamma, who will preside over the meetings this week end.

Delegates To Arrive On Campus Friday

The topic of the seventeenth annual convention of Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary women's leadership fraternity, will be "Alpha Kappa Gamma, the Past, the Present, the Future" Jackie Wright, president of the local Alpha Kappa Gamma circle, has announced. The convention will begin on this campus, with the Joan circle as hostess, this Friday.

Leize Conner from Columbia, South Carolina, the president of the regional organization, will preside over the convention.

Delegates From Several Colleges

Delegates attending the convention will come from Queens College in Charlotte, N. C., the University of South Carolina and Columbia College in Columbia, S. C. Alumnae members of Alpha Kappa Gamma have also been invited to attend the convention.

The registration of delegates to the convention will take place from 3 until 5 p. m. on Friday, after which dinner will be served in the College dining hall. At 7:30 p. m., the opening meeting of the convention will be held in the Y' lounge. At this meeting committees will be appointed and the officers' and circle reports will be presented to the group.

On Saturday, breakfast will be served the delegates at 8 a. m. in the College Tea Room followed by the committee meetings in the sorority chapter rooms. At 10:15, a group meeting will be held in the Y' lounge at which time a discussion will be conducted by each circle on "Alpha Kappa Gamma, Past, Present and Future." Also at this meeting there will be a discussion of group problems.

Election of Officers To Be Held

Election of new regional officers will take place at the business session at 1:30 p. m. on Saturday in the Y' lounge. Committees will meet Saturday morning in the sorority chapter rooms to give their reports.

A formal banquet will be given for the convention delegates at the Longwood Estate on Saturday night. Mrs. Royster Lyle, of Danville will be the principal speaker at this banquet. Mrs. Lyle, the former Frances Saie, a Longwood graduate, is one of the founders of

Gov,t. Administers Test On Handbok

Bragg Expains New Measure

Women upperclassmen will take an examination on Student Handbook regulations tomorrow evening at 7 p. m. Sophomores will take the tests in the small auditorium, and juniors and seniors will meet in the English department of Main building for theirs.

The test will be taken from the following sources in the handbook: page 16, "If you wish to. . .see"; page 22, definitions; page 23-32, social regulations; and page 18, "The meaning of the Honor Code at Longwood College."

This is the first time in recent Longwood history that women students have been required to take such a test as this, according to Elizabeth Bragg president of Women's Student Government Council, which body made the decision to administer the tests. Explaining the innovation, "Lizzie" stated that the test is a precautionary measure against upperclassmen's inadvertently becoming lax in their observance of the rules contained in the Handbook.

Orientation leaders who will be in charge of administering the tests will be exempt from the examination.

College Night School Installs New Course

With the installation last Monday of a new course in blueprint reading in the Evening Division of Longwood College, Evening enrollment reached a total of 57 students for the fall semester. Mr. Douglas Frazer, who is superintendent of construction for the new Longwood science building, is instructing the blueprint course. A graduate of Virginia Military Institute, Mr. Frazer has behind him many years of civil engineering experience.

Other courses currently being taught in the Evening Division are in public speaking, business law, and The Old Testament. Respective instructors are Dr. Robert C. Beale, professor of English at Hampden - Sydney College; Mr. William P. Hay, Jr., local attorney-at-law; and Mr. Charles F McRae, assistant professor of Bible at Hampden-Sydney College.

ACE Group Initiates 21 New Members

Twenty-one new members were initiated into the Association of Childhood Education in a meeting of A. E. C. held on October 13.

Others initiated at this meeting were Emma Crute, Mary Ann Ford, Lucy Jones, Doris Old, Thelma Peake and Elizabeth Sekeres.

Tentative plans discussed in the meeting include an informal tea for all elementary majors. A Christmas party for the rural school children in this vicinity is another activity planned by the organization.

A.E.C. is a national oragnization composed of primary teachers and others who are interested in the education of young children. The local organization grew out of the Primary Council which was organized on our campus in 1927, and later became affiliated with the national A.C.E.

The Old Theme . . . . . .

Should the men students be requested to sign the honor code? There has been much discussion about the campus lately on that question.

Many of the women students seem to feel that since they were required to sign an honor code the men should also be required to sign one. No one is required to to sign the honor code; it would lose all meaning if this were so.

By signing the honor code each student acknowledges and accepts the honor system as an integral part of Longwood College. He has placed upon himself the responsibility of seeing that the honor system remains inviolate. This must be entirely voluntary.

We realize that a student can be completely honorable without signing those small cards. But we feel that at Longwood the act of signing them is a demonstration of good faith in the whole honor system. The men students are definitely a part of the student body; they have accepted and to abide by the honor code and all it stands for but they are not asked to "sign the honor code" as are the women students.

The men students have their own government association; they do not come under the jurisdiction the women's government association. Therefore it is up to the men themselves to decide whether or not they should be asked to sign the honor code. We think they should, but it is not our decision to make; we can only recommend that the Men's Student Government Association and the Women's meet together to establish rules and customs more harmonious so that the two will form a well integrated, unified student body in which questions such as this cannot arise.

About Out-Of-State Students

The Richmond Times-Dispatch has recently stirred up quite a controversy, doubtless boosting circulation in political and educational circles, with a series of articles by Dr. William H. Stauffer ,director of research for the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, which deals with "tax-supported Virginia colleges and universities." Longwood College is one of the 10 such institutions under consideration.

Dr. Stauffer has paraded before his readers' eyes an imposing, indeed often baffling, array of figures which are supposed to prove that the Commonwealth is contributing to the higher education of more than its share of out-of-State students without receiving a fair return in terms of the number of Virginia students who seek their education at the institutions of other states.

According to Dr. Stauffer's analyses, Virginia's out-of-State students number 27.7 percent of the total as against an average of 23.8 percent of nonresident students in institutions sponsored by the states immediately surrounding Virginia. Individual figures for the U. of Va. show a nonresident enrollment of 42.5 percent of the total. With these and many like figures including nationwide aggregates, breakdowns by states and individual universities, population per-centages, etc., Dr. Stauffer rationalizes that out-of-state students are costing the Commonweath funds which could be used more advantageously elsewhere in the program of educating Virginians. Nowhere has the statistician taken into specific account the substantial tuition differential paid by nonresident students. It cannot be denied that this differential is in many cases an important item in the institution's budget. Indeed the legitimate question has been advanced as to whether many of the State colleges and the University could continue to offer their present services without this additional tuition.

In the case of Longwood College where nonresident enrollment is a meager 4.6 percent of the total student body the extra annual $100 per out-of-State student doubtless makes a sizeable contribution to a budget which, being State-dispensed, is necessarily stringent. No prospective Virginia student has been denied admission to Longwood to make way for out-of-state students, and the same goes for the 9 other State-backed institutions under Dr. Stauffer's careful consideration. Entrance requirements are uniform for residents and nonresidents, and some State institutions even set their standards for admitting out-of-State students substantially higher.

Longwood, along with the other 9 schools welcomes its out-of-State contingent as evidence of the academic advantages offered here. And does it make any great difference if, as Dr. Stauffer suggests, that many "foreigners" are lured to Virginia by such unacademic offerings as "historic tradition and cultural associations, the role of athletics, or social prestige?"

If Virginia should cancel her so-called "free gift or subsidy" to nonresident students, State controlled institutions would be forced to take one of two odious alternative courses: (1) to fill up their emptied accommodations with inferior native students who would not formerly have met entrance requirements, or (2) to reduce their staffs and offer inferior service to the remaining students. Just what Dr. Stauffer's proposal will be in case that the Commonwealth should take his implied advice and rid itself of the allegedly unprofitable nonresident students is worth watching the papers for.

Statistical sorcery of the brand advanced by Dr. Stauffer is not easy to cope with. However, it is to be hoped that the institutions whose enrollments he delights in dissecting have prepared Virginia citizens to see through his numerical double-talk.

OUR WORLD

By Nellie Hart

Our world was an astonished world last Saturday when eleven top American Communists were convicted of a plot to advocate violent revolution in the United States . The jury declared the defendants guilty after only a 7-hour deliberation.

The case, which has been described as one of the bitterest and longest Federal cases ever to be tried in American history, had a dramatic climax. The five defense attorneys and Eugene Davis, top defendant who argued his own case, were each sentenced to jail for contempt of court. Their terms will vary from 30 days to six months. The court ordered all the defendants to be jailed until sentenced next Friday.

This trial was the, first of its kind in the history of the United States, and the verdict of the jury and the action of the court came as a great surprise to the Communist party who said that they would appeal the entire decision to the United States Supreme Court.

Pedro's Pocket

By Jean Turner

Well, freshmen, how does it feel to be duly initiated? Or is Pedro asking a little too soon? Anyway, another rat day is over and there are no serious casualities to report. Rats aren't the only ones beat from rat day's exertions tho—Pedro knows a couple of sophomores who are glad its over with too. Pedro got mixed up in an airraid in the rotunda and is thoroughly convinced he was lucky to get away with only a slightly sprained wrist and a torn shirt. Ratting took its toll of upperclassmen too—one extra "little" junior complained to Pedro that even her freshman year she got off easier. Seems she looked too much like a freshman and was too little to take up for herself.

For the information of one coed who wants to know about the course in "Desk Private" that is being offered here, Pedro suggests you talk to him. Since he has made an extensive study of said subject, he's your man. All those wishing information who cannot reach Pedro by twelve o'clock midnight one month from today are requested to write to him in care of this newspaper. He will be only too delighted to help you fellows out at any time.

This week's goldfish report is looking up .There hasn't been a single death reported all week. Science is forever moving forward to newer and better things.

This may seem to be very elementary, which as a matter of fact it is, but on with the story—what with the pins and rings and the orchids galore that our little gadabouts reappeared with this past Sunday night Pedro could do nothing but wonder why Longwood bothers to prepare gals to teach 'cause they just don't get around to it. I think I convinced him with several stories which, I might add, are very close to me, about the others of us who think that there is nothing better than a career—of teaching—I suppose.

Alumni Notes

The newly organized Raleigh, North Carolina, Alumnae chapter met on Thursday, October, 6, at the home of Mrs. Dorothy Lewis Fiythe. Mrs. Lucy Manson Sharpe is president of this chapter.

The Washington, D. C. alumnae chapter inaugurated their "drop-in" Saturday luncheons on the first Saturday of this month at Woodward and Lothrops Tea Room. Miss Emily Johnson of Arlington is the new president of this chapter.

The Norfolk alumnae chapter held its first fall meeting at the Essex House at Virginia Beach, where Mrs. Marjorie Cobb Harrell is hostess.

Three members of the freshman class have been awarded scholarships from the College Alumnae Chapters in their vicinity.

They are Virginia McLean from Richmond; Frances Andrews, Norfolk; and Grace Booker, Pamplin, who received the Mary White Cox Scholarship from Farmville.

The Farmville Chapter, Longwood College Alumnae Association, will meet Wednesday, Oct. 19, at 4 p. m., in the Student Building Lounge.

Dr. Lancaster will be the speaker at which time he will discuss policies and plans of the college.

Members in Farmville and vicinity are urged to attend. The public is cordially invited.

Notice

The College publicity committee has requested that students aid them in their compilation of a file on Longwood publicity by contributing clippings of Longwood College items from their hometown newspapers, These clippings may be brought to the office of the executive secretary or students may deposit them in the faculty mail box of Dr. Marvin W. Schlegel, chairman of the committee.

Longwood Saturday Night

Campus Cogitations

Question: "Do you think men students here should sign the Honor Code?"

Rachael Peters: Of course! Why not?

Martha Kitchen: Certainly I do! They're just as much a part of the college as we are.

Peggy Bryant: I really never thought too much about it, but I believe they should.

Frances Minter: Yes, since they are a part of L. C. they should sign it just as the rest.

Virginia Westbrook: In order to live up to the standards and ideals of Longwood College, it is necessary that the "boys" sign the honor code.

Ann Kemp: Enough said—need I say more after Westbrook?

Jean Smith: Yes indeed!

Romine Mahood: If they want to.

"Chic" Ritchie: I can't say nuthin' cus Bird Stoops said I haven't been well enough to think.

Betty McRee: Yes! The Honor System cannot be effective unless signed and upheld by the entire student body.

Peg White: I think this should be left up to the boys.

Margaret A. Shelton: I don't have a "C" average so I'm not entitled to voice my opinion.

Bill Beamer: I think they should.

Ann Nock: I think they should have the right to refuse or accept as we do.

Katie Cobb: Why shouldn't they? May as well if we do.

Puckett Asher: If they are to be a part of the college, I think they should.

Marian Breeden: I think they should—definitely.

Pat Davis: Most emphatically! They are in the classrooms as much as we are.

Patsy Ritter: Yes! We just voted on letting them come to the Snack Bar so if they are to be a part of L. C., they should definitely sign the Honor Code.

Mary Miller: Since they are a part of L. C. it is their duty to uphold the Honor Code.

Lucy Page Hall: Certainly I do, they are part of Longwood, too.

Betty Barnes: Yes, I think they are part of the school as much as we are.

Bobbie Obenshain: I think they are part of the school and they certainly should.

Betty Baker: By all m e a n s. They are Longwood students too. (Thank goodness!)

Jimmy Thompson: Definitely!

Joan Prichett: If they have all the other privileges they certainly should.

Lee Cosby: All members of the student body should be treated alike.

Barbara Carter: We signed it; why shouldn't they?

Ann Hundley: There is no reason why all students shouldn't be treated equally.

Girls In' Big White House' Have Never a Dull Moment

By Louise Turner

Have you ever followed "walking packages" up the street only to find that way down underneath them are real people? They are our home ec. girls who live across the street in the big white house.

If you think life at Longwood College gets teejus, you should be in these girls' places, for they lead a most interesting life. Their daily dozen goes something like this: Up at 6:45, to breakfast, to work with a broom, to classes, to work in the mixing bowls and then in the dishpan, to the grocery store, and finally to bed at any old hour when they've done enough homework to save them from disgrace the next day. A home ec. major's duties range from scrub woman or plumber to dietitian and hostess. That is the whole life in a nutshell. There is never a dull moment.

It is hard to imagine how interesting this can be until you burn the soup; try to stuff it down the drain without Miss Hall's knowing it; then dash downtown for more with ten minutes left in which to prepare hot soup for ten people, only to find that Miss Hall knew all about it all the time.

Once during the semester each girl is honored by being guest. For this weekend she may go away. Incidentally the girls usually end up at home for another taste of Mother's food.

When it comes to dates, they really are lucky because there's a real honest-to-goodness homey parlor in which to entertain! Then,

The first annual Tobacco Bowl Festival at Richmond, turned out to be quite successful this year with an estimated 55,000 people spectating the events, which were highlighted by the Richmond-VMI football game and the crowning at half time of Miss Dorothy Kirsten, ash blond singing star, queen of the festival by the nationally popular crooner Frank Sinatra .Sinatra bravely rooted for VMI and was not disappointed as the Weydets pasted a 14-7 victory over the Spiders on two beautiful goal line stands and two touchdown passes by little Joe Veitri, who by the way is fast making the Keydets and fans forget the gap left by slinging Bobby Thomason last year.

Johnny Papit rolled over 132 yards in the Virginia-Washington and Lee game and thereby broke the Cavalier's All-American Bullet Bill Dudley's ground gaining record of 1,627 yards by boosting his total to 1,690. The Cavaliers beat the Generals 27-7 and have not lost to Washington and Lee since 1937. Then Generals put up a game fight but just made too many mistakes.

The Emory and Henry Wasps continued to match Virginia's undefeated record this year in downing highly respected Guilford 27-7. Miller scored four more touchdowns for the Wasps to forge out way ahead of the state scoring leaders with 54 points. Papit of Va. is second with 36 points.

Michigan State humbled William and Mary 42-13 but the score was not the only crippling blow that the Indians received—they lost the services of All-America Jack Cloud who suffered a recurrence of a knee injury. Al Dugoff's 103 yard touchdown kickoff return spiritedly broke VPI and they went down 24-14. Dugoff hit pay dirt personally on four occasions. The Colonial sophomore star, Andy Davis, susposedly was hardly missed as he sat on the side lines nursing injuries received in their last three games. Tech's losing string has accumulated to 15 games dating back as far as the 1947 season. Elsewhere in the state there is almost complete joy. Randolph Macon celebrated it first win as they came from behind in the last period to score on a 42 yard pass play, and an accidental safety to down Catholic 9-7. Hampden-Sydney romped unexpectedly over Apprentice 38-7 despite the loss of four players by disciplinary action. The Bridgewater Eagles received their first victory in their return to football by pasting a 12-0 win over Gallaudet.

Richmond tennis fans will have a chance to see the world's top tennis performers on Nov. 25th when ex-champion Bobby Riggs brings his troupe of touring professionals to Blues' Armory at 8 P. M. The troupe will be headed by big Jake Kramer, the world's

Red'n Whites Take Lead In Fall Tennis Matches

Sportin' Around

By Ann Lynch

The competitive spirit has at last got underway here at Longwood, with the start of the fall tennis singles. You can read the outcome to date in the next column.

It was good to see all you Red 'n Whites and Green 'n Whites out for cheerleaders. Congrats' go to all for supporting your colors.

Just a reminder to the co-eds—the pool will be open for the men every Tuesday and Thursday from 4 to 6 p. m.

Have you seen the new notebooks the A.A. is selling? They have space for assignments, letters, appointments, etc. The books are done in Longwood colors—blue and white. (Incidentally, each notebook is $1.25, and you can buy one from Mary Lou Woodward)

Do you have trouble remembering birthdays and addresses? Well, the A. A. has a surprise in store for you here—but we'll let it be a surprise.

Varsity hockey practices are now being held Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at 4:00. We want to see more of you out on the field with hockey sticks in the coming weeks!

Patronize Rotunda advertisers with faith in their reliability.

The first round in the women's single tennis matches has been played off and some have started on the second round. The second round must be completed by today, October 19. Ray Phillips, president of the Athletic Association has announced. At press time, the results of that round had not been compiled.

Those girls winning for Green 'n White are Helen Agnew over Dolores Hoback with a count of 6-4:6-1, and Agnew over Hilda Edwards with the score 6-0:7-5. Nancye Gillie, also winning for Green 'n White over Jean Ridenour scored 6-1:6-1, and 6-0:7-5 over Marion Becknor.

The Red and Whites, however, seem to be in the lead at the close of the first round with wins from Patsy Ritter, Ray Phillips, Hilda Edwards, Jackie Jardine, Marion Becknor and Frances Allen. Patsy Ritter beat Romine Mahood 6-2:9-7, Hilda Edwards won over Lou Jamerson with the score standy 6-3:6-2, More Red and Whites winning were Jackie Jardine over Martha Kitchen, 6-1:6-1, Marion Becknor over Challice Hayden 6-1:6-4-4:7-5 and Frances Allen, who won over Betsy Gravely with a score of 6-2:6-0.

The color winning the fall singles gets 5 points toward winning the color cup.

Those remaining in the matches after the first round are Nancye Gillie, Marion Becknor, Patsy Ritter, Helen Agnew, Anne Lanbein, Jackie Jardine, Clara Borum, Ray Phillips, Frances Allen and Hilda Edwards.

Longwood Has Princess

Kitty Hamlet, Longwood freshman from South Hill, represented her home town, South Boston, and surrounding area as a princess in the First Annual Tobacco Festival held in Richmond last week end.

Kitty was crowned "Miss South Hill Tobacco Market." During her royal reign she attended a fashion show Friday afternoon and the royal presentation of the Tobacco Festival Queen, Dorothy Kirsten, and court the same evening. Frank Sinatra and Dean Hudson's orchestra were also on hand for the Friday night festivities. After being entertained at a luncheon Saturday, Kitty attended the University of Richmond-V.M.I., "Tobacco Bowl", football game. The formal ball for the queen and court was held Saturday night at Tantilla Gardens, with music by Blue Barron's orchestra.

Attend Socials Away

Among the Longwood students who attended the Kappa Sigma oyster roast at Hampden-Sydney last Saturday night were Iris Sutphin with Bill Wall, Connie Rice with Gene Riley, Ann Nock with Russell Goode, Barbara Sours with "Chuck" Pussinelli, Charlotte Williams, who dated Dave Martin, Frances Turner with Buddy Glascock, and Suse Bowie with "Gardenia" Brooks.

Students Are 'Pinned'

A number of Longwood girls have been "pinned" this past week. Among them were June Banks who was pinned to Blackwell Evans,a Theta Chi at the University of Virginia.

Dot Carter accepted a pin from Jimmy Harper, of Farmville, now attending the University of Virginia, where he is a member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity.

Jane Williams is pinned to Russell Chambliss, a member of Kappa Alpha fraternity at the College of William and Mary.

Groups Elect Advisors

Miss Fern Staggs, professor of home economics, has been elected honorary faculty patroness for the local chapter of Zeta Tau Alpha social sorority.

Members of the Longwood chapter of Theta Sigma Upsilon social sorority recently elected Mrs. Josephine Phillips, assistant professor of mathematics, faculty advisor to the sorority.

Advisors this year to the local circle of Alpha Kappa Gamma, women's Leadership fraternity, will be Miss Gwendolyn Cress, assistant to the Dean of Women; Miss Elizabeth Burger, assistant professor of science; and Miss Florence Stubbs, assistant professor of history and social sciences.

Elementary Student Teachers

Among those students teaching in the elementary school are Robbie Cromar, and Ann Younger who are teaching in kindergarten; Ann Critzer, Helen Traynham, Constance Heather and Patsy Lindsay in the first grade; Nancy Bruce, Roberta Robertson, Virginia Bowie, and Carol Stoops in the second grade; Irma Lee Allison, Mary Ann Ford and Rebecca Kelsey in the third grade.

Also teaching in the elementary school are Margaret Farmer and Barbara Sours in the sixth grade; Catherine Carmichael and Nancy Meeteer in the sixth and seventh grades; and Louise Redd and Betty Lewis Shank in the seventh grade.

Pat Paddison, Jean Turner, Elizabeth Buck and Ruth Hathaway are teaching art in the elementary school. Patsy Ritter, Sue Walker, Norma Roady, Hilda Edwards ,Cabell Overby, Ray Phillips and Mary Miller are teaching physical education in the elementary school, and Peggy Dee Hoover, Jean Hogge and Jane Richards are teaching music.

Granddaughters Club Holds First Meeting

The Granddaughter's Club will act as hostess to the Alumnae Council which will meet at Longwood College on October 28 and 29, Virginia Westbrook, president of the club, announced at a meeting held the first of this week.

At this meeting, which was the first for the year, the twenty-three new members of club were welcomed and the purpose of the club was explained to them. Virginia then conducted a discussion on the activities of the club for the coming year.

COMMERCIAL CLUB

The regular Commercial Club meeting to be held tomorrow at 7 p. m. in the Y' Lounge will be highlighted by short skit programs presented by members of each of the classes represented in the club. Refreshments will be served.

Both Gonzales and Kramer have power stroking games, each has a booming service, authoritative ground strokes, and a magnificent volley. Hardly ever does either resort to lobs or drop shots, perferring to make each shot an outright winner.

Army's persistent drive to the top was verified once more as it overwhelmed a hard fighting Harvard team 54-14. The Cadets terrific power resulted in the most humiliating defensive stand Harvard had made in its entire long history. The previous high score was when Yale beat them 48-0 back in 1884. All-American Charley Justice continued scoring touchdowns as he racked up three against Wake Forest as UNC beat the Deacons 28-14. North Carolina State lost its fourth straight in a heartbreaker to Duke 14-13 with a missed conversion in the last ten seconds.

Dr. A. Balz Will Speak Tomorrow On Dewey

Eminent Philosopher To Address Students In College Assembly

Dr. Albert G. A. Balz, Head of the Corcoran School of Philosophy at the University of Virginia, will speak to the faculty and student body in assembly tomorrow climaxing the celebration of John Dewey week here.

Dr. Balz, considered one of the distinguished philosophers of America, is the author of a two-volume work, Descartes and the Modern Mind. He has kept in direct contact with Dr. Dewey for many years. Dr. Balz will speak to the faculties and administrations of Longwood and Hampden-Sydney colleges in the lounge of the Student building at 8 o'clock this evening.

Introducing John Dewey Week in assembly last Thursday, Dr. John P. Wynne, director of teacher education, emphasized the role of Dr. Dewey's influence in the administration of the Farmville school system. Dr. Wynne also pointed out that Dewey seems to be unaffected by his position in the limelight; that when he was acclaimed one of the three leading men in the history of America, by a colleague he simply responded by saying that he knew there were just as many people who felt that he was not. Dr. Dewey has also been acclaimed, according to Dr. Wynne, as one of the most daring of living philosophers.

John Dewey, who was 90 years old on Thursday, October 20, is considered by many to be America's foremost educator and philosopher. He is still active in the work of philosophy and is still a contributor to the Journal of Philosophy. He has recently published a booklet, Education and the Social Order. Indulgent of the foibles of mankind so long as they do not seem to him to involve consequences, Dr. Dewey today feels that "people need to realize that while there is so much cause for depressions and fear at the present time, to give way to it is equivalent to losing faith in one's fellowmen.

"No matter what may be the results of the atomic bomb and other scientific advances, above all," he said recently, "we must not lose faith in our fellowmen."

Dr. Wynne will leave the college tomorrow to attend the annual meeting of the Virginia Philosophical Association. He will address the association on the topic, "Mind and Education," from the standpoint of John Dewey.

Professors To Go To VEA Convention

Miss Virginia Bedford, Mrs. Mildred Davis and Dr. M. Beverly Ruffin of the Longwood College faculty, will attend the 43rd annual convention of the Virginia Education Association which will be held at the Hotel John Marshall in Richmond, November 1 to 5. The topic of the convention will be "Equalizing Educational Opportunity—the State's Responsibility".

The schedule of meetings will consist of various discussion groups and talks concerning scholastic topics. Among the speakers at the meeting of departments and sections will be W. Stirling King, Mayor of Richmond; William E. Buckey, President of N.A.S.S.P.; P.L. Ullman of the University of North Carolina; and Mr. Fred O. Wygal, who is connected with the State Department of Education.

LC Alumnae Will Meet Oct. 28-29

Pres. Lancaster To Address Group Saturday Morning

"Longwood College, Present and Future" will be the topic used by President Dabney S. Lancaster to address the Longwood College Alumnae Council which will hold a meeting on this campus October 28 and 29.

The council, which is composed this year of the Alumnae Executive Board (officers of the national organization) and a representative of each alumnae chapter, will begin its meeting Friday evening at 7:30 with an executive board meeting in Dr. Lancaster's Office. At the meeting Saturday morning, Miss Helen Costan of Roanoke, who is national Longwood Alumnae president and who will preside over the activities of the week end, will extend greetings to the convention delegates and introduce the national officers. Following Miss Costan's welcome, Dr. Lancaster will give his address to the group.

Mrs. Ruth H. Coyner, Alumnae secretary, will speak to the group about the various chapter activities immediately following Dr. Lancaster's talk.

Sixteen delegates from all parts of the country will represent their alumnae chapters at the meeting, and sixteen students from Virginia high schools will also be delegates at these activities.

An informal tea given by Dr. and Mrs. Dabney Lancaster at their home will highlight the social events of the meeting. This tea will be held from 4:00 to 5:00 p. m. Saturday afternoon in honor of the visiting alumnae. Also on the calendar of social festivities will be a coffee sponsored by the Home Economics Club which will be held in the home management house at 10:00 a. m., Saturday, in honor of the visiting high school students. Members of the council and visitors will have lunch in the Snack Bar Saturday afternoon previous to a meeting to be held at 1:30.

The council will bring its business to an end at this meeting and following the meeting the council and delegates will attend the Circus Parade. Saturday night, the visitors and students will view the annual Alpha Kappa Gamma cir-

Fiddlers To Play For Square Dance Given By Gov't.

Hay Stacks, Cider To Highlight Affair

Haystacks, cider and hillbilly music will highlight the forthcoming square dance sponsored by the Women's Student Government Association on November 5. The dance, which will be held in the College gymnasium from 8:00 at 12:00 p. m., will be a gala affair strictly in ,mountain style, Lizzie Eragg, general chairman of the affair, announced today.

The gymnasium will be decorated appropriately with bales of cotton, and hays'acks, and couples will swing their partners to the directions of a traditional square dance caller.

Music for the dance will be provided by the Fiddlers, a local talent band, made up of residents of Farmville and neighboring areas.

Ann Mo'ley, chairman of the ticket committee, has announced that tickets will go on sale soon. Each ticket will be 60c, and girls bringing dates will buy two tickets in lieu of one da'e ticket.

Romine Mahood, junior representative to student government, has been appointed chairman of the decorations committee. Helen Agnew, secretary of the association, will serve as chairman of the floor committee; and Frankie Dodson, senior class representative, is in charge of music for the affair. Baty McCree, representative of the junior class, is chairman of the publicity committee; and Ann Motley, sophomore representative, is chairman of the ticket committee.

Apple cider and cookies will be sold during the dance in the small gymnasium. Dress for the dance will be informal with the girls in skirts and sweaters and boys in blue jeans.

Freshman 'Y' Will Assemble

Women to Discuss YWCA Committees

The Freshman Y' Club will hold a meeting Monday night, October 31, in anticipation of committee registration which will be held Tuesday, November 1.

Dolores Duncan, president of the Y.W.C.A., will introduce the officers and cabinet of the Y' at the meeting which wil be held in the student lounge at 10:00 p.m.

The cabinet, made of the chairmen of the varied Y' committees, will explain to the freshmen the functions of each committee. Following the presentation of the cabinet, a social hour has been planned, at which time the group will serve cokes and nabs.

Pamphlets will be distributed on the tables in the dining hall Monday- explaining the duties of each committee. Members of the Y' cabinet will sign up students at the table in the hall of Main Building all day Tuesday.

Old students as well as freshmen and transfers, and even those girls who were members of committees last year, are urged to sign up this year on one of the committees.

Among the Y' committees are the social commit e which is headed by Evelyn Farrier. The duties of this committee are to promote the social program of the association. The public affairs committee, with Barbara Grizzard in charge aims to encourage a world outlook among the students by keeping them informed as to world events, and by bringing speakers to the campus.

Margaret Thomas' committee, the prayers committee, plans devotional services for evening prayers each night. The sing committee, which is headed by June Foreman, co-operates with the social committee in providing suitable entertainment. Each Saturday night

Parade Through Farmville Streets Will Herald Arrival of Circus

Miss Spindler Chosen As Regional Editor Of AKG Publication

Miss Betty Spindler, audio-visual instructor at Longwood, was elected regional editor for Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary women's leadership society, at the regional convention held here last week end. A '49 alumna of the local circle of A.K.G., Miss Spindler will edit the Torchbearer, bi-monthly publication of the organization.

Miss Elizabeth Burger, science professor here, remains regional executive secretary-treasurer of the society. Reelected regional president and vice-president respectively were Miss Leize Connor, of Columbia, S. C., and Miss Cornelia Ditto, Charlotte, North Carolina. Miss Marian Christopher, Queen's College, Charlotte, N. C., was elected recording secretary for the regional group.

In her convention banquet address Mrs. Frances Sale Lyle, Longwood alumna of Danville, told the group of the origination of Alpha Kappa Gamma here. One of the founders of the society, Mrs. Lyle during her Farmville student days worked actively with Miss Florence Stubbs, local social science professor, and several other students in the organization of A.K.G.

18 Receive Bids To Kappa Delta Pi

At a business meeting of the local chapter of Kappa Delta Pi, honorary education fraternity, held last week 18 upperclassmen were selected to be issued bids to the organization.

Among those who received bids are Helen Agnew, Hilda Bauserman, Alma Bedinger, Catherine Bondurant, Mildred Carter, Mary Crowder, June Divers, Edith Duma, and Edith Duvall.

Lucy Edmonds, Frances Everett, Margaret Dee Hoover, Mary Leigh Meredith, Emma Pittard, Betty Jane Spencer, Virginia Spencer, Sue Walker, and Patricia Walker, also received bids to join the organization.

Following the business meeting the group listened to a musical record program conducted by Judy Hughes, president of Kappa Delta Pi.

Kappa Delta Pi is a national honor society in education recognizing students for scholarships, character and service. Only students of full junior standing whose grades are within the upper quarter are eligible for membership.

'Hour' To Be French

"The Voice of Longwood" will present a French program for its weekly show over WFLO Thursday at 4:30. Miss Helen Draper of the college modern language department is in charge of this program. Helen Hardin, president of the French Circle will be the student announcer.

Mademoiselle Suzanne Girard, an instructor in French here at the college, and Madam Nichole Rothe, a Longwood college student, will take part on the program. They will discuss France as it is today.

Cook, Soph. Chosen As Animal Trainer

The big top of the annual Alpha Kappa Gamma circus will be unfurled Saturday night, October 29, at 8 p. m. in the Longwood College gymnasium.

"The Four Seasons" has been chosen for the theme of the 1949 circus. The theme will be enacted by the queen and her court whose identities will not be revealed until the circus performance Saturday night.

Parade At 3:30

The arrival of circus will be heralded by a parade through the streets of Farmville Saturday afternoon at 3:30 p. m. Leading the line behind the escort of state police will be freshmen representatives carrying the United States flag and the circus banner, followed by the circus clowns and animals, the mounted marsals, the class floats and the official "green 'n white" and "red 'n white" color bearers.

The parade will form in back of the College dining hall at 2:45 p. m., and at starting time it will proceed down Pine street by the library. From there it will move through High, Randolph, Third, and Main streets, and then back up the High street hill to the College rotunda.

Phillips Announces Trainer

Mary Helen Cook, sophomore from Richmond, has been appointed animal trainer Ray Phillips, general chairman of the circus, announced toady.

The identity of the ringmaster, traditionally a member of the junior class, will be revealed at the circus performance , Saturday night.

Tickets On Sale

Tickets to the circus performances were put on sale at the beginning of this week. Tickets for both students and visitors are priced at 25c. They will be sold at the table in the hall immediately after lunch for the remainder of the week.

Patsy Ritter, ticket and publicity chairman of the circus, announced that since there are only a limited number of tickets available students should purchase tickets for themselves and their visitors as soon as possible. There can be no reserved seats for the circus performance and except for each booth chairman no one will be allowed to watch the performance from the main floor of the gymnasium.

Class Stunts

The class stunts will be present-

Seniors To Receive Caps Friday, Oct. 28

The seniors will receive their caps in a capping service Friday, October 28, at 5 p. m. President Dabney S. Lancaster will preside over the services which are to be held in the Methodist Church.

Dr. Lancaster, who came to the College with the class of 1950, will himself be capped by Dr. James Elliott Walmsley, former professor of history and social sciences here.

The Reverend John Myers of the Methodist Church will conduct the devotions at the capping ceremony.

Seniors and their little sisters, who will also participate in the ceremonies, are reminded of the practice tomorrow night from 7 to 8 p. m. in the Methodist Church.

Longwood Class of 50 Avidly Watches Progress of New Science Hall Structure

By Mary Crowgey

Members of the class of '50 at Longwood College are wondering whether they will attend classes in the new science hall as they avidly watch the day by day progress of the building. The big question is, "Will the structure be completed in January as scheduled?"

When the final touch has at last been added, science students will be privileged to work in very attractive modern surroundings. The $450,000 three-story brick building will be trimmed in limestone. Along the long hall on each floor, the walls will be lined with tile to door height, the other rooms being tiled to window height. The hall floors will be of terraza, the remaining floors, of asphalt tile blocks, and the stairs, of stone. If the decrepit upperclassmen don't want to climb the 96 steps, they can take the elevator.

Side view of the Longwood science building now under construction. Beginning next semester the new building will house the departments of biology, chemistry, science and physics.

The first floor space will be devoted to the work in biology, bacteriology, and botany. Miss Baron, Dr. Jeffers, Dr. Brumfield, and all the little biology majors will move out of the morgue-like quarters they are now occupying to a setting complete with a conference room, seven classrooms, a workroom, three offices, a herbarium, and an animal room. There will also be a hot room kept at body temperature, a cold room, and a 16' by 40' hothouse.

Physics and general science classrooms will be located on the second floor. Added attractions to be found here will be a museum and darkrooms for the study of light and photography. The museum will feature geological specimens given to the College by Mr. H. P. Derr, of Fairfax County. Dr.

On the Way Out . . .

The "Rat Day" which the freshmen were subjected to last week was "nothing to what they went through," they will be assured by numerous upperclassmen.

To a certain extent, this is true. There has been a definite trend away from the rigorous "Rat Day" during the past several years. Two years ago the freshmen were subjected to two days of ratting instead of only one. This year, for the first time, no ratting was allowed at meal time.

The initiation of freshmen into college life is doubtless a commendable idea. But are the freshmen properly introduced to the life on campus when they are placed at beck and call of the class above them, made to wear ridiculous clothing, perform ridiculous acts and eat disgusting, if not harmful foods?

Too often "Rat Day" offers an excuse for avenging personal slights, grudges, or dislikes. At a time when the average freshman most needs to feel that she is a part of the College, she is made a humiliating spectacle.

Reminsicent of the ancient rites of fertility among pagan folks, "ratting" as a concentrated form of class humiliation has little place on the modern college campus. If the students at Longwood have tended to deemphasize it during the past few years they are indeed to be commended. The next and best possible step should be the complete abolition of "Rat Day."

What Circus Contributes . . .

Of what value is Circus at Longwood College? Can any unacademic pursuit which takes so many hours of so many students' time possibly be of real worth to the college community? Each year the end of October and the production of the annual A. K. G. Circus inevitably bring these questions, accompanied by the equally inevitable criticism of the institution of Circus.

Upperclassmen who during their college careers have been regular participants in the yearly celebration are sure of positive replies to these questions, but to some faculty members and other dubious onlookers the answers are not so obvious. For the benefit of this minority we should like to enumerate some of the values of Circus from the students' viewpoint.

Most obvious among Circus' many redeeming qualities is its popularity with students. Any production which annually plays to a packed house could hardly be termed anything but worthwhile, considering consumer demand. In a college such as this where enrollment and character of the student body preclude many big dance week ends, an event such as Circus is precisely what is needed to open the College social calendar. It is ane of the few functions here to which the student can invite any type guest, with the promise of genuine entertainment.

This college has always been noted for the excellence of its student shows, be they impromptu "sings," variety or dramatic productions, or full-fledged festivals. Affairs of this sort provide a good outlet for student creative ability, giving a sort of emotional release which is beneficial during a tension-filled 9 months of study. Embracing all these benefits, Circus annually shows students just what they can do in the way of organization and cooperation, abilities which stand them in good stead long after college graduation. In addition, Circus participants are keenly aware that this production serves as a medium which better acquaints them with their fellows, creating bonds of class and school "spirit" which cannot be formed on the athletic field or in the cheering stands.

In recent years Circus practices have been carefully scheduled to take up a minimum of time and effort, so that small hardship has been felt by most participants. Certainly the monetary end of Circus, a scholarship fund in which A. K. G. invests all proceeds, is above criticism. This being the case, there is only one conclusion: that Circus is justifiable in every way from the point of view of the student, the only point of view in a case where the student is he principal party involved.

Ix-Nay! . ..

This Saturday night Alpha Kappa Gamma will present its annual circus in the Longwood College gymnasium. As is usual at the circus performance, the gymnasium will be filled to overflowing with members of the student body, faculty, alumnae, and visitors. Booths, lavishly decorated with crepe paper, will line the walls of the gymnasium.

A carelessly tossed match or a smouldering cigarette could easily touch off these inflamable decorations and send flames roaring to the ceiling before the crowd could get out. Every student should accept responsibility for enforcing the no-smoking regulations to prevent the slightest chance of such a catastrophe.

Smoking will be permitted in the student lounge, but not on the floor or the balcony of the gymnasium nor on the balcany of the gymnasium nor on the steps leading to either.

Students should consider themselves responsible for warning their visitors and dates not to smoke in the prohibited areas.

Such considerations are for the protection of the students themselves. It is easier to prevent a fire from starting than to stop it once it is started—take ahis into consideration and don't smoke in the gymnasium during circus.

OUR WORLD

By Nellie Hart

The United Nations Assembly has accussed three Russian satlelites of suppressing human rights and freedoms. It has asked International Court of Justice for advice in dealing with the situation. This fact most certainly has gone to prove that steps are slowly but surely being made by the peoples of the Western hemisphere to prevent Communistic ideas from being spread throughout the universe. Russia made a bitter protest over the entire situation, for she had constantly fought to keep the charges from reaching the United Nations. Is this a rightful attitude for any state to take, especially over religious controversies?

The Soviet Ukraine Foreign Minister, Dmitri Manuiesky took a steadfast stand against the UN, and staunchly announced that human rights are being violated every day in the United States with the Jim Crow law, lynch laws, and threats of atomic bomb destructions. He even went so far as to say that the accusations against Bulgaria, Rumania and Hungary were "gross fabrications and slander." But it has been definitely demonstrated that these countries are guilty of the violation of peace treaty law. All of the accused nations have applied for membership in the United Nations, but they have refused to send representatives to the Assembly to clarify the situation. By these actions, they are maintaining that they are innocent of the charge against them.

Pedro's Pocket

By Jean Turner

Pedro was an almost unnoticed spectator at the juke box dance Saturday night. He observed that we have had more stimulating dances in the past. This one just didn't seem to get started until ten o'clock and then not too well. At least several of our ranks seemed to think that a coke was more important than paying to dance with our friends and neighbors from Hampden-Sydney. Just exactly what was the trouble, Peggy Covington; didn't you get your allowance this week?

When I spoke to Pedro about this week's news and views, he wasn't in a too illustrative mood. it seems that more gold fish have been dying, more of his teams losing, more teachers giving tests, and life has just been a headache in general.

He made favorable comment on the forthcoming Circus, however. According to Pedro it's going to be a toss up for winner this year. Everyone is mighty busy and if laurels are won for the hardest worker, it's gonna be a tough battle to the end.

Pedro wants to ride a horse in the circus parade, but he can't find one. Knowing his prevailing habit of falling on his head under any conditions, we tried to dissuade him, but to no avail—he insists we need him and his talents. He's distraught because he can't convince us that he is Mexico's leading horseman.

Alumni Notes

Mrs. Hallie Hillsman Fleetwood was elected president of the Farmville chapter of Longwood Alumnae Association at a meeting held in the students lounge last Wednesday afternoon.

Other officers who were elected at this first meeting of the season are Mrs. Allen Fore, who was selected vice-president; Miss Virginia Wall, Miss Helen Draper, Miss Agnes Watkins, Mrs. B. T. Taylor, Jr., Mrs. J. H. Whitfield, and Mrs. R. D. Wilson, vice-presidents; Miss Lillian Minkie, secretary; and Miss Kitty Watkins, treasurer.

Science Building

Lancaster hopes that some day, in the near future, geology and astronomy can be taught as separate courses here.

The third floor, made up of one classroom, four chemical laboratories, and a reading room, will be occupied by the chemistry department. The tables will be equipped with hoods and a ventilating system to remove the air and bring in fresh heated air once every twelve minutes. For students' use in case dangerous acids are spilled, there are to be four shower baths.

Every precaution is being taken to make the building a safe one. Except for the trimming in the lobbies and some of the window frames, everything is composed of either tile, cinder, brick, or steel. As extra safety measures, hose cabinets will be placed in the halls, the space underneath the staircases blocked off with tile, and glass bricks used for stairway lighting.

Work is being delayed at present by lack of materials. Mr. T. A. McCorkle, head of the department of chemistry, thinks it unlikely that the building will be completed by January. Dr. Lancaster and the supervisor of construction believe, however, that the science hall will be ready for occupancy right on schedule.

Y' Lines

By Dot Wood

On Monday, October thirty-first, the Y' Cabinet and officers will meet with the freshmen to introduce the committee chairmen to the new students and explain the purpose of each committee

At last, Freshmen, here is your chance. On Tuesday, the table in the hall will be open and you may sign up for work with the committee of your choice.

Committee membership is voluntary, but do not pass up this opportunity for real service on our campus. You are automatically a member of the Y.W.C.A., but won't you sign up for committee membership and become a really active member of your Y'?

That Royal Question

Campus Cogitations

Question: "Did you approve of the manner in which Rat Day was conducted this year?

Dr. F. F. Swertfeger: In the general tone—yes.

Mrs. Mildred Davis: Many of the faculty question the wisdom of having Rat Day at all; but I've heard no critisism of the way this one was conducted.

Betsy Graviey: Yes!

Midge Woods: Yes—especially in Little Rat Court.

Sarah Creger: Yes-it's the only time I've ever felt superior.

Lucyle Humphries: Yes, I like to have people make up my bed.

Joan Pritchard: Sho Nuff!.

Betsy Hankins: In spite of the buttermilk and liver it was fun.

Ann Jones: I thought it was fun.

Betsy Wiley: It was rough but fun.

Helen Castres: Yes, I had more fun, especially in Little Rat Court.

Jean Kreisenbaum: It was just grand, especially the orders.

Frances Howell: Exceptionally good food.

Sara Ann Jones: I had a good time now that it is over.

Diane Pflugfelder: Meal was delicious—can't wait to serve it next year.

Jane Lively: All the sophomores were so sweet.

Jane Thomas: I had loads of fun.

Ruth Gills: I reckon I did.

Jeanne Gilman: It's a lot different when you aren't on the giving or receiving end.

Hope Duke: I was at the high school all day, I wouldn't know.

Betty House: I missed the modern dance down the dining room corridor.

Frankie Dodson: Yeah', but I didn't like the idea of no ratting in the dining hall.

Clem Allen: I didn't see much of it. It was good that they weren't ratted in the dining hall.

Bobbie Pollard: Yeah!

Longwood Roster Reveals Colorful and Bizarre Names

"What's in a name?", asks the Bard. A survey of names at Longwood reveals that there's more in a name than old Will suspected. Why, a name can affect a person's entire personality. Not only that, but a person's appelation often influences other human beings behavior, too!

If the Dean weren't a Savage and the registrar, a Bugg, don't you bet we'd spend more time in their offices? We'd probably all consider the dining hall food edible, if they'd hire those good Cooks, Mary Helen and John Randall. If Katie's jokes didn't come from the Cobb, we might enjoy those, too.

Do you think the world would end if Amanda were wrong once instead of Wright? Suppose Betty Alice were a butcher instead of a Baker; Celeste, a simple sinner instead of a Bishop; and Billy Jane, a wig maker instead of a Barber. Suppose Dot weren't so Old, and Anne weren't Younger, and May didn't try to be an Elder. What do you suppose this school would be like?

Would it change our monetary system if Joyce were dimes instead of Nichols? We are certainly glad that Jane is Lively instead of deadly. If Jean weren't a Farmer; Nancy a Camper, and Margie, a Forrester, do you reckon they'd still love the great out-of-doors?

When Jean puts her Hogge on Ruth's Poarch, will Ann be Moody? Tune in tomorrow and see. If Patty Green turned White, Barbara White turned Black, and Linda Black turned Brown, would Louise still be Redd?

In rare cases, a person's name actually does him some good. If "Scottie" hadn't been Bourne, she wouldn't even be here at Longwood College! Since Jean's a Partridge, maybe she can join the elite Bird Club. (If Jackie weren't an Eagle, though, she'd still be a "bird".) Just suppose that Nellie didn't have a Hart and that Ruth didn't Hathaway with Dick. It would be awful.

According to this survey, Longwood also has its fair share of Smiths, Joneses and other conventionally named students, as well as many more just as picturesque as the above mentioned.It's reassuring, though, to note that about 98 per cent of the undergraduate population here is of the fairer gender, and so those who are dissatisfied with the designation chosen by their ancestors have high hopes of one day acquiring a classier cognomen. Acquiring a philosophical outlook seems to be the only recourse for the men saddled with undesirable epithets and for the future unhappy spouses.

Alumna Presents Trophy

Lee Robertson, Longwood alumna of the class of 1949, recently presented the Sarah P. Robertson golf trophy to the first winner of the cup, Dean Ida Fitzgerald of Stratford College.

The trophy was presented this year to the Woman's Golf Association of the Danville Golf Club by Lee Robertson in memory of her mother, Mrs. Sarah Robertson, who was one of the founders of the Woman's Golf Association in Danville.

MEN'S BASKETBALL AT LONGWOOD

If you want to get an eye full of men's basketball on the Longwood campus, drop by the gym on Tuesday or Thursday night anywhere between 7 and 9 p. m. You will find thirteen enthusiastic hopefuls sweating out basic and fundamental drills. After three weeks of practice the squad already shows some signs of potential ability. Intercollegiate men's basketball is in its infancy here at Longwood- but the possibilities of some thrillingly exciting games this year seem to us almost certain. At least it will be MEN'S baskeball and LONGWOOD out there on the floor.

LONGWOOD NEEDS A NICKNAME

There has been much discussion among the men students recently on the possibility of adopting a nickname for the college. This will be used predominantly in the sport world. For examples: Hampden-Sydney TIGERS, Richmond SPIDERS, Wm. and Mary INDIANS. We would like to suggest that all students be permitted to submit nickname suggestions to an appointed commitee who in turn will choose the best twenty odd suggestions for the student body to vote on. We would like to propose Longwood BLUE BIRDS—how's that? Okey, Okey, YOU think of something.

BACK TO FOOTBALL

Johnny Papit, Virginia's second All-American candidate, once again lead his Cavaliers to victory as Virginia finally beat VMI 32-13. Papit romped over 154 more yards, hitting pay dirt personally for the first time against VMI. VMI, with the services of its brilliant Joe Veltri, kept things on a even keel for almost three quarters before Virginia finally came through with Papit finding holes everywhere. The Richmond Spiders turned in a surprising victory over Davidson 28-7; Billingsley seems to be back in uniform.

The Wm. and Mary Indians were scalped by the Wake Forest Deacons 55-28 in what turned out to be quite a one-sided affair. The Indians made a quick comeback in the last few minutes to scored twice but the score was already over their heads. Duke handed VPI its sixteenth straight loss 557. Need more be said?

The Hampden-Sydney Tigers tasted victory once more as it routed Gallaudet 50-6. Gallaudet led in the beginning 6-0 but it did not take long for the Tigers to get things under control .The Bridgewater Eagles were shut out for the second time this year by a large score, this time it was against Washington College 26-0. Washington and Lee suffered another heartbreaker 21-19 as George Washington's Andy Davis once more got back into uniform to continue the Colonial's powerful attack. The losing General club gained 406 yards on the ground which is quite some yardage for a

29 Veteran Players Return to Complete This Year's Squad

Twenty-nine girls have been chosen to make up the varsity hockey squad, Elizabeth Leslie varsity hockey manager announced recently.

Those girls selected were Claudia Anderson, Marion Becknor, Ann Biddlecomb, Clara Borum, Nell Bradshaw, Jessie Carson, Hilda Edwards and Nancye Gillie.

Others who will make up the hockey team are Betsy Gravely, Carolyn Grimes, Martha Hylton, Barbara Keiling, Edith Kennon, Jackie Jardine, Elizabeth Leslie, Ellen Moyer, Cab Overby and Rachel Peters.

Ray Phillips, Jo Ann Phipps, Gloria Reid, Jean Ridenour, Patsy Ritter, Illene Russell, Frances Stringfellow, Betsy Tyler, Nancy Walker, Mary Elizabeth Watson and Sue Webb have also been selected to play on the varsity team.

The team was selected by Elizabeth Leslie, varsity hockey manager, and Miss Olive T. Iler, coach of the team and head of the associate physical education department.

20 Veterans

Twenty members of the squad are veterans of former years. Among those with past experience here at the College are Marion Becknor, Hilda Edwards, Nancye Gillie, Betsy Gravely, Carolyn Grimes, Martha Hylton, Edith Kennon, Jackie Jardine, and Elizabeth Leslie.

Other hockey veterans are Ellen Moyer, Cabbell Overby, Ray Phillips, Jo Ann Phipps, Gloria Reid, Jean Ridenour, Patsy Ritter, Illene Russell, Frances Stringfellow, Nancy Walker and Mary Elizabeth Watson.

Alumnae Council

cus to be held in the college gymnasium.

In discussing the activities planned at the council meeting, Mrs. Ruth H. Coyner stated "The Purpose of the meeting is to exchange ideas and make plans for another year." Council meetings have been held for the past two years and have been very successful according to Mrs. Coyner. The council plans to make these meetings an anual affair in the future.

Men Select Smallwood Player Coach

Experienced Player Now Math Major

Lester Smallwood was elected player-coach of the men's basketball squad at Longwood College at a meeting held last week.

Les has had basketball experience at Lincoln High School in Lincoln, Jefferson Senior High School in Roanoke, and Lovingston High School in Lovingston. He averaged 15 points per game in his last year at Lovingston. Lester also played basketball at Randiph-Macon College in Ashland. He had experience as coach of the girls' high school team at Lovingston. Les was at one time physical director of the boys' department of the YMCA in Roanoke. At the Y he also was captain of the men's team.

Lester also has played football, baseball, and tennis in high school. While at Lovingston he organized and led the high school tennis team and while at Randolph-Macon he worked himself up to the number one spot in three years of varsity performance. He was elected captain of the 1950 Randolph-Macon tennis squad last spring. In the Navy. he coach-captained the naval tennis team at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

At present, Les is a mathematics major here at Longwood, and is planning to teach and coach upon graduation.

Sportin' Around

By Ann Lynch

The tennis matches are well under way now. The semi-finals begin Tuesday, closely followed by the finals, which will tell the tale as to who gets those first five points toward the color cup.

Congratulations to all those girls making the varsity hockey squad and also to those who chose them. You've both done a good job.

We want to call especial attention to a correction in the men's swimming schedule. Their recreational periods are to be on Monday and Wednesday from 4:15 to 6:00 p. m. The gymnasium is free for men's basketball on Tuesday, and Thursday from 7:00 to 9:00 p. m.

The badminton sets are being put up and Miss Iler, professor of physical education, has announced that third periods of classes can be made up by playing this sport.

LC Hockey Team Will Attend Eastern District Tournament

17 To Represent College at Meet

The Longwood Hockey team will journey to St. Catherine's in Richmond to participate in the annual Eastern District Tournament of Virginia on Saturday, October 29.

Elizabeth Leslie, varsity hockey manager, has announced the team chosen to represent Longwood College at the tournament: Local participants in the tourney will include Claudia Anderson, Marion Becknor, Ann Biddlecomb and Clara Borum.

Carolyn Grimes, Nancye Gillie, Betsy Gravely, Martha Hylton, Jackie Jardine, Edith Kennon, Liz Leslie, Rachel Peters, Patsy Ritter, Jo Ann Phipps, Gloria Reid, Jean Ridenour and Mary Watson have also been chosen to attend the tournament.

The District Hockey Tournament was held at Longwood last year on October 30. The schools represented at this tournament were the College of William and Mary, the Norfolk Division of William and Mary, Mary Washington College and Longwood College.

Frances "Clem" Allen and Jo Ann Phipps were selected from this college to represent this district in the State Hockey Tournament following last year's district tournament. Three other Longwood girls who did not return this year were also chosen.

Tennis Singles Reach Semi-Finals

Winner Scores Color Cup Points

The second round in the women's fall tennis singles matches has been completed with the exception of the match between Frances Allen and Clara Borum. The semi-finals were scheduled to begin yesterday, October 25.

In the second round Helen Agnew, playing for Green and White, defeated Hilda Edwards, a Red and White, by a score of 6-2; 6-1. Marion Beckner, Red and White, was defeated by Nancye Gillie, Green and White, by a count of 6-0; 7-5. Anne Langbein triumphed over Patsy Ritter with a tally of 6-4; 7-5.

When the finals are completed five points will be awarded the winning team which will go toward the color cup scores.

Men Elect Gentry Athletic Manager

Buddy Gentry, senior from Crewe, was recently unanimously elected manager of men's athletics for the current year at Longwood College by the men's student government organization. Buddy's mangerial staff will include Jack Huegel and Madison McClintic.

Mr. Gentry's position at the present involves many more responsibilities than that of general team manager. He will be required to see that all of the managerial needs are adequately attended to plus meeting the demands of the administrative side of the department. He will work in close connection with the adviser T. A. Malloy and the player-coach, Lester Smallwood, in the direction of the team's progress in all respects.

Buddy is a sociology major here at Longwood. He transferred from Emory and Henry College. His previous athletic experience has been mainly centered around football when he played tackle for Crewe High School for three years.

AA Chooses 1949-50 Varsity Cheerleaders

Five girls were chosen by the Athletic Association Council Monday night to serve as varsity cheerleaders for 1949-50.

Virginia Westbrook, Nell Bradshaw, Margaret Taylor, Ann Murphy, and Betty Hancock were chosen from the try-outs held recently for these positions.

Ray Phillips, A. A. president, also announced that the Association hopes to add some boys to the cheerleading squad in the near future.

Men Vote To Unite With Athletic Ass'n.

The Men's Student Government Organization voted unanimously to combine the men and women's Athletic Associations Tuesday afternoon after the issue had been tabled for a week. Women's A.A. Council had earlier indicated willingness to take the step.

Edward V. Parks was elected chairman of the men's athletic committee, from which representatives will be taken to make up the combined council of the united Athletic Association. Manager of men's athletics, Buddy Gentry, and the player-coach of the basketball team, Lester Smallwood, will automatically be committee members.

Men's Tennis Postponed

There will be no special men and women's tennis tournaments this season at Longwood, for the coming varsity collegiate year. The women's color cup tournament has satisfied those ends. The men's tournament will be delayed until early spring due to the emphasis being placed on basketball at the present time.

29 Upperclassmen Accept Sorority Bids

Twenty-nine upperclassmen accepted bids to Longwood College social sororities last Wednesday.

Sarah Crocker, Betty Jones, and Pat Tuggle were pledged by Sigma Sigma Sigma.

Pledged by Kappa Delta were Kim Coleman, Mary Leigh Meredith, Jean Smith, Ann Moody, Ann Neblett, and Jill Pifer.

Accepting bids to Zeta Tau Alpha were Mary Jo Smith, Ruth Spotswood Myers, Nancy Henderson, Claudia Bradshaw, Lee Cosby and Margaret Thomas.

Pi Kappa Sigma pledged Nancy Walker, Sue Walker, Patty Walker, and Jean Claire Wilson.

Jane Lee Kellogg, Jackie Woodward, and Claudia Anderson were pledged by Alpha Sigma Tau.

Theta Sigma Upsilon pledged Nell Gillie.

Delta Sigma Epsilon pledged Inez Hughes, Lucy W. Jones, Eloise Hodges, Joanna Phipps, Jean Elliott, and Frances Ramsey.

Theta Sigma Upsilon Leads In Scholarship

The local chapter of Theta Sigma Upsilon led the other seven social sororities on this campus with the highest scholastic average of 1.79 for the year 1948-49 according to a recent announcement made by Dean Ruth Gleaves, advisor to Pan-Hellenic Council. Scholarship averages are computed on a basis of 3 which is considered the equivalent of an "A" grade average.

Alpha Sigma Alpha placed second with an average of 1.76, and Alpha Sigma Tau with 1.71. Kappa Delta follows with an average of 1.64; Zeta Tau Alpha, 1.64; Delta Sigma Epsilon, 1.62; Pi Kappa Sigma, 1.61; and Sigma Sigma Sigma, 1.52.

At the head of the list of averages for the spring semester last year was Alpha Sigma Alpha with an average of 1.83. Alpha Tau placed second with 1.82, and Theta Sigma Upsilon third with 1.81. The other six sororities made the following scholastic averages: Kappa Delta, 1.77; Zeta Tau Alpha, 1.66; Delta Sigma Epsilon, 1.65; Pi Kappa Sigma, 1.62; and Sigma Sigma Sigma, 1.57.

The sorority which attains the highest scholastic average annually is presented with the scholarship plaque by the local Pan-Hellenic Council. The plaque will be awarded permanently to the sorority winning it three years in succession. Theta Sigma Upsilon has held the plaque for the past two years.

Biologists Picnic at U. Va.

A group representing the College biology department attended a picnic given by the Miller School of Biology of the University of Virginia Saturday afternon.

Dr. George W. Jeffers, head of the biology faculty on the picnic. Anne Langbien, Barbara Andrews, Juanita Weeks, and Mary Leigh Meredith were the student members of the Longwood group.

The combination picnic and field-trip which is given annually by the University biology department was held at Sugar Hollow, several miles north of Crozet.

Among the biologists present at the picnic was Miss Virginia "Ge Ge" Yonce, who was graduated from Longwood with the class of 1948. "Ge Ge" is now teaching in the Martinsville school system.

Pan-Hel Gives Tea

The local Pan-Hellenic Council gave a tea yesterday afternoon to the members and pledges of the eight local sororities.

The scholarship plaque, awarded annually to the sorority having the highest scholastic average, was awarded to the local chapter of Theta Sigma Upsilon.

Louise Redd, Barbara Sours, and Cab Overby, accompanied by June Banks and Page Burnette, presented a musical selection to the group.

Chosen as Sponsors

Two Longwood lovelies, Harriet Butterworth and Jean Ridenour have been chosen sponsors of Company B and the Third Battalion at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

Harriet, who was chosen by Lt. Commander William T. Miller, will sponsor the Third Battalion.

Sponsoring Company B is Jean, who was chosen by Captain Charles W. Appich.

Spend Week End Away

Frances Turner and Buddy Glascock of Hampden - Sydney spent the week end at her home on the Eastern Shore.

Ann Kemp, Chic Richie, Marion Breeden, and Jackie Moody visited friends at Madison College last week end. While there they stayed at Carter Hall.

Betty McRee visited Francis Deberry in Blackstone over the week end.

Charlotte K. Jones, Mary Jane Stansbury, Shep Ames, and Billy Peake visited Dr. and Mrs. S. K. Ames in Cape Charles, this past week end.

Iris Sutphin and Jan Peebles attended the Hampden-Sydney-Gallaudet game in Washington, D. C., with Bill Wall and Gat Leonard.

Alumna Visits Campus

Nancy Roberson of the Longwood class of '49 visited friends on the campus this past week end.

Guests on Campus

Among the guests on campus this past week end were Bob Clarke of Hampton, visiting Helen Edgerton, and John Massie of White Stone, visiting Betsy Wilson.

Other guests on campus included Jimmy Harper from the University of Virginia visiting Dot Carter, and Frank Jordon from V.P.I. who visited Ann Joyner.

Home Ec. Club Gives Tea

The Home Economics Club of Longwood College entertained at tea last week in honor of Miss Fern Staggs, new professor of home economics, and new students majoring in home economics. The tea was held in the Home Management House.

Hostesses for the occasion were the club officers and the girls living in the Management house this semester.

Miss Mix Ill at Hospital

Students have expressed best wishes for a speedy recovery to Miss Grace E. Mix, retired supervisor of the Farmville kindergarten, who is at present a patient in the Southside hospital.

Miss Peck Visits Here

Miss Mary E. Peck, who retired last year from the Longwood history department, has been visiting on campus this week.

Library Features John Dewey Books

Mrs. Lemen Displays Collection of Maps

Now on display in the library is an exhibit honoring John Dewey's 90th birthday. Of interest in this exhibition on the famed philosopher are copies of all the books in the library that were written by Dewey and also recent magazine articles honoring him.

Maps on Exhibit

Another among the exhibits in the library this week is a part of a collection of illustrated and colored maps made by Mrs. Janice Lemen, of the Longwood College art department.

These maps are on such subjects as: southern Holland, National parks of the United States and Canada, Indian art and the animal kingdom of the U. S. Also there is a map in the collection titled a "Fun Map of Alaska" made by a seventh grade student. Miss Grace Moran, of the college geography department, allowed this to be put in the collection. Mrs. Lemen has made her collection in her travels.

Also displayed in the college library this week is an exhibit of highlights of Longwood History. This is being shown in connection with the freshmen college life class.

TV Tickets Available Ferguson Announces

Betty Ferguson, Chesterfied representative for Longwood College, has just announced that free tickets for the Chesterfield television broadcasts in Rockfeller Center, New York City, are available at any time if two week's notice is given.

Any students planning to go to New York are advised to see Betty two weeks in advance if they wish to obtain such tickets.

Circus

ed immediately after the entrance of the circus queen and her court.

Following the traditional procedure the freshmen will present their stunt first, followed by the sophomores, juniors, and seniors, in that order.

Bert Browning is in charge of the freshmen stunt; Fran Franklin is chairman of the sophomore stunt. Chairman of the junior stunt is Betsy Wilson, and Norma Roady and Helen Hardin are co-chairmen of the senior stunt.

A committee of impartial faculty judges will decide the winner of the class stunts. The ringmaster will announce the first and second place winners at the end of the performance.

Booths To Open

After the announcement of the stunt winners, the booths sponsored by the various organizations on the campus will be open to the public. The usual circus foods, peanuts, popcorn, and cracker-jacks, as well as fortune telling and games will be found in the festively decorated booths.

One end of the gymnasium will be blocked off for dancing at this time.

Church Groups List Week's Activitieh

Methodists Go To VPI

Five Longwood Methodist students attended the first regular Student Movement Conference of this college year at V.P.I. last week end. They were Elsie Hawley, Andrea Adams, Mary Palmer, Sally Smith, and Betty Johnson.

The theme of the conference was "Understanding our World." The principal speaker was the Rev. Kizoski Taninioto, a Japanese minister studying at Yale University and survivor of the atom bomb, who spoke on "Understanding China and Understanding Japan."

Intervarsity Christian Fellowship

Annie Swann, Peggy Dee Hoover and Roberta Wilson will represent the local Intervarsity Christian Fellowship at the I.V.C.F. Leadership Conference at Montreat, N. C., this week end, October 28-30.

The I.V.C.F. is an interdominational, international organization with chapters on many college campuses. The organization meets at Longwood on Thursday afternoon at 5:00 in the Y' lounge for Bible study and prayer.

losing ball club. Something should happen soon.

Emory and Henry kept its skirts clean once more at it turned down stubborn Maryville 39-27. The Wasps seem to hit the hard teams all right but when they do they just outscore them. Miller, as usual, scored more and more touchdowns, this time three to run up his total to 72 points, way out in front of Ragazzo of Wm. and Mary with 48. Emory and Henry now has three men in the top scorers of the sate, Davis and Surgeon each have coleicted 24 points for 7th and 8th place. How can you fight an offense like that?

MICHIGAN STAGES COMEBACK

Michigan, once rated No. 1, came firing back after two straight upsets from Army and Northwestern to do a little upsetting themselves. The Wolverines defeated previous undefeated Minnesota 14-7 and greatly hurt their chancs of clinching the Big Ten Title and Rose Bowl invitation. Army continued its torrid pace by mauling Columbia 63-6 in an unmerciful Cadet attack. Undefeated Army is closely pressing the top rated Notre Dame all the way. With Walker, SMU's twice All-American in the hospital, the Kentuckians were favored over SMU by a touchdown but the Methodists knocked them back 20-7.

PENN REMAINS UNDEFEATED

Penn trounced Navy 28-7 to keep its 1949 slate clean as a whistle. Bagnell's opening 74 yard touchdown run sparked the Red and Blue attack which humbled the hapless Middies. Ohio State recovered after the mauling Minnesota gave them last week to cut Wisconsin short 21-0, and Iowa upset Northwestern 28-21. Cornell squeeezd by Princeton 14-12 for their fifth win.

HARVARD'S HISTORY BEING RUINNED

Another sorrowful page in Harvard's 75 year old football history was once more written as Dartmouth pasted Harvard's fifth consecutive loss 27-13. Last week Army subjected Harvard to its most humiliating defeat of all time 54-14. Maryland rallied to down NCS 14-6 on a clinching interception pass.

JUSTICE HELD IN CHECK

North Carolina was completely bottle up by Louisiana State who seemed to have Choo Choo's number right on the button. LSU took the night game decision 13-7. The Tarheel offense was held almost at a standstill—it was UNC'c first seasonal loss.

RICHMOND REBELS TAKE AL LOOP LEAD

Richmond's injury-ridden professional football team took over first place Sunday as they turned back Wilkes-Barre 28-7. Cooper was the big gun for the Rebels scoring two touchdowns as he averaged 13.6 yards per lunge. He rolled up his score to 36 points to take over the American League top scoring spot. Carley Conerly, undisturbed by the magnificent performance by rival passer Johnny Lujack, led the New York Giants to a 35-28 upset victory over the Chicago Bears in the feature National League match last week.

'Sing' To Be Bi-Monthly

June Foreman, chairman of the Sing committee, has announced that in the future Sing will be held every other week at 7:00 p. m. instead of weekly as we have been doing.

Frosh Elect Abbitt Pres. McElroy Vice-President

Other Officers, Representatives To Be Chosen Soon

Betty Abbitt of Madison Heights was elected president of the freshman class at elections begun at the regular class meeting last night. Sara McElroy of Richmond was chosen vice-president.

The freshmen will elect their secretary, treasurer, two student government representatives, and two representatives to the Student Standards Committee at a meeting to be called in the near future, according to a statemen made by Betsy Gravely, sister class adviser to the freshmen.

Betty is a graduate of Madison Heights high school, where, during her senior year, she received the Good Citizen of the School award. During her freshman year, Betty served as secretary-treasurer of her class, and during the remaining three years, she represented her class on the Student Council.

Betty was a member of the Latin Club, the Spanish Club, Beta Club, the Methodist Youth Fellowship, "Y" Teens, and the Cotillion Club; she was also a cheerleader. As a senior, Betty served as business manager of the high school annual, manager of the basketball team, and vice-president of the Cotillion club. She was also cast in the senior class play.

A graduate of Thomas Jefferson high school in Richmond, Sara McElroy sewed as vice-president and president of her senior class and vice-president of her junior class. During her high school years, she was president of "Y" Teens, a member of Quill and Scroll, the Glee Club, the Board of Co-ordination and the high school magazine staff.

Sarah also represented her class in the school Senate and in the House of Representatives. As a freshman, she acted as captain of the basketball team. She was president of her homeroom for three years and vice-president one year.

Tickets Being Sold For Gov't. Dance In Recreation Hall

'Fiddlers' To Play Half-Half Music

Tickets are now on sale for the Student Government dance to be held in the College gymnasium this Saturday night. Ann Motley, chairman of the ticket committee, has announced that students may obtain the tickets during this week from a government representative who will be stationed in the Recreation hall. Each ticket will be 60c, and those students who wish to take a date will buy separate tickets for their dates.

Round and square dancing will be the order of the evening to the mountain and modern music of the "Fiddlers."

Lizzie Bragg, general chairman of the dance, has announced that the following members of the faculty and administration have been invited to chaperon the dance: Dr. and Mrs. C. G. Gordon Moss, Dr. and Mrs. Ray A. Moore, Dean and Mrs. William Savage, and Dean Ruth Gleaves.

Miss Gwen Cress, Pres. and Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster, Dr. and Mrs. Marvin Schlegel and Miss Elizabeth Burger have also been asked to serve as chaperons for the affair.

Announcement

All students are required to leave the College Snack Bar by 10:50 p.m. on week nights, Jackie Wright, president of house council, announced recently. There has been much misunderstanding about this deadline, Jackie said. She pointed out that it must be strictly observed in order that students can be in their dormitories for 11 p.m. bedcheck.

AKG Recognizes 3 For Leadership Beasley, Gravely, Burnette Chosen

Tapped by Circle In Assembly Tues.

Three Longwood girls were tapped by Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary leadership fraternity, in assembly yesterday afternoon.

Those who were recognized for their leadership ability are Margaret Beasley, senior from Big Stone Gap; Page Burnett, senior from Farmville; and Betsy Gravely, junior from Martinsville.

Margaret is president of the Student Standards Committee, and has served as chairman of the point system of that organization for the past two years. She is also a member of Beorc Eh Thorn, honorary English society, Future Teachers of America and Cotillion Club. Margaret was secretary of Zeta Tau Alpha social sorority last year and is serving as vice-president this year.

Page Burnette, the student pianist of the campus, has served as treasurer of her class for the past two years. Corresponding secretary Boerc Eh Thorn, and poetry assistant on the Colonnade Staff, Page is also a member of the Farmville Club, Granddaughters' Club, Kappa Delta Pi, honorary society recognizing scholarship, Theta Sigma Upsilon social sorority, Future Teachers of America and Alpha Phi Sigma.

Betsy Gravely has headed her class for the past two years, and served as vice-president her freshman year. She was a member of the freshman commission, and has played varsity hockey since her sophomore year. Betsy is a member of the Monogram Club, Athletic Association Council, H2O Club and Cotillion Club. She now fills the office of vice-president in Pi Kappa Sigma social sorority. Betsy is also serving as counselor to the freshman class this year.

PAINTINGS IN ROTUNDA

The two paintings, a still life and a self-portrait, now hanging in the rotunda were loaned to the College by Mrs. Mary Grainger Crawley.

College 'Who's Who' Recognizes 10 Leaders In LC Senior Class

College Adds New Major

Accounting Will Be Available In 1950

A major in accounting will be offered in the Longwood College liberal arts curricula beginning with the 1950-51 session, President Dabney S. Lancaster announced this week. With Bachelor of Arts or a Bachelor of Science degree the new major, offered for the first time at Longwood, will enable liberal arts students to prepare for a specific vocation which offers opportunity for employment.

Requirements for the new major will include 12 to 15 semester-hours of accounting courses, 3 semester-hours of business law, 6 to 9 semester hours of other business courses to be prescribed by the head of the business department. The accounting major will also require a one-year course of the principles of economics as 6 of the 18 semester-hours of social science required by the liberal arts curriculm. Students desiring more information about the accounting major are advised to see Dr. M. L. Landrum, head of the Longwood business department.

WSSF To Begin Campaign Nov. 14

"They still need you," said Barbara Grizzard, chairman of the World Student Service Fund campaign on the Longwood campus which opens here on November 14.

The "they" that Barbara referred to are the students and teachers in the war devastated nations all over the world; the "you" refers to each American student and professor, at the prep school and university level.

"With your help, given through the World Student Service Fund, the students in these war torn nations have accomplished a great deal," said Barbara. "They have printed their own texts, built their own dormitories, met their own needs as much as they could. But they still need you for the things they cannot create with their own two hands. For the medicines that do not exist in their own countires. For books containing the knowledge from which they were cut off for so long. For the foods and vitamins that will help them fight tuberculosis— the heir of war and hunger."

The goal for the 1949 WSSF campaign at this College has been set at $500. Last year's goal of $700, which was met by the combined efforts of students and faculty, was lowered because of the drop in enrollment.

The WSSF appeal for funds is made only to prep-school, college and university students and professors and the entire program depends upon their contributions which are its only source of income. WSSF funds together with funds contributed by students of 18 other nations are administered by World Student Relief which has its headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland.

Yearbook Notice

Students are reminded by Joyce Webb, Virginian editor, to return their annual picture proofs to the photographer's representative, indicating their preference, no later than tomorrow.

Rites Held Sunday For Miss Mix

Teacher Served Here 25 Years

Funeral services for Miss Grace Eldridge Mix, who died Saturday at the Southside Community Hospital after an illness of several weeks, were held Sunday at Johns Memorial Episcopal Church, conducted by Dr. Douglas Winn, of Alexandria. Interment was in the Farmville Cemetery.

She was born at Orange, N. J., on Oct. 23, 1869, and was educated at Wellesley College and Teachers College, Columbia University, from which she received her BS and MA degrees. Her early teaching was done in the public schools of Massachusetts and Michigan.

She came to Longwood College in 1912, and served on the college staff as supervisor of the kindergarten from that time until her retirement in 1939. In her active years of teaching, she was a member of the summer school faculties at Peabody College, the University of Chicago and the University of Virginia.

In the emergency years of the depression, she was a state leader in organizing a system of nursery schools throughout the Commonwealth.

Miss Mix was a member of the Farmville AAUW chapter, Farmville Woman's Club, Association of Childhood Education, International Kindergarten Union, Kappa Delta Pi, Pi Gamma Mu, Alpha Kappa Gamma and Kappa Delta Sorority.

Article by Professor Appears In Journal Of Music Education

The tape recorder is of great value in motivating the interest of "radio - movie - phonograph - conditioned youth of today" in the music classroom, Dr. John W. Molnar, head of the music department, stated in his article "The Tape Recorder" which appeared in the latest issue of the Music Educators Journal. The magazine is the professional journal in music education.

Dr. Molnar went on to say that the recorder is of unlimited value in developing self-criticism and evaluation by the students of their voices, in recording functions of school life, and as a means of comparison of work with the ability of others.

The low cost of the recorder, the ease of operating it and the satisfactory tonal results were among the advantages given by Dr. Molnar in discussing the machine.

His observations on the efficacy of the tape recorder in music education were based on classroom experimentation at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, Teachers College of the University of Cincinnati, and secondary schools in the Cincinnati system. Music Educators Journal has published several articles by Dr. Molnar in the past.

Dr. D. S. Lancaster Addresses State PTA

Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of Longwood College, presented the convention theme "Unfinished Tasks in Health and Public Education" at the opening session of the Co-operative Education Association Monday night in Richmond.

Honors Published Once Each Year

Directory Includes 1st Man from Here

Ten senior students have been named by a faculty—adminis'ration committee to represent Longwood College in the sixteenth edition of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges for the current college year. For the first time at Longwood one of the Who's Who representatives is a man student.

Local students recognized this year in the collegiate directory are Elizabeth Bragg, of Norfolk; Dolores Duncan, also of Norfolk; Jacquelyn Eagle, Winchester; Martha Hylton, Danville; Anne Langbein, Arlington; James McGhee, Farmville; Ann Nock, Harborton; Evelyn Ray Phillips, Williamsburg; Norma Roady, Newport News; and Jacquelyn Wright, Morrison.

Elizabeth Bragg, a sociology major, is president of the Women's Student Government Association. Treasurer of that organization last year, she was also secretary of the Student Standards Committee and a committee representative her freshman and sophomore years. As freshman "Lizzie" headed her class production and has served as co-chairman of the class Circus stunt. She is a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, leadership society; of the Cotillion Club; and of Sigma Sigma Sigma, social sorority.

Head of the local Y.W.C.A. this year, Dolores Duncan is an elementary education major. Dolores has previously served in the Y' as chairman of the library committee and of the membership committee. She is at present social chairman of the Baptist Student Union as well as a member of the Future Teachers of America and the Association of Childhood Education. Vice-president of the local circle of A.K.G., Dolores also belongs to Alpha Phi Sigma, schoarship fraternity; to the Cotillion Club; and to Alpha Sigma Tau, social sorority.

Jacky Eagle, editor of the Rotunda, is majoring in English and French. Last year she served as managing editor of the newspaper and as class president. She has previously been class secretary, Student Standards representative, and president of le Cercle Francais. Jacky is a member of Beorc Eh Thorn, literary soc-

Short Story Contest To Close November 5

The annual Colonnade short story contest will close Saturday, November 5, at 6 p. m., Maria Jackson, short story editor of the Colonnade, reminded students today.

"There are only three days left in which to enter a story" Maria remarked, "so get busy and get yours turned in to either Ann Langbein, editor in chief, of the Colonnade, or to me, or put it in the Colonnade box under the main bulletin board."

All compositions will be judged by a committee composed of both faculty and student members. Prize winning stories will be published in the subsequent issues of the Colonnade.

Any Longwood College student is eligible to enter any number of original manuscripts in the contest which is sponsored each fall by the Colonnade in an effort to secure the best of the literary work of the College for publication.

Queen Roady, Wilson, Jardine, Hankins Reign at Alpha Kappa Gamma Circus

By Mary Crowgey

Scene: Longwood College gym. Time: 8:30 p.m., Saturday, October 29, 1949.

Midst thundering applause, Norma Roady, senior from Newport News, has just been crowned queen of the 1949 Alpha Kappa Gamma Circus by Margaret Ann Shelton, junior from Lynchburg, who is presiding over the big top festivities as ringmaster.

Immediately before the coronation of the queen, Betsy Wilson, junior from Hopewell; Jackie Jardine, sophomore from Farmville; and Betsy Hankins, freshman from Richmond, were presented as the queen's court.

Your reporter, being such a knowing soul, can also give you a clue as to the stunt winners; they haven't even been presented yet, but this little reporter will venture to guess that the seniors are going to come out on top with their "Cod Fish Ball" while the juniors take second place with "The Founding of Jimmystown."

By hanging onto a rafter, your reporter is able to bring you this bird's eye account of the big show. The gymnasium is so packed that, even with a telescope, he considers himself fortunate in being able to see at all!

The animals and clowns have done with their cavorting about and the ringmaster is announcing the first of the four competitive stunts, the freshman act, "Hit The Deck."

If you didn't know that the new card game, Canasta, has taken over the College, you really know it now. Packing every card in the deck into their act, the "youngest" class is proving that spades, hearts, diamonds, and clubs can put on quite a show.

Pervaded with the spirit of Hallowe'en, the setting of the sophomore stunt is a cornfield. A bored scarecrow is finding much to his delight, that when it comes to singing, the stars and the moon can really shine; that besides growing, pun'kins can do lots of things; and that leaves can do other things besides fall. Ghosts, with umbrellas, haunt the premises "looking for a girl who passed away on a rainy day"; an ole' witch finds that she is really "fixed" when it comes to cats; and bad boys act mighty "rough"—— until goblins appear.

Turning back the pages of history, the juniors present their version of the founding of "Jimmystown." What the Indians really resented, way back in 1607, it seems was not the English taking over their lands, but rather that Captain John Smith preferred playing honeymoon bridge with Pocahontas to playing Canasta on a Saturday night with King Powhatan Arrow.

Opening the senior act, a little sailor is inviting the audience to come along and follow him to the bottom of the sea, where the cod fish ball is being held. Snails furnish the music; an octopus sings to the sponges; two sailors are pursued by mermaids, and shrimp ride by on seahorses. "Fish-faces," sea weed, and lobsters add their talent to the entertainment.

The judges are now deliberating—it seems that Mrs. William Savage, Mrs. Josephine Phillips, and Mr. Robert D. Vickers are having a difficult time in coming to a decision. But now—the ringmaster is announcing the decision of the judges and whatta you know your little ole' reporter was right in the first place!

Now as your reporter swings down from his lofty perch, he confesses that for another Longwood circus, he would gladly risk his life again.

Miss Mix's Contribution....

Last Sunday, Longwood College paid a last tribute to one whose life was a personification of many of the ideals toward which members of the College community constantly strive. Miss Grace Mix, though retired several years from her position as supervisor of the kindergarten training school, never yielded her place of influence and universal popularity in the College, the church, and the community. No undergraduate student here today has had the good fortune of close association with Miss Mix. Yet her frequent presence at the College, her unflagging interest in proceedings here, her radiant personality which required little acquaintance to command respect, and the high esteem in which her co-workers of the faculty and administration held her, all combine to instill in the average Longwood student a high regard for Miss Mix.

Miss Mix, the possessor of an inherent facility for teaching, was well loved by her kindergarten children as by students who taught under her. The effects of her benign influence will live indefinitely in the young characters she has helped to mold and guide and in the subsequent work of her student teachers. Such College organizations as the Association for Childhood Education and the Pan - Hellenic Council will long benefit from the years of service she devoted to them. Advancing years failed to dim the mental alertness and unwaveringly sincere interest of this fine teacher in all that went on about her. This College, though saddened by Miss Mix's passing, can yet take consolation from being favored so many years by her bright presence. The influence of her noble soul will live on here.

More Musicmaking....

Longwood College has long been known as a "singing" college but now it has the opportunity to make its music instrumental as well as vocal.

At small expense to the student a stringed instrument class is now open. This class will prepare participating students for the Longwood orchestra which is to be organized in the near future.

Three years from now it is hoped that Longwood College will be the proud possessor of a full symphony orchestra.

Freshmen and sophomores are particularly urged to sign up for the stringed instrument class. Members of this class and of the brass and wood-wind class to be organized in the spring will form the nucleus of the orchestra next year.

Longwood College is indeed fortunate in having an extremely capable and experienced instructor for these classes.

Any student considering enrolling in either of the new music curricula next year should sign up immediately for one of the orchestra classes. An opportunity such as this should not be passed up by these or any musically inclined students.

More Merrymaking....

When students were given the high sign by the Dean of Women Monday evening to doff their dining room dignity and sing at the table to their hearts' content, they lost no time in complying. The Hallowe'en meal became a repast of revelry in which all thoroughly enjoyed letting their hair down in songs and cheers. Little attention was paid to the fine food as the party grew merrier, but a spiritual appetite for such funmaking as this was most effectually satisfied. For an occasional meal of merrymaking like the Hallowe'en dinner, students should gladly hold exuberant spirits in restraint until the time appointed for festivity. Miss Gleaves and those in charge of the College dining hall deserve a resounding vote of thanks for the freedom of Monday's dinner, with hopes that they will see fit to make it a regular occasion.

OUR WORLD

By Nellie Hart

Plans are being made to organize a non-Communistic union of southeast Asia. A preliminary conference will be held in the Philippine Islands now that India has finally given her approval to the plan and desires to join. Surely, this action denotes a feeling of insecurity that prevails in the minds of people who might be next on the Communistic calendar.

In addition to this conference, a junior Marshall Plan for the Asiatic countries is projected by the United States' state department. At present, the plans are very indefinite, but Congress will be requested to pay from one billion to a billion and 250 million dollars the first year to help stop communism in Asia. Showing marked similarity to the European Marshall plan, it further states that smaller requests would taper off the program in the following two or three years.

By the time these preliminaries are more thoroughly underway, the difficult question of Nationalist China may be much clearer, and the plans may have an outstanding effect on Chinese economics by enabling them to put it on a more stable and free basis.

In the meanwhile, India's Jawaharal Nehru has been touring the United States on a good-will visit. Conclusions drawn from his speeches have been very emphatic. He hopes that the U. S. will help India build her military and naval strength, help her in the process of industrializing, send more wheat to her starving people, and above all ,to back her in defending her good name.

Allemand Right Saturday Night

Campus Cogitations

Question: Do you prefer "singing" sings or "skit" sings on Saturday night?

Betty Jane Spencer: Skit sings because when you talk through your nose it sounds better than singing through your nose. Everyone keeps a cold.

Helen Connelly: Skit sings, 'course.

Carolyn Grimes: Who thinks of these questions?

Robbie Cromar: It's too early to make a conversation now.

Charlotte Flaugher: Singing "sings" are nice if you can sing.

Mary Lou Alphin: I like a variety, personally.

Martha Kitchen: Singing sings if everyone else will sing off key. (Why, Kit?)

Dot Dunford: Don't know! I've only been able to get to one.

Ann Dickenson: Both O.K.

Hilda Bauserman: Oh, I like skit ones.

Edith Duvall: Skits-because I can't sing.

Jane Lively: I think skit sings are just terrific.

Virginia McLean: I think I like skit sings better.

Dot Boswick: I like skit sings.

Grace Booker: Singing sings are better to get the crowd together.

Roberta Browning: Skit sings are nice because they are original.

Harriet Minichan: Both of them are nice 'cause you get tired of too much of either.

Margaret Turner: I like either-so you don't tire of one.

Kim Coleman: I can't decide.

May Henry Cadier: Skit sings are more humorous.

Bootie Poarch: I like skit sings better.

Sally Brickman: I like a little of both.

Carolyn Lusk: I like singing sings because everybody can participate in them.

Pedro's Pocket

By Jean Turner

Whatta week end! Pedro says if there is ever another one like it he may drop dead. It's the first time all season that his team has won. He tried to be very helpful all week with various suggestions as to how things should be run. He even tried to prove to AKG that he was an impartial observer and would be an excellent judge. He was disqualified, however, when he was found drilling holes for dynamite caps in the junior props.

Pedro asked if we would congratulate the queen, Norma Roady, and her court, Betsy Wilson, Jackie Jardine, and Betsy Hankins for him. They were a wonderful court—one worth doing our best for. Also he congratulates our versatile ring master, Margaret Ann Shelton. Even if she did nearly give him heart failure with all that talk about cider and cakes and games before the important announcement, he still thinks she was great. All four classes deserve congrats too for putting over an excellent circus—the public got their money's worth we're sure.

It's nice weather for goldfish, isn't it? If this keeps up the school will have to issue convertible rowboats as standard equipment. Speaking of goldfish, there is now on campus a goldfish hospital—the Smith-Critzer Fish Hospital. The doctors Smith and Critzer are finished in piscinary arts—and so are your fish if you take them there. You'll never get your pet back alive. Pedro thinks the reason might be that the hospital is in some way connected with the Critzer - Meredith Fish Funeral Home. By the way two fish are missing from the "Codfish Ball"—the Amos brothers. If anyone knows the whereabouts will she please notify Pedro in care of this newspaper.

Church Groups Plan Activities

Baptists Plan Convention

Fifteen Baptist girls from Longwood College will attend a state convention in Norfolk from Friday, November 4 through 6.

The group will be entertained in the homes of various members of the Norfolk Baptist Churches. Among the many activities of the convention will be a banquet and several seminars which will meet for the purpose of discussing activities on the various college campuses.

Attending the convention from Longwood will be: Shirley Roberts, Marilyn Wheeler, Connie Marston, Eleanor Weddle, Dot Doutt, Dot Wood, and Judy Hughes. Others will be: Max Acree, Ann Crowder, Jackie Wright, Dolores Duncan, Annie Lee Owen, Elizabth Stone, Dot Burnett, and Sara Dickerson.

Presbyterian Supper

At a supper meeting of the Presbyterian Westminister Fellowship, Mrs. Edwin Lancaster, guest speaker, will talk to the group about "The Children of India and Their Problems."

Canterbury Club

A round table discussion on the topic, "Does Church Attendance Matter?" will highlight the meeting of the Canterbury Club to be held this Sunday night. The meeting of the club will be held in the Episcopal Rectory from 8:00 to 10:00.

The group has planned a social hour during which refreshments will be served following the discussion.

Cotillion Issues 35 Upperclassmen Bids

Thirty-five girls received bids to the College Cotillion Club last evening. These girls will go through a preliminary initiation this fall, and will have their final initiation as "goats" in the spring. Part of the initiation will be to decorate for the Cotillion sponsored dance.

The Cotillion Club is a local organization composed of 250 students whose purpose is to promote good dancing on the campus. The organization sponsors at least one dance annually, and usually two, one in the fall and one in the spring.

Those who received an invitation to join are Ruth Gills, Frances Turner, Mary Elizabeth Watson, Emma Mae Pittard, Betty Johnson, Olga Rodriguez and Kitty Beale.

Others who received bids are Lila Easley, Jean Baltes, Jane Smith, Kim Coleman, Issaac Velasques, Katherine Buck and Helen Arrington.

Janice Slavin, Lee Wood, Lis Leslie, M. J. Smith, B. B. Wilson Mary Crowgey, Katie Cobb, Helen Kaknis, Ann Langbein, Jean Hogge and Helen Smith also received bids to Cotillion.

Others who received bids are Spot Myers, Lucy Jones, Margaret Thomas, Peggy Harris, Charlotte Newell, Dot Dodd, Jo Anna Phipps, Lucy Jane Morton, Margaret Beasley and Elizabeth Harris.

AST Honors Anniversary With Formal Banquet

Zeta Tau chapter of Alpha Sigma Tau sorority celebrated its fifieth anniversary with a formal banquet in the College Tea Room on Tuesday night, November 1.

Dean Ruth Gleaves and Dean and Mrs. William Savage were guests at the banquet, as were Miss Virginia Bedford and Miss Mamie Nichols, faculty members of the sorority. Several Longwood alumnae returned for the affair.

Alumnae Return For Circus

The Longwood campus was overwhelmed with alumnae this week end who returned for the Circus celebration. Among those who visited the school were: Tootsie Hamilton, Patti Page, Martha Hatchett, Gee Gee Yonce, Nancy Watts, Charlotte Willis, Charlene Saunders and Alfreda Louis.

Also among the visiting alumnae were Ann Norfleet, Martha Gillum, Ann Ford, Martha Hatcher, Betty Jefferson, Jesse Pickett, Ann East, Jane Hunt Ghiselin and Lee Robertson.

Ann Orgain, Jane Chambers, Carolyn Calhoun and Agnes Dingledine also returned to view the festivities.

Guests View Festivities

Out-of-town guests of the students who came to see the Circus included Mrs. W. C. Jones and Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Woods of Salem; Mrs. Ruth Nock, of Harbarton; Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Phillips and Mareen Phillips, of Williamsburg, and Miss Milly Riddle, of Westpoint.

Dr. and Mrs. E. A. Wilson and daughters Lucy and Sally, of Hopewell; Mrs. Lynn Tyler, of Charlottesville, and Mrs. Marjorie Sharpe, of Chester were among the College guests.

Students Visits Other Colleges

Marjorie Boswick, Sally Droste, Dot Dodd and Jan Peeples visited the University of Virginia this week end to attend the Virginia vs West Virginia game.

Miss Longwood was represented by Kitty Beale at the Home coming celebration at the University of Richmond.

Francis Howell and Sarah Ann Jones attended the Oyster Bowl game in Norfolk.

Several Longwood girls attended the Kappa Alpha Hollowe'en Party held at the fraternity house at Hampden-Sydney Saturday night. Among those who attended were Sallie Brickman, Margaret Taylor, Winifred Beard, Jane Smith, Emma Harris and Natalie Bryant.

High School Students Here

Thirty-eight high school students were guests of the College for Circus week end. 25 Virginia high schools were represented in this group.

Rain Temporarily Delays Semi-Finals In Tennis Singles

The semi-finals in the women's tennis singles have been delayed temporarily because of the rain.

Nancye Gillie, playing for Green 'n White, defeated Anne Langbein, Red 'n White, with a count of 6-1, 6-2 to qualify for the semi-finals last week.

Clara Borum, also Green 'n White, will play Frances "Clem" Allen, Red 'n White, as soon as the weather permits, and the winner will play Helen Agnew who defeated Hilda Edwards in the second round. The winner from this match will play Nancye Gillie in the finals.

Mr. Malloy on Radio

A round table discussion on Recreational Facilities will highlight the "Longwood Hour", which will be presented tomorrow afternoon over station WFLO at 4:30.

Mr. Thomas A. Malloy is in charge of this program and John Huegel will be the student announcer. Longwood College student and Farmville High School students will make up the panel for the discussion.

Hockey Team Elects Ritter

Patsy Ritter, senior from Winchester, was elected captain of the varsity hockey team by the varsity squad last week.

Patsy has played hockey the four years she has been at Longwood, making the varsity hockey squad three years and the team the last two years.

After playing right fullback for three years, Patsy this year is shifting to center halfback.

Sportin' Around

By Ann Lynch

The Longwood hockey team failed to attend the Eastern District Tournament held in Richmond last week end because of the weather. The tournament games were still played, however, and we hope to have the outcome next week.

The tennis semi-finals have been delayed because "the rains came", but will be resumed as soon as the weather permits.

The class hockey games will begin the week before Thanksgiving. I guess you're tired of being reminded, but at least eight practices must be had by that time. Definite dates will be set later.

The first scheduled varsity game is to be played next week end, November 11. There may be a game this week end, so look for a notice as to where, when and if it will be.

Instruments Available

The College is now in a position to furnish violins, cellos, violas, and string basses to students wishing to enter the stringed instrument class, Dr. Thomas Molnar, head of the department of music, announced yesterday.

MEN CAGERS SCRIMMAGE TOWN TEAM

Last Thursday night the boy's basketball squad and the Farmville Town Team scrimmaged informally for the purpose of ironing out previous drill difficulties. Little or no emphasis was put on rolling up scores.

The practice game clearly revealed that the twice-weekly practices the Longwood crew has held, were enough to ably condition the twelve for approximately only one half. The team hopes to practice five days a week after "Circus", and with two more valuable Town Team scrimmages to be played on November 13th and 22nd, the squad should round out considerably better organized and prepared to meet its opening game on December 3rd with the usual Longwood spunk and fight.

WOMEN'S SPIRIT APPRECIATED

The entire basketball team was enthusiastic in its appreciation for the spirited backing that the girls have shown even in the informal scrimmage. The organization and development of a basketball team on a college campus for the first time is no simple task for any of its personnel. Getting twelve "court strangers" working together, mastering fundamental drills, is only part of its many time consuming necessities. A successful team, even with the potential ability, becomes so only through plenty of hard work, time, patience, and last, but never least, morale. The interest that the girls show their boy's team especially during these first crucial years will inevitably be a major factor in whether the team succeeds in the present and future. When the girls' hockey and basketball games come around it would not surprise me to find all the fellows out there rooting enthusiastically for ole Longwood.

HOCKEY TEAM LOSES FRANCES ALLEN

On the eleventh the 1949 edition of the Longwood hockey team will take the field without the services of one of its most highly regarded players, Frances "Clem" Allen, when at Roanoke the local eleven will face Roanoke College in their opening match of the season. Allen, an All-District player last year, is not playing varsity hockey this year due to an over-taxed schedule.

"Liz" Lesslie, recently elected manager, most likely will fill the vacant spot left by Allen. Lesslie is fast and equally as shifty; she should fill the gap ably. Carolyn Grimes, Martha Hylton and Patsy Ritter, the recently elected captain, are all outstanding veterans and with two shining transfers, Rachel Peters, and Anne Biddlecomb,combined with two distinctive freshmen standouts, Clara Borum and Sue Webb, a strong nucleus seems very likely for the' '49 combination.

Dean Will Begin High School Tour

Dean William W. Savage will begin a week-long tour next Monday to visit the high schools of eastern Virginia. The purpose of this trip, Dean Savage stated, is to interview prospective students to the College.

The first stop on his week's trip will be Toano High School, Toano, on Monday. He will then visit Matthew High School in Williamsburg. On Tuesday, he will journey to Newport News to interview the students of Newport News High School, and then to Hampton High School in Hampton.

Dean Savage will visit Cape Charles High School, Cape Charles; Northampton High School, Eastville; and Central High School, Painter, on Wednesday. On Thursday, he will visit Onancock High School, Onancock; Accomac High School, Accomac; and Parksley High School, Parksley.

The trip will be terminated by visits to Bloxom High School, Bloxom; Atlantic High School, Oak Hill; and Chincoteague High School, Chincoteague.

LC Students Appear On WFLO Program

Several Longwood College students have recently played stellar roles in the "Campus Kids" program heard every Sunday afternoon from 3 to 3:30 over radio station WFLO. "Campus Kids" is a variety musical program which features students from the Hampden-Sydney and Longwood campuses.

Started last April, the Campus Kids program last year displayed the talent of Bill Field on the piano, and Charlotte K. Jones singing. This fall they have added Natalie Bryant and "Mouse" Misenheiter to make a foursome, and each week feature a guest soloist. The Burnette sisters, Page and Ann, starred on the show a few weeks ago with their piano arrangements.

Within the next month, the "Campus Kids" will broadcast directly from Hampden-Sydney with some new and different musical talent added to the program.

FTA TO Present Am. Education Wk. Program On Radio

"Public education is the practical and pierhaps the only method of teaching people the deeper meanings of democracy and the individual freedom that democracy should guarantee", B. M. McKelway, presiden of the W shington Star stated in an article heralding American Education Week which will begin Monday, November 6 and last until November 12.

Longwood will recognize American Education Week with a program presented by the Future Teachers of America association on the Longwood Hour November 10. Three faculty members of the local public schools, Miss Dot Daniels, Miss Margaret S. Hall, and Mr. Robinson, will participate in the program, as well as education students at the College, Betty House and June Banks. The library is planning an appropriate exhibit to be displayed during the week.

American Education Week, which is sponsored by the National Education Association, National Congress of Parents and Teachers, Office of Education of the Federal Security Agency and the American Legion, is designed to awaken an interest in educators to stress the need of a working democracy in the public schools. The theme for the week-long emphasis on American education will be "Making Democracy Work".

General Omar Bradley and Roy E. Larsen, president of Time Inc., and chairman of the National Citizens Commission for Public Schools, also contributed articles expanding the theme to The Public and Education, a weekly bulletin published by the National Education Association.

In his article, General Bradley said, "In education lies much of our hope for a peaceful future. I feel that from the first school years the teacher should build in the pupil an acceptance of individual responsibility as a citizen of the United States." He further stated the responsibility of the public school teacher in properly instructing the students to grow into a generation that will make our democracy work.

Rev. Vache Takes Episcopal Call

Ministry Here Starts Dec. 1

The Rev. Jean A. Vache has accepted a call to Johns Memorial Episcopal Church in Farmville and expects to arrive the latter part of November to begin active ministry December 1.

Mr. Vache concludes a four year ministry at Franklin, Va., where he has served the Episcopal churches of Franklin and Courtland in Southampton county.

Prior to going to Franklin, Mr. Vache was pastor of the Greensboro, N. C., Episcopal church and served as chaplain of the Woman's College in Greensboro, N. C., for 14 years.

He is a native of Pennsylvania, but with the exception of a short ministry in Pittsburgh, has been located in North Carolina and Virginia.

He and Mrs. Vache and their family will make their home at the apartment next to the Episcopal rectory, which will be remodeled as a parish house.

Mr. and Mrs. Vache have two sons, one of whom is in the U. S. Merchant Marine service, and the other a ministerial student.

iety; Alpha Phi Sigma; the Cotillion Club, Pi Kappa Sigma, social sorority; local A.K.G. treasurer; and president of the Journalism Club.

Martha B. Hylton, a chemistry major, is vice-president of the Woman's Student Government Association this year, having formerly been a class representative to the Association. "B"'s activities include the presidency of Alpha chapter of Alpha Sigma Alpha, social sorority of which she was previously secretary; swimming managership of the Athletic Association; membership in A.K.G.; and Alpha Phi Sigma. In addition to being secretary-treasurer of the Monogram Club, "B" is a member of H2O swimming club, the Cotillion Club, Granddaughters Club, and Spanish Club.

For the past two years Anne Langbein, who is majoring in biology and chemistry, has edited the Colonnade, College literary magazine. Anne has played on the varsity basketball team, and belongs to H2O, the Monogram Club, and Orchesis, dance club. A Dean's List student, she is a member of Pi Gamma Mu, social science fraternity; Alpha Phi Sigma; the Journalism Club; le Cercle Francias; and Theta Sigma Upsilon, social sorority.

James McGhee, a chemistry major, was president last year of the first Men's Student Government Association at Longwood. He is a member of Kappa Delta Pi, honorary education fraternity; member of Alpha Phi Sigma; and a Dean's List student. McGhee also participates in College athletics.

An English major, Ann Nock is social chairman of the Dramatic Club this year, as well as a student announcer on the radio committee and president of Sigma Sigma Sigma social sorority. Serving as president of the class commissions during her freshman and sophomore years, she was also a member of Alpha Phi Sigma and head of the acting department of the Dramatic Club. Ann has participated in several plays presented by the Club. At present she is president of her dormitory hall, a member of H2O, Orchesis, Cotillion Club, Granddaughter's Club, of which she was president during her junior year, and the Spanish Club, of which she was treasurer last year.

Ray Phillips, who is a physical education major, is president of the Athletic Association. A member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, she also belongs to Orchesis, Cotillion Club and Monogram Club. She served as secretary of the A.A. Council during her junior year, and is a member of the H2O Club, and Alpha Phi Sigma. Ray served on the freshman and sophomore commission during her first two years. She is a member of Alpha Sigma Alpha social sorority.

A physical education major, Norma Roady is president of the senior class. She served as vice-president of the junior class last year, and is a member of the A.A. Council, Monogram Club, Cotillion Club and Orchesis. Representing her class on the Student Standards committee, Norma is also secretary of Alpha Kappa Gamma, and a member of Alpha Sigma Alpha social sorority.

President of the House Council, Jackie Wright is a business education major. A member of the Baptist Student Council, she served on the Executive Council for the past two years. During her sophomore and junior years, she was a member of the Dramatic Club and the French Circle. This year Jackie is serving as president of Alpha Kappa Gamma, and as representative to the Student Standards committee. President of her dormitory hall and Y.W.C.A. treasurer last year, she has also served on several Y' committees including membership and church cooperative. Jackie acted as treasurer of Alpha Sigma Alpha social sorority last year and is at present a member of F.F.A. and Cotillion Club.

Annually a compilation of the outstanding students in America is published. Only juniors and seniors taking advanced work are eligible. The primary purpose of this publication is to bring the outstanding students in America before the business world and before others who annually recruit students.

Civil Service Wants Junior Assistants

The Federal Government has opened examinations for the positions of "Junior" Professional Assistant," and "Junior Management Assistant." Starting salaries are $2,974.00 to $3,351.00 a year.

Actual work in these positions include that of biologist, economist, mathematician, psychologist, statistician, and social science analyst.

Interested persons should secure Application Form 5000-AB from the Civil Service Secretary at the Post Office in Lynchburg. These applications must be filed before November 8, 1949. The official announcement of this examination, giving details for positions in all classifications, is posted on Miss Stubb's bulletin board.

Home Ec Club Plans Activities Schedule

At a recent meeting, the Home Economics Club planned their Calendar for this year.

The first activity scheduled for this term will be a talk given by Miss Fern Staggs, professor of home economics, on November 7. Miss Staggs' topic will be "Know Your Professional Organization—The American Home Economics Association."

mond on November 25th to see a World's Championship Kramer-Gonzales performance; the Longwood fall tournament has been producing some torrid contests for about two weeks now. Last week Nancy Gillie leisurely stroked her way into the finals by surprisingly downing Anne Langbein 6-1, 6-2, but the lower brackets have been fully high-tensioned all the way down the line. Patsy Ritter's aggressive game finally outpunched Romine Mahood, but Langbein's defensive mastery outlasted Ritter in a thrilling quarter-final 4-7-5. Frances Allen faces Clara Borum in the remaining quarter-final, the winner of which will face Helen Agnew for entry into the finals. Allen should be favored all the way capping the finals against Gillie in a tight contest. The Allen-Gillie affair would be power against slightly weaker power but as fine a brand of women's tennis here.

VA'S PAPIT SMASHES U. S. RUSHING RECORD

Johnny Papit, Virginia's Mr. Big, galloped 212 of the Cavalier's 270 yards Saturday as Virginia racked up victory number seven to remain one of the few major undefeated teams. Virginia edged West Virginia 19-14 and will face Penn this week a little more confidently. Papit's rushing total was raised to 986 yards for the season to, of course, lead the nation.

Women's Student Gov't. Releases 'Code Of Ethics' For LC Students

Bragg Clarifies '49-'50 Handbook Social Regulations

A "Code of Weekend Ethics" to be observed by Longwood women students has been released by the Women's Student Government Association. The code, as given by Lizzie Bragg, W.S.G.A. president, states:

"When Longwood College girls are visiting away from the college for a week end, the traditions of the College assure that their conduct will be a credit to them and to the College", Lizzie stated. She added, "for the benefit of us all, certain specific suggestions seem advisable."

The suggestions have been incorporated into a code composed of the following:

1. Girls are expected to stay in homes or other residential places which are satisfactory to the institution being visited.

2. Full address of the place should be left in the Dean of Women's office, and any change should be reported to the Dean at the time of change.

3. Girls should follow any local customs in regard to returning to their place of residence. In general practice, this return should be within two hours after the close of the dance or other accompanying official entertainment.

Old Rules Clarified

At the same time, Lizzie clarified certain existing rules that have been misunderstood by the students.

1. It has long since become a custom for girls to attend Church services when they have dates at those hours.

2. Freshmen and sophomores can only date out-of-town boys, i. e. boys living beyond a fifty mile radius, until 10:00 p. m. on week nights.

Freshmen, sophomores, and juniors may eat downtown with dates Sunday morning, and return to school by 10:30 p. m.

4. Seniors may eat downtown on Sundays with or without dates from 5:30 p. m. to 7:30 p. m.

5. Girls are not allowed to spend the night in a hotel except when accompanied by a parent.

Orchesis To Present 'Dance Day' Dec. 8

The annual "Dance Day" symposium inaugurated here last year by Orchesis, local dance club, will be held again this year on Thursday, December 8. Approximately 120 students from 8 high schools in this area will take part in the program, Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, Orchesis adviser said.

In preparation for the symposium Mrs. Landrum will teach dance to students in three neighboring junior and senior high schools at Burkeville, Appomattox, and Charlotte Court House next week. Mrs. Landrum will emphasize techniques and approaches to simple composition on these trips. The first of these trips will be Friday, November 11 at Burkeville; on Monday 14, Mrs. Landrum will go to Appomattox high school; next Tuesday, November 15, she will meet the Charlotte Court House students.

Orchesis plans to give modern dance demonstrations to high school students at Amelia, Blackstone, and Crewe the last of next week.

The local Dance Day, which last year was the first presentation of this type in Virginia, is part of a project in dance sponsored by the State Association for Health, Phy-

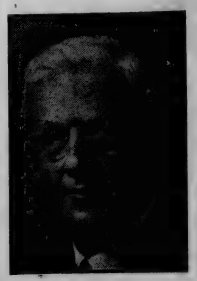
Rabbi F. Rypins Will Speak To Student Body Tomorrow



Topic Concerns Religious History

Rabbi Fred I. Rypins, of Greensboro, North Carolina, will speak on "The Beginnings of Church and Synagogue" on tomorrow's assembly program.

Rabbi Rypins spoke to the student body last year on the topic "Jewish Contributions to America". Before that he taught the Old Testament class at the Episcopal conference held on the Longwood College campus during the summer of 1948.

Ordained by the Hebrew Union College in 1921, Rabbi Rypins served in pulpits in Wilmington, North Carolina, and in Roanoke before being called to his present post as Rabbi of Temple Emanuel in Greensboro, North Carolina.

His appearance on the campus is by special arrangement with the Jewish Chautauqua Society which was founded in the year 1893 to forward a system of Jewish religious education. Emphasis is laid on lectures in Jewish topics delivered at American universities "as a means of bringing authenic information to the non-Jew, and through this information, good will and better understanding."

RABBI FRED I. RYPINS, who returns to this campus tomorrow to address the assembled student body.

BSU To Sponsor Vocational Week

Vocational Emphasis Week, which is being sponsored next week by the Baptist Student Union, will have as its theme "Working Together with Him".

Each afternoon during the week, with the exception of Wednesday, there will be a discussion held at the Baptist Student Center from 5 to 6 p. m.

Dr. Edgar Johnson will lead the discussion Monday. His topic will be "Working Together with Him in the Teaching Profession". On Tuesday, Mrs. William Chapman will lead the discussion on "Working Together with Him as a Home Maker". The topic "Working Together with Him—Regardless" will be used Thursday and Friday when Mr. William Hall Preston, southwide Baptist student secretary, will lead the group discussion.

Mr. Preston will lead the prayer meeting services at the Baptist Church Wednesday evening at 8 p. m.

Longwood students as well as officials of the Baptist Student group will present short talks during the week over radio station WFLO at 9:30 a. m. On Monday, Miss Lucille Peak, student director, will use the topic "An Example in Word". Roberta Wilson will speak Tuesday about "An Example in Conduct", and Judy Hughes Will discuss "An Example in Love" Wednesday morning. On Thursday, Connie Marston will use "An Example in Spirit" as her topic, and Friday, Mr. William H. Preston will speak about "An Example in Faith". Peggy Dee Hoover will conclude the series of broadcasts with a discussion of "An Example in Purity" Saturday morning.

'Busy Signs' Issued

Official busy signs have been given to the dormitory hall presidents and may be purchased by student for five cents, Jackie Wright, president of the House Council recently announced.

Any one breaking a busy sign MUST report herself to the hall president for a call down, Jackie stated. She further pointed out that busy signs are for studying and are to be used only between 7:30 p. m.—10:30 p. m.

President Speaks During Ed. Week

Opens Celebration With Broadcast

President Dabney S. Lancaster has been playing an active role in the local celebration of National Education Week, the period annually set aside under the sponsorship of the American Legion for emphasis on American education.

On Monday, President Lancaster opened the Education Week series of broadcasts over WFLO with a talk on "Education as a Basis for the Preservation of Democracy." This series is being sponsored daily this week by the Buckingham County Education Association.

Yesterday Dr. Lancaster spoke before the Crewe Kiwanis Club in a similar vein, dwelling particularly on the public education outlook in Virginia and the administration of public schools of the Commonwealth.

Buckingham County Post No. 58 of the American Legion and teachers of the county will hear Dr. Lancaster, Friday, in their Armistice Day meeting. This meeting which is being held in conjunction with the Buckingham County Teachers Association will take place in Veterans' Memorial Hall. The Honorable Watkins M. Abbitt, local congressional representative, will introduce Dr. Lancaster, whose topic will be "Education as Our Nation Defense."

In his radio talk Monday, Dr. Lancaster explained the important role of education in the survival of democratic society. "It is highly important that we continue to give the American people the opportunity to get ahead through their own efforts under the free enterprize system. If we are any-

FTA Initiates 6 In Recent Meeting

Six girls were initiated into the local chapter of the Future Teachers of America at a meeting held last week in the honors room.

Those girls who were initiated are Margaret Beasley, Dolores Duncan, Elizabeth Harris, Lois Stevens, Ann Critzer and Jacquelyn Wright.

The Future Teachers of America is a national organization of prospective teachers enrolled in colleges and universities. The F. T. A. Chapters are affiliated with the local, state and national education associations. The local chapter, which is the J. L. Jarman Chapter received its charter from the National Education Association in 1940.

From The PRESIDENT

The World Student Service Fund gives us an opportunity to aid our fellow college students in war-torn countries to secure an education.

These students need books, clothing, medicines and food, and often some type of shelter in which they may study.

It is difficult for us to realize fully our own oppportunities in this country, and still more difficult for us to understand the handicaps under which these students of other lands must study.

In giving to this fund we will not only help others to become constructive citizens, but a contribution to a cause like this does something to each one of us.

"The gift without the giver is dead," and I am sure that in giving our money to this cause we also give something of ourselves, and we are the better for the act.

I feel sure that the students of Longwood College will do their part as they have done in years gone by.

Dabney S. Lancaster
President,
Longwood College

176 Will Serve On Y' Committee

One hundred and seventy-six students have signed up for Y' Committees Lelia Mae Ferratt, head of the Membership Committee of the Y.W.C.A. announced this week.

Thirty two persons signed up for the Prayer Committee, Margaret Thomas, head of the committee, stated.

The Social Committee, headed by Evelyn Farrier, has forty-four people signed to help with social functions sponsored by the Y'.

Eight persons signed up to work on the Service committee, according to Laura Stickley head of the group.

Bonnie Gerrels, head of the Publicity committee, has nineteen persons on her committee.

The purpose of the Library Committee, which now consists of five people, is to inform all the students that there is a Y' Library and to catalogue all Y' owned books and add new books to the library when possible. The chairman of this committee is Patty Walker.

The Membership committee, whose chairman is Lelia Mae Ferratt, has thirty-nine committee members.

World events are brought to the students by the Public Affairs Committee. Barbara Grizzard, who heads this committee, will be aided by five other students.

Music for all activities is supplied by the Music Committee. Chairman Betty Campbell will be assisted by thirteen students.

The connecting link between the churches of the community and college girls is the Church Cooperative committee. Jackie Wright heads this committee and will be assisted by three people.

June Forman is chairman of the Sing committee, whose purpose is to work up entertainment for Big Sister-Little Sister Reception and sponsor Saturday Night Sing. Ten students are on this committee.

Sophomore Class Gives Freshmen Rat Cap Rule

Freshmen will wear their "rat caps" until the week after Thanksgiving holiday, if green 'n' white triumphs in the annual sophomore - freshman hockey game. However, if the frosh are defeated by the red 'n' whites, they must leave their caps on until the Christmas holiday.

In making this announcement last night after the traditional "rat capping" ceremony, Jackie

1949 WSSF Campaign To Open On Campus Monday, November 14

Goal Of $500 To Be Sought

Contributions to the World Student Service Fund campaign, which opens on the Longwood campus November 14 and closes November 18, will directly benefit students and teachers in the universities and colleges in the war devasted nations of the world, Barbara Grizzard, student chairman of the Longwood campaign, said today.

Fifteen students have been asked to canvass the dormitory halls during the five day Longwood campaign. A goal of $500 has been set for the College students and faculty.

On Thursday, November 17, Mr. John C. Gleason, regional secretary of the WSSF from Atlanta, Georgia, will speak to the student body at the regular assembly. His topic will be "They Still Need You", which is the theme of the entire WSSF campaign for 1949-50.

A film entitled "They Still Need You" is now available for any organization or group wishing to show it. The film may be obtained from Barbara Grizzard.

WSSF is the agency by which American students and professors, at the prep school and university levels, may share materially and intellectually with their needy contemporaries throughout the world. WSSF is a part of the World Student Relief organization through which students all over the world contribute to help others.

Students of the United States, Great Britain, and the Dominions, Sweden, and Switzerland still bear the chief burden of the fund raising, though many other countries, once recipients of relief, are now contributing to the work and funds of WSR.

Freshmen Elect Class Officers, Representatives

Kreinbaum, Sec'y. Boswick, Treasurer

The freshman class elected Jean Kreinbaum of Emporia class secretary last week at a called meeting. Dorothy Boswick of Newport News was chosen treasurer.

The girls who were chosen Women's Student Government representatives were Polly Brothers and Jessie Amory. Helen Tanner and Mary "Sis" Burton will represent the freshmen class on the Student Standards Committee.

Jean, a graduate of Greensville County high school, served as editor of the school paper Green and Gold her senior year and exchange editor her junior year. Last winter, she was chosen Miss Emporia by people of Greensville County. Jean was a member of the Junior and Senior Tri-Hi-Y serving as president of each. She was a member of the Latin Club, Junior Red Cross, Glee Club, Monogram Club and Science Club.

"Dot" Boswick is a graduate of Newport News high school where she represented her class on Student Government four years and Executive Board one year. Dot served as vice-president of the Writer's Club and secretary of the Spanish Club. She was also a member of the Literary Club, Science Club, Dramatic Club and the tennis team.

Freshman Student Government representative, Polly Brothers, is a graduate of Suffolk high school. Active in a variety of organizations, she served as co-editor of the school annual The Peanut, senior representative to the school Senate, and vice president of the Tri-Hi-Y her junior year.

A graduate of Newport News high school and class representative to Student Government and Executive Board, Jessie Amory served as co-editor of the annual The Anchor. She was also a member of National Thespians, International Quill and Scroll and the National Honor Society.

Helen Tanner, Student Standards representative, was valedictorian of the graduating class at the Collegiate School in Richmond. She was president of the senior class and a representative to the Student Council.

"Sis" Burton is a graduate of Suffolk high school. A member of several different organizations, she served as exchange editor of the school paper Peanut Picker for two years.

Dr. Molnar Selects 11 Madrigal Singers

Eleven madrigal singers have been selected, Dr. John W. Molnar announced this week.

Those who were chosen to make up the group are Connie Heather, Sarah McElroy, and Jean Hogge who will sing first soprano, Puckett Asher, Joyce Adams, Andrea Adams and Jane Allen who will sing second soprano, and Ann Moody, Charlotte K. Jones, Mary Winston Johnston, and Bobbie Pollard who will sing alto.

Dr. Molnar stated that the group may be added to during the year. The madrigal singers will present a program of vocal selections on the Voice of Longwood, December 8.

Vespers Sunday

The first Union Vesper Service of the current year will be held Sunday night, November 13, at 7 p. m. in the Farmville Baptist Church, Jackie Wright, chairman of the Y.W.C.A. church co-operative committee, announced last night.

All students are invited to the service which will be followed by a social in the Baptist Student Center. Vespers, a coordinated church service in which students from all denominations take part, is sponsored four times a year by the local Y.W.C.A.

Rotunda Announces New Staff Members, Department Changes

New members of the Rotunda staff and departmental changes have been announced by Jackie Eagle, editor. 25 students have successfully completed tryouts. At the same time Jackie announced a change in Rotunda tryout policy. Tryouts will now be held continuously throughout the year, instead of at the beginning of each semester as was formerly the custom. New staff members' names will be added to the masthead periodically as they complete a reasonable amount of work constituting the tryout period, Jackie said.

New Rotunda department heads are Helen Connelly, advertising manager; Betsy Wilson, society editor; Betty Jones, ad copy editor; and Nora Pollard, exchange editor.

Recently added to the feature writing staff were Barbara White, Roberta Browning, Jenny Powell, Joanne Steck.

They Still Need You . . .

"They Still Need You," this is the theme of the 1949-50 World Student Service Fund campaign which opens on our campus next Monday.

The students and professors in the colleges and universities abroad have their only hope of aid in the World Student Relief organization of which the WSSF is a part. These students in countries rent asunder by the recent war, are the people who will, with you, determine tomorrow's world. They are the group marked for the same role in their countries' future as you are in yours.

Two serious problems affect the life of every university student abroad: the acute shortage of books and general equipment and the lack of proper food, clothing and medical care. At a college in Greece over 1,000 students are competing for the two to five copies of each textbook. In Europe the majority of students are suffering from tuberculosis.

Without health and energy the student cannot concentrate on his work. Without books he cannot learn.

Through WSSF rest centers for students, student sanatoria for tubercular and pre-tubercular students, community centers and self-help hostels have been established; educational supplies, emergency food and emergency clothing have been supplied; but more is still needed.

The education of these students is important to the whole world. They are the future leaders of their countries. If they are ill-trained, poorly informed, their leadership will inevitably hinder world progress, understanding, and peace.

WSSF's goal for 1949-50 is $600,000; of this sum Longwood students and faculty are asked to contribute only $500. This is very little to give to secure, or to help to secure, peace in the world.

They still need us, but we still need them, also. Knowledge is the most international of commodities, but also among the most perishable. Knowledge, above all else, is needed in the world today to insure a common ground, a common hope, a common striving in every nation. You can keep knowledge alive today—it may help to keep you alive tomorrow.

A Satisfactory Solution . . .

Much indignation was aroused several weeks ago when it was rumored that the administration was planning to hand down a curfew ruling governing students on week end visits out of town. However, in true rumor tradition, this did not prove a reality. This week the front page of the Rotunda features a "Code of Week-end Ethics" formulated by the Women's Student Government Association. With the publication of this code we are happy to admit that our former dissatisfaction was unfounded, and students should now give the code, as outlined by their representatives, serious and conscientious observance.

It is a regrettable fact that in the past a small minority of students have placed the good name of both their fellow students and the College in jeopardy by their thoughtless conduct while away from the confines of the dormitory. Because of the liberal social regulations here, the conduct of this indiscreet few has posed a very real problem. We are glad to note now that the Women's Student Government Association has taken the first step toward the solution of that problem in an eminently satisfactory manner. The remainder of the solution depends entirely on the student body. The practicability of this measure can readily be seen by all. By supporting it wholeheartedly the student body will demonstrate its ability to continue the privilege of self-government in a wise and satisfactory manner.

The Time Has Come . . .

Comes time for the inevitable protestations of student conduct in assembly. It isn't easy for students to criticize their fellows' behavior, but when that behavior becomes so thoughtless that the reputation of the entire student body is placed in jeopardy, silence remains impossible.

Probably those who have been conscientious enough to read this far are not guilty of the misdemeanoor here cited. However each individual student should consider it his personal responsibility to see that his peers do not damage the name of Longwood by demonstrating such discourtesy as has been painfully in evidence during the last several assembly periods. Reading, whispering, sewing and other inappropriate diversions on the part of a large percentage of the student body during assembly clearly indicate to the speaker and others on the platform that members of the Longwood student body are poorly grounded in common decency.

Yet many students would protest this assumption on grounds that the speaker read his paper or otherwise proved unworthy of attention. Only a few moments' consideration will demonstrate, however, the invalidity of this argument in the light of the speaker's position and the reputation of a student body which is assumed to be adult in its behavior. The majority of assembly speakers who are the objects of such flagrant abuse are never given the chance to interest their audience. It is easy to see that the Assembly Committee cannot practically guarantee an enthralling program every week. But students inflict on themselves a double denial when they refuse to get the maximum benefit from the weekly assembly program and when they cause visitors to carry away bad reports of the Longwood student body.

Students are quick to show respect for their Alma Mater by standing until the last chord of the song has sounded, but they deny that respect at the same time by their childish assembly behavior. Surely this is a contradictory situation, and it is to be hoped that students will not continue to do themselves this injustice.

Letters To Editor

Dear Editor,

On behalf of the cousin of the late Grace E. Mix, I should like to thank the faculty and students of Longwood College for their many kindnesses to Miss Mix during her recent illness.

The flowers and many cards touched her greatly—as well as the general concern for her expressed by the College which had always been the center of her interest and affection.

Sincerely yours,
Mrs. Raymond W. Lewis

Pedro's Pocket

By Jean Turner

It's evident that Pedro has taken quite an optomistic view of coming holidays. In yesterday's interview that was all he would talk about. Just think! Only two weeks from today we go home for Thanksgiving. When you leave in the middle of the week it always seems to be sooner than waiting for a week end. After Thanksgiving it's only three weeks until Christmas and when you say three weeks fast, it doesn't sound long at all. Christmas,—now that's a nice holiday—that's the time when we have two weeks holiday.

It is Pedro's understanding that quite a few girls went away for the week end—Congratulations!

Pedro is conducting another contest. This time the prize goes to the person telling him the saddest story. He has a collection of these so called "tough stories". He also thinks there are certain measures that should be taken to console the bearer of these trials.

We hate to run the subject in the ground, but one friend of Pedro's is having a particularly hard time—two dead goldfish in two weeks! Somebody ought to notify the S.P.C.A.

Pedro begged the editor of this publication to let him off this week. It was such a trying week end. He went to the VPI vs W. & L. game—not knowing whose side to be on when he arrived, he finally decided on W & L since they had won more games than VPI recently (well, who hasn't?) and was completely frustrated by the outcome. Such is life, Pedro, you can't win everytime, just ask Tech.

Clanging of Alarm Routs Sleepy LC'ers From Dreams

By Joanne Steck

E-rr-rr clang, clang, clang! "Ye gads, another fire drill. . .Hey, Judy, wake up. . .Where's my towel? Oh, gosh! Have you seen my raincoat? Put on the light. Let's go!"

We of Longwood are fast becoming experts in the art of sleepwalking. When the alarm shrieks in the dead of the night, we automatically reach for our "presence of mind."

Some of us are rudely awakened from pleasant dreams. It is overheard at breakfast the next morning that one of us was horribly disappointed at the termination of her dream. Our friend was just about to be subjected to an interesting experience when suddenly the dream was ended by the fire alarm. The poor girl didn't sleep the rest of the night because of her disappointment.

A girl we know has changed her entire "altitude" concerning fire drills, since the Great Blaze of '49, in which White House was razed. At the sound of the alarm, this charcter used to hide in the bath tub; but now she goes tearing down the hall like '00 peering under the beds, looking in the closets and behind the curtains, dragging people out left and right!

Even though we may grumble a great deal about fire drills, we know that there is good reason for our having them. Habits—good or bad—are being formed every time the siren sounds. The girl who calmly turns on the light, quickly donning her robe, book, and towel, then walking out in an orderly fashion—this girl is likely to follow the same pattern in case of emergency. If everybody abides by the rules, the buildings can be cleared in less than five minutes; so when that bell starts clanging, bid'a firm, if reluctant, adieu to sweet slumberland romance, for this may be the real thing!

Church Activities

Pian Conference at Roslyn

Longwood and Hampden Sydney Westminister Fellowship members will attend a conference at Roslyn, an Episcopal estate on the James river outside of Richmond, this week end.

Frances Thomas, Betsy Phillips, Roberta Browning, Lucy Ann Edmonds, and Martha Alice Wilson will attend the conference from Longwood. Those attending from Hampden Sydney are Charles Talley, Charles Grissett, and Gene Randolph.

Wesley Foundation Choir

Miss Marion Hallock, Wesley Foundation director, recently issued a questionnaire to all Methodist students asking for their cooperation or active participation in the formation of a Wesley Foundation choir.

Such a choir would participate in the Wesley Foundation programs, and also sing in their robes for some of the Wesley Foundation services, according to Miss Hallock. In particular, a "Sermon in Song" is being planned.

Miss Hallock announced that a minister of music, Mrs. Herrington from Yonkers, New York, has offered to work with the Wesley Foundation group. Mrs. Herrington has just completed her work toward a degree of Master of Sacred Music at Union Theological Seminary in New York City.

Dr. Molnar To Speak

Dr. John W. Molnar will speak to the Canterbury Club on "Church Music" at the November 13 meeting in the Episcopal rectory.

After the program, which will begin at 8 p. m. the Club will hold their usual social hour.

IV Leadership Conference

An Intervarsity Leadership conference was held October 30 at Montreat, North Carolina. Among the Longwood students attending the conference were Annie Swann and Peggy Dee Hoover.

Ten southern colleges and universities were represented at this conference including VPI, the University of Virginia, Georgia Tech, the University of Tennessee, Davidson College, and Columbia University. Charles Troutman, associate general secretary of the Intervarsity was the main speaker for the occasion.

BSU Conference

Fifteen BSU girls journeyed to Norfolk last week end to attend a state conference at Park Place Baptist Church. Two hundred and ninety eight students from Virginia colleges and universities attended. Discussions and lectures during this statewide conference centered around the theme "Because Christ Loved."

Parry Opens Contest

Radio station WSVS will award twelve new recordings as a prize to the Longwood College student submitting the best idea for a College program, Eddie Parry of WSVS recently announced.

All suggestions should be given to Jackie Eagle, editor-in-chief of the Rotunda, or to anyone on the staff before the November 19 deadline.

The winning student has his choice of records from a wide selection at station WSVS.

Social Notes

Among those who left the campus last week end were Pete Peters, Martha Kitchen, Jenny Powell and Liz Leslie, who visited friends in Richmond.

Jackie Moody, Suzie Bowie, Robbie Cromar, and Jane Williams attended the William and Mary vs North Carolina game in Williamsburg. Others who were off to see the football games were Lee Wood, Pat Lee, Marian Beckner, Emma Harris and Midge Woods who attended the VPI vs W.&L. game in Lynchburg. Helen Kaknis, Marjorie Trayior, Joanne Yow and Nancy Henderson were also among the spectators of the game in Lynchburg.

Harvey White, a student at the University of Virginia, spent the week end here visiting Frankie Dodson. Ed Carson of Danville was the guest of Ann Lynch. Bill Galalee has been spending the past few days visiting Betty Ferguson.

Engagements Announced

Peggy Hughes has joined the ranks of those engaged to be married. She received a ring from Lowell Compton of Richlands last week.

Sarah Ann Jones has accepted a pin from Heath Light, who is a member of Sigmi Chi fraternity at Hampden-Sydney.

NOTICE

Dr. John W. Molnar, head of the Music Department has asked that all girls interested in violin lessons see him immediately.

The instruments will be furnished by the school and have to be ordered as soon as possible.

THE NICKNAME CONFUSION

Last week's nickname turmoil was a good example of often resulting confusion from unauthorized action by the proper authorities. Finally, however, the matter was cleared up by a meeting of the A. A. Council; it was decided that no girls' nickname would be sought but gave permission for the men's committee of the council to function freely in a selection of a nickname for the men's athletic teams if so desired by the men. Proper authorities—a little element which holds so much meaning.

CAGER'S SEASON TICKETS DIRT CHEAP

This first year, the men's athletic committee of the A. A. Council has decided to sell their season basketball tickets very cheaply in order to induce a regular attendance and a spirited backing from as many students and town folk as possibly. There will be at least five home games and the tickets are only 50c and $1.00 for students and others, respectively—not a bad deal do you think? The team doesn't pretend to be anything resembling professionals but they do earnestly hope that their untiring efforts will result in some fun and worthwhile excitement for Longwood.

HOOPSTERS TO SCRIMMAGE T. T. ONCE MORE

Thursday night the men's basketball team will scrimmage once again with the Farmville Town Team at 7:15 p. m., in the college gym. The gym will be open to all who wish to watch the performance but let it be reminded that it will not be a competitive contest but a pre-arranged practice for the purpose of ironing out pre-season drill difficulties in preparation for the on-coming basketball slates.

The women of the Athletic Association Council would like publicy to welcome a committee of men students to the council. The council is now composed of officers and sport managers of both men and women's activities.

Ed Parks has been elected the chairman of the men's athletic committee. Ed hails from Tangier Island. He attended the Tangier high school, and before coming to Longwood, served in the Army. Ed started his career here this summer.

Our hockey team will travel to Roanoke College this Friday to participate in a game there. We hope to have good news for you next Wednesday night concerning the outcome.

Students Choose 'Pioneers' As Name Of Men's Varsity

Edward Parks, chairman of the men's committee of the Athletic Association, announced today that the committee chose "The Longwood Pioneers" as the official sport nickname for the men's athletic teams at Longwood. The choice was selected from over 300 suggestions submitted by both the women and men alike. The winning suggestion was offered by an unknown girl student.

Monday night the combined council of the athletic association (boys and girls) granted that the men's committee could function freely in the selection of a sport nickname for the men's athletic teams, but that there would be no nicknames proposed for the women's athletic teams.

Parks also released the selection of new men on the men's athletic committee. The new appointees are Frank Vaughn and Jack Heigel.

Annual Song Contest To Be Held Nov. 18

The annual song contest will be held November 18th., in the Main "rec" from 7:00 p. m. to 8:00 p. m. Each class will present a song at this time, to be judged on originality and the way in which they are presented.

"The House of Quality"

They Still Need You . . .

"They Still Need You," this is the theme of the 1949-50 World Student Service Fund campaign which opens on our campus next Monday.

The students and professors in the colleges and universities abroad have their only hope of aid in the World Student Relief organization of which the WSSF is a part. These students in countries rent asunder by the recent war, are the people who will, with you, determine tomorrow's world. They are the group marked for the same role in their countries' future as you are in yours.

Two serious problems affect the life of every university student abroad: the acute shortage of books and general equipment and the lack of proper food, clothing and medical care. At a college in Greece over 1,000 students are competing for the two to five copies of each textbook. In Europe the majority of students are suffering from tuberculosis.

Without health and energy the student cannot concentrate on his work. Without books he cannot learn.

Through WSSF rest centers for students, student sanatoria for tubercular and pre-tubercular students, community centers and self-help hostels have been established; educational supplies, emergency food and emergency clothing have been supplied; but more is still needed.

The education of these students is important to the whole world. They are the future leaders of their countries. If they are ill-trained, poorly informed, their leadership will inevitably hinder world progress, understanding, and peace.

WSSF's goal for 1949-50 is $600,000; of this sum Longwood students and faculty are asked to contribute only $500. This is very little to give to secure, or to help to secure, peace in the world.

They still need us, but we still need them, also. Knowledge is the most international of commodities, but also among the most perishable. Knowledge, above all else, is needed in the world today to insure a common ground, a common hope, a common striving in every nation. You can keep knowledge alive today—it may help to keep you alive tomorrow.

A Satisfactory Solution . . .

Much indignation was aroused several weeks ago when it was rumored that the administration was planning to hand down a curfew ruling governing students on week end visits out of town. However, in true rumor tradition, this did not prove a reality. This week the front page of the Rotunda features a "Code of Week-end Ethics" formulated by the Women's Student Government Association. With the publication of this code we are happy to admit that our former dissatisfaction was unfounded, and students should now give the code, as outlined by their representatives, serious and conscientious observance.

It is a regrettable fact that in the past a small minority of students have placed the good name of both their fellow students and the College in jeopardy by their thoughtless conduct while away from the confines of the dormitory. Because of the liberal social regulations here, the conduct of this indiscreet few has posed a very real problem. We are glad to note now that the Women's Student Government Association has taken the first step toward the solution of that problem in an eminently satisfactory manner. The remainder of the solution depends entirely on the student body. The practicability of this measure can readily be seen by all. By supporting it wholeheartedly the student body will demonstrate its ability to continue the privilege of self-government in a wise and satisfactory manner.

The Time Has Come . . .

Comes time for the inevitable protestations of student conduct in assembly. It isn't easy for students to criticize their fellows' behavior, but when that behavior becomes so thoughtless that the reputation of the entire student body is placed in jeopardy, silence remains impossible.

Probably those who have been conscientious enough to read this far are not guilty of the misdemeanor here cited. However each individual student should consider it his personal responsibility to see that his peers do not damage the name of Longwood by demonstrating such discourtesy as has been painfully in evidence during the last several assembly periods. Reading, whispering, sewing and other inappropriate diversions on the part of a large percentage of the student body during assembly clearly indicate to the speaker and others on the platform that members of the Longwood student body are poorly grounded in common decency.

Yet many students would protest this assumption on grounds that the speaker read his paper or otherwise proved unworthy of attention. Only a few moments' consideration will demonstrate, however, the invalidity of this argument in the light of the speaker's position and the reputation of a student body which is assumed to be adult in its behavior. The majority of assembly speakers who are the objects of such flagrant abuse are never given the chance to interest their audience. It is only to see that the Assembly Committee can not practically guarantee an enthralling program every week. But students inflict on themselves a double denial when they refuse to get the maximum benefit from the weekly assembly program and when they cause visitors to carry away bad reports of the Longwood student body.

Students are quick to show respect for their Alma Mater by standing until the last chord of the song has sounded, but they deny that respect at the same time by their childish assembly behavior. Surely this is a contradictory situation, and it is to be hoped that students will not continue to do themselves this injustice.

Letters To Editor

Dear Editor,

On behalf of the cousin of the late Grace E. Mix, I should like to thank the faculty and students of Longwood College for their many kindnesses to Miss Mix during her recent illness.

The flowers and many cards touched her greatly—as well as the general concern for her expressed by the College which had always been the center of her interest and affection.

Sincerely yours,
Mrs. Raymond W. Lewis

Pedro's Pocket

By Jean Turner

It's evident that Pedro has taken quite an optomistic view of coming holidays. In yesterday's interview that was all he would talk about. Just think! Only two weeks from today we go home for Thanksgiving. When you leave in the middle of the week it always seems to be sooner than waiting for a week end. After Thanksgiving it's only three weeks until Christmas and when you say three weeks fast, it doesn't sound long at all. Christmas—now that's a nice holiday—that's the time when we have two weeks holiday.

It is Pedro's understanding that quite a few girls went away for the week end—Congratulations!

Pedro is conducting another contest. This time the prize goes to the person telling him the saddest story. He has a collection of these so called "tough stories". He also thinks there are certain measures that should be taken to console the bearer of these trials.

We hate to run the subject in the ground, but one friend of Pedro's is having a particularly hard time—two dead goldfish in two weeks! Somebody ought to notify the S.P.C.A.

Pedro begged the editor of this publication to let him off this week. It was such a trying week end. He went to the VPI vs W. & L. game—not knowing whose side to be on when he arrived, he finally decided on W & L since they had won more games than VPI recently (well, who hasn't?) and was completely frustrated by the outcome. Such is life, Pedro, you can't win everytime, just ask Tech.

Clanging of Alarm Routs Sleepy LC'ers From Dreams

By Joanne Steck

E-rr-rr clang, clang, clang! "Ye gads, another fire drill. . .Hey, Judy, wake up. . .Where's my towel? Oh, gosh! Have you seen my raincoat? Put on the light. Let's go!"

We of Longwood are fast becoming experts in the art of sleepwalking. When the alarm shrieks in the dead of the night, we automatically reach for our "presence of mind."

Some of us are rudely awakened from pleasant dreams. It is overheard at breakfast the next morning that one of us was horribly disappointed at the termination of her dream. Our friend was just about to be subjected to an interesting experience when suddenly the dream was ended by the fire alarm. The poor girl didn't sleep the rest of the night because of her disappointment.

A girl we know has changed her entire "altitude" concerning fire drills, since the Great Blaze of '49, in which White House was razed. At the sound of the alarm, this charcter used to hide in the bath tub; but now she goes tearing down the hall like '90 peering under the beds, looking in the closets and behind the curtains, dragging people out left and right!

Even though we may grumble a great deal about fire drills, we know that there is good reason for our having them. Habits—good or bad—are being formed every time the siren sounds. The girl who calmly turns on the light, quickly donning her robe, book, and towel, then walking out in an orderly fashion—this girl is likely to follow the same pattern in case of emergency. If everybody abides by the rules, the buildings can be cleared in less than five minutes; so when that bell starts clanging, bid a firm, if reluctant, adieu to sweet slumberland romance, for this may be the real thing!

Church Activities

Plan Conference at Roslyn

Longwood and Hampden Sydney Westminister Fellowship members will attend a conference at Roslyn, an Episcopal estate on the James river outside of Richmond, this week end.

Frances Thomas, Betsy Phillips, Roberta Browning, Lucy Ann Edmonds, and Martha Alice Wilson will attend the conference from Longwood. Those attending from Hampden Sydney are Charles Talley, Charles Grissett, and Gene Randolph.

Wesley Foundation Choir

Miss Marion Hallock, Wesley Foundation director, recently issued a questionnaire to all Methodist students asking for their cooperation or active participation in the formation of a Wesley Foundation choir.

Such a choir would participate in the Wesley Foundation programs, and also sing in their robes for some of the Wesley Foundation services, according to Miss Hallock. In particular, a "Sermon in Song" is being planned.

Miss Hallock announced that a minister of music, Mrs. Herrington from Yonkers, New York, has offered to work with the Wesley Foundation group. Mrs. Herrington has just completed her work toward a degree of Master of Sacred Music at Union Theological Seminary in New York City.

Dr. Molnar To Speak

Dr. John W. Molnar will speak to the Canterbury Club on "Church Music" at the November 13 meeting in the Episcopal rectory.

After the program, which will begin at 8 p. m. the Club will hold their usual social hour.

IV Leadership Conference

An Intervarsity Leadership conference was held October 30 at Montreat, North Carolina. Among the Longwood students attending the conference were Annie Swann and Peggy Dee Hoover.

Ten southern colleges and universities were represented at this conference including VPI, the University of Virginia, Georgia Tech, the University of Tennessee, Davidson College, and Columbia University. Charles Troutman, associate general secretary of the Intervarsity was the main speaker for the occasion.

BSU Conference

Fifteen BSU girls journeyed to Norfolk last week end to attend a state conference at Park Place Baptist Church. Two hundred and ninety eight students from Virginia colleges and universities attended. Discussions and lectures during this statewide conference centered around the theme "Because Christ Loved."

Parry Opens Contest

Radio station WSVS will award twelve new recordings as a prize to the Longwood College student submitting the best idea for a College program, Eddie Parry of WSVS recently announced.

All suggestions should be given to Jackie Eagle, editor-in-chief of the Rotunda, or to anyone on the staff before the November 19 deadline.

The winning student has his choice of records from a wide selection at station WSVS.

Social Notes

Among those who left the campus last week end were Pete Peters, Martha Kitchen, Jenny Powell and Liz Leslie, who visited friends in Richmond.

Jackie Moody, Suzie Bowie, Robbie Cromar, and Jane Williams attended the William and Mary vs North Carolina game in Williamsburg. Others who were off to see the football games were Lee Wood, Pat Lee, Marian Beckner, Emma Harris and Midge Woods who attended the VPI vs W.&L. game in Lynchburg. Helen Kaknis, Marjorie Traylor, Joanne Yow and Nancy Henderson were also among the spectators of the game in Lynchburg.

Harvey White, a student at the University of Virginia, spent the week end here visiting Frankie Dodson. Ed Carson of Danville was the guest of Ann Lynch. Bill Gallalee has been spending the past few days visiting Betty Ferguson.

Engagements Announced

Peggy Hughes has joined the ranks of those engaged to be married. She received a ring from Lowell Compton of Richlands last week.

Sarah Ann Jones has accepted a pin from Heath Light, who is a member of Sigmi Chi fraternity at Hampden-Sydney.

LC Choir, H-S Glee Club To Give Broadcast Dec. 4

To Present Program In Richmond Church

The Longwood College Choir and Madrigal Singers and the Hampden-Sydney Glee Club will present a program of Christmas music from the Grace Convenant Presbyterian Church in Richmond, December 4. The program will be broadcast on WLEE at 8:00 Sunday night.

The combined Glee Club and Choir will open the program with two selections; "Clear and Calm was That Holy Night" by Nikolsky and "Hail! Mary" by Dawson.

The Longwood Choir will then present a program including "Ave Verum" by Depres, "What Can This Mean?" by Staley, "A Slumber Song of the Madonna" by Head and "Jesu Bambino" by Yon.

Following this selection by the Choir, the Hampden-Sydney Glee Club will sing "Cherubim Song" by Bortneanski, "The Creation" by Richter, "Angels We Have Heard on High", which is a native French canon, "Break Forth, O Beauteous Heavenly Lights" by Bach and "Carol of the Russian Children".

The Madrigal Singers from Longwood will then present "The Slumber Song of the Infant Jesus" by Gaevert, "Hearken Every True Believer" by Bressau and "Pat-a-pan" which is a Burgundian carol.

The program will close with four selections by the combined choir and glee club. They will sing "In Excelsis Gloria" by Luvaas, "And the Glory of the Lord" ("Messiah") by Handel, "De New Born Baby" arranged by Cain, and "A Merry Christmas" by Worrell.

The two groups will be entertained before the concert by a supper given by the members of the Grace Covenant Church.

WSSF Sponsors Assembly Speaker

Mr. John C. Gleason, regional secretary of the World Student Service Fund, will speak to the student body at the regular assembly tomorrow on the topic "They Still Need You", Barbara Grizzard, student chairman of the College WSSF drive announced today.

Mr. Gleason, who is from Atlanta, Georgia, will come to this campus from the University of Kentucky where he will speak on the same topic.

Goal $500

The goal for the campus WSSF drive, which began Monday and ends Friday, has been set at $500. Tabulation of the contributions by classes will be posted on the bulletin board in the West wing.

Students will canvass the halls for contributions and there will also be receptacles in the halls for student and faculty contributions.

Only Student Relief

"The WSSF is the only national organization pledged to give aid to the students and professors in the colleges and universities in the war-torn countries overseas regardless of race, color, or creed," said Barbara.

"The students in these countries look to us for the things they cannot possibly produce themselves. They need things like X-ray

NOTICE

The next issue of the Rotunda will be published on December 7.

There will be a meeting of the entire Rotunda staff tonight immediately after prayers in the publication office. It is a very important meeting and attendance of the entire editorial staff is important.

Group Heads Will Meet To Establish Presidents Body

Wright Will Head Regulating Body

Heads of the major campus organizations met with Dean Ruth Gleaves Monday night to form a Presidents' Council. The purpose of the council will be to effect better coordination between the organizations and the students.

Jackie Wright, president of the House Council, was selected to head the Council, and Dolores Duncan, president of the Y.W.C.A. was chosen to serve as secretary. Other members of the Council include Lizzie Bragg, president of the Women's Student Government Association; Norma Roady, president of the senior class; Betty Ferguson, president of the Pan Hellenic Council; Calvin Hatcher, president of the Men's Student Government Association.

Ray Phillips, president of the Athletic Association; Betsy Gravely, president of the junior class; Jackie Jardine, president of the sophomore class, will also serve on the Council.

Miss Gleaves expressed the hope that, through the Council, organization meetings will be regulated and called meetings will be eliminated.

The Presidents' Council is scheduled to meet monthly one week prior to class meetings.

Joseph F. Bailey, Longwood Foreman, Dies At Hospital

Mr. Joseph F. Bailey died Monday, November 14, at 5 a. m. in the Southside Community Hospital after an illness of only a few hours.

Mr. Bailey has been associated with Longwood College for a number of years, and for the last few years he was foreman of the carpenter shop.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Zelma Anson Bailey, of Pamplin; one son, Boyd Anson Bailey, of Minneapolis, Minn.; three brothers, Wilbern Bailey, of Harrisonburg, John Bailey, of Clarksville, Md., and Luther Bailey.

Funeral services will be held at the Olive Branch Methodist Church at an hour to be announced, with interment in the Prospect Cemetery.

Longwood Annual Takes 3rd Place In VIPA Contest At Fall Meeting

5 LC Journalists Attend Convention At Fredericksburg

The Longwood yearbook, the Virginian, received an award of honorable mention at the fall convention of the Virginia Intercollegiate Press Association held at Mary Washington College last week end.

Five members of the Longwood publication staffs attended the convention. Representing the Rotunda was Jackie Eagle, editor-in-chief, while the Virginian had as its representative Joyce Webb, editor-in-chief, and Helen Kakinis, business manager. The Colonnade was represented by Anne Langbien, editor-in-chief, and Polly Nasser, business manager.

The announcement of winners in the three separate fields of college journalism was the culminating event of the convention. Washington and Lee University and the University of Richmond monopolized the winners, each of which received a silver cup. Runners-up were awarded certificates. The contest results were:

Newspapers—Richmond Collegian, University of Richmond, first; the Flat Hat, William and Mary, second; the Ring-Tum Phi, Washington and Lee, honorable mention.

Other Winners

Magazines—the Southern Collegian, Washington and Lee, first; the Messenger, University of Richmond, second; the Engineer, Virginia Tech, and the Miscellany, Mary Baldwin College, honorable mention.

Year book—the Calyx, Washington and Lee, first; the Rawenoch, Roanoke College, second; the Virginian, Longwood Colege, honorable mention.

Editor Speaks

Mr. Virginius Dabney, editor of the Richmond Times Dispatch, spoke to the assembled convention delegates at a banquet held Friday night.

Panel discussions in the different phases of collegiate journalism were held Saturday morning. Mr. John E. Clark of the John & Oiller Engraving Co., Baltimore, Maryland, led the discussion on yearbooks while Mr. William S. Lacey, Jr., editor of the Commonwealth, and Mr. Ben B. Johnson, editor of the Richmond Times Dispatch Sunday magazine, led the discussion on magazines. Mr. Charles S. Rowe and Mr. Joe Rowe, III, of the Fredericksburg, Free Lance Star, led the discussion

Colonnade Announces Jeffreys Winner of Short Story Contest

43 To Serve As Dramatic Apprentices

Ferguson Outlines Plans For the Year

Forty-three students signed up to serve apprenticeship in the various departments of the Dramatic Club at a meeting held last night in the auditorium.

Betty Ferguson, president of the Club, spoke to the group about the achievements thus far and the goals the organization has set for this year. Among the projects she listed for the Club, were to help with College, high school, and community productions, and to present several apprentice plays during the year at regular club meetings. Betty also brought out the fact that opportunities will be open to the Club members this year to gain experience in radio work.

Mrs. Mildred Davis, of the faculty advisory board, explained the duties and activities of this board in counselling the Club and the executive board which is made up of the officers and department heads.

The heads of the departments, acting, staging, lighting, properties, costuming, and make-up, then explained the activities of each department, and outlined the topics that would be discussed throughout the year in the departmental meetings.

Following refreshments, new students and old members of the club signed up for the department in which they wished to work this term.

Library Assistants Will Present Skit On WFLO Program

The student assistants of the College library will present a skit on the "Voice of Longwood" program this Thursday over WFLO. The setting of the skit will be the library. The skit will demonstrate the activities of the assistants.

Bobby Howard, Jean Jinnett, Les Smallwood and Louise Redd are the college students who will participate in the program. Also participating will be Ann Brierly, a senior from Farmville High School, Steve Martin, a member of the eigth grade of the training school, and Mrs. Mary Lou Pickard.

Orchesis To Give Demonstration On Tour Nov. 17

Will Attend 3 Local High Schools

Orchesis, the local dance group, will begin a "barnstorming tour" on November 17. During this trip, which is a new phase of the group's activities, the club will perform at the Amelia, Blackstone and Crewe high schools in preparation for a Dance Day to be held at the College on December 8.

Among the twelve Orchesis members who will make up the touring group this year will be June Banks, Jean Ridenour, Hilda Edwards, Ann Nock, Betty McCree, Norma Roady, Marion Becknor, Joan Missimer, Ray Phillips, Patsy Ritter, Edith Duma and Betty House.

The program to be presented at each school will center around the basic techniques, which are peculiar to modern dance such as bounces and stretches which condition the body, or parts of it; development of these techniques and improvisation on certain of these as they lead into dance composition. Such dances will be demonstrated by the group.

Most of the compositions are group numbers in which a soloist is featured as part of the whole dance. It is the policy of the organization as a rule to diminish the role of the soloist and stress group dancing as a whole "Song of the Sea" (Lloyd) is a group composition growing out of body swings into work-like movements from musical phrasing. This dance will feature Norma Roady, Patsy Ritter, Marion Becknor, Ray Phillips, Hilda Edwards and Edith Dumas.

"Work All Day" (a Johnson arrangement) is a group spiritual of the Ring Shout type. This composition will be demonstrated by two dancers, Ann Nock and Patsy Ritter with a choral accomplishment.

"Pickin' " (a Curtis-Burton arrangement) also a work song, is a group number in the jazz idom, featuring Hilda Edwards and Betty McCree. "Walkin' Around Heaven" (Lloyd), a Sarabande floor pattern, which uses the walk, features Ann Nock, Edith Duma, Hilda Edwards, Joan Missimer and Jean Ridenour.

"Saturday Night" (Bowles) is a group number for four which exemplifies square dance as the mountaineer would express it when he is exposed to city life.

June Banks, the accompanist, and Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, instructor of modern dance and faculty sponsor and director of the Orchesis, will accompany the group.

AA Council Sponsors Juke Box Dance Sat.

A juke box dance sponsored by the Athletic Association Council will be given in the Main recreation hall Saturday night from 8 to 11:45 p. m.

"Since this dance is right before Thanksgiving holidays begin and comparably few students will be leaving campus for the week end, we are anticipating a large attendance at the dance," Ray Phillips, president of the A.A. Council, stated. "For the first time this year, there will be a floor committee circulating among the crowd to see that everyone has a good time."

Admission to the dance will be ten cents per person.

Jones Receives 2nd Place Honors

Nancy Jeffreys, sophomore transfer from Chase City, won first prize in the annual Colonnade Short Story Contest, for her story "O'Hara", Maria Jackson, short story editor for the Colonnade announced today. The winning story was selected by a committee of faculty and student judges.

Second prize was won by Charlotte K. Jones from Salem for "Miss-steak of My Life." According to Maria, this story will appear in the Colonnade probably under a new title. Nancy Jeffreys also received third prize for "The Notion."

The three prize winning short stories will be featured in the first three issues of the Colonnade during this session.

Editor Previews Colonnade

The first prize winner in the short story contest will be featured in the first issue of the Colonnade which will be distributed to the students next week, Anne Langbien, announced today.

In addition to this story the first issue of the Colonnade will include among its many features an article by Mlle. Suzanne Girard entitled "Come Away With Me". Mlle. Girard's article tells of the schools and holidays in France, and is most informative as well as interesting, added Anne.

A cleverly written essay "Of Statues and Joan" by Nancy Jefferies will also appear in this issue, said Anne, and in addition, many cartons by Joan Pritchett have been used to liven up the magazine.

Frosh Elect Commission

Last week the freshman class elected 12 girls to Freshman Commission.

The 1949-'50 Commission includes Kitty Hamlet, Margaret Taylor, Anne Jones, Roberta Browning, Jo Ann Steck, Anne Murphy, and Frances Howell.

Jane Lively, Sarah Anne Jones, Nell Bradshaw, Betsy Hankins, and "Sis" Burton were also elected. The president of the freshman class, Betty Abbitt, is automatically a member of the Commission.

Freshman Commission is a coordinating organization between the class and the YWCA.

H20 Club Schedules Christmas Pageant For Next Month

The annual Christmas water pageant, sponsored by the H2O Club, has been tentatively set for December 15. At that time two performances will be given, the first from 7 to 8 p. m. and the second from 10 to 11 p. m.

Mary Miller and Jeanne Gilman have been appointed co-chairman of the pageant. Helen Agnew and Liz Leslie will be in charge of music while Pat Paddison and Jean Turner supervise the props.

In charge of lights and ligting effects are Kitty Carmichael and Katherine Buck. Ann Kemp and Marjorie Boswick are in charge of costumes.

Admission for students and faculty alike will be fifteen cents. Seats will be reserved for the faculty at one of the performances.

Student Who Puts Off 'Till 'Tomorrow' Dreads Effect of Estimates of Parents

By Mary Crowgey

The dreaded day when grade estimates arrive fast approaches. What to do! What CAN you do? Darn, it's too late to do anything about them now!

You keep thinking about that little teacher who ipopped the music test, without a Word of warning. Oh well, you have broken off relations with Him. (Note to Dr. Molnar)

'Tis true you kept putting everything off until "tomorrow". And then tomorrow finally caught up with you. It always does! It's oh-so-hard to think about studies if there's anything else at all to think about! Then when there isn't anything else to think about, studying comes even harder.

HOW can they do this? Little notes such as -ugh- these can bring to almost anybody only misery, frustration, and despair. Think of the lasting psychological effect they can have on a young girl!

You keep wondering how the family is going to take it. Just close your eyes and you can see them now, seated at the dinner table. That little eager-beaver brother of yours is bringing in the mail, reading it aloud. As your father digests the information concerning your grades, there is a "ghastly" expression upon his face; and as he passes completely out, his groaning is terrible to hear!

When you're around to threaten and cajole him, your little brother is usually O.K.; but now that you are gone, look out! Belonging to the school of psychology that believes in the expression of thoughts, that kid just has to put in his two cents' worth at all times. Perhaps on this occasion, however, a miracle will happen and he'll keep quiet.

By now, your mother, ever the calm, cool, and collected member of the family, has revived your father. You know exactly what he is going to say. "Our daughter is just playing around at College."

After that "hallucination of the imagination", perhaps you'll do your homework when it's assigned; and maybe you'll start paying attention in class, rather than sitting on the back row, yawning and gazing into space outside the window. Instead of conjuring-up wild day dreams as you stare at the open book, you might try finding out what the printed pages contain. As for week ends, you were planning to spend them at Longwood College anyway.

Many Flies....

Since the beginning of hockey season this year, there have been many complaints that the Longwood varsity hockey team scarcely justifies its existence in terms of the number of games it plays. This complaint in turn has provoked the age-old gripe that the intercollegiate sports program at this college is lacking in many respects. These are valid grievances, but in voicing them, student critics of the Longwood athletic program often fail to take into consideration several vital factors limiting this program's breadth.

The first consideration in the promotion of said program harks back to the inevitable fly in every ointment these days—finance. The Longwood student body is not and probably never will be a large one, and the Commonwealth prides itself on providing education at a minimum cost to the individual. In view of this, it is easy to see that an athletic program supported by student fees can never be an extensive one here unless students pay a considerable amount outside regular college fees. Most of the other existing sources of financial support seem to have already been tapped. The situation boils down then into a sports program that offers the greatest benefit to the greatest number at a minimum financial cost — intramural athletics, in other words. There is little cause for criticism of the Longwood intramural athletics. All are agreed that the local intramural activities satisfy the demands of both participant and spectator.

Students often do not realize the great expense and the extensive facilities demanded by intercollegiate competition. The numerous costs involved in team trips preclude many contests away from the home field. The existing athletic facilities, already taxed since the inclusion of men in the Longwood student body, would have to be greatly increased to accommodate a broader varsity program, unless intramural athletics were eliminated here. It's a surety, though, that the latter alternative would be totally unacceptable and unthinkable to most Longwood students and educators.

The Athletic Association has always scheduled an adequate number of contests in the major Longwood varsity, sport basketball. Students spectators have objected, however, to out-of-state games. More interest and enthusiasm, they feel, could be aroused by scheduling more games with women's teams from othe Virginia colleges. Considering the factors already mentioned, this seems to be the only addition that could be asked for in this phase of Longwood intercollegiate program.

Only one intercollegiate hockey game has been played this year, and this seems likely to remain the one event of the 1949 hockey season at Longwood. Of the three other meetings originally listed for this fall, one was rained out, and the others had to be cancelled because of unavaidible circumstances. The sad state of this hockey season makes studdents wonder if the time and effort spent on varsity hockey was worthwhile. Since our intercollegiate athletic program must necessarily be limited, perhaps it might be better to drop varsity hockey for the present and concentrate on a bigger and better basketball season.

Don't Kill Yourself....

One week from today Longwood students along with students of the majority of colleges and universities throughout the United States will be headed home for Thanksgiving.

As is usual during any holiday, the traffic on the highways and byways of the nation will be greatly increased. Unfortunately, this will be accompanied by an increase in motor vehicle fatalities and injuries. Approximately one-fourth of the drivers involved in these accidents will be between 18 and 24 years of age, if the figures of the last several years are repeated.

Most of the students at Longwood are in this age group. Thanksgiving as the name implies, is a time for giving thanks, not for slaughter. It is up to you, as the driver or perhaps as the person sitting next to the driver, in a holiday-directed car to do your part in preventing needless accidents.

Obeying the rules of good driving is not difficult, paying the price for reckless driving may be exceedingly so. Keeping within the speed limits, obeying the traffic regulations and signs, remembering that alcohol and gasoline do not mix, making sure that the car is in perfect mechanical condition—these are important. They may mean the difference between life and death for you.

If murder or suicide is your intention, forget that you read this, if not, let's be careful. Cars can't think—you have to do the thinking for them.

OUR WORLD

By Nellie Hart

Last week was the thirty-second anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution in Russia. The downfall of the czar was the first step taken by the people to promote their own ideas and interests. Communism took a firm hold, not only in their government, but also in their thinking.

The basis for their actions may in some sense be derived from the fact that Russia had always desired and needed desperately an outlet to the sea. One such singular idea may lead to disagreements and such was the case of Russia. Spreading her wings into Nationalistic China, Russia strove for conquest. Today, official reports confirm her success. Pessimistic thoughts rule the atmosphere around Chungking, the nationalistic capital. Some have even expressed their doubt as to whether Chungking will be able to withstand the invaders until the new year.

During their 32 years in power, the Communists have secured and maintained a unity which is very similar to the Nazi Regime in Germany.

Concerning the question of the atomic bomb, Russia announced publicly that, although she has the formula, she does not want war and is doing everything in her power to prevent it. Meanwhile the United Nations has put the atomic issue back in the open.

Pedro's Pocket

By Jean Turner

If any of you have been looking for Pedro recently you will most likely find him in the library or perhaps interviewing some slang-wise Longwoodite. He has found it increasingly difficult to keep up with the current expressions on said campus. From this problem grew the desire to become famous. Pedro is now compiling information for a Dictionary of Longwood Terminology and Current Punch Lines.

Pedro astounded us with his lavish explanations. Take the expression "Don't get all shook up." for instance. According to Pedro, "Shook up" is synonymous with "Broke up" and was shortened still more. Now the expression is "Don't get." accompanied by violent shaking of the arms and hands. "Very expressive," said Pedro.

Pedro was puzzled for weeks over one of the most popular and widely used greetings on campus. For the life of him he could get no connection for "Yo!" — just plain and unadulterated, "Yo!" He now realizes the "Yo!" can be a variety of greetings ranging from sheer bliss to the depths of depression. By the inflection of the voice one can give it any number of meanings.

There are a few among the Longwood ranks who once backed up statements of their own or of others with "I certify." This has long since been shortened to "I certi.' or if put as a question, "Certi?" "This is comparable to, and just as good as "Honest Injun.", if any of you can remember that far back,' remarked Pedro.

Pedro's other subject, Current Punch Lines, was picked because often in a crowd someone will, instead of telling the entire joke, merely make recitation of the punch line which ordinarily brings forth gales of laughter from all who are familiar with said joke. The majority of these punch lines are impeccable; however, the joke recalled may not be, so Pedro may have a little difficulty in getting this section of his book published.

A good number of you might find amusement in the lines "Get the troops and we'll make the rounds again," or "I can't afford to lose another date tonight!" which are only two of the many Pedro has already assembled. If they're not funny to you, kid, you can come cry on my shoulder.

Right here and now we'd better confess—we expect Pedro's book to be a best seller.

Alumnae News

The Longwood Alumnae Chapter of Richmond gave a tea for the delegates to the Virginia Education Association's 43rd annual convention in the Monroe Room of the Hotel John Marshall last week.

Washington Alumnae

A large group of Washington Alumnae met for tea and to hear talks on alumnae work by Miss Mary Clay Hiner and Mrs. Ruth Coyner Sunday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Scotia Starke Haggerty. Miss Emily Johnson, the new president of the Washington Chapter presided.

Y Line

The World Student Service Fund drive which began Monday of this week, has been publicized in the paper and throughout the college by posters, but have you seriously thought over the purpose of this drive?

We sometimes take our school life for granted, and books are something we just carry around and grumble about. The education system is not like this all over the world, however. There are shortages of books, paper and other necessities of college life in many areas of the world. Do we really understand the desperate need of these students who are struggling in the face of such difficulties to attain a higher education?

Let's think this over and contribute as generously as possible to the WSSF fund. Let's help our fellow students.

Turkey Time

Campus Cogitations

"Why do you think students should contribute to WSSC?"

Lizzie Bragg: In order to promote better living and educational conditions among students all over the world, we should contribute to this most worthy cause.

"Clem" Allen: To bring about a closer relationship among all students of the world.

Phyl Cartwright: Only by doing our part to ascertain universal education, can we hope for universal understanding and progress.

Margie Hood: Education is a great thing. We who are more fortunate should do our part to bring it to the less fortunate.

Helen Holbrook: Because it is one of the most worthy causes we can contribute to.

Dot Wood: I think we should be willing to share our advantages with others, especially when ours are so great and theirs are so lacking.

Dot Cassada: I think it's our privilege to contribute to such a worthy cause.

Margaret Farmer: We are having the opportunity to become educated; we should help to give others that opportunity also.

Nancy Walker: We should contribute in order that all people can have equal opportunities in the world of today.

Pat Paddison: To give the kids in other countries half the chance we have in this education situation.

Nancy Henderson: It goes for a good cause.

Kim Coleman: How long does this drive last? At the present, I'm broke. But it is a wonderful thing!

Frances Thomas: It's a worthy cause.

Lois Browder: I think we should give so that the needy may have the same opportunity we have.

Nancy West: So we can all have the same educational opportunities.

Lelia Mae Ferrati: To help give some of the needy students the opportunity that we have.

Ann Neblett: I think we should give all people an equal chance to get an education.

Betty Barnes: I think it's fine because everybody should have a chance to get an education.

Branchy Fristae: I think that we should be willing to help those who don't have the opportunity that we have.

Millie Carter: To help give young people of other countries some of the opportunities that we so take for granted.

DR. A. C. FRASER AGREES TO HELP PIONEER CAGERS

The local basketball team got their biggest break of the season Saturday when it was announced that Dr. A. C. Faser, a renowned sportsman of Farmville, would help direct and coach the Longwood cagers this year. Despite his many other various community activities, Dr. Fraser will endeavor to find time to give the badly needed professional instruction that the Longwood hoopsters have lacked desperately. Unsurpisingly, he also coaches the Farmville Town Team basketball club, the team that the Pioneers face in their first home game December 3. He can't lose!

ALLEN'S PAST HOCKEY BRILLIANCE MATCHED BY LESSLIE

Any resemblance between Frances Allen, Longwood's past hockey stand out and All-District player of '48-'49, and Liz Lesslie, current replacement for Allen at center forward, is anything but coincidental. Lesslie masterfully accounted for both tallies aginst Roanoke last Friday as Longwood took a victory 2-0.

Only once did the Roanoke team advance the ball deep into Longwood territory to threaten, but Sue Webb, freshman goalie, put an end to any Roanoke hopes for a score by skillfully converting the climatic offensive drive into regular play for the Longwood eleven. Hats off to the entire hockey team for a job well done—a job that requires productive teamwork by every single woman on the squad.

CLASS OF '50 DEFENDS HOCKEY CHAMPIONSHIP

The class of '50 with almost every player back from last years championship team will be decidedly favored this year as the class hockey tournaments get underway. Their other half ,the class of '53, will be expected to give their usual respectable support to the red and white cause.

MEN ACQUIRE COLOR CUP—ENTER RUSH

When the color rush comes off Wednesday for the first time men will participate in the races; however, they will be in a class of their own. The men will be given a cup, and the races will be their first means by which the classes will fight for possession of the ribbon decked cup.

BORUM GIVES ALLEN STIFFER COURT COMPETITION

Clara Borum is getting used to the idea of facing Frances Allen over the nets—last summer she went down decisively in the finals to a highly perfected Allen game 6-1, 6-1. Last week in the current fall tournament the quarter-finals saw these two once again clash, this time Borum made it quite a different affair losing only after extending Allen seven undisputed games 6-4, 6-3. Borum is one of the most promising freshman on the courts.

Class Hockey Teams Elect '49 Captains

Ray Phillips, Nancye Gillie, Nancy Walker and Clara Borum were chosen last week to head the hockey teams of the senior, junior, sophomore and freshman classes respectively. The captains were elected by the teams of each class after hockey practice.

The turn out for hockey practices have been exceptionally good this year, and the teams are expected to give some exciting hockey games during the battle between the Red and Whites and Green and Whites.

Home Ec Teachers Join Discussion Group

Longwood student teachers in the home economics department and members of the College staff joined in a group discussion which took place at the semi-annual meeting of the Prince Edward, Cumberland, and Charlotte County Home Economic Teachers Thursday, November 10.

The group met with Miss Loula Connelly, District Supervisor of of Home Economics Education in the Department of Home Economics.

An informal tea hour was held after the discussion.

LC Hockey Team Downs Roanoke In Tight Game

Salem Field Scene Of 2-0 Victory

Longwood downed Roanoke College 2-0 in a tight game on the Salem field last Friday.

Only twice did Roanoke threaten by penetrating past the 25 yard line into Longwood territory.

Blackstone Contests Cancelled

The game tentatively scheduled with Blackstone has been called off. If further games are scheduled, they will be published in the Rotunda.

The coming week is one we've all been waiting and working for (getting in at least eight practices in hockey) so we can support our teams. May the best team win!

When we get back from Thanksgiving our direction turns toward other interests—basketball and volleyball. Again we urge you to get in your eight practices as soon as possible so you can get in some extra practice. Remember, practice makes perfect.

The men's season tickets are being sold on the halls—let's see some loyal support on the girls' part.

Another great event toward which we all look with anticipation is Color Rush. A lot of you have speed "you ain't even used yet" so we'll see you on the A.A.

Students To Have Birthday Dinner

The policy of having a monthly "birthday dinner" in the College dining hall for students will continue as a regular occasion this year, Dean Ruth Gleaves recently announced. The next "birthday dinner" will be combined with the regular Thanksgiving meal on November 18.

Dean Ruth Gleaves expressed satisfaction with the apparent success of the last Halloween "birthday dinner", stating that as often as possible the dinners would be held in conjunction with a holiday.

President To Speak To 'Old Boys' Club

President Dabney S. Lancaster will address the ninth annual meeting of the Episcopal High School Old Boys' Club at 7:15 p. m. Wednesday, November 16, at the Hotel Rueger in Richmond.

Dr. Lancaster, an Old Boy himself, will head the speakers' list which will include Mr. Richard P. Williams, headmaster of the school; Mr. C. C. Baldwin, director of alumni activities, and members of the faculty.

Mr. Baldwin will show movies of the alumni meeting last Spring and of several football games.

Professor At Convention

Dr. Marvin W. Schlegel, associate professor of history and social sciences, at Longwood College attended the fifteenth annual meeting of the Southern Historical Association in Williamsburg last Thursday through Saturday.

Dr. Francis Butler Simkins, formerly professor of history and social sciences at Longwood and now located at the University of Louisianna, also attended the meeting.

PIONEERS IMPROVE IN LATE T. T. SCRIMMAGE

After a slow first half, the Longwood Pioneers staged a successful comeback in the third and last quarters to come within a half dozen points of a "practice victory" over the comparable heavily experienced and reserved Town Team last Thursday night in the college gym. A previous encounter showed a final approximate deficit of some 20 odd points for the Pioneers, the last half of which the Pioneers garnered in only one dozen points.

In late practice sessions the nets have been encouragingly struck repeatedly by almost all members of the squad indicating a definite improvement throughout the past two weeks of practice. The success of the team will depend heavily on the extent to which the secondary strength develops.

Orchesis Opens Dance Day In Student Building Dec. 8

Delegates To Come From 9 Schools

The second annual Dance Day symposium sponsored by Orchesis, local dance group, will open tomorrow with registration at 8:45 a. m. in the Student building lounge.

According to Hilda Edwards, Orchesis president, emphasis will be placed not only on the modern dance, but also on square and social dancing for the benefit of the approximately 120 students who will attend the symposium from 9 high schools in this area.

To Present Demonstration

Orchesis, with the assistance of those students taking modern dance class work will present a demonstration of techniques to show the "natural way, the folk dance way, and the dance into creative way" to the assembled high school students at 11:15 in the College gymnasium.

Included in this demonstration will be the Varsovienne, a Scandinavian peasant dance adopted by social dance and now extremely popular in the Western states; the extreme of social dance in authentic or court style using the bow; sit and stylized walk in Pavane rhythm; the development of the run, the skip, and the leap.

The dance numbers which were taken on a tour of the local high schools by member of Orchesis are also to be included on this program.

Receive Instruction

Delegates from the 9 schools invited to the Dance Day symposium will be divided into two groups in relation to the dance instruction they have previously received. Students from Burkeville, Cumberland, Farmville, and Worsham will be given instruction in the creative aspects of modern dance. Arm and body techniques will be introduced to these students and they will attempt some creative work to the rhythm of spirituals and Christmas songs.

The instruction given this group is a continuation of materials and techniques taught last year at the first Dance Day.

Beginners Lesson

The students attending the symposium from the high schools in Amelia, Apomattox, Blackstone, Charlotte Court House, and Crewe will receive a typical beginners' lesson. In this lesson the tendency will be toward the creative through group response.

Square Dance

Senior physical education majors in the College will conduct a group lesson on square dance in the recreation hall with equal

President, Dean Visit High Schools

Representatives of the Longwood administration are currently visiting a number of Virginia high schools.

President Dabney S. Lancaster will deliver the dedication address at the formal opening of the new Culpeper high school next Wednesday, December 14. He has not yet announced his topic.

Dr. Lancaster will also represent the College at the Warren County high school "Career Day" in Front Royal Tuesday, December 13.

Tomorrow Dean William W. Savage will visit the Robert E. Lee high school in Staunton and the Wilson Memorial high school in Fishersville to interview prospective sudents. Dean Savage represented this institution today at the annual College Day program at Jefferson senior high school in Roanoke. He also visited the William Byrd high school near Roanoke today.

Auditorium Building, Addition To Annex Plans Are Released

The President's office has released the latest developments in the College construction plans which include the erection of the new auditorium and music building and the addition to Annex building.

According to Mrs. Mary Watkins, executive secretary, work will begin almost any day on the auditorium-music building. The bid of the John W. Daniel Company, of Danville, was within the state appropriation. As soon as the bid is formally accepted by the governor, the State Board of Education and the Budget Department and all contracts signed, excavation will begin.

Plans and specifications for the dormitory and office building to be erected on the site of the old auditorium are nearer completion. It is expected that work will begin on it early in the new year.

High School Girls Will Visit College

Twelve senior students from nearby high schools have been invited to spend this week end on the Longwood campus. These will be the first participants in a program being initiated by the College to enable high school seniors to become better acquainted with State institutions.

The guests of the College will come this week end from Appomattox, Charlotte Court House, and Victoria. They will stay in the dormitories where they will be entertained by student hostesses. Saturday night the group will attend the Senior Snow Ball. Miss Margaret S. Hall, home economics professor, will serve coffee at the home management house Sunday morning, December 11.

Staff members in charge of the program are Mrs. Mary Watkins, Dean Ruth Gleaves, and Miss Fern Staggs. Students wishing to volunteer for hostess duty this week end and on future occasions may see any of the above.

Pageant To Depict "Christmas Island"

"Christmas Island" will be the theme of the annual water pageant to be presented December 17 in the College pool Mary Miller and Jean Gilman, co-chairmen of the pageant announced today.

There will be two performances of the pageant which is sponsored annually by the H2O Club. Students are urged to attend the afternoon performance from 5 to 6 p. m. since the majority of the seats will be reserved for the faculty at the night performance from 7 to 8 p. m., Jean and Mary added.

LC, H-S C Choirs Will Give Annual Holiday Concert Sunday Evening

Group To Give Repeat Program Monday Night

The Longwood College Choir and the Hampden-Sydney Glee Club will present the annual Christmas concert in the dining hall here Sunday night, December 11, at 8:30. The concert will be repeated at Hampden-Sydney Monday night, December 12, at 8 in the College Chapel. Dr. John W. Molnar of the Longwood music faculty will be assisted by Mr. T. E. Crawley of Hampden-Sydney in the direction of the program.

Opening the program the combined choruses will offer "Clear and Calm Was That Holy Night" (Nikolsky), "In Excelsis Gloria" (Breton, arranged by Luvaas), and "And the Glory of the Lord" (Handel, The Messiah).

The next group of selections, presented by the Madrigal Singers, will include "The Slumber of the Infant Jesus" (Gnevert), "Hark, Now, O Shepherds" (Moravian, arranged by Luvaas), and "Pat-a-pan" (Burgundian, arranged by Luvaas).

The Hampden-Sydney Glee Club will sing "Adoramus Te, Christe" (Palestrina), "Lo, A Voice to Heaven Sounding" (Bortniaski), "Break Forth, O Beauteous, Heavenly Light" (Bach), "Angels O'er the Fields" (French, arranged by Davison), "Carol of the Russian Children" (arranged by Gaul), and "The Creation" (Richter).

The Longwood College Choir will follow with "Ave Verum" (DePres), "Slumber Song of the Madonna" (Head), "Jesu Bambino" (Yon), "Before the Paling of the Stars" (Kramer), and "What Can This Mean?" (Stanley).

Concluding the concert the 2 choirs in joint chorus will offer "Hail, Mary!" (Dawson), "A Merry Christmas" (Warner), and "Hallelujah Chorus" (Handel, The Messiah).

Accompanists for the program will be Puckett Asher of Longwood and Preston Sawyer of Hampden-Sydney College.

Roy Cole's Orchestra To Play For Annual Senior 'Snow Ball, Saturday Night, December 10th

Registration Will Begin December 12

Changes Slated For January 28

Students will register for courses for the second semester during the period from December 12 through December 16, Dean William W. Savage has announced.

According to Dean Savage those who fail to complete their registration during this period will register or complete their registration on Saturday, January 28. Corrections in schedules likewise will be made on that date.

A corrected copy of the schedule of classes for the second semester will be posted on the bulletin board across the hall from the office of the Registrar.

Uninterrupted Classes

Classes will not be interrupted for registration. Students are expected to take the steps outlined below during periods of the day when they do not have classes.

1. Go to the office of the Registrar and obtain a set of four class cards. (Do not detach these cards.)

2. Fill out the top card (student's copy) completely, showing number, hours, credits, room numbers, and last names of instructors.

3. See the instructors in their offices, have his name placed on their class rolls, and request that each instructor place his initials by his name on the student's copy of the card. Instructors will post on their office doors the hours that they will be available during the week to see students. They will not initial cards or place students' names on class rolls during class periods in which they are teaching.

4. Secure the approval of the schedule by the head of the department in which he is majoring or, in the case of fresh-

Italian Paintings To Be Exhibited In Browsing Room

Display Includes Timely Scenes

Italian Masters, an exhibit of paintings of Italian artists who worked during the period from 1266 to 1793, will be shown in the Browsing Room of the Library from December 9 through December 18.

This is the fourth exhibit that has been loaned to the library by the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts since September. There are 32 paintings in the exhibit, including many that are particularly interesting to see during the Christmas season. Journey of the Magi, painted by Sasetta; The Annunciation, by Fra Angelico; Madonna of the Goldfinch by Raphael Sanzio; and Virgin and Child by Carlo Crevelli, are included in this group. Other artists represented in the display are Giotto, Botticelli, Leonardo da Vinci, Titian, and Tintoretto.

Now on display in the library is an exhibit of aluminum crafts by Miss Bedford's art class. Aluminum etched trays, rings, pins and earrings are among the displayed articles. Members of the class who have Handicrafts on exhibit are Ann Kelly, Harriet Bowling, Frances Franklin, Nell Dalton, Marjorie Boswick, Mildred Carter, Edith Walker, Emma Mae Pittard, Polly Richardson, Charlotte Newell, Jane Smith, Elizabeth Buck, Hattie Swihart, T. M. Beckham and Norma Gladding.

Sophomores Elect Production Heads

Maria Jackson and Nancy Jefferies were elected co-chairmen for sophomore production at the last regular meeting of the sophomore class. The production is scheduled to take place January 13.

The co-chairmen, at a recent meeting, chose production committee heads. Theme, committee lists: Marion Beckner, Jean Ridenour, Ann Mosely, Sally Brickman, Jane Lee Kellog, Jackie Jardine, and Joan Pritchett; lighting, Betty Scott Borkey; costumes, Frances Franklin; and stage sets, Joan Pritchett.

In charge of props are Becky Mann and Sara Creger; songs, Barbara Hawkins; tickets, Edith Kennon and Martha Alice Wilson; publicity, Jo Orr and Mary Moore Carr; and make up, Frances Turner and Marjorie Traylor.

LC Hour To Feature Son Of Professor

This Thursday, the Longwood Hour will present an unrehearsed story told by a small boy to his mother. Edwin Phillips, five-year old son of Mrs. Josephine Phillips of the mathematics department, will tell, on the air, an impromptu story.

"Every night he tells me some fantastic story which is completely a product of his own imagination," said Mrs. Phillips. "I am hoping he will respond the same way over the radio."

Mrs. Phillips was asked to tell

Santa Will Visit Seniors At Dance

Roy Cole, his orchestra, and even Santa Claus himself will come to town amid snow flurries and white bedecked seniors Saturday night in the Longwood College gym to take part in the festivities at the Senior Snow Ball. The annual event which is the first formal affair of this season, will begin at 8 p. m. Helen Hardin and Helen Arrington, co-chairmen of the dance have announced.

Roy Cole and his ten piece orchestra will travel to Longwood from Chapel Hill, North Carolina, to set the musical stage for the seniors and their dates. George Demas will do the vocalizing for the band, Frances Dodson and Louise Redd, co-chairmen of the music committee said today.

Santa To Attend

Jane Smith and Ruth Hathaway, co-chairmen of the decoration committee, have predicted that mistletoe, snow flakes, and Santa's reindeer will provide a gala background for the ball. Santa too, is expected to drop in for a personal visit with the seniors. The theme of the Snow Ball and Christmas will be carried out throughout the dance.

To Lead Figure

Norma Roady, president of the senior class, with Jimmy Watkins, of V.P.I., and Patti Page, honorary senior classman, with Sam Bibee, of Lynchburg, will lead the figure. Harriet Ratchford and Peggy White, who are in charge of the figure, have intimated that something unique will be used this year as the figure theme. The theme will not be revealed until that night.

Tickets On Sale

Tickets for the dance are now on sale on second floor rotunda to the entire student body. Date tickets are selling for $2.40 and stag tickets are $1.80.

Other committees working on the dance are the publicity committee with Ann Kelly in charge, the floor committee headed by Judy Hughes, and the ticket committee with Lila Easly and Mary Watson as co-chairmen.

College Reaches Goal Of $500 For WSSF

The goal of $500 which was set for the Longwood College contributions to the 1949 World Student Service Fund campaign has been reached, Barbara Grizzard, student chairman of the drive on the Longwood campus announced today.

The money collected through the WSSF is used to aid the students and professors in the war devasted nations all over the world. Together with funds contributed by students of 18 other nations the funds from this campaign are administered by World Student Relief.

"On behalf of the WSSF and of the YMCA, which sponsored the campaign on the Longwood campus, I would like to thank the entire student body, the faculty and the administration for the cooperation which they have shown throughout the campaign," said Barbara.

Yule Spirit Seen Rising Steadily With Approach Of Holiday Festivities

by Mary Jo Smith

Everyone knows that Christmas is just around the corner (two weeks, that is) and excitement is rising by the minute as the day for vacation approaches. But wait! there'll be some excitement right here at Longwood too. That's right—the Christmas banquet on Wednesday, December 15, with everybody looking their prettiest and handsomest in formals, singing good old-fashioned carols and eating the yummiest food of the season!

For the first time in the history of the College, grace will be sung by a group of Madrigal singers. The music for the blessing was composed by Nancy Kibler, Jean Hogge and Puckett Asher. A new tradition at Longwood? Yes, 'cause everybody is going to join in learning the melody! Ye old Christmas spirit will fairly shout when the Madrigal singers lead us in the singing of Yuletide songs between courses.

After piying ourselves with delicious Christmas food, we'll busy ourselves with the usual festivities which include the traditional hanging of the green in the rotunda. The running cedar (it really isn't) with which we decorate the rails and coulmns are gathered by the girls of freshman and sophomore Commission. Brave, aren't they, to tramp the woods in the cold, cold, winter time? Then, of course, everyone will listen to the traditional telling of "The Other Wise Man."

Don't forget the Christmas Concert which will be given Sunday, December 11 and the traditional Christmas Pageant, December 13. For that matter, don't forget any of the other programs celebrating the best season of the year (longest vacation!).

Movies In Assembly

A program of 2 movies will be given at the regular assembly hour tomorrow in the main Recreation Hall. "The House I Live In", starring Frank Sinatra, and "Lincoln In The White House" will be shown.

Not Much Hope ....

Top question on campus this week is whether or not the State Board of Education will allow Longwood students to leave on Saturday, December 17, for the Christmas holiday instead of Tuesday, December 20 as scheduled. Not much hope for an early vacation is held, however, since the Board will not meet until December 15.

Making up the two days missed would entail returning to College on January 2, a national holiday this year and probably sacrificing a day of the Easter vacation. Calendar complications perclude making up the time at the end of the session. However, with Christmas jobs and preparations at stake, the first alternative is not distasteful to a great many students.

Returning from the Christmas vacation on a national holiday would cause no great concern. It amounts to about the same thing as returning on Sunday or Easter Monday as is usually done anyway. The large number of students concerned say that an early arrival home with the promise of a pre-holiday job would make it well worth the sacrifice. It is to be hoped that the Board will recognize the importance of this factor in their consideration of the question. The late date of the Board meeting, however, gives students little cause for optimism.

Weekending in the Library ....

Students have often wished for the privilege of utilizing College library facilities and atmosphere for weekend studying. Since the library is traditionally closed from Saturday afternoon at 5 until Monday morning, they have had to content themselves with merely dreaming of what they could accomplish "if".

If the poll appearing on this page may be considered a fair sample of the student body, a sufficiently large percentage of students wishes weekend access to the library to warrant some action toward that end. As the majority of those interviewed pointed out, a great deal more of value, be it recreational or otherwise, could be gotten from Sunday afternoons on campus if the library were open. Sunday at college, as any student with Monday classes well knows, must include more than religious services and relaxation, and prevailing dormitory conditions are not as a rule conducive to securing maximum profit from these free hours.

Opening the library on weekends would undoubtedly impose strains of finance and personnel on the administration. Certainly, though, these difficulties could be overcome if the project received sufficient student backing. Even a few extra hours in the library, with limited facilities offered, would prove a great boon to students.

After Christmas, holidays and dances will occur less frequently, and the bitter prospect of exams and term paper completion will demand more serious dedication to study. More and more students would then appreciate the opportunity to utilize weekend time in the library. This matter certainly deserves consideration, with subsequent petition to the administration, by Student Government, President's Council, or other appropriate student organization. To the serious student, the prospect of using the library on weekends is certainly a pleasant one. Steps should be taken now toward making that prospect a reality.

"Hackneyed," But ....

In 13 days we will be homeward bound, anticipating a "Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year". For two whole weeks we will savor that wonderful home cooking, forget about bed-check at 11 p. m. or 8:05's, play and party.

But holidays aren't always a time for merriment. Accidents "just seem to happen" at this particular time of year. Motor vehicle accidents on Christmas eve and Christmas day, and New Year's eve and New Year's day, are two to three times the annual daily average. And involved in 23 percent of all automobile accidents and in 27 per cent of the fatal accidents are those drivers between the ages of 18 and 24.

"Safe and sane" — it's a hackneyed phase but a very sensible one when it comes to driving, especially holiday driving. Many fatal highway accidents involve careless, reckless driving at top speeds. If you don't live to enjoy the minutes you save speeding, what's the use of saving them? Save yourself instead.

Let's be safe and enjoy our Merry Christmas and a very Happy New Year.

Correction

It was erroneously stated in this column in the last issue that the Longwood hockey team had scheduled 4 games for the 1949 season. Only 2 games, the Roanoke meeting and the Richmond tournament, were scheduled. The Blackstone games, were class games.

Letters To Editor

WHAT IS A SENIOR PERSONALITY?

Dear Editor,

What is a "Senior Personality?" This seems to be a very popular question humming around our campus today. The word "personality" has defeated its original deffinition in the "Senior Personality" section of our annual. It seems that the only requirement for nomination, regardless of real personal individuality, school spirit, class participation, and popularity, is to hold an office on our campus.

I think that real individuality of personality should be considered if we are going to deem ourselves democratic. We have no opinion in the choosing of the nominees, consequently, no opportunity to choose those with real personality. It has become a fixed agreement that all heads and vice heads of organizations are naturally "Senior Personalities." It is my opinion that this contest be one which shows true thought, and careful observance, rather than careless assumption!

An interested student.

Pedro's Pocket

By Jean Turner

We're willing to bet there isn't a person among you who knows how to enjoy a holiday any more than Pedro, but we think he is fouling up for Christmas. Having never seen snow in his short life and this being his first Christmas with us he is determined it shall be a white one. He's going to Lower American Slobovia where there is bound to be snow. The reason for telling you all this is because we're worried about the little stupe. We'd hate to lose our minister of good will from Mexico even if he is a miserable flop. We are appealing to your generosity and goodness to please send Pedro any extra heavy clothing you might have. We'll accept anything from red flannels to snow shoes and hip boots.

If there remains one among the senior ranks who hasn't an escort for the Senior Snow Ball, I know of an available male — "Available Pedro" they call him. He has been hoping that some one would think of it all by herself, but since no one did he has been reduced to advertisement. Since some of the coeds have been asked, why not Pedro? He can't be so horribly upappealing? Besides he's already borrowed a suit from the shoot em' up usher.

The seniors are an eager bunch — every night now for the past week and a half they have been dressing up in white dresses and parading the halls. "Not at all bad to gaze upon," was Pedro's remark as he sat on the training school roof with binoculars in hand. (Betcha cut that)!

While Pedro was talking about the Senior Snow Ball we mentioned that there has been some controversy over the age old problem as to which is best to have, a dress and no date, or a date and no dress. There seem to be poor lost souls in both predicaments. We finally ironed out the issue and settled beyond a shadow of a doubt that it would be better to have the dress and no date. After all — you could go to the dance if you had the dress and look over the other dates. But with a date and no dress — You're a dead loss!

Post Cards To Be Sold

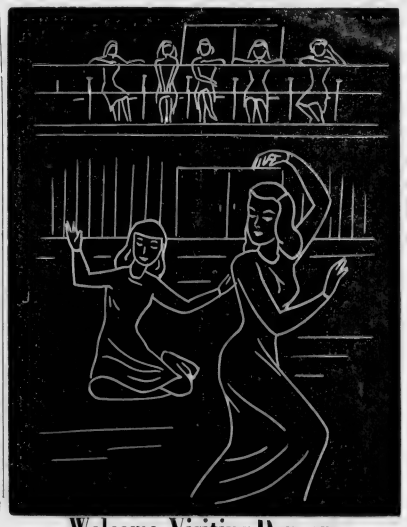
Mrs. Mary Watkins, Executive Secretary, announced recently that she has ordered post cards picturing two views of the college buildings, to be sold to the students.

One group of the post cards which are finished in platinophotoblack will feature a view of the Main building of the College, and the remainder will picture the Longwood estate.

The cards, which will go on sale the first of December, will be sold two for five cents. An aditional order for different views will be sent in the near future.

OUR WORLD

By Nellie Hart



"It is easy to break up an industry. What is difficult is to recognize the pieces." These expressive words expertly summarize a situation which, although little publicized, may prove to be of the utmost importance.

The United States, Great Britian and France have been in a continual dispute over the future ownership of German industries. The break-up of the vast empire was officially ordered in 1945, by a four power agreement. West Germany has already been submitted to the humiliation of having her cartels ,or pooling agreements, broken up in varying degrees, but a unified reorganization of the industries has not yet been effected.

The Labor government of Great Britain desires that socialization be allowed under a strong state ownership. France, motivated by a fear of German rearmament, favors a loosely distributed ownership. This of course is natural.

The United States supports a plan that would cause the break-up of the old industrial empires into individually owned plants that would operate on a competitive basis. Plainly, the French and American are not far apart in their beliefs, although the French seek definite guarantees.

Meanwhile, the West German government is at work on its own program. There is a great chance that if the Allies are not able to complete a plan of their own, they might compromise the plan to be offered by the Germans concerning the breaking up of the industrial empire in their own country. This may prove to be less complicated than the one under construction by the Allies, for it will not cater to any one opinion and will give the West German state a chance to voice an opinion about the situation.

"Would you like to have the College Library open on Sunday afternoon?"

Jo Orr: Yes, it would be a good time to study.

Frances Thompson: Yes, because people don't like to do lessons on Saturday and have to prepare for Monday classes.

Kappy Bishop: There isn't much to do on Sunday and I don't like to study on Saturday, so I think it would be a grand ida.

Marion Becknor: Yes, because when you aren't going away for the week end you want to catch up on some studying, and there is no restriction in dormitories about being quiet. The library would be the best place to go.

Lee Wood: Yes, because usually it is too noisy on the halls to get any studying done.

Jean Ridenour: Yes, because I always remember at the last minute that I have something for Monday.

Margaret Turner: I think study hour on Sunday night from 9:00 to 10:00 is enough.

Helen Castros: I definitely do because Sunday afternoons are so dull.

Sonia Kile: I think the library should be open because most people can't get all their work finished on Saturday.

Betty Abbitt: Yes, because Sunday afternoon is a good time for studying and the library is a nice quiet place.

Betsy Wiley: Yes, because it would be a quiet place to do some pleasure reading without being disturbed.

Barbara Caskey: Yes, because there isn't anything else to do.

Betty Baker: Yes, then I might get some homework done instead of going to the movies.

Carrie Anne O'Loughlin: Yes, for my own use but not for the people who have to work there.

Jean Hogge: Yes, I think it would be a very fine idea. But of course, with no Saturday classes next semester, it might not do me any good.

Margaret Anne Shelton: Yes, I spend half my time over there anyway. I might as well include Sundays!

Ruth Walker: I think the Student Body should vote on it. If it could be arranged without too much extra work for the library staff, it should be nice.

Joyce Adams: Yes, to give those who stay up here a chance to study.

Doris Old: Yes, for the pleasure of reading magazines and papers that you don't have time to read during the week.

Bev Smethie: Yes, I do!

Dot Dodd: Yes, I think it would be very nice for reading magazines and newspapers.

Isaac Velazquez: Yes I do! It will be nice for those who don't get money in time to go to the movies.

Janice Slavin: I think it would be very nice for people who save everything to do 'till the last minute. Not ME!

Mary Lou Alphin: I think it would be nice. If you didn't have anything else to do, you could go to the library and read.

Red 'n' Whites Lead In Color Cup Race With 20 Point Tally

The Red 'n Whites lead in the race for the color cup with a total of 20 points as the final scores for the fall tennis singles and the results of color week are tallied.

Francis "Clem" Allen, playing for Red 'n White, defeated Green 'n White's Nancye Gillie 6-4; 6-1 to bring the fall tennis to a close last Saturday.

Together with the tennis singles victory, Red 'n White's winning hockey teams and victorious color rush winners gave their team a total of 20 points.

The annual song contest which culminated the color week was won by the Green 'n White juniors

PIONEERS ARE CONSTANT UNDERDOGS BUT THEY WIN

What the local Pioneers lack in depth and experience they match with plenty of spirit and fight regardless of the odds. Already this "never die" spirit, which was obvious even in the RPI debacle last week, has produced a major upset when they edged the highly favored Farmville Town Team Saturday night in a thriller.

The fact that the total enrollment of the men at Longwood amounts to only 28, places the local cagers in an underdog role in each and every scheduled contest. Then also there is that all-important factor of professional coaching, which when gotten on the needed full time scale, requires almost invariably salaries. The Pioneers have been extremely fortunate in obtaining the help of Dr. A. C. Fraser as assisting coach, but of course, his donated leisure time is limited. However, the most encouraging factor in the picture at the present time is the fact that the Pioneers seem to possess at least one vital necessity for a good team and that is a team spirit that will fight to the last against anything. Are YOU behind them to see that it stays that way?

ALL MEN ARE ALL-OUT FOR LONGWOOD—HUEGEL NOW REFEREE

There may be only a handful of men at Longwood now but they are all-out for Longwood 100%. There are eighteen men actively connected with the basketball team and the rest will be seen out on the streets selling tickets or painting posters or talking it up. Jack Huegel, assistant manager of the Longwood Pioneers, has gone even further and developed himself into a fine and well informed referee—that, by the way, will save seven to ten dollars on games. To those who have seen a rule book will the realization of the tremendous task be appreciated. Take my word for it there are many and they are constantly changing.

SCHOOL CHEERS PLAY IMPORTANT PART

The group of cheer leaders leading cheers in the last home game with the Farmville Town Team could well be bestowed with orchids because the realization that the school is ever so interested and concerned brings forth the "little bit more" that caps many ball games. So YOU, up in the stands, are as much playing that ball game as the players on the floor.

ALLEN DEFEATS GILLIE IN TENNIS FINALS

Frances Allen, summer school champ, also annexed the tennis championship of the school last Saturday afternoon when the turned down Nancy Gillie in straight sets 6-4, 6-1. The first set was comparably even with both players feeling out the other's game. In the last set Allen displayed her usual placing accuracy and forced Gillie out of position and into many errors repeatedly.

Team Elects Miss Burger U. S. Captain

Miss Elizabeth Burger, science professor, has been re-elected to the place of captain of the U.S. woman's hockey team. The team will attend the international Federation of Women's Hockey Conference in Johannesburg, South Africa in July 1950.

Miss Burger, who plays goal keeper, was elected captain for the second successive time following the national hockey tournament at Baltimore, Md., last month. Three hundred fifty players from California, Chicago, Detroit, Boston, N. Y., Philadelphia, Baltimore and Richmond and other hockey centers participated. Miss Burger played on the Southeast team. She warmed up for the highest honor in America's women's hockey participating in regional tournaments at Richmond and Plainfield, N. J.

Enroute to Johannesburg, the U. S. team will make a playing tour of South Africa and will meet a number of teams in England on the return trip. At Johannesburg teams from England, Scotland, Wales, Spain, France, Holland, South Africa and Australia will be in attendance.

As a final honor, during the national tournament at Baltimore, Miss Burger was elected vice president of the United States Field Hockey Association.

College Pioneers Whip Town Team With 37-31 Score Saturday Night

Home Team Shows Marked Progress In Passing Attack

The Longwood Pioneers nosed out the Farmville Town Team last Saturday night, December 3, on the College court by a score of 37 to 31.

The underdog Pioneers got away to a fast start and at only one time during the encounter did they relinquish the lead, that being by only one point in the second quarter. They quickly bounced back and at half time held a slim 3 point lead.

Fancy shooting by Smallwood and Thompson in the third quarter allowed the local team to pull ahead by a comfortable margin and from this point on fine defensive play by the whole team held a potentially high scoring Town Team in check.

The locals exhibited a fine passing attack, something which was sadly lacking in its previous game with R.P.I. If they continue to improve along this line, a successful season is not an impossibility.

RPI Men Defeat Pioneers 96-27

In their first game the Longwood Pioneers suffered a severe setback at the hands of a powerful R.P.I. squad by the tune of 96 to 27 in Richmond last Thursday.

R.P.I. started off at a fast pace and at the end of the first half enjoyed a 46 to 17 advantage. The Pioneers never got started, and at no time could they effectively penetrate the fine defense employed by R.P.I. throughout the full forty minutes of play.

Bedinger and Lane were the big guns for R.P.I., each scoring 15 points, while Smallwood was the only player able to swish the cord effectively for the local five.

After lunch on the balconies of the College dining hall several styles of square and social dances will be taught the entire group. The dance walk; the basic steps, the two-step and the basic forward and the basic back; leading and following as well as combinations will be included in this lesson.

This phase of the Dance Day program will end with the square dance "Red River Valley" or the Varsovienne.

A discussion and evaluation of the Dance Day symposium will be conducted in the College gymnasium as the culminating event of the day's program. The Dance Day program is part of a project in dance sponsored by the State Association for Health, Physical Education, Recreation, and Safety. The project, intended to introduce dance into more high schools, is being carried out by college physical education professors.

Despite the cold sunny day both players exhibited smooth strokes and the match was an excitingly interesting performance. However, on a warm sunny day in the summer when both Allen and Gillie would-get the chance to practice regularly one could expect much more. Allen graduates in June and seemingly leaves the top spot to Gillie almost undisputedly, but then you can not forget Borum, who is fast picking up the ropes despite her freshman status.

College Awards Building Contract For Auditorium To Danville Firm

To Break Ground Before New Year, President States

The contract for the construction of the new Longwood auditorium and music building has been awarded to John W. Daniel and Company of Danville, President Dabney S. Lancaster announced today. Construction on the building will begin as soon as possible.

Dr. Lancaster has been authorized by the State Board of Education, the Budget Committee, and Governor William H. Tuck to sign the contract. "I am confident that active construction will start before January 1," said Dr. Lancaster.

Reviews Plans

The seating capacity of the new auditorium, including the balcony, will exceed 1,000 remarked Dr. Lancaster as he reviewed the plans previously announced. An amplifying system is included in the plans and a projection room is to be installed in the rear over the foyer.

The Jarman pipe organ will, of course, be included, he continued, and plans are being forwarded to include at least one organ for practice. This will be located in one of the soundproof practice rooms beneath the stage. The stage itself will be fully outfitted with modern stage equipment.

Additional details of the plans which have not yet been returned from the State offices will be made public at a later date.

Professors Speak On Honor System

The honor code as seen from the opposing standpoints of imperfection and perfection was the topic of short talks to the student body by two faculty members at the Government Association meeting last week. Dr. George W. Jeffers, head of the local biology faculty, pointed out the advantage of imperfection in an honor system, and Dr. C. G. Moss, adviser to the Student Government organization, stressed the need for greater perfection in the system at Longwood.

Dr. Jeffers first cautioned against "old shoe" acceptance of the honor system, citing his recent experience on the faculty of a college where no student honor system existed. He went on to say, however, that the student cannot expect his honor system to attain such a high degree of perfection that it will have no violations. "If student government had no cases to handle, it would kill the honor system," he said.

Comparing the honor system to democracy, Dr. Jeffers asked, "Is democracy perfect?" The final note of his talk was based on "The Glory of the Imperfect" as expounded by Dr. George H. Palmer of Harvard University. "If you had a perfect honor system, you would miss the joy of perfecting it. Yours is the beauty and also the joy of perfecting the honor system at Longwood," Dr. Jeffers concluded.

Dr. Moss

Practical aspects of the Longwood honor system was the theme of Dr. Moss's talk. "The honor system at Longwood doesn't come near perfection in terms of personal property," Dr. Moss said. The popular theory to account for stolen goods in schools is to assume that hired help is at fault

Students Receive Greetings From Famed Philanthropist

"Merry Christmas!"

'Big 3' Give Yuletide Greetings

To All Longwood Students:

As you read this issue of the Rotunda you will be completing your plans for the trip home. I know that you wish to be there as soon as possible but please hold down the speed of that car if you are driving on roads that may be wet or icy at this season. All of us want you to be in top condition for the holidays with sound minds in sound bodies!

While at home you will have an opportunity to prove to the people of Virginia that Longwood College has no superior among the colleges of the State. Each one of you is a personal representative of the College, and I know that you will measure up to the challenge.

You will have your full share of happiness if you bear in mind that our greatest happiness comes from making others happy. It seems to me that the Prince of Peace whose birthday we celebrate at this season would have us remember this, for he said "Even as ye do it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye do it unto me." Surely we wish to make Him happy and this is how we can do it.

And now best wishes for a joyous Christmas season.

Faithfully your,
DABNEY S. LANCASTER
President

Mrs. Savage and I extend to each of you our sincere wishes for a truly happy Christmas. May the season bring to you and your loved ones all the peace and joy that He, whose birthday it is, desires for all mankind.

Christmas is a period to be appoached with gladness. Understand its meaning. Enjoy its celebration. And exercise care on the highways and elsewhere in order that your happiness and that of others will not be snatched away by accident.

A merry Christmas to you all.

WILLIAM W. SAVAGE
Dean of the College

Water Fete Will Begin With Parody On Saint Nick

Pool Decorations Will Carry Out Christmas Theme

"Christmas Island" will be the theme of the annual Christmas water pageant sponsored by the H2O Club today. There will be two performances of the pageant, one from 5 to 6 p. m. and one from 7 to 8 p. m. Mary Miller and Jean Gilman, co-chairman of the pageant, have announced.

Betty House will open the festivities with a parody on "A Visit from Saint Nicholas" followed by the candle parade. Pat Paddison, Anne Langbein, Marjory Boswick, and Liz Lessie will then present a water quartet followed by a duet consisting of Nancy Walker and Jean Ridenour.

Other Acts

An accordian number will be followed by the "March of the Wooden Soldiers." After the star formation the clowns will cavort with Santa Claus. As the closing number the pageant participants will form the letters H2O with sparklers.

The pool will be decorated in the spirit of the holiday with Christmas trees and other holiday attire.

Students who are planning to attend the water pageant are asked to attend the 5 p. m. performance. Seats will be reserved for members of the faculty, administration and staff at the 7 p. m. showing.

Students Approve Early Holiday

Gov't. Association Reports Deficit

The student body voted heavily last Wednesday, December 7, in favor of a resolution recommending to the College faculty that the Christmas holiday begin on Saturday, December 17, instead of Tuesday, December 20, as originally scheduled. As a result of favorable reaction at the faculty meeting Thursday, Longwood students will be homeward bound Saturday, returning for classes on January 3.

Treasury Deficit

At the same student meeting Lizzie Bragg, Women's Student Council president, announced a campaign for student donations to make up the over $200 deficit in the Government treasury. Lizzie stated yesterday that the drive will be continued because only $25 has been collected to date.

Women's Student Government must collect a minimum of $100, Lizzie said. The College administraton has agreed to add to the Government treasury an amount identical to the sum raised by the students. Unless the minimum goal of $100 from student contributions is achieved, the Association will not be able to meet its obligations.Hall presidents will canvass dormitories soon after the Christmas holiday, and donations will be accepted in the hall of Main building.

Installation of Polly Brothers and Jessie Armory as freshman representatives to Women's Government Council followed. The president reminded students that dating after 10 p. m. on week nights is a violation of Government social regulations.

Prof. Moss Speaks On Gov't Of China

The International Relations Department of the Farmville Woman's Club presented Dr. Gordon Moss as guest speaker over WSVS Wednesday afternoon, December 14, at 4:30 p. m. His subject was "The Government of China."

'Givingest' Time Here Again Got Your Shopping Done?

by Betty Jane Stoots

All I want for Christmas—. Well let's not go into that now, but now is the time of year when every one seems to be bursting with renewed energy. They run hither and yon trying to buy gifts that will satisfy everyone's want to some extent. Christmas as one little boy expressed it, is the "givingest" time of the year, and surely we all agree. There are gifts to buy for Mom and Dad, Grandma and Grandpa, Sis and Butch, all of our friends at school, and of course we can't leave out our ONE and ONLY.

Now before we actually start out to buy the gifts, we have the money problem to consider. Where is it all coming from? Well there are numerous honest ways, such as baby-sitting, clerking, selling cards, etc. And now that we have all our money problems settled, let's actually get started on the shopping.

With a carefully prepared list and carefully reimbursed pocketbooks, we gleefully descend on the stores, hoping with all our might that we may find at least one of the things we are looking for. First on our list is naturally Mom and Dad, but that is quickly erased from our minds by the thought of a big picture of us we ordered for the lucky folks. Next is the "one", if you know what we mean, but we'll let that rest until we get home; we will have so much more time to spend on it then.

Well, halfway down the list we arrive at our little friends' names. What in the name of Santa Claus can we get them? Sachet, perfume, cologne, gloves, candy, a scarf? Oh my goodness such a bewildering list to choose from! But when we've pushed and pulled our way through the crowds to look for them there aren't many after all. We finally reach a decision much to everyone's relief and depart quickly hoping we haven't lost or forgotten anything.

So, tired and worn out, spirits crushed and clothes bedraggled we head for home and rest. After all our tiresome trip and worry we sure do need and deserve a MERRY CHRISTMAS.

Art Students Design Panels In Main Rec' Depicting Activities

The two wall panels on the south wall of the main recreation hall have been replaced by a pair designed and painted by a cooperative group of 6 sophomore and junior art majors and 1 student who is not connected with the art department.

Each member of the group drew up a plan that was submitted to the class for criticism. The design submitted by Joan Pritchett was chosen as most completely representing the activities carried on in the rec.

The entire group consisting of Nell Gilley, Jeanne Gilman, Mary Moore Karr, Lucy Jane Morton, Joan Pritchett, Hattie Swihart and Clem Allen, drew up the final draft and contributed to the painting.

Among the activities depicted in the panels are dancing, eating in the Snack Bar, dating, ping pong contests, card games and the occasional assembly held there.

Local ACE Presents Christmas Program At Rice Elementary

The Association of Childhood Education presented a Christmas program to the elementary school children of Rice on Tuesday December 13.

The children were divided into two age groups and stories and poems were read to them by Helen Smith, Helen Connelly, Marian Avedikian, Minta H. Critzer, Peggy Bryant, and Lucy Ann Edmunds. The singing of Christmas carols was led by Joyce Adams and Andrea Adams.

Miss Alice E. Carter, sponsor of the association, and other A.C.E. members accompanied the group to Rice.

Literary Society Extends 10 Bids

BET Announces Theme For Year

Beorc Eh Thorn, local literary society, voted Monday to extend bids to 9 upperclassmen. The society's study theme for the year, as announced after the meeting by June Banks, president, will be Virginia writers, with emphasis on Longwood alumnae and authors of this area.

The group also ratified several constitutional changes at the Monday meeting. The major of these provides for changing regular Beorc Eh Thorn meetings from the former monthly to a quarterly basis. Three of the meetings will consist of typical literary programs, and the fourth will be for social purposes.

New Members

Upperclassmen who have met the literary requisites for Beorc Eh Thorn membership are Marjorie Agee, Billie Barber, Ann Scruggs Critzer, and John Cook. Cook is the first man student to be invited into the organization.

Also receiving invitations are Edith Duma, Judy Hughes, Page Joyner, Helen Owen Traynham, Charlotte Williams and Anne Langbein.

Biology Department Will Attend AAAS

Dr. George W. Jeffers, Miss Vera Baron, and Dr. Robert Brumfield of the Longwood biology department will attend the convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science to be held in New York City from December 26 to 31.

While in New York the 3 members of the College biology department will hear reports on new discoveries and witness the annual presentation of prizes for the best papers and the best news stories about science written and published during the past year. Dr. Jeffers, who is a member of the A. A. A. S. Council will also attend the meetings of that body.

The A. A. A. S. which is the largest science organization in the world expects an attendance of between 10 and 12 thousand at the convention.

Orchesis Initiates 5 Girls Into Group

Five girls were initiated into Orchesis, the local dance group, following a supper given by the old members Monday evening. The initiates, who have served an apprenticeship since last spring, entertained the group.

Those girls who became members at this time were Patsy Ritter, Norma Roady, Joanne Missimer, Marion Bowmer, and Betty House.

Dance Day

More modern dance and social dance was called for by the high school students who were guests here during dance day. This was brought out at a discussion held Thursday afternoon to evaluate the activities of the day.

A full schedule had been arranged during which the 87 students from 5 regional high schools witnessed a demonstration of techniques showing the "natural way, the folk dance way, and the creative way." They also participated in some basic techniques in these fields.

The visiting students requested instruction in the high schools in the future by a college professor and lecture demonstrations given by groups of dance students. A plan is being formulated for a tour of the high schools in this region to take place next year similar to the one Orchesis members journeyed on for the first time this year.

Frosh Class Elects Production Heads

Sarah McElroy and Virginia McLean were elected co-chairmen of freshman production at a called meeting last Friday.

According to Betty Abbitt, president of the freshman class, subsidiary chairmen and the theme for the production will be chosen after the Christmas holidays. The date of the production will also be announced after the holidays.

Are You A Long Liver?. . . .

How long do you expect to live? Or rather, how long do you want to live? Would you risk the rest of your life, approximately 25,000,000 minutes, to get home for Christmas 1 minute sooner? Sounds silly, doesn't it? It is silly, but people do it everyday.

When you jump a light, cut in and out of heavy traffic, or speed, you are gambling all of these millions of minutes of your life against the odds of saving 1 minute. Rather ridiculous when you stop and think about it, isn't it?

December has an odd habit of witnessing more highway accident death in proportion to the number of miles driven than any other month. Could be that roads are often wet or icy in December, but frequently they are more so in January and February. Could be that people are in a hurry to get home, or to party, or back to school or work, or just in a hurry to get someplace during the holiday season and just don't stop to think.

Safe driving is not just an accident, it involves a lot of things, courtesy, carefulness, skill, and a lot of just plain common sense! Drive as if you life depended on it — it does!

Without A Song. . . .

When the General Assembly of Virginia meets next month, the agenda will probably include a move to put Longwood and Madison Colleges on a legal co-educational basis. At present the co-ed status of these institutions is under a temporary emergency measure. The likelihood that co-education will become official here brings to the fore a multitude of problems concerning the permanent accommodation of men students. Although solution of most of these problems will require long term planning, there is one which students may attend to now. This is the question of songs suitable for the men as well as the women students.

To those who may scoff, it must be pointed out that song is a vital factor affecting the morale and loyalty of a student body. Pep songs are almost a necessity at athletic contests ,just as the alma-mater is practically indispensable at numerous college and alumnae functions. Without the bond of song, there can seldom be a true esprit de corps.

The student body has been noticeably hampered in its backing of the men's basketball team this season by the lack of good pep songs. No uniform conversion of traditional Longwood songs to suit the changed nature of the student body has been effected so far; no new, more suitable songs have been adopted. This is a situation that must be corrected if the spirit of the team and prestige of the student body are to be maintained. Certainly, with the talent that abounds in the Longwood students body, there are students capable of writing rousing pep songs. In fact this is demonstrated annually in the class song contest held during Color Rush Week. The Rotunda recommends that the varsity cheerleading squad initiate a move to secure some of these products of student creative genius, and teach them to the student body. Just one good song, adapted to a co-ed group, would give a large boost to local school spirit.

And while we're on the subject, it's none too early to start work on an alma mater that assumes "sons" as well as daughters who true, faithful, and loyal will be." When and if the legislation comes through, Longwood should be as fully prepared as possible to assume true co-educational status.

Early Risers. . . .

Recently a number of students have considered themselves privileged enough to leave the dining hall before the usual time. Official mealtime dismissal customarily follows announcements. Such offenders evidently don't realize that by 'skipping out" on part of the meal they are committing a breach of Longwood dining hall etiquette, punishable by the student Dining Hall Committee. Nor do they seem to realize that it is irritating to other boarding students to feel that they must "sit it out" while others go blithely on to the more important business of supplementing the meal or other anxious callings of busy student life.

It has always seemed practical here to detain students at meals until formal dismissal, whether by word or by gesture of opening the dining hall doors. Consideration has been shown for students who cannot afford to linger by dismissing the meals at the earliest possible moment. In case of emergency when students find it necessary to leave the hall before regular dismissal, it has been the custom to ask permission either of the student dining hall hostess, now Robbie Cromar, or of the Dean of Women. It would seem that common courtesy dictates this.

If the students at whom this is directed are dissatisfied with present dismissal procedure in the dining hall, they are at liberty to start a move to change it. As was recently demonstrated in the case of the Christmas holiday, student action directed through proper channels can be most effective. Yet, until the privilege of leaving meals at will has been secured for all students, the few students who continue to illegitimately take the privilege are doing their fellows a gross injustice.

OUR WORLD

By Nellie Hart

The labor leaders in England, including Prime Minister Clement Atlee, are anxiously awaiting the Parliamentary elections. Although the general election date has not definitey been set, the British Conservatives are exulting because of their triumph in the returns of the New Zealand and Australian elections. Mr. Atlee bolsters labor morale by announcing that election results from "down under" will have no significance in the English elections.

Concerning the Red war in China, the Chinese Nationalists have disclosed the fact that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek has been forced to retreat to Formosa, an island fortress. This event was the disastrous result of a coup d'etat planned and transacted by turnout leaders, who prompted by the Communists decided to turn all the nationalist leaders over to the Communists. Former Premier Chiang and the four army commanders were caught in the web.

Letters To Editor

Editor:

The entire population of third floor Senior Annex missed out on the fire drill early last Thursday morning. Some were asleep, true, but many were not. Most windows were open but nary a sound did we hear as far as the fire alarms go.

This is a serious situation. By the time we were notified of the drill, the rest of the seniors and juniors were back in the building. We should not have to be notified. We should be able to hear an alarm. Can't something be done about this—if we were forgotten in a practice drill, who would ever remember our hall or any other in the event of a real emergency?

Could some additional fire alarm facilities be placed on the new science building? We want to get out too!

Pedro's Pocket

By Jean Turner

Well, people, it ain't long now—home!—doesn't it sound wonderful? Just two more days!

Pedro and I had a long talk and as usual this column is to be filled with idle chit-chat which no one reads anyway—so I should knock myself out. Speaking of being knocked out, have any of you seen those poor gals who are beat to pulps over the water pageant? (it's to be held this afternoon and tonight—just gotta get that plug in). They're about the saddest bunch of femininity Pedro has ever seen.

Pedro made the statement that this Christmas ought to be the merriest that any of us have seen in a long, long time. Things have returned to normal, or rather as normal as they'll ever get in the U. S.

Since I'm rambling on here about Christmas for my own amusement and to fill space in the Rotunda I might elucidate on the type of Christmases to be spent by our Longwood personnell.

There is the party girl who plans to go on a big party just about every night during the holidays or at least as long as she can stand the strain. There is another type who is looking forward to a quiet Christmas with the folks and who will probably take a few well chosen volumes home with her for undisturbed digetsion during said time. None of which is a bad idea, but just conjure up a life size picture of it for yourself.

Another type falls into the athletic or sportsmanship group. They might hike, hunt, skate, or most anything, and are most definitely interested in a white Christmas. Pedro more or less falls into this latter group. He says he's throwing caution to the winds, is open for any suggestions on how to spend a very merry Christmas. Since one of the people who donated to the KPFF (Keep Pedro from Freezing) fund gave him a lovely pair of unbendable, hydromatic skis, he is bound to try them out.

Pedro wishes you all a heavenly Christmas and a most gratifying New Year.

"Y" LINES

By DOT WOOD

On Monday night the Y' cabinet, officers, and members of the advisory board met in the Y' lounge for their annual spaghetti dinner — the event of the year when we dispense with business and enjoy the fellowship of the members. A visit from Santa Claus was included in the festivities.

The Prayer committee presented the Christmas pageant Tuesday night. After seeing the first Christmas enacted, our campus organizations contributed to the White Christmas fund which purchases baskets for the needy of the community during the holidays.

We of the Y' want to wish you all a very merry Christmas at home. See you next year!

Resourceful Longwooders Can Earn Shopping Money

Attention all you Longwood gals interested in a little ready cash for Christmas shopping. Let us tell you about some of the "fields" open this season. Perhaps we can select the right kind of job for you.

Are you the Motherly kind? Why not try baby sitting? Nothing is better for a young girl with future marriage plans than experience with wet diapers and "screaming meanies." For this "occupation," you often get fifty cents an hour, besides what is left in the icebox.

If you have the right kind of figure, here is an easy way to pick up a little cash. Try playing Santa Claus in a department store. To learn about children, there is no finer way; and maybe Dr. Swertfeger will give you an "A."

Of course you can always turn to Mother. She will pay you money for licking stamps for her Christmas cards. For every bed you make, perhaps she will give you a penny; and for every floor you sweep, a penny; and for going to the store, maybe a nickel! There are ENDLESS possibilities for earning money right in your own home.

There is no more exciting place to work than the Five and Ten Cent Store. Man, you really get the Christmas spirit there. Children coming in, their cheeks glowing with excitement, their money clutched tightly in chubby fists. Christmas carols blaring in your ears, and the merry tinkle of the Salvation Army bells!

Now if you are the outdoor type, what better way is there to earn money than by going to the woods and chopping down trees to sell at exorbitant prices to desperate people? And while you are out there, with the cold biting your nose and tingling your toes, you can get some mistletoe with your little shotgun. You will have no trouble at all in getting rid of it. There are many people who think that Christmas isn't Christmas without mistletoe hanging over all their doors.

Selling Christmas cards is another easy means of earning money. If you start in July, you can sometimes beat the neighborhood kids to the draw. Perhaps, on second thought, you'd better make that April.

Now if none of the jobs we have described suit your particular personality type and you still need cash desperately — no, don't do THAT — go to your nearest employment agency and get a job there finding jobs for other people.

H. S. JV'S STOP PIONEERS WINNING STREAK

The Pioneers ran up against a heavily manned and smoothly operated Hampden-Sydney Junior Varsity last Friday night in the local gym, and as a result absorbed a 50-25 setback. The 19 man Tiger outfit substituted often and completely wore down the Thompson-less Pioneers with continuous "fresh fives". The local cordsmen never got an offensive rally going but pecked out 25 points in the forty minutes of play.

DEFENSE OUTSHINES OFFENSE

The Pioneers do possess height, which is a tremendous asset to any team and a good foundation upon which to build an effective defense, and a high scoring offense. This height is possibly the lone factor which makes the Pioneers look exceedingly well considering the enrollment of men at the college. The zone defense has been effective in holding down potentially high scoring squads to a minimum, but the offense, at the same time, has all but collapsed.

PIONEER WEAKNESS—PASSING AND FREE THROWING

Thanks to height, the ball has been effectively recovered from the backboards—the defense has been good and once the ball is gotten into scoring range the offense usually clicks adequately; the team potentially possesses good shots, but the big problem lies in safely transporting the ball from the defensive positions into the scoring range.

The only other major deficiency is one of the free throw line—the Pioneers have made good only 26 out 81 charity tosses for a weak 32 per cent. An illustration of the importance of free throws in a game—if the Pioneers had made only a decent percentage of their given foul shots, the difference in points at the end of the Hampden-Sydney game would have been cut to less than one dozen. Many games can be completely won right there.

FORWARDS LACK POWER PUNCH

Thus far in the early cage season the forwards, who usually carry the bulk of the scoring responsibilities, have produced a meager two dozen points. Consequently a shift may be seen in the making

H-S's J-V Squad Defeats Pioneers By 50-25 Score

Lack Of Reserves Hurts Local Five

The Pioneers met the Hampden - Sydney J-V squad last Saturday in the college gym and the severe drubbing promised them by the visiting team never materialized. Pre-game gossip had the visiting team running wild over the inexperienced Pioneers, but apparently this was unknown to the local five as the two teams played on fairly equal terms after the first quarter. The locals were slow getting started and were trailing by 15 points as the first quarter ended. The final score was 50 to 25.

Two things, lack of reserves and poor foul tossing, prevented the Pioneers from registering a major upset. The locals had only a seven man squad and the reserve strength of the Tigers had a telling effect in this fast and bitterly fought contest. Poor foul tossing has been a major liability for the squad all season and was again exemplied last Saturday as the locals missed 20 out of 27 foul attempts.

Smallwood was high scorer for the Pioneers with 9 points followed closely by Orange with 7.

one half of the time and the student body the other half.

This theory must not be mistaken for general practices, he added. Dr. Moss illustrated his point with an incident taken from his own college career when some change lay unclaimed on a gym locker throughout the entire college year. Here, he said, was an honor system which functioned so well that not only the student body but the hired help was imbued with an uncompromising respect for personal property.

The local Government advisor refuted the belief that women are not capable of sustaining the sense of honor that men do. He advised students: "Give yourself a far higher degree than any B.S. or B.A., than any mere symbol of academic knowledge. Write on your soul that you are a woman of unimpeachable honor, accepting only what you earn and giving to the world all of which you are capable.

VOLUME NO. XXIX | Farmville, Virginia, Wednesday, January 11, 1949 | NO. 12

State Board Names 3 Halls Ruffner, Jarman, Stevens

Rotunda Named For 1st President

Names were designated for the main building of the college (the rotunda), the new science building, and the proposed auditorium by the State Board of Education, at its December meeting. These buildings will now be known as Ruffner Hall, Edith Stevens Hall and Jarman Hall, respectively.

The building formerly known as the rotunda received the name Ruffner Hall in memory of Dr. William H. Ruffner, Virginia's first Superintendent of Public Instruction and the first president of the College (1884-1887). Dr. Ruffner put into effect, in Virginia, the public school system now in use.

Jarman Hall

The Board selected the name of Jarman Hall for the new auditorium in memory of Dr. Joseph L. Jarman, fourth president of the College. Dr. Jarman, who came to this College in 1902 from Emory and Henry College, was president for 44 years.

During his years as president of this institution, Dr. Jarman earned a reputation as a pioneer in the education field in Virginia. A native of Charlottesville, he was professor of natural sciences at Emory and Henry College when he resigned to become president of this College.

In 1930, Dr. Jarman was offered the post of State Superintendent of Public Instruction by the late Governor John G. Pollard, but he refused at the specific request of the students and faculty of Farmville. Dr. Jarman developed the College from a small southern school to a $2,000,000 institution during his 44 years service, and was considered the Dean of Teacher's education in the state.

Dr. Jarman died on November 14, 1947, after an extended illness.

Edith Stevens Hall

The new science building, now nearing completion, received the name of Edith Stevens Hall in memory of Dr. Edith Stevens, associate professor of biology until the time of her death in 1946.

Dr. Stevens, who was considered one of the outstanding teachers of the College, was severely burned by an explosion in the laboratory and died as a result of

BSU Sponsors Week Of Squirrels, Nuts

by Dot Doubt

They're looking for you. Who? Why, the squirrels, they think you're a nut! Not only the squirrels are looking for the nuts this week, but there are several hundred students trying to answer the question, "Who is my squirrel?" Well, girls, maybe we can find out without going to the "nut" house.

Just in case there are any sensible people reading this article, let me say that this is officially "Squirrel and Nut Week," and there will be special radio programs each day over station CRACK. This is a game, people not a trap! If you think you'll be nuts after this week—wait until after exams—you ain't gonna be no good for nothin', then, not even "Williesburg!"

"Squirrel and Nut" week is an annual project sponsored by the Baptist Student Union that enables students to become better acquainted. Throughout the week, squirrels leave their nuts anonymous presents. The identity of the squirrels will be revealed at a party given by the B. S. U., at the close of the week.

8 Business Students Join National Ass'n.

Business education students are continuing to show interest in the professional business education organizations.

As of January 2, 1950, the following students joined the United Business Education Association: Marian Breeden, Dorothy Doutt, Helen Holbrook, Cornelia Marshall, Pauline Nasser, Janice Slavin, Ruth Walker and Willard G. Leeper.

UBEA, a Department of the National Education Association of the United States, is composed of individual members, divisions, and affiliated associations.

New Science Building Nears Completion

According to an announcement made recently by Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, Edith Stevens Hall will probably be completed during the coming semester. He also said that the new science building will be occupied during the summer session.

Plans for the addition to Annex building have been completed and sent to Richmond for approval of the State Engineering Department. When the plans are returned, the College will advertise for bids.

Erection of Jarman Hall, the proposed auditorium, is scheduled to begin before the end of January.

Mrs. Landrum Announces 1950 May Day Plans

Chairman, Court To Be Elected

Plans for the 1950 Longwood May Day have been announced by Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, director of the annual production. May Day has been scheduled this year for Saturday, May 6.

Chairman of the annual May Day production will be elected next Monday, January 16, directly after the evening meal at a special student body meeting to be called for that purpose. The meeting will be held in the Methodist Church.

The slate to be presented to the student body will also include nominations for business manager of the pageant and committee chairmen for dance choreography, staging, costuming, music, and transportation.

May Court

Nominations for May Queen and her court will be opened Tuesday at the table in Ruffner Hall. Each student will nominate 10 girls for the court, which will consist of 22, including the Queen and Maid of Honor. Each list of nominations must include at least 1 girl from each class, Mrs. Landrum said. Nominations will close at 5 p. m. Tuesday.

Final election of the May Queen and court will be held Wednesday after the evening meal when the top nominees will be presented to the student body. The place of this election will be announced later.

Dean Savage Will Post Summer Session Courses

A preliminary announcement of courses to be offered in the 1950 Longwood summer session will be posted on Ruffner Hall bulletin boards by the end of this week, Dean Savage recently said.

Script Features "Mystery Woman"

"Women Are Here to Stay," a musical variety show, will be presented Friday night, January 13, at 8:30 p. m., in the College rec' by the sophomore class.

Sophomore production will portray women in the years 1850, 1950, and 2050 and the dangers they present to men as they gain in power. Co-chairmen Maria Jackson and Nancy Jefferies announced production will feature an extra special surprise in the person of a "Mystery Woman." The chairmen refuse to give further information on their mystic female.

Charlotte K. Jones will provide the piano accompaniment for the production. Frances Franklin is chairman of the costume committee while Barbara Hawkins is in charge of the songs. The make-up committee is headed by Frances Turner and Margie Traylor, and Joan Prichett will manage the sets. Betty Scott Borkey heads the lighting committee; Edith Kennon and Martha Alice Wilson are in charge of tickets; and Jo Orr and Mary Moore Carr will manage publicity.

The theme committee was made up of Marion Becknor, Jean Rideneur, Ann Moseley, Sally Brickman and Jane Lee Kellogg.

Tickets are being sold daily at the table in the hall. The admission price is 30 cents.

Each class gives two productions during its college career. The usual procedure is for those productions to be given freshman and sophomore years.

Longwood Hour

The "Longwood Hour" will feature a guidance program tomorrow at 4 p. m. Dean William Savage is in charge of the program.

Anna Nock, Elizabth House, and Jack Heugel who are students at the college will take part in the program attempting to answer questions concerning the interests of college-bound students and their parents.

Principals of high schools within radial distance have been asked to allow their senior students a chance to listen to this program.

LC Student Reminisces on Events of Year As 1949 Passes Into Annals of History

by Jean Smith

We've swung into 1950 with all the gusto of that true Longwood spirit, filled with high hopes of a year that is bound to come up with some new and exciting things mixed well with our favorite old traditions. But let's not pass on too quickly without a thought or word for our late departed friend, 1949. True, it may not have proved to be all we expected a year ago today. And sometimes we found a little salt mixed in with our sugar, but on the whole it proved to be a pretty wonderful and memorable year for Longwood College.

Probably the event of 1949 that will linger longest in most of our memories and especially in the minds of those few unfortunate members of the class of '52 is the fire and the complete destruction of White House on March 6. Streaming from the buildings to the sound of that early morning siren, the student body stood aghast watching the dorm come apart at the seams while flames leaped skyward. As a direct result of this catastrophe, graduation had a new setting. On June 6, 131 seniors received their degrees in the familiar College dining hall.

By March 30, we knew that with graduation we would bid fond adieu to State Teacher's College and return in the fall to Longwood College. For the fourth time in the history of the school, the State Board of Education had seen fit to revise the name of our beloved institution, this time with the apparent approval of all concerned. In August, graduates of the summer session behold the brand new name on those long sought diplomas.

Throughout the past year physical improvement of the College has been varied and prolific. We have chosen several improvements to the college as outstanding. The installation of evening classes, the new landscaping project and the nearly completed science building top the list. Many a bull session in 1949 featured discussions about the plans on foot for the new auditorium and an addition to annex which will replace White House.

Among the big happenings of the departed year was the return of social sororities to the campus. Kappa Delta and Zeta Tau Alpha returned to the home of their nativity, and Delta Sigma Epsilon joined the ranks of the chapters on campus who changed from their former status of educational sororities to social sororities.

No small gain for the extra-curricular minded among us were the new rules for dating and "clubbing" brought out in the past year. The Student Standards committee came through in the spring with a plan for regulating extracurricular activities, and Student Government gave the sophomores the much needed privilege of dating in the Student Lounge.

When spring rolled around, we were all pleased at the administration's plan to register for the fall semester before the spring term ended. No more having to rush back to school in the fall and stand wearily in line to have schedules initialed. We now had almost a week to leisurely arrange our curriculum and have it approved.

LC Students Forsake Exam Study In Favor Of Pursuing Mrs. Degree

With the advent of the new year, the Longwood girl settles down at her desk. Remembering how it was last year at examination time—all those fifty dozen French verbs to learn, that whole "Marriage and the Family" book to read, and those early morning hours with math problems—she has decided to avoid a similar plight by doing some really effective work this year. HOW does one go about catching a husband?

(Are you still with us, readers of comic books and billboards?) Within easy reach, the girl has several magazines and books containing valuable information. And of course there is her past experience (which isn't much) to guide her.

Being a Ladies' Home Journal enthusiast, the young girl has been reading for many a year a column called "Making Marriage Work." The author usually deals with the unpleasantries of marriage, the disillusion and strife which is bound to come. But in this particular issue, he has decided to give his readers some helpful hints on how to achieve the "Mrs." status, if they still want to go through with it. At this point, the Longwood girl has little choice.

"Form the habit of making the most of your looks on all occasions," he writes. "Add some little touch—a scarf, or a flower—this shows you WANT to look attractive."

"Learn something about topics of interest to men. Glance at the sports page, keep up with politics, listen to news broadcasts. And if you still don't know what to talk to a man about, let him do the talking about his own interests. A good listener is always in demand."

"Get acquainted with males of all ages. If you are timid with your contemporaries, cultivate your friends' younger brothers. Single out the oldest man in a group and chat with him. As you become accustomed to masculine society, you will develop a new ease among men your own age."

"Cultivate opportunities to meet

Student Government Denied Exercise of Function

At a called meeting of the freshman class Monday night, the entire class was called to account for their unruly conduct and sentenced to two weeks of strict campus to begin January 10.

Among the charges against the freshmen were the cutting of the bell rope and the throwing of feathers over the rotunda before the Christmas holiday. "Stampedes," rolling coke bottles down the halls and stairs, setting off firecrackers in the halls, and general rowdiness and unladylike conduct were other charges laid at their feet.

In this situation, the freshmen, though far from blameless, were not alone at fault. Since their arrival in September the "traditional" freshman mischievousness has been extolled by upperclassmen whose words prodded these newcomers into action. Their conduct can not be disregarded. But in view of the fact that former freshmen classes have participated in similar pranks, the reprimand to the class of 1953 seems unduly harsh.

The general michievousness of the freshmen had been discussed by the Home Department with the House Council previus to the action taken Monday night. In their periodic check of the halls, House Council had not been able to discover sufficent evidence for them to take action. In light of this the administration deemed it necessary to act.

Neither House Council nor the Student Government Council had anything to do with the punishment inflicted upon the freshmen. What was definitely a case for student jurisdiction was handled entirely by the administration and only by the administration. The student governing body was left out in the cold, completely uninformed of the proposed punishment.

Naturally the majority of the student body is begining to wonder about the so-called, and much supported, student government. The purpose of a student government is defeated before it is begun if it can exercise its prerogatives only in part. In the eyes of the Rotunda, if the students are to have their own government, the administration should not interfere; if the administration is to govern the students, the Student Government Association is entirely superflous .

May Court Material....

With tonight's front page announcement of May court elections next Wednesday, students will start eyeing their comrades, sizing them up as potential May court material. Probably the "lookin' 'em over" process has already started, since the choice of twenty-two of Farmville's finest is no light decision to make. There is no student who isn't anxious to see that May 6 sun shine down on a true representation of the loveliest Longwood has to offer.

What are the precise qualities to look for in the Longwood May court? Such a consideration is no matter for snap decision The prime requisite which immediately occurs to everyone is beauty, or attractiveness of face and figure. If your candidate passes this first acid test, we can pass her on to the next requirement, that of grace and poise. The latter refinements would be quite unnecessary if the Longwood May court had merely to pose for cheesecake pictures or sit quietly and review the May Day goings-on. But, come the first Saturday of that merry month, they will not only have to make a grand entrance and exit on the pageant, but also to participate actively. This implies grace of bearing and ability to dance. Better still, the candidate should have had some training in the erpsihorean art. "Can she walk?" and "Can she dance?" If intelligent voters would make sure that their votes went for candidates who have mastered these two arts, the court couldn't fail to be effective.

Last, but not least, of the accomplishments which the candidate must possess to be considered May court material is that old bugaboo, the virtue without which Longwood extracurricular life is nil, the C average. However, this demand cannot be considered too limiting, for brains and beauty are not an uncommon combination at Longwood. There they are, all will agree, the minimum requirements for aspirants to May Day royalty. If voters ponder these considerations carefully and keep them in mind come Wednesday, the combination spotlighted in the 1950 celebration will make this truly a May Day to remember.

Our Say....

The administration's announcement of the renaming of three of the College buildings is one that literally begs to be commented on and criticized. The editors were never the ones to go contrary to human nature Now the way we see it is—

Why isn't an institution fortunate enough to boast so unique and lovely a feature as a muraled rotunda content to refer to it simply as the rotunda? Attaching the common "hall" tag to it makes it sound like any one of a host of ordinary American college buildings. Although Ruffner Hall is a pleasing choice of name as are Jarman Hall and Edith Stevens Hall, we'll wager that it will be many years before students and faculty consistently refer to the rotunda as Ruffner Hall. With all due respect to Dr. Ruffner, we only hope that this building's name will not degenerate into "Rufftunda."

When right, you can afford to keep your temper, when wrong, you can't afford to lose it. (A. C. P.)

Letters To Editor

Savages Send Thanks

Editor:

Mrs. Savage and I shall appreciate your kindness in printing this letter in order that we may use this means of thanking all of the classes, organizations, and students who sent us Christmas greetings. We appreciated greatly the cards and the thoughts that they contained. Christmas in our home was brighter and happier because of them.

We wish for every Longwood student an abundance of happiness and success during 1950.

'Friends' Give Advice

TO The Editor:

In view of the matter which has disturbed the entire student body immensely, we wish to give the administration a friendly word of advice. Where is your sense of humor which Dr. Lancaster spoke about in assembly? Also, what has happened to the spirit of Longwood College which has prevailed since this institution was first founded? The freshman class was only trying to recapture some of the spirit which Longwood College has long been noted for, but which apparently is lost. Does the administration realize that just such action as this is slowly but surely causing Longwood College to close its doors? This school has been noted for its student government, but it seems as if the administration has become the controlling factor.

In previous years, the faculty of this school has had the respect of the entire student body. Why can't they give us the necessary support and let us re-establish this respect and the spirit of Longwood College?

Sincerely,
Your Friends

'Traditional Misdemeanors'

Dear Editor:

We appreciate and respect what the faculty and administration are doing toward raising the standards of our college In making it a more modern institution of learning. However, we do not deem it necessary to kill the spirit of our student body through mass punishment of the freshman class for traditional misdemeanors, which have never been punished so severely before.

As upperclassmen who have been participants in such activities during our college years, we would like to voice our protest against the inflicted punishment.

By Jean Turner

Our little friend from Mexico was in rare form for his first 1950 interview. It seems that he has come up with something of no great importance and less interest, but if you've read this far you may as well finish.

Have any of you ever stopped to think about the innumerable characters in this institution? There is no small number—and when we say characters that is more or less what we mean. These are the characters we've singled out for special first-of-the-year awards.

To one small friend we give the prize for the year's finest and generally most embarassing, faux pas. You all know her — your friend and mine, fiendishly smiling Jean, better known as "Little" Smith. At this time we will not endeavor to print any of her famous statements. Besides the fact that they would be embarassing, I have my serious doubts as to whether or not they are printable.

Then there is our lovable stupe, Patsy "Scoop" Kimbrough, who doesn't know her head from a hole in the ground, and what makes it more interesting is the fact that she doesn't even care. We'll give her the gold medal award for the best "go-to-heaven knows where" attitude of the seemester.

Pedro asked me how we were fixed for unconscious members. I told him we have one who makes the honor roll this year. Besides the certificate and standard award, we'll throw in a gold plated pogo stick if one friend Browning

Several alumnae meetings were held during the holidays. Miss Carrie Sutherlin and Mrs. Henry Coyner attended a tea given by the Lexington chapter at the home of Colonel and Mrs. Mayo on the VMI campus. Twenty-five alumnae attended from various sections of Rockbridge county as well as Lexington. Mrs. Mary Moore McCorkle Anderson presided at the business meeting.

The Culpeper Alumnae chapter gave a "coke party" in the home of Mary Stuart Buford and Sutton Bland for the alumnae in that area. Students of Longwood College and several high school students also attended. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Coyner and Miss Betty Spinoler attended from Longwood. A dinner was given by the chapter officers at the Lord Culpeper Hotel following the party.

Miss Emily Johnson, president of the Washington, D. C. chapter, was hostess to the Longwood College students from Arlington and Alexandria during their Christmas holiday.

LC Pioneers Lose To Madison 54-38

Madison College outlasted the Longwood College "Pioneers" last Friday night, at Hampden-Sydney, and came off the court on the long end of a 54-38 score. The game was originally scheduled for the College gym, but the gym is undergoing an extensive face lifting and was not completed in time for the game.

Worn to a frazzle in the final quarter due to lack of substitutes the locals watched victory fade away as Denton and Deputy for

Scanning The Field

By LESTER SMALLWOOD

HUEGEL—EAGLE EYE REFEREE

At least one person in the Longwood basketball organization has practically gone professional, and that is beyond a doubt rookie referee Jack Huegel. Huegel is now as fine an example of refereeing as you could ask for. Games just do not get out of hand with ole "Eagle Eye" calling 'em—the line to the bench forms to the right when his closely called games add up the fouls to five.

THE GYM IS SHINING

The gymnasium is really taking on a new look these days. It is being converted to meet the regulation basketball requirements. New lines are laid correctly and the baskets are being put out four feet into the court to meet the specification. The floors have been sanded and finished, and adequate lighting has been promised in the near future.

Only "blocking lines" of the foul key remain undone. The importance of such aids are significantly shown by the recently adopted 2 minute rule, which is an effort to relieve the "under basket" congestion.

NIGHT SCHOOL MEN TO PLAY BALL

It is predicted that the college is going to allow the men enrolled in night school to engage in the men's athletic events representing the college. If this comes about, then the possibility that the basketball team may, after all, possess the badly needed depth is extremely gratifying. The Pioneers have lost most of their games solely because of inadequacy of reserve strength.

PIONEERS FACE TOWN TEAM IN BENEFIT GAME

On the 27th, the last day of exams, the Pioneers will once again face their town rivals, in a March of Dimes benefit game. No other date could be more unstrategically placed for the locals because of the preceding exam parade, but, nowever, they will endeavor to once again upset the town team in the home gym.

BENEDICT, BEAMER, AND CLARK—BEST GAMES

At long last forwards Beamer and Benedict came through for the Pioneers in the late Madison game at Hampden-Sydney, collecting 23 points between them—most of these were beautiful set and hook shots—may this be the beginning of a hurricane. Jimmy Clark played the best defensive game on the court despite being in the entire 40 minutes of play. Clark held Madison's biggest threat, Warren Denton, one time co-captain of Randolph-Macon's varsity, scoreless in the last half.

BORUM LOOKS GOOD IN BASKETBALL TOO

Laying her hockey stick and tennis racket aside temporarily, Clara Borum, promising all-around freshman athlete, is now on the cage floor gunning for a position on the Longwood girl's basketball team. By the looks of things in early season drills I doubt that she will lose any of her athletic prowess in basketball.

Miss Iler, Ritter Name 24 to Basketball Squad

Team Chooses Ritter Captain

Patsy Ritter was elected captain of the varsity basketball squad, Tuesday afternoon, by her teammates.

Patsy has good experience behind her, having played on the varsity team three years, and acting as captain last year. She plays forward at present. Besides acting as varsity basketball manager on the A.A., she heads the Monogram club and the H2O Club.

Sportin' Around

by Anne Lynch

The varsity girl's basketball team will meet their first opponent, Bridgewater, this Saturday in the Longwood College gym. If you're not on the team, we hope to see you giving a lot of support in the cheering section!

The gym floor has been refinished and after close examination of the work we can certainly say it's a beautiful job. Now it's up to the students to see that they do their part to keep it in this tip-top condition.

Class games will be scheduled for early in March which means you'd better be getting down to our shiny new gym for your practices. Volleyball and basketball players must have eight practices to be eligible to play for their class. With exams coming up time will be precious so now is the time to rack up those practices you need.

Freshman Chosen For Sub-Varsity

Twenty four girls were chosen for the women's varsity basketball squad as announced by Miss Iler, coach, and Patsy Ritter, manager.

Upperclassmen

Seniors on the team are Winnie Beard, Norma Roady, Frances Allen, Patsy Ritter, Mary Miller, Anne Lansbein, and Rebecca Kelsey.

Sue Brewbaker, Mary Crowder, Jessie Carson, Rachel Peters, Ann Lynch, and Helen Edgerton are the juniors on the squad.

Sub-Varsity

The sub-varsity squad will include Clara Borum, Nell Bradshaw, Helen Castros, Lou Jamison, Ann Crowder, Betty Tyler, Sue Webb, Betty Keeling, Bunny Deane Ricks and Eddie Ann Abbitt.

Both squads are subject to change.

Lynchburg JV's Top LC Pioneers 84-54

After playing on equal terms for the first half, the Longwood College "Pioneers" ran out of petrol and fell behind as the Lynchburg College JV squad defeated them on Friday night, December 16, at Lynchburg. The final score was 84 to 54.

The game started slowly with neither team showing much offensive punch until the second quarter. The third and fourth quarters found both teams scoring at will but Lynchburg just couldn't miss and outscored the "Pioneers" in both quarters.

Editor Announces Letter Contest

A contest to determine the best letter to the editor in next week's edition of the Rotunda is being sponsored by the newspaper staff and Revlon cosmetics company, the editor announced. The writer of the best letter to the editor will be awarded a bottle of Revlon Nail Enamel.

Judges for the contest will be the Rotunda staff and the local Revlon fashion board, headed by Frances Ferguson .The only requirements are that the letters be sincere, legible and signed by the writers. (Names will be withheld on request). The prize-winning letter will be published, along with runners-up in the regular letter column on page 2. Entries should be deposited in the Rotunda box or mailed to Box 168 at the College by Sunday evening, January 15.

will tell us what she was thinking of when she signed her test pledge, "Love, Bert".

There is one among us for whom we suggest orchids, since she is the character of characters. An award isn't enough—this gal should have a headline. She can find more trouble to get into and more teachers to dislike—she even wrote a small volume on "How to Poison Instructors and Just Plain Irritate Them". I know by now that my fluent introduction has left no doubt in any mind as to the identity of our Queen of Insubordination—Lila Easley. We love you Lila—but like I say, you have a knack for it.

While we're mentioning names and tales too, we'd hate to leave out anyone who deserves the award as much as our local envoy of wit from Hampden-Sydney, "Gardenia" Brooks. If anyone male or female, can challenge his right to the title "most exalted high joker of the court of characters", we'd like to see him try. We grant you he ain't so intelligent, but, by George, he is funny.

If by some chance any of you are "shook" because you think you are a bigger character than any of the above mentioned, will you please print, do not write, your reasons carefully on a post-card—using double spacing—and mail it to your local Veterans Administration Office. If you do not hear within ten or twelve months, apply in person. You know, I ain't getting paid for this stuff.

The "men in our life" seemed to have always belonged there by the time '49 died away. The men's Athletic Association was organized in the fall and by winter the gym was rocking with the excitement of the men's basketball games. The "co-eds" scored another "first" in the history of the College when one of their number appeared on the list of Who's Who.

Longwoodites have witnessed lots of good things and a touch of bad in 1949, so now as we start filling the span clean pages of 1950, let's let our tired old friend creep into the pages of some book to become just another date to plague us in history class.

Madison racked up 20 points in the final quarter to Longwood's 4. The Pioneers played the game without the services of big Ned Orange who was ill, and also had the misfortune to see their high scoring star, Les Smallwood, tossed from the game in the second quarter via the personal foul route.

Hunter Joe Benedict led the local aggregation with 13 points, followed by Beamer and Smallwood with 10 respectively. Jimmy Clark, playing the full forty minutes, played a stellar game at guard and his ball handling kept the locals in the running.

How did Cleopatra and Scarlett O'Hara do it? And Millie of "The Mating of Millie?" Fortunately Millie had the counsel of Glenn Ford. "When you spot the right man," he advised, "don't just say. 'Hello, Mr. So and So,' say, 'Why, hellu-u-u-u-u, Mr. So and So.'" For her, it worked!

Fire Marshalls Meet To Discuss Siren Installation

Drill Regulations Stressed By Chief

A meeting of the fire marshalls was held last Wednesday night to discuss the installation of the new sirens and the enforcement of fire drill rules.

Sirens, Switches Installed

Two new sirens have been added to the present system, and a series of switches installed throughout junior building, in the home office and on third floor annex.

Students have been reminded of the danger of tampering with these switches and cautioned that a breach of this rule may result in a fine by the state of Virginia.

Rules Stressed

Several standing rules were stressed by Claudia Anderson, fire chief at the meeting. A penalty of one weeks campus will be inflicted if students cause undue commotion during drills. Students have also been asked not to smoke during a drill.

Juniors Elect Moody, Watkins To Head Dance Next Month

Jackie Moody and Jean Carter Watkins were chosen co-chairmen of junior dance at a recent meeting of the class. The date for the dance has been set as February 11.

Jean Gilman and Harriet Butterworth have been appointed to head the decorations committee, Betsy Wilson and Helen Agnew are in charge of the floor committee, and Evelyn Farrier and Claudia Bradshaw will take over publicity.

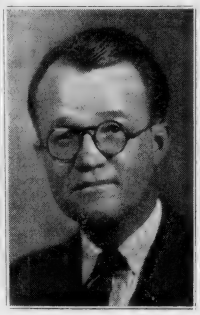
"Plans for the dance are already progressing rapidly", Jean Carter said last night. She added, "There will be quite a few different and interesting features in the dance this year."

March of Dimes Campaign To Open on Campus Monday

The March of Dimes campaign opened on the Longwood College campus Monday, and will extend through January 31, Mr. Raymond H. French, associate professor of chemistry and physics, who is in charge of the College campaign has announced.

"No definite goal has been set for the College," said Mr. French, "but I hope everyone will contribute to this worthy cause."

Student Victims



An alarming number of people in age groups that include college and university students were victims of 1949's epidemics of poliomyelitis in this country, Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, declared in issuing a special, urgent call for organized March of Dimes campaign participation by college and university student bodies.

The last year, Mr. O'Connor said, has seen the largest number of polio cases in any one year in any country in the history of the world—or more than 42,000 cases. Of these 42,000 it is estimated that more than 10,000 were over 15 years of age with the greatest number proportionally between the ages of 15 and 24.

Campus Campaign

Special containers for the March of Dimes campaign have been placed in the halls and contributions are being solicited in the dormitories. Special appeals to the various classes are being made by the class presidents.

An offering will be taken up at the basketball game between the Longwood Pioneers and the Farmville Town Team on January 27 for the benefit of the March of Dimes campaign. Receipts from the game between the girls varsity basketball team and Bridgewater College last Saturday night were contributed to the polio fund by the Athletic Association.

MR. RAYMOND H. FRENCH, local March of Dimes chairman.

NOTICE

There will be no issue of The Rotunda next week because of examinations. The next issue will appear on February 1, 1950.

Mrs. Eddy Speaks To Student Group

In a talk to the students last Wednesday night, Mrs. Sherwood Eddy discussed the women of the world that she had seen in her travels through China, Japan and India.

Mrs. Eddy told the group how the women of each of these countries, although laden with the trouble of illiteracy, and poverty, carried on in any difficult situation. In discussing the problem of illiteracy, she said only about 12% of all Indian women could read and write, and about 15% of Chinese women are literate. She further explained that in Japan the majority of the women were literate.

"The most beautiful women in the world are those of India," said Mrs. Eddy. She added that their unselfish service to their country would redeem India.

Mrs. Eddy concluded her talk by saying, "If we can receive from these women the gift of unselfish serenity—then we have accomplished much."

Asher Will Appear On "Longwood Hour"

Puckett Asher, senior music major, will present a piano recital over the regular 'Longwodo Hour", WFLO program, to be broadcast tomorrow afternoon at 4:30. She will play "Papillons" by Robert Schumann.

Donna Staples will be the student announcer.

Colonnade Sets March 15 Date For Next Issue

Poetry Contest To Begin Feb. 1

The Colonnade will publish its second issue of this session on March 15, Ann Langbein, editor-in-chief of the magazine announced today.

Poetry Contest

This issue will feature the winning selections of the poetry contest which will be sponsored by the Colonnade from February 1 to February 18. The staff has announced that students may enter any type poetry they wish. Entries should be placed in the Colonnade box in Ruffner Hall. The judging board will be made up of faculty members, editors, and a group of impartial students.

Other Features

Charlotte K. Jones' story "Miss Steak of My Life," which won second prize in the short story contest held last fall will also be featured in the March issue.

Farmville Painters Injured In Fall At College Library

Mr. J. H. Marshall, and Mr. J. E. Baldwin, Farmville painters employed at Longwood College, were injured Monday morning about 9:30 when a ladder, suspended across scaffolding, on which they were working while painting in the lobby of the college library broke. Both fell to the floor about 20 feet below.

Neither was injured critically, although Mr. Marshall sustained a broken pelvis and a mashed forefinger. Baldwin sustained a fracture of the ankle, and was discharged from the Southside Hospital, where both were admitted, after treatment.

Mr. Marshall will remain at the hospital for further treatment

Assembly To Feature Local Organ Soloist

Miss Marion McNabb Harrington, minister of music of the Methodist church, will present a group of organ selections in the regular assembly tomorrow.

Included in her selections will be "Prelude", by Clerambault; "I Call to Thee" and "Lamb of God, Our Savior" by Bach; "Adorn Thyself, My Soul" by Brahms; "Benediction" by Karg-Elert; "Arabesque" by Vienne; "Toccata" and "Fuque in D minor" by Brahms; and "Toccato" from the Fifth Symphony of Widor.

Miss Stone Dies Here January 12

Service Held For Supervisor

Funeral services for Miss Annie Laurie Stone, well-known educational leader, teacher and church worker of Farmville, were held at 11 a. m., Saturday at Doyne Funeral Home here, conducted by the Rev. John Wynn Myers. She died Thursday, Jan. 12, at the Southside Hospital after a long illness. Interment was in the Westview Cemetery here.

A native of Farmville, she was the daughter of the late William Allen Stone and Ella P. Cosby Stone. She was a graduate of Longwood College and took her M.A. degree at Columbia University, New York City.

Active in educational work for many years, she taught at Farmville High School, later at John Randolph High School and in the Cumberland county schools. She also served for a period of years as elementary supervisor in Cumberland county. In the later years of her teaching, she was supervisor of the fourth and fifth grades of the Farmville Elementary school, associated with Longwood College.

She was a member of the Farmville Methodist Church, where she served actively. She was a member of the church board of education and for many years was a teacher in the Intermediate department of the Sunday School.

She was an active member of the Farmville chapter, American Association of University Women, and the Prince Edward-Cumberland Teachers Association.

She is survived by a sister, Miss Bessie Stone, and a brother, Allen M. Stone, both of Farmville.

'Waltz Ballad' Pageant Theme

Patsy Ritter, senior from Winchester, was elected general chairman of the Longwood College 1950 May Day production at a called meeting of the student body Monday night. Cornelia Marston, senior from Shackelfords, will serve as business manager of the annual production.

Serving under Patsy will be Betty House in charge of staging, June Banks in charge of music, and Hilda Edwards in charge of dance. Janie Lyons and Evelyn Farrier are in charge of costumes. Helen Kaknis will serve as transportation chairman.

May Day Queen

Nominations for May Day queen, maid of honor, and court were held yesterday at the table in the hall. The nominees will be presented to the student body tomorrow night, and the election will be held tomorrow. Announcement of the queen and her court will be made February 1, in the Rotunda.

Pageant Theme

"Waltz Ballad" will be the May Day theme this year, Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, director of the annual production has announced. The dance pageant will trace the development of the waltz from its beginnings until the present days, showing its changes under the influence of various nationalities and classes of society.

Members of Orchesis, dance club; the May court; and student participants will portray the evo-

President Lancaster Appointed To Board

Announcement was recently made that Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, President of Longwood College, was named to the Board of Directors of The First National Bank of Farmville.

Dr. Eddy Notes Signs Of The Times

Author Cites Christianity As Check For Communism

Dr. Sherwood Eddy, noted author and lecturer, told the students of Longwood College how the United States can meet the challenge of Communism.

It was a simple plug to stop the flood of Communism.

"Be Christian," Dr. Eddy said. "We must seek to put our own house in order with justice and equal brotherhood, which are at the heart of our christian religion."

Dr. Eddy has recently returned from a working tour across Asia, where he and his wife visited Japan, Korea, India, Ceylon, the Philippines, Pakistan, and Turkey. A special study of the Communist menace in these countries was made by Dr. and Mrs. Eddy during 1948-49.

Recognize Beatitude

"We must recognize the beatitude about blessed are the makers of peace because there is some way to peace without entering war," Mr. Eddy said.

Russia founded her present government on two principals, Dr. Eddy said. First, justice for all, and second, absolute equality. Karl Marx found these principals in "the heart of our christianity," he said.

"Justice came from the prophet Amos. Jesus Christ taught us about brotherhood," Dr. Eddy said.

Making a powerful appeal in every country of the world with these two principles, the Russians now live under a perverted government. Millions have been killed in purges and establishment of slave labor camps.

Works With YMCA

Today Russia is a harsh, police state ruled by the "most cruel man on earth," Dr. Eddy said.

Serving as executive secretary to Asia for the National YMCA, Dr. Eddy traveled through many countries working with students. He is the author of 35 books on international, social, and religious questions.

Traveling across the world, Dr. Eddy said that he noted three signs of the times. The signs were first, revolution; second, war; and third, birth of new nations.

"Eight nations have been born since the end of the war," Dr. Eddy said.

China Hates Leader

In reference to present conditions in China, Mr. Eddy said that the Nationalists" government fell in China because of graft and compromise. Chaing was afraid to lose face by following the advice of his advisors.

Two-Headed Calf Attracts Crowd

by Mary Leigh Meredith

The biology department was the scene of much excitement last Thursday — most popular part of the school there for a while. And the excitement was all caused by nothing more unusual than the head (or heads?) of a two-headed calf. Now I ask you, just what is so unusual about that! Course if they had started charging admission to the teeming throngs that crowded the corridors to get a glimpse of the monstrosity, they would probably have taken in enough to buy a three-headed elephant!

All kidding aside, it was a most unusual sight — if the calf had lived he would probably never have been able to make up his mind (or minds?) about the direction in which to venture next. And I wonder if his heads would have fought about which was to get a particular juicy looking clump of grass? That would be rather unnecessary since it would all go to the same stomach, but it could happen just the same.

It would be much more truthful to call the monstrosity a two-faced, instead of two-headed, calf since only two ears were present and it was all hooked on to one neck. It had four eyes though (wonder if that would give it "double vision") and two muzzles with two mouths and two sets of nostrils.

A cursory disection conducted by Dr. Brumfield (or to be quite formal, by Dr. Robert Brumfield, associate professor of biology) revealed only one trachea and one esophagus. The two togues (one for each mouth, natch) were joined together at the base.

The head, which was brought to the College to be injected for preservation, belongs to the Cumberland Training School. It was born on Sunday, January 8, and died January 11. If it ever tried

Soph Women Declare Independence

Sap Leaving Homo Male As Females Gain In Power

by Mary Crowgey

After being in bondage for these many years, are women REALLY here to stay? Are the Homo-Sapiens females getting out of hand? Is the sap beginning to run out of the Homo-Sapiens male? Is the situation grave enough to cause the men serious worry?

According to the sophomore prduction, "Women Are Here To Stay", given Friday night in the Longwood Recreational Hall, the answer to all the above questions is, "Yes!"

It seems that the Greek gods had met on Mount Olympus to discuss conditions in the mortal world—chiefly the place of women on earth. As Zeus explained: "Nobody knows exactly what women ARE; the only alternative is to look at the evidence." So the deities got a glimpse of the situation—as it is in 1950, as it was in 1850, and as it will be in 2050.

At the present, times have evidently hit a new low for men. Women are slowly emerging from their cocoons—they've deserted cooking for hobbies; they're cluttering up Congress; their ads filled up the magazines. Now the main question is no longer whether the Yankees will beat the Dodgers, but "Which Twin Has The Toni?"

In the first act, two Longwood girls introduce their sixth husbands to each other; obviously things have hit a new low for women, too. The men are forced into singing "Ain't We Had Fun" and "You're My Honey Bun," and two girls with mops for hair sing the "Toni Twin Song"—"Tush right down and buy a pack; the handy family-size is two-ton sack."

It appears that EVEN a goddess must listen to radio commercials to get a true picture of life on earth in 1950. "Do you feel run down when hit by a bus? Do you feel like a postage stamp...licked? Is your wife embarrassed to bring the boss home for dinner? There is no other pill that goes by the name of Pitidin Linkham. (There couldn't be; we've got it patented)," the emcee comments.

In 1850, women were getting a LITTLE out of hand, this being illustrated by the Bloomer Girls' song, "Is There Anything Wrong in That." At this time, they wanted to be free of kitchen crudgery. They desired freedom to vote and to elect themselves to office. Careers were "all the rage." The point where they wanted a country free of men, however, had not QUITE been reached.

A disillusioned gold-miner, lamenting his "bad" causes "the girls" to head straightway for California. As one "suffragette"

Not A Thing To Lose.....

Now is the time for all good editors to sit at their typewriters pounding out a stirring editorial expounding the merits of being completely honest with your professors, your fellow students and with your self by not cheating on examinations.

But what's wrong with looking at the situation from another angle — what are the merits of cheating on an examination? For one thing, you'll probably get a much better grade on the course, and if you are adept enought in your system of cheating, you more than likely won't get caught. Of course, you'll probably be asked to sign a pledge stating that you "neither received nor gave help on this examination" but if you're going to cheat on the examination, you might as well cheat on the pledge, also.

You are on your honor not to cheat, you say, but how much does your honor mean to you? Enough to flunk a course? Or do you believe what they say about getting more out of college than the subject matter taught in classes? You don't really believe that you can derive a sense of honor, of cooperation ,of responsibility, of loyalty by attending college, do you?

There are those, and some of them are students, who say that if you don't know enough to pass an examination on a given subject, you should repeat the course, because you haven't learned anything. Do you come to college to learn something, or to get good grades? What do you care if you learn anything in your four years up here, just so you pass, isn't that enough?

It isn't fair to the rest of the class if the professor grades the examinations on the curve, you say. Well, are the other students being fair to you when they study all along and know the answers to the examination questions?

There is a chance that you may get caught, of course, and sent home, minus grades, self-respect, and honor, but then again, there's still the chance that you might get away with it.

Go on — cheat — you've a lot to gain, a good grade, for instance — and you haven't a thing to lose, just everything for which you came to college.

Our Props Knocked Out....

In the discussion following the announcement of the new building names, we were presented with an argument which rather knocked the props from under our editorial of last week. In this column last week we mistakenly grumbled over the fact that we were to call the rotunda Ruffner Hall. As it turns out, our fears were unfounded, and we may hold ourselves up as a good example of faulty logic.

It came to light in the course of the week that Ruffner Hall is not the name of the rotunda only, but of the entire building that was formerly known as Main Building. This includes east and west wings as well as the administration offices. Therefore we may go on calling a spade a spade and the rotunda a rotunda, while the whole building will be known as Ruffner Hall. It might be well to clarify here just what is meant when we speak of the Longwood rotunda. Webster defines the term as "a large round room." So technically speaking, there is no rotunda at Longwood College, although the small portion under the dome of Ruffner may be loosely construed as a rotunda.

We have only one point to raise in defense of our impulsive conclusions of last week. In the Rotunda news story we quoted verbatim the portion of the President's announcement to the alumnae which referred to ". . . the main building of the College (the rotunda) . . .". But we admit that when we jumped to the platform in favor of the rotunda we had not thought the problem through to its rational conclusion. From the number of readers who nodded their heads in agreement we judge we were not alone in our hastiness. Moral: take a class in logic before sticking your neck out in print.

In Memoriam...

Longwood College recently suffered a very real loss in the person of Miss Annie Laurie Stone, one of the supervisors in the Farmville elementary school. A native of Farmville, and alumna of this institution, Miss Stone gave much of herself to the College over a period of a good many years.

More important than her years of service is the spirit that inspired her to take an active part in civic affairs and public welfare work when the school day was ended. Miss Stone gave no thought to herself when she served her community and her profession.

Miss Stone's wisdom and judgment were respected by all of her co-workers. Generally regarded as one of the outstanding teachers in the Training School, she made a lasting impression on her students, her associates and student teachers. Miss Stone was a truly great educator. It is teachers of this caliber who ennoble their profession and the citizens they train.

Letters To Editor

Dear Editor:

Pardon the classic figure of speech, but I have a crow to pick with you. It concerns your publishing of anonymous letters. I know your policy is that of professional journals which publish letters anonymously if the name of the writer is furnished to the editor. But does that policy fit a college newspaper which serves only a limited number in a community where everybody knows everybody and all are friends working for the same cause? Would it create a more harmonious spirit of co-operation if all spoke out frankly and above board? Would "Letters to the Editor" carry more weight if the writers signed them openly as if they had the courage of their own convictions? If a letter contains veiled accusations, does everyday justice demand that the accused know who the accuser is and be in a position to answer him or her or them? And is it possible that your hiding the names of the writers may sometimes bring about false suspicions as to who is responsible for such accusations? Is the ROTUNDA doing right to encourage our students to form that habit of writing anonymous letters?

I'm not answering these questions, dear Editor. That's up to you. It's your crow.

J. M. GRAINGER

Editor's Note: Mr. Grainger's argument is a good one. The Rotunda policy has been borrowed from that of papers which serve large communities filled with opposing fractions. In this case a man's job may be jeopardized or his social prestige lowered, if he should attach his name to his honest opinion. At the same time his anonymous letter may work for the public good. Admittedly in this specialized type of community we are "friends working for the same cause", but hasn't Mr. Grainger painted the picture a little too idealistically?

Here, just as in less cloistered communities, opinions conflict, and pressures are exerted. Can a student be sure that frank speech will not bring down personal vengeance from a faculty member?

Incidentally, the authors of last week's letter titled "Traditional Misdemeanors" wished their names published, but lack of space prevented this.)

The Rotunda certainly hates to stand guilty of encouraging moral cowardice by offering students the shelter of anonymity. And certainly students want to be thought of as having the courage of their convictions, as any individual of integrity should. We'd like to pass this "crow" on to the students whose integrity it most concerns. What do they think? Is the policy of publishing anonymous letters in the Rotunda wrong? The question is a knotty one, but the Rotunda will be guided by student opinion.

OUR WORLD

By Joan Prichett, Guest Columnist

According to a recent survey made by the journalism class of Longwood college, students here are aware of the urgency of the atomic bomb problem and any possible attack. The eight students in the journalism class taught by Mr. James M. Grainger compiled a list of five questions concerning the atomic bomb. These question were asked twenty students by each member of the class.

Following is a list of the questions asked and the tabulated answers.

1. Did you know our goverment has issued recommendations about what people may do in case of an atomic attack?

Yes 43
No 76

2. What would you do in case you learned a bomb would be dropped in the next half hour?

Run 10
Wait 8
Go underground 36
Pray 71

4. Do you think it was right of President Truman to initiate atomic warfare?

Wrong 24

5.Do you think there is anything that you as an individual may do to help the situation?

No 14

This survey seems to indicate that every student at Longwood is interested in and anxious about this timely matter. Members of the journalism class have expressed the hope that the poll will help the students to become more aware of urgent national and news events and consequently stay informed about what is happening.

Pedro's Pocket

By Jean Turner

It seems that Pedro isn't planning to be caught napping this semester—when I went to talk to him he was studying his head off. Everyone of you is doing the same, I presume.

Besides being very excited because of the approaching exams, Pedro is much elated over the fact that he has been invited to join the Bird Club. He says that it is the only thing besides the "Y" that anyone has thought of him for, and it made his little heart glad. All he had to do to get in the Bird Club was to take eighteen bird walks at 6 a. m., and learn the calls of all the birds encountered on those early morning jaunts. Top Bird on the Totem Pole, Bird Stoops, said, "We are happy indeed to have Pedro with us and we think he has the makings of an ideal club member and a most ardent bird lover." She made more remarks, but if any of you know Bird Stoops like I know you know her, I'm sure you'll understand if we hesitate in printing them.

Pedro wishes to congratulate the sophomores on a superb production. After hearing the title, which Pedro thought very encouraging, he had to see it. And after

Attention All Professors-- Time For Classes To Be Out

The subject of classes held over the hour is a problem continually discussed by the students but seldom brought to the attention of the offending professors.

Before labelling the offenders we feel that it is necessary to commend those profs who are attentive of the time and dismiss their classes promptly. But for those consistently unaware of the time allotted them we have distinct categories — the well-meaning enthusiast, the proverbial absent-minded professor and the talkative egotist.

Least offensive of the three in the eyes of the students is the well-meaning enthusiast who consciously retains his students with a sincere intention of giving them their due. There are many times when a minute or two more would suffice to wind up a lecture or to clear up points of discussion. If it is an occasional event, the student do not object; when they woefully await it daily, it becomes another matter. Regardless of how well-meaning a prof may be, he asks for and receives time not due him.

The talkative egotist is not only unduly proud of his vast store of knowledge but usually has a lush crush on the sound of his own voice. In most cases involving members of this classification the students are eagerly awaiting the official end of class ten to twenty minutes before it is due. Our egotist can roar and roar after the five-of mark and a mere few, if any, will listen to him.

Our absent-minded professor is a victim of circumstances. Chances are students are not so hard on his name but are somewhat resentful any way. More often he is of a pleasant nature and takes a hint the third time a notebook is slammed to the floor. Sometimes such a prof will request that someone remind him of the time several minutes before class is to end, but he does not do that as often as he should.

These teachers who abuse their time allotment take advantage of both the student and their colleagues. How many of these same offenders display a sharply raised eyebrow when a student creeps in late? They are highly resentful of tardiness and at the same time are often the cause of it. The Cardinal, University of Louisville.

Campus Cogitations

Question: "What do you consider to be the best way to study for exams?"

Mr. Charlie Hop French: "Throw the book away!"

Norma Saunders: "To concentrate."

Joyce Gatling: "Have peace and quiet."

Betty Hancock: "That's a good question."

Lee Wingfield: "To knit on those special sox."

Chris Davis: "Begin studying before the last minute."

Charlotte Stevens: "Put your cards away, turn the radio off, and start concentrating."

Helen Holbrook: To hibernate."

Mary Watson: "It's TOO late to study then. Read comic books."

Frances Joseph: "I'll be darned if I know."

Frances Stringfellow: "Get plenty of sleep the night before and don't cram."

Jenny Powell: "I'll give you a clue. Don't stay up all night studying because I did and fell asleep during the exam."

Hilda Bausaman: "Is there a way?"

Faye White: "Have plenty to eat and get away from it all."

Edith Duvall: "My gosh, I've been trying to figure out a way for two and a half years."

Georgia Bailey: "You tell me!"

Frances Creger: "Go to the movies with Jimmie."

Shirley Bloxton: "Open the book and then doze off."

Betty Baker: "I have no idea."

Grace Booker: "That's a good question."

Sis Burton: "Listen in class and don't study."

Virginia Westbrook: "I have tried many ways and have found playing Bridge 'till 4 a. m. the best way to study."

Margaret Taylor: "Just sit and knit argyle sox."

Iris Sutphin: "Since I haven't studied before I don't know." ....

Jean Hogge: "Get all your credentials together; then go to work."

Jerry Korbach: "Oh golly! I wish I knew."

Nancy Walker: "There ain't no way. You either know or don't know."

Dolores Hoback: "Invite the girls in to compare notes; especially the business majors."

Joan Pritchett: "Enjoy it while you can. The best week we have."

Marla Jackson: "Get Prich out of the room."

"Bee" Johnson": Study the week before!"

Claire Cullip: "Bury yourself in the library."

Jo Ann Yow: "You tell me!"

Sally Brickman: "Oh lawse, I don't know!"

Reporter Places Volleyball Players In Catagories Appropriate To Style

By Milly Wilson

If you've never had the pleasure of attending a volleyball session, then you haven't had the opportunity to meet the three types of characters found in the typical three-day-a-week Volleyball classes at Longwood College. If you have had the pleasure, you probably fit into one of these catagories yourself.

First there's the "Lazy Lou" type. She looks and acts like "Oh murder, why did I ever sign up for this class?" She's forever getting hit with the ball just because she doesn't pay attention to the game. When it's her turn to play the ball she just stands and "bop-o!" The ball's dead and goes to the other team. About five seconds after being struck, she wildly swings both arms in all directions and jumps around to give the slight impression that she's playing. Too late now!

The next server on the other team is the "Over-energetic Ophelia" type. As soon as she serves the ball, she comes dashing onto the court hitting the ball this way and that way, but always too hard for anyone to help her get it across the net. By the time she hits the ball twice, half of the others on the team are nursing stepped on toes, broken fingernails and hunting for their hairclasp

RITTER STORMS THE CAGE

Besides holding down the entire managerial end of women's basketball at Longwood, Patsy Ritter also seems to have developed an offensive style that is in itself enough to cripple any LC foe. Last Saturday night's game with Bridgewater unleashed an attack of 67 points, 27 of which were beautifully accounted for by its twice captain-manager. The quick and alert Ritter, with her keen eye for the basket, would be an asset to any woman's team in the State.

Ritter ,however, does not stand alone in forming Longwood's high scoring offense. Frances Allen, Winnie Beard, Norma Roady, and Clara Borum each possesses a highly commendable ground and shooting game, that will in all probability, carry Longwood to victory in this year's schedule. With an offense like this, you almost need not emphasize defensive measures.

LC LETS ITS ATHLETIC PROWESS STAGNATE

Despite the powerful teams that the Longwood girls continually produce in hockey and basketball, there still remain only a few intercollegiate contests scheduled annually. As I see it, there are four good reasons for building on adequate intercollegiate women's schedule in at least hockey and basketball — namely:

(1) The need for good publicity for the College in any and every possible phase, for the purpose of attracting desirable students, and in turn, spreading the knowledge of the department of physcial education at Longwood. It is well known that a good athletic program attracts boys and girls alike, so much so in fact ,that some colleges go to great lengths to get good athletes to come to their school; it usually is in the form of paying the college expenses of the athletes. Good publicity does the "paying off" in the final analysis.

(2) The need for the college's own physcial education majors, who shall be the future coaches and directors, to experience competitive sport in its most highly developed form. This is exactly what they are in part preparing for; going out from college without the combination of "theory and experience" is in one sense going out unprepared.

(3) Long lags between scheduled games for any team, boy or girl, is not sound physcially or psychologically for the individual. We may not all be doctors or psychiatrists, but most of us realize that an inconsistent athletic program allows no consisitently smooth pattern of operation upon which improvement depends. Hence a resulting psychological depression only complicates the situation.

(4) Regardless of how well developed, an intramural program cannot replace a well-rounded program which includes an adequate inter-collegiate schedule, in the maintaining of highest possible morale of the school. to which athletics so ably contributes. Both are very important, but not so in the starvation of one for the other. Some students will not go out for the varsity squads mainly because the few games played are not worth the necessary continuous practice, when the time could be used to more advantage on the ever

Dr. Jack Confers With Miss Iler

Dr. Harold K. Jack, supervisor of the State Association for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Safety, visited the College last Wednesday to confer with Miss Olive T. Iler, chairman of the state student program.

Dr. Jack discussed with Miss Iler the program for the Health and Physical Education meeting to be held in Roanoke, March 24 and 25. An all student meeting will be held Saturday afternoon, March 25.

Miss Henrietta Lanier of Madison College will be the student representative to the committee of which Miss Iler is adviser.

Sportin' Around

With exams coming up, the sports front will be slowed down for the next week. The girls will not have a varsity basketball game during the week of exams.

After exams there won't be much time to get in your eight practices to qualify for class volley ball and basketball teams, so be prepared to get in your final practices.

The first varsity game of the girl's basketball season last Saturday night with Bridgewater College witnessed a Longwood victory. Final score was 67-30—a rousing victory for the first girls basketball team from "Longwood" College.

The next varsity game for the girl's team will be played on the home court February 10 with Roanoke College.

to eat, no one saw it making the attempt.

It would have had a right difficult time if it had tried to eat. Since the two oral cavities were connected most of its attempts to swallow would have merely resulted in its pushing the food from one mouth to the other. 'Course if it had worked both tongues at once it might have attained a certain degree of success. But I guess it was just a mite too young to figure something like that out for itself. Besides, if it had lived, what would the biology department have used for excitement last week? I mean, after all, they can't spend all their time being dull!

Girls' Squad Victorious In 1st Game

Defeats Bridgewater With 67-30 Score

by Bill Beamer

The Longwood girls' varsity basketball team defeated the Bridgewater team 67-30 in their first game of the current season last Saturday night.

Longwood's starting line - up consisted of Pats yRitter, Clem Allen and Winnie Beard as forwards with Rebecca Kelsey, Anne Langbein, and Marion Beckner as guards.

Ritter High Scorer

The girls played a magnificent game with Patsy Ritter, team captain, as high scorer. Clem Allen and Winnie Beard showed some wonderful ball handling. All the girls on the varsity squad got a chance to show what they could do as the entire squad got to play.

It was Longwood from the start with Ritter, Allen, and Beard sinking the ball from every angle. Bridgewater fought all the way, but they just didn't have a chance against Longwood's super six.

Credit should be given to the guards for their fine job of getting the rebounds and getting the ball across to the forwards. Nell Bradshaw, one of the promising young freshmen, played a great game.

said: "From here on in, women are just plain gold diggers."

2050. What a year! The "weaker sex" is gaining more and more power. They're climbing from the back seat over into the driver's seat; their lily white hands are stuck out of the window, making wrong signals. Their bathing suits have been reduced to a thread, and now they're walking around in barrels; the question of the week is, "Who's wearing the snappiest slats?" Women are making pilgrimages to the moon, leaving their husbands to take care of the children. Even the mail-men are mail-women!

Silence reigned as Wynken, Blynken, and Nod danced in a sea of blue. Once again the sophomore class under the able guidance of Maria Jackson and Nancy Jeffreys, had exihibited marvelous talent and ingenuity to the student body.

Library Displays Art Of Virginia Painters

Twenty-two paintings by well-known State artists make up the current exhibit from the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in the Library.

From now until January 29, this exhibit, titled "Recent Paintings by Virginians," may be seen in the browsing room of the library.

Notable works in the show are Glenna Latimer's "Still Life," and "Sundance," by Thomas Gay, Jr. "A Virginia Farmyard," by G. Watson James, Jr., and Jean Craig's "Taxco at Night," may also be seen.

Mr. Robert Vickers, of the College art department, will give gallery talks about the painters and their works at a date to be announced later.

Dr. Jeffers To Visit School In Winchester

Dr. George W. Jeffers, professor of biology, will represent Longwood College tomorrow at the "College Day" exercises to be held at Handley High School in Winchester.

Last week Dr. Jeffers was the Longwood delegate to the Warwick County High School "College Night" in Morrison, Wednesday, January 11. On the following day, he visited the high schools at Varina and Manchester.

Wright Announces Unlimited Lights

Unlimited light privileges for exams will go in effect Sunday night, January 22, Jackie Wright, president of House Council, said yesterday. The regular curfew will go on again Friday night, January 27.

Jackie also issued a reminder to students that they are expected to remain quiet at all times during the examination period. One call down received during this period will result in a week's campus restrictions.

that was knocked out in the ordeal. Usually the ball goes sailing up into the balcony, or way down the other end of the court; sometimes it hits the poor innocent teacher who is merely observing the games. "Over energetic Ophelia" retires to the end of the line, grumbling because she lost her serve.

The third kind of player is the "Phys-Ed major Phyllis" type. She serves the ball giving it just the right touch. The receiving team is powerless against this female Charles Atlas. She continues serving the ball until the opposite team becomes completely disgusted and sighs and waits for the teacher to say, "class dismissed."

Don't let anyone tell you volley ball isn't full of fun because it's really amusing to see how the different individuals of mankind react to the simple object of batting a ball over the net, not under it or around it.

Board Reaffirms Proposal Concerning Co-ed Status

Presidents Urge Approval Of Bill

The State Board of Education reaffirmed last Thursday its approval of a proposal to allow men students to enter Madison and Longwood colleges, the State's two teachers' colleges for women.

But the Board added provisos that it shall approve the admission of men in the two institutions upon the statement of the applicant that he intends to teach and that such men be allowed to enroll only in teacher training curricula.

Presidents Urge Approval

Presidents Dabney S. Lancaster, of Longwood College, and G. Tyler Miller, of Madison College, appeared before the Board urging that men be admitted. They argued that such an amendment to the laws creating the colleges for "the education of white female teachers'" would be only "giving legal sanction to something we are already doing."

Men are now enrolled at each of the institutions under a ruling by the Attorney-General that the law did not specifically bar men as students. Both presidents pointed out that the two colleges are placing greater emphasis upon the preparation of teachers than any other colleges in the state.

The institution heads argued that the admission of male students on a permanent basis is necessary if more men are to become teachers in Virginia's public school. According to Dr. Lancaster there is universal agreement that more men teachers are needed. There are more than 200 accredited colleges for teachers in the United States. All but 4 of these admit men on an equal basis with women, 3 of the 4 are in Virginia.

Six Approve

By a close vote in October, five members of the Board authorized the two presidents to have a bill in the General Assembly to allow men students. Six of the seven board members confirmed the action last Thursday.

Virginians Booked For Junior Dance

The "Virginians" from Emporia, will set the musical stage for the Junior Dance to be held February 12, Jean Carter Watkins, co-chairman of the dance announced today.

Tickets for the Junior Dance will go on sale the first part of next week, Evelyn Farrier, co-chairman of the publicity committee said today. Tickets will be sold to juniors Monday on the second floor of Ruffner Hall. Beginning Tuesday, the entire student body will be able to get their tickets which will sell for $1.80 stag and $2.40 drag.

Secretary Resigns To Move To Florida

Mrs. Willard Leeper recently resigned her position as secretary to President Dabney S. Lancaster. She left yesterday to accompany her husband to Gainesville, Florida, where he will do graduate work at the University of Florida.

Mrs. Mary Lou Bagley Pickhardt, who has been employed as part-time assistant in the College Library, will assume the duties of secretary to the president today.

8 Complete Work Toward Degrees

To Return In June For Graduation

Eight students completed their course of study necessary for baccalaureate degrees last week. These students will return to receive their diplomas at the spring graduation exercises.

Among those completing their courses in January were Nancy Deane Bruce from Richmond, B. S. in Elementary Education; Mrs. Ann Scruggs Critizer from Farmville, B.S. in Elementary Education; Carolyn Rose Grimes, of Portsmouth, B.S. in Physical Education and Nancy Virginia Kibler from Arlington, B.A. in Music.

Others who have completed their required courses are Willard Glenn Leeper from Farmville, B. S. in Business Education; Douglas Lyle Paulson of Farmville, B.S. in Secondary Education with a major in History; Roberta Jean Robertson, from Church Road, B.S. in Elementary Education; and Betty Lewis Shank of Roanoke, B.A. in Secondary Education with a major in English.

Announce Changes In Home Ec Course

Changes in the Longwood home economics curriculm, providing for more specialized study within the field, have been announced by Dean William W. Savage. The revised home ec. curriculm, along with the two new music curricula anounced last term will appear in the regular 1950-'51 catalog which is expected to arrive any day from the printers.

The new home economics program is being set up under the direction of Miss Fern E. Staggs, home economics professor. Under the new plan home ec. students, beginning with the third year, may specialize in home economics education, commercial foods, or textile and clothing merchandising. Those who specialize in home economics education may obtain collegiate professional certificates.

Students desiring copies of the new catalog upon its arrival may obtain them from Dean Savage's office.

Attends Convention

Dr. Beverly Ruffin, College Librarian, spent last week in Chicago attending the mid-winter meeting of the American Library Association. The meeting began on January 23 and lasted through January 29.

Richmond Pastor To Lead Students In Religious Week

Discussion Groups To Be Held Nightly

"Maximum Christianity" will be the theme of the annual Religious Emphasis Week which will begin on campus February 14 and will continue until February 16.

The Rev. Byron M. Wilkinson, pastor of the Grove Avenue Baptist Church in Richmond, Virginia, will be guest speaker during the week. He will speak to the student body in Tuesday chapel and in assembly Thursday. Throughout the week, informal discussion groups will be held each night after prayers in the Student lounge. A question box is located beneath the Y' bulletin board in the hall. Students are urged by the Y' cabinet to leave any questions there they might want discussed. Mr. Wilkinson will be speaking in various class rooms during the week and will hold personal conferences with any students requesting them.

The Y.W.C.A. social committee, under the direction of Evelyn Farrier, will officially welcome Mr. Wilkinson on Monday night, February 13, with a reception in the Student Lounge.

Bonnie Gerralls is in charge of publicity for the week, while other cabinet members will head committees on arrangements, finance, hospitality and music.

According to Dot Wood, Y' vice-president, Mr. Wilkinson enjoys working with young people and young people like him. "We are very fortunate and happy to have him on our campus. Let's make the week of February 14-16 one of deeper religious experience and new insight into the Christian way of life," Dot said.

Rotunda Heralds Semester's Arrival With New Nameplate

Rotunda readers have doubtless noticed that this paper is celebrating the new semester with a changed nameplate at the top of the page. Designed and drawn by staff artist, Helen Arrington, the new nameplate represents a break with some 12 years' tradition.

When the old nameplate, which was adopted circa 1938, recently began to show signs of wear, the staff decided a change was in order. Helen submitted several preliminary designs for staff approval, and the one appearing above won a hands-down majority. The Rotundar hopes that the student body will share staff approval of what it believes to be a definite boost to the appearance of the College newspaper.

Night School Enrollment To Begin

Regular session students who wish to enroll in classes in the Evening Division of Longwood College may do so Friday, February 3, between 7 p. m. and 9 p. m., in West Wing (Library Hall), Dean William W. Savage, director of the Evening Division, has announced. Evening classes will begin the week of February 5 and end during the week of May 28.

Nine courses will be offered Evening Division students. High school credits, college credits or no credit will be given, as the student desires. Classes will be taught in painting, The New Testament, beginning typewriting, beginning shorthand, elementary accounting, business law, foreign food cookery, interior decoration and public speaking.

Respective professors will be Mr. Robert C. Vickers, Mr. Charles F. McRae, Mr. Norman C. Myers, Mr. Christy Snead, Dr. M. L. Landrum, Mr. William P. Hay, Jr., Miss Fern Staggs, Miss Margaret Sprunt Hall, and Dr. Robert C Beale.

Evening Division tuition will be $20 for each course. Regular session students who plan to enroll in evening courses are advised that their total academic load must not exceed the amount they are ordinarily allowed to take. Evening Division bulletins may be obtained from Dean Savage's office.

Duncan to Reign as May Queen; Sours Chosen Maid of Honor

20 To Serve On '50 Court

Dolores Duncan, senior from Norfolk, will reign as queen of the 1950 May Day celebration at Longwood College, according to an announcement made by Patsy Ritter, general chairman of the annual festival. Barbara Sours, senior from Chatham, will serve as Dolores' maid of honor.

Representing the senior class on the May Day court will be June Banks, Marjorie Boswick, Frances Dodson, Hilda Edwards, Betty Ferguson, and Frances Garnett. Other senior members of the court are Helen Hardin, Martha "B" Hylton, Patsy Kimbrough, and Peggy White.

Juniors

Junior members of this bevy of beauties will be Claudia Anderson, Charlotte K. Jones, Romine Mahood, Isaac Velazquez, and Charlotte Williams.

From the sophomore class will come Anne M. Motley, Jean Ridenour, and Frances Turner to take their places on the May Day court.

Representing the freshman class on the court will be Jean Kreinbaum and Margaret Taylor.

Theme

The annual May Day pageant will, this year, trace the development of the waltz from its beginnings until the present days, showing its changes under the influence of various nationalities and classes of society. Practice for the 1950 festivities will not begin until the latter part of March, Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, director of the annual production, has announced, although many of the group dances will be taught in the regular physical education classes before that time.

Competitive Sings To Begin Feb. 4

Frosh To Give First Program

The first in a series of competitive class sings will be presented Saturday night, February 4, by the freshman class Nathalie Bryant, chairman of the freshman sing, stated that the theme and place of the skit will be announced later.

Each class has entered this contest which will be continued throughout February on succeeding Saturday nights. June Foreman, chairman of the Y' sing committee, has announced the schedule for the class presentations. The sophomore class will give their sing February 11; the junior class, February 18; and the senior class, February 25.

Judges for the contest will consist of two faculty members and a student from each class. The names of the three judges are kept secret until the end of the competition. Sings are judged on the basis of originality and good entertainment. A five-dollar award will be presented to the winning class by the YWCA which annually sponsors the competitive sings during the month of February.

High School Seniors To Visit Longwood

Senior students from high schools in the Piedmont and Tidewater areas of Virginia will visit Longwood College during the weekends from February 4 through March 5, Dean Ruth Gleaves recently announced.

Girls from Northern Neck, Norfolk, and Glen Allen high schools will be here the weekend of February 4. The following weekend, seniors from Norfolk's three high schools and from Portsmouth will visit the college.

AKG To Provide Sat. Programs

Plans Underway For Entertainments

This Saturday night, Feb. 4, will see the beginning of a new program by the local circle of Alpha Kappa Gamma, women's leadership society, to provide week end entertainment for Longwood students.

Plans for Saturday's program have not been completed, but they will be announced soon, Jackie Wright, president of Joan Circle, said. Probably a movie will be shown, followed by a card party, the president added.

In making the announcement Jackie emphasized that A.K.G. dies not wish to run competition with Saturday night juke box dances. For that reason, some of the affairs will be "hen parties", while on week ends when no dances are scheduled, students may come both "stag and drag." There will be no admission charge for the programs which are being planned solely to provide additional week end recreation for students.

Ray Phillips and Patsy Ritter are in charge of the entertainment this Saturday night. Student suggestions for programs to be presented intermittently in the future will be welcomed, Jackie stated.

'Hour' To Present Musical Talent Show

A group of students will present a musical talent show tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 p. m. over the regular WFLO Longwood Hour. The program is being arranged by June Banks and Maria Jackson.

The Chatham trio, consisting of "Cab" Overbey, Louise Redd, and Barbara Sours will sing "How Deep is the Ocean?" Ann Moody, Barbara Hawkins and Maria Jackson will impromptu on "I'm Alone.

Orchesis Recital To Portray Novel

by Mary Leigh Meredith

Orchesis, the College modern dance club, will present a dance drama, "The Plum Tree" from Mary Ellen Chase's novel by the same name, at their annual recital in March. The entire drama is to be written, choreographed and staged by the club with Mrs. Emily K. Landrum as advisor.

Having dealt with the ridiculous, the lugubrious, the sublime, and the grotesque in satirical short forms of compositions, the club elected, at a meeting before the winter holiday, to concentrate efforts on a more serious work, which would become the epitome of work in dance for that organization.

The action in "The Plum Tree" takes place at a Home for Aging Women on whose lawn grows a lone plum tree. The silent taunt of thep lum tree suggests what life must have been or still could be to Nurse Emma Davis. All scenes shift to the Plum Tree, which is the true protagonist of the play, although Nurse Davis is the main character.

Narrator

On a stage bare of props except for the bare essentials, a narrator will unfold the drama with the voice prompting much of the action or dance movements on stage. At other intervals the voices of the principal characters themselves will prompt the action.

Casting for "The Plum Tree" is now being completed and a complete cast will be announced in a later issue of the Rotunda.

Legalize Our Men.....

The wheels of legal action are being oiled by the State preparatory to legalizing the enrollment of men students at Longwood College. While the State ponders, the enrollment at Longwood for the current session is approximately 6% male entered under a special ruling by the Attorney General. The bill, which the State Board of Education reapproved last week, will merely legalize something already in practice.

The two colleges, Longwood and Madison, which will receive legal sanction of their co-educational status by the passage of the bill by the General Assembly, are, at present, the only two State colleges emphasizing teacher training. Setting these two colleges up for the education of women only meant that Virginia men had to go out of state to receive a degree in education and that the Virginia public school system was forced to import men teachers from out of state colleges, or either to take as teachers men who had received degrees in fields other than education. It is time the legislators attempted to solve these difficulties by allowing men students to enroll at Longwood and Madison Colleges.

The need for men teachers in the public school system has long been a recognized fact. That these men should have less teacher training than their women coworkers in far from logical. If Virginia wants men teachers in its public school system it should prepare them.

The proposal to set Longwood and Madison upon a firm co-educational basis has been approved by the State Board of Education. Now it remains only for the General Assembly to discard its old hat "female normal school" notions and pass the bill.

Applause For Assembly Committee.....

Below is an editorial produced in Mr. J. M. Grainger's jounalism class last semester. This view of the much discussed assembly question should interest students and assembly committee alike.

In the past, assembly committee has been perplexed concerning the type of assembly program the students really would enjoy. It seems to have hit upon an answer, judging by the students' reactions to recent programs. An excellent example of this is the favorable reaction to the last program, an organ recital by Mrs. M. C. Herrington, minister of music of the Farmville Methodist Church. Much of the conversation carried on throughout the dining hall that night centered around the enjoyable assembly program. It was also a popular subject in dormitory "sessions."

This favorable student reaction to the musical program seems to reveal that students are more interested in programs designed to develop their appreciation of the fine arts than in programs featuring "distinguished" speakers from all parts of the country, who stand upon the platform for fifty minutes and read practically every line of a dry address. There are definite exceptions to this rule, as has been exemplified by speakers several times this year, and when these exceptions have occurred, the students have responded to them as favorably as to the other type of program.

Congratulations go to the assembly committee in bringing to the students last semester, more programs which helped to develop their appreciation for the aesthetic values of life. We do not want them to go "all overboard" in trying to develop an appreciation for the aesthetic and neglect all other phases of life, but we appreciate their realizing the students need for this sort of program and doing something about it. — Nancy Kibler.

Groundhog Gets 'Foxed'...

Those of us fortunate enough to be possessed of either annotated calendars or good memories have noted that tomorrow marks the annual appearance of the groundhog. From here it looks as if the groundhog is going to get "foxed" this year. Tradition has it that if the groundhog sees his shadow, 6 more weeks of winter weather are bound to follow. But who cares if the the sun does shine sidewise on the old woodchuck, when we've yet to see any real winter this season? Whatever the sun decides to do, we've seen a sight less of Jack Frost than we ordinarily would. But then, what self-respecting groundhog would even bother to hole up in such balmy times?

OUR WORLD

By Nellie Hart

Since the inauguration of John Battle as Governor of Virginia, the views of the delegates of the General Assembly have been slightly varied concerning his plan for the public school system. Battle's proposal consists of an outright grant of $45,000,000 by the State to localities for the building of schools.

Some are reacting more favorably to the proposal by Senator Garland Gray for a 50-50 matching recommendation by the State and localities, instead of the lone lump sum granted by the Assembly.

Senator Curry Carter of Arlington when questioned about Battle's proposal stated that, "I do not see any doubt about the passing of the grants bill without appreciable amendments." He further announced that he believed in the bill more as an emergency bill, for he thought the majority of the localities, although desperately in need of new school facilities, are unable to match the sum decided upon by the state.

Many of the backers of Battle's proposal emphasize that they agree with him only in consideration of the fact that an emergency exists in the school situation. Many also believe in his present bill, but think that it is a good idea to match funds in the future after the existing condition has been improved.

Letters To Editor

Dear Editor:

The proper recipient of this letter should be Mr. Smallwood to whom it is really directed.

I would like to express my opinion on his article "Scanning the Field", published in the last issue of the Rotunda. To begin with, the very first sentence was completely incorrect. I do not hold down the entire managerial end of Women's basketball at Longwood. Shirley Livesay is Assistant Varsity Manager and has worked doubly hard this year, since we had to change the "F" on our uniforms to "L". This was only one of the many things Shirley has done concerning her job. It seems to me that a person writing an article which approximately some five hundred students will read, should at least ask the proper individuals for accurate information before writing any statement to be published in a paper.

In his article, Mr. Smallwood states that Longwood College lets its Athletic Program stagnate. According to our limitations I know we haven't allowed this to happen. Don't you think that since this is a State Institution and we do turn out teachers, that if we had allowed this to occur, something would have been said long ago by the State authorities?

You say we need publicity through athletics—I'll grant you that is true—but do you advocate that we start paying our athletes?

I can't quite see where you are in any position to even hint that our physical education majors are going out into the field unprepared. If you knew anything about the subject of physical education, you'd realize that competitive sports are only a small integral part of the complete broad field!

I was unaware we had a psychological depression among some of our girls resulting from our inconsistent schedule. It seems strange that they haven't brought this fact (if it is one) to our attention.

Most of the seniors on the varsity team have been coming out for basketball for four years, and it seems to me they wouldn't have continued thus if it hadn't been worth their while.

We play the minimum number of games a season as called for in the official basketball guide, which is five games. So far this season only four are definitely scheduled, but we are trying to get the fifth scheduled now. We do not play games in the week, and even with a number of five games, it is difficult to find week ends vacant on the school calendar. Financially it is only posible to play a limited number a year. Most of the girls couldn't play an extensive season and keep up with their other extra-curricular activities. The boys haven't been here long enough to have as many organizations to belong to as the girls, and therefore aren't forced to divide their time as most of the women students.

Pedro's Pocket

By Jean Turner

We can all heave a mighty sigh of relief—whether you passed your exams or failed 'em—at least they're over for another four months. It was reported to Pedro that a few "die-hards" remained on campus last week end. Unless your one and only lives, works, or is jailed in Farmville, Pedro has his own private, unprintable opinion of you.

Pedro, through his super-snooper tactics, has found out the May Court line up even before this paper went to press. He has asked me to offer his congratulations to the College beauties. He mumbled something about the May Court looking so nice in the rec,' but that they'd be "all wet" come May Day. However, we are trying to overlook his pessimistic view point. The law of averages says we gotta win sometime. It just dosen't stand to reason that it'll rain every May Day.

Pedro has another award to present. It seems that through all the excitement of Monday night before last the courage and devotion of one stands out. I don't know his name, but he is Question: Do you think it's wrong for the Rotunda to publish anonymous letters?

Bert Browning: No. The writer runs the risk of being misunderstood and is liable to too much criticism. A student can't express himself freely if he signs his name.

May Henry Sadler: Yes, because anyone who believes in what he writes shouldn't be ashamed to sign his name. A signed letter carries more weight.

Winnie Murdock: No, because a student's idea, even though it's a good one, may bring forth undue criticism.

Jean Claire Wilson: Yes. Anyone who believes in something strongly enough to make a public statement should uphold their convictions by signing their name.

Billie Marie Wood: No. Too often those in authority take offense at what is written and hold it against the author.

Marla Jackson: No, because it may bring a lot of unecessary criticism on the writer.

Nancy Lawrence: I think if a person has the nerve to write what they think, they should have the nerve to sign their names. However, it's a hard question to decide.

Barbara White: I think people should sign their names because it's cowardly not to admit to what you have written.

Mr. Reed: (Night-watchman): Either the name should be printed or the matter should be taken up in the editorial column so that the public can know who is responsible.

Ann Nock: I think students would gladly sign their letters if they weren't afraid the faculty or administration would take advantage of it.

Janice Slavin: No, because a person may be discriminated against in some cases.

Marion Breeden: No, because it gives students a chance to express their ideas on various subjects.

Charlotte Williams: If the students want to express their opinions anonymously it's all right as long as their remarks are not degrading but only suggestions.

June Banks: It depends on what the issue concerns.

Claudia Anderson: I think it should be left to the individual, for this is the students' paper.

Jeanne Gilman: If a person feels strongly enough to write letters to the Rotunda, they should sign their name.

Frances Creger: Yes! !

Sweet Songs of Painters Keep Students Entertained

by Mary Crowgey

Who are those light-hearted souls whose sweet singing calls us from pleasant slumberland every morning at around seven o'clock? Whose music keeps us entertained as we lie out on the roof trying to get a sun tan in the early spring-time? Everybody knows! The Longwood painters!

We went to the library the other day . . . to interview the painters. In all our many years at this institution, we have never seen that place in such a "state." Singing, joking, laughing, and talking! It must be admitted that such a spirit of fun as this was quite an improvement over the usual solemn atmosphere. A library, like every other building in the world, should be a place of gaiety and laughter. If the painters want to paint only one square inch per hour over there, it suits us just perfectly.

The painters never did get the point of the interview. There they were, all perched around on scaffolds, swinging their legs in mid air. (One of those things broke the other day, but we will tell you about that in a later paragraph). With all the confusion there, small wonder that they understood not a word we were trying to say! After one of the crew finally figured that we were trying to get their telephone numbers, we left.

On the way back from the library, a most amazing incident occurred. One of the reporters got in the way of a man looking through an instrument resembling a telescope; he was surveying for the new auditorium. Not seeing the "telescope," but only the horrified expression on the girl's face at blocking the man's view, the rest of us thought we were being shot at. This resulted in no end of confusion.

A note of tragedy was struck in the library recently. A scaffold broke, seriously injuring two men, who were painting the ceiling. The two voices are badly missed in the choir. The painters' harmonizing is usually so good that the girls who go over there to study say they have trouble concentrating.

It's quitting time now; the sun is setting. The painters have picked up their pails and other paraphernalia (except a couple pairs of old shoes they've left lying around). We see them trudging homeward, still singing!

Scanning The Field

By LESTER SMALLWOOD

SCANNING THE FIELD

Author's note — For clarity and understanding read first the Letter to the Editor by Patsy Ritter, before proceeding with Scanning The Field.

LIVESAY IS UNJUSTLY NEGLECTED

I wholeheartedly agree that a policy of extending full credit whenever and wherever such credit is deserving, is by all means the least that can be done for the individual, group, or both, as the case may be. I apologize for neglect of the complete managerial picture — Patsy Ritter is not alone in handling the managerial ends of women's varsity basketball at Longwood. She has the services of Shirley Livesay as the assistant manager.

HAS LC ITS ATHLETIC PROWESS STAGNATE ? ? ?

I believe that Longwood College has let its athletic prowess stagnate.. Miss Ritter states that she knows that "according to our limitations" we have not let our athletic prowess stagnate. She seems to be convinced of her stand, but she presents no reliable material upon which to base her conclusion, and "I'm from Miss ouri" — ya gotta prove it to me.

The State Authorities, in our case, the State Board of Education of Virginia, leaves entirely to the discretion of the institution, the selection and quantity of intercollegiate contests in sports; therefore, we have not had, and will not receive, regardless, any comments from them on this matter. The Board, however, does have to approve all raises in college fees, and if and when the college should decide to add on an athletic fee for the strengthening financially of its athletic program, the Board would have the power to veto it.

PAY FOR ATHLETIC AT LONGWOOD ? ? ?

Of course I do not advocate that we, at the present time, pay for our athletes. We have hardly enough financial resources to maintain an adequate intramural and extramural program. But I do maintain that without offering financial bait, many such desired players are already right here. Why not develop these resources to the maximum degree?

COMPETITIVE SPORTS

I realize that competitive sports are an integral part of the larger and more complete broad field of physcial education, though I disagree in the expressed smallness of its importance, because it is an end product, in that there is a demand for coaches and directors etc.; Therefore, it is a very important part and should under no circumstances be slighted in any way. Generally the most desirable instructor is one who has had as much direct experience as possible in his field.

How many more seniors would you have on the basketball team if you offered a schedule that would be well worth "going

The Burnette sisters, Ann and Page, will give a piano duet version of "Thou Swell." Betsy Hankins will sing "Hello, Baby". A junior trio of Bobbie Pollard, Virginia Spencer, and Ann Burnette will offer "Somebody Loves Me." Natalie Byrant, Norma Roady, Frankie Dodson, Dolores Hoback, Bobbie Page, Virginia Westbrook, and Charlotte Jones have not yet announced their selections.

The entire group will join in "In the Evening by the Moonlight" for the finale. Accompanists will be Ann and Page Burnette and June Banks.

LC Pioneers Lose 69-35 To Town Five

Proceeds Benefit March Of Dimes

The Longwood College Pioneers dropped a 69 to 35 decision to the Farmville Town Team last Friday night, January 27, on the college floor. The game was played for the benefit of the March of Dimes fund.

The Town Team was determined to avenge its earlier defeat at the hands of the Pioneers and started at a fast clip, never relinquishing its early lead. Close guarding in the back court by the Town Team prevented Longwood from working the ball to within shooting range, consequently few shots were taken from the floor.

Lack of practice during the exam period had a telling effect on the home team. The players were not in their best physical condition nor were they operating smoothly as a team.

Les Smallwood was high scorer for the Pioneers with 12 points.

7 Complete Work For Certificates

Seven local students will receive the standard and advanced Red Cross First Aid certificates, as a result of completing the course offered last semester, Miss Catherine Osborne, of the Longwood physical education department, has announced. Miss Osborne was instructor of the First Aid class.

Recipients of First Aid certificates are Katherine Buck, Jacky Eagle, Joyce Hamlet, Jackie Jardine, Jeanine Powell, Ilene Russell and Nancy Walker. Completion of the advanced course entitles these students to take the Red Cross instructor's course in First Aid, when a Red Cross field representative visits the College.

ut for"? Indications are that some are on the border line of doubt, and obviously were in hockey. Even the Official Guides do not advocate such few games.

THE PROPOSED PROBLEMS

In Miss Ritter's last paragraph she gets to her real points. if she has any at all. Here however she admits the very thing I am talking about — she gives the fact that Longwood is now playing fewer games than the Official Basketball Guide For Women and Girls sets as a MINIMUM, much less a maximum, for HIGH SCHOOL age groups which she forgot to mention. It states that the maximum for college and adult groups is 14 games, one each week.

I do not believe that the school calendar is as crowded as Miss Ritter indicates — I do know that the men would not mind at all playing their games as a part of a double header when dates clash. I remember that when I was in high school, the girls played ten games. Of course, they did not go to New York to play them nor did they go to their games in taxis; but they got to them all and the expenses did not go up into the hundreds of dollars.

In college as in life we mus. make choices because it is not possible to do each and every little thing that one may be able to do or enjoy. It is much better to choose a few things that you can do well and get the most out of than to get into as many things as you can and end by only having your name on the scrolls. I advocate a good program for those who can and will put in the time that is required for satisfactory results in anything.

Mrs. Ma Will Speak To Baptist Students

Mrs. Irene Ma, a Chinese student at R.P.I. has been invited to visit on campus this week end by the Baptist Student Union. Mrs. Ma's talks to the students will center around the mission book, "Carved on Our Hearts".

Saturday night, Mrs. Ma will speak informally to students at the Baptist Student Center at 7:30 p. m. She will address the congregation of the Baptist Church Sunday morning at the regular church hour. Another informal session will be held Sunday afternoon at the Student Center and Mrs. Ma will conclude this series of talks Sunday night at the Baptist Church at 7 p. m.

Rev. Wilkinson Will Lead Religious Emphasis Week

Speaker To Conduct Group Discussions

The Reverend Byron M. Wilkinson, guest speaker for Religious Emphasis Week, will be welcomed by the faculty and students on Monday, February 13, with an informal reception in the student lounge.

Thorughout the coming week in talks and discussions Mr. Wilkinson will expand the topic "Maximum Christianity." He will speak to the student body in chapel Tuesday, and in Assembly on the following Thursday. Mr. Wilkinson will also be holding discusion groups in the Student Lounge Tuesday and Wednesday evenings at 7 p. m.

Born in Huntington, W. Va., Mr. Wilkinson was graduated from Marshall College in Huntington. He also attended the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary and the University of Louisville in Louisville, Ky.

Serving at present as pastor of the Grove Avenue Baptist Church of Richmond, he has also served as pastor in Corbin, Ky., Bluefield, W. Va., and Griffin, Ga.

THE REV. BYRON M. WILKINSON, who will be the main speaker for Religious Emphasis Week to be held on campus next week.

Chesterfield Co. Sponsors Contest

Beginning with the next issue of the Rotunda, a Chesterfield "Letter to the Editor" contest will be inaugurated. A carton of Chesterfield cigarettes will be awarded to the author of the best letter published in the paper each week. This contest will last one month and will be continued if response warrants it.

Letters should express students' ideas and opinions on campus improvements, administrative improvement, commendations, student needs or any subject relating to the College. The winner of the carton of Chesterfields will be announced in the Rotunda each week.

Contest Rules

1. All Longwood students are eligible except members of the Rotunda staff.
2. Deadline on letters is Monday night at 9 p. m. each week.
3. Letters must not exceed 500 words.
4. All letters must be signed.
5. Decision of the judges is final.
6. Letters may be mailed to Box 168, L. C., placed in the Rotunda box in Ruffner Hall, or handed to the editor.

The letters will be judged by the Rotunda editor and Betty Ferguson, campus representative for Chesterfield cigarettes, one of the Rotunda's largest and most consistant advertisers.

Local Artist Topic Of 'Longwood Hour'

The Voice of Longwood, broadcast each Thursday over WFLO at 4:30 p. m., will have as its topic this week, "Paintings of J. W. Ward, local artist." It will feature a discusson of the exhibit of Mr. Ward's oil and water color paintings now being shown in the browsing room of the library.

The program will be sponsored by the Woman's Club of Farmville. Mrs. Fred Hamburg will introduce Mr. Ward who will be interviewed by Miss Virginia Bedford, associate professor of art here.

Being a local artist, Mr. Ward has protrayed many rural scenes in this vicinity.

20 New Students Matriculate Here For 2nd Term

Twenty new students matriculated for the second semester here, the Registrar announced this week. There are 16 women and four men.

Three of the 20 students are freshmen.They are Molly Ann Pharis of Martinsville John Lewis Sanderford, Farmville; and Barbara Louise Taylor, Sandston.

Students who transferred here from other colleges are William Sidney Foreman from Hampden-Sydney College; Harriet Gutterman, George Washington University; Mrs. Heline Itamer Harrison, Mary Baldwin College; and Mary Lou Craft, Richmond Professional Institute.

Others who transferred are Ida Marie Mims, Lynchburg College; Jean Moore, Alabama College; William Irving Overby, Richmond College; and Beatrice Massey, Lynchburg College.

Also among the newcomers are Mrs. Nellie Anderson Bowles; Mrs. Grace Oakes Burton, Danville; Miss Frances Darlington, Farmville; Miss Anna Famulatte, New York, (former student here); Mrs. Jacquelin Cock Ferraro, Hampton; Miss Rosalie Spain, Church Road; Robert Bradshaw, Rice; and Mrs. W. P. Isley, Hampton.

College Alumnae Board Meets Here

The Executive Board of the Longwood College Alumnae Association met at Longwood College, Saturday, Feb. 4. Those present were Miss Helen Costan, of Lynchburg, president of the alumnae association; Mrs. James Greene, of Chevy Chase, Md., first vice-president; Mrs. Roy Lyle, of Danville, second vice-president; and Mrs. M. Boyd Coyner, secretary and treasurer.

Also present were the directors of this organization, which incuded: Miss Frances Horton, of Roanoke; Miss Lillian Wahab, of Norfolk; and Mrs. Warren F. Curtis, of Richmond, who was proxy for Mrs. Thomas J. Starke, of the same city. Miss Mary Clay Hiner and Miss Carrie B. Taliaferro, of this city, are also directors. Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster was present as an ex officio member of the board.

Following the morning business session, a luncheon was served in the Snack Bar.

Group Discusses Men Delegates, Activities Average In Recent Meet

Faculty Committee Presents Problem For Student View

Men and "C" averages were the big items on the Student Standards agenda when the committee met last Thursday. As a result of committee action the local men's Student Government acquired Student Standards representation. The committee gave a vote of approval to a faculty proposal for modifying the existing "C" average scholastic requirement for participation in extracurricular activities.

Men Admitted

Calvin Hatcher, Men's Student Government president, appeared before the committee to explain that the men students sought representation on the present Student Standards committee as a more effective alternative to setting up of a separate organization of their own. The proposal met no opposition, and it was decided to admit two representatives of Men's Student Government to the committee.

"C" Average

A faculty committee introduced a proposal originating in last week's faculty meeting that the "C" average requirement for student participation in extracurricular activities be lowered or modified. This proposal was not presented for action by the committee but for the purpose of getting the group's opinion on the subject. Student Standards voiced approval of the projected measure by a sizeable majority.

Proponents of modifying the 1-point rule pointed out that the Longwood requirement is not in keeping with general practice at other colleges. They brought out that the rule's effectiveness is often defeated in many ways and that it works unnecessary hardship on both students and organizations affected. The faculty committee on student activities, headed by Miss Burger, will consider the question at length when it meets this week. After this study recommendations will be

LC Donates To 'March'

Student Body Response Lags

The total contribution to the March of Dimes by the student body, faculty and various campus organizations amounted to $149, Mr. Raymond French, chairman of the drive, announced today.

He stated that although the faculty responded well to the drive, student response lagged. Mr. French attributed this to the fact that the campaign was held during exam week and to the smaller enrollment this year. No goal was set for this year, but the total contribution did not come up to that of last year.

The student body contributed a total of $29 to the March of Dimes this year, and the faculty donated $70. Two dollars was contributed to the fund by Pi Kappa Sigma sorority, the Athletic Association gave $26 and the Pioneers contributed $14 as a result of basketball games at which collections were taken up. From boxes placed in the Snack Bar and the Tea Room $10 was collected for the fund.

Birthday Celebration Will Be Held Feb. 14

The February birthday dinner will be held Tuesday, February 14. Dean Ruth Gleaves announced today. Decorations will carry out the St. Valentine's Day theme.

President and Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster will be the special guests of honor at the dinner. Members of the state garden club who will be attending the Flower Show Judging School will also be guests at the occasion.

A program of simple music is being planned to entertain the diners between courses.

Music Professor To Give Concert

Most Selections Will Be Classics

Dr. John N. Molnar, head of the music department, will present a violin concert at the regular assembly hour tomorrow.

Dr. Molnar's first selection will be "Arioso" (Bach) followed by "Sonatina, D Major, Opus 137, No. 1" Allegro molto, Andante, and Allegro vivace (Schubert) and "Romance from Second Concerto" (Wieniawski).

Dr. Molnar's next selections will be two serenades, "Standchen" (Schubert) and "Serenade" (Pierne). "Berceuse" from Jocelyn (Godard) will follow these.

The final numbers will be five dances, "Bouree" (Handel), "Loure" (Bach), "Gavotte" (Gossec), "Spanish Dance" (Moszkowski), and "Hungarian Dance No. 5" (Brahms). He will be accompanied by Miss Emily Clark, assistant professor of music, on the piano.

Conducted Choirs

Dr. Molnar came to Longwood College to head the department of music from the University of Cincinnati where he had conducted numerous choirs, choral groups, and orchestras for the past few years.

In speaking of his love for the violin, Dr. Molnar told of running away to a gipsy camp when he was about three because of the violins, and of hearing with awe the great violinist, Fritz Kreisler, at the age of six.

Prefers Viola

He changed his major to viola during his days at the conservatory because he likes the tone better than that of the violin. "I do most of my playing now with a baton," Dr. Molnar commented, "making others play, and sing."

"The Wieniawski 'Romance' is one of my favorites," Dr. Molnar revealed. "I played it for my high school commencement."

Virginians To Play For Annual Dance

Members of the student body will be passing through the "swinging doors" next Saturday night at 8 p. m., into an atmosphere of a nineteenth century cabaret as they step into the juniors' interpretation of night life in the 1890's.

While dancing to the music of Pete Weaver's Virginians and surrounded by Gibson girls and waron wheels Longwood socialites will have the services of "cigarette" girls (the freshman commission in disguise) who will serve beverages and food throughout the juniors annual dance.

The juniors idea of a typical bar scene will be burlesqued in the floor show which will immediately precede intermission.

Receiving Line

The receiving line for the dance will include President and Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster, Dean and Mrs. William W. Savage and Dean Ruth Gleaves. Dr. and Mrs. Robert T. Brumfield and Mr. Raymond French will also be included with Betsy Gravely, president of the class, Betsy Wilson, vice-president, Ruth Gills, secretary, Patty Walker, treasurer, and Jackie Moody and Jean Carter Watkins, co-chairmen of the dance.

Among those who have been asked to chaperone the dance are Miss Olive T. Iler, Mr. Robert Vickers, Mrs. Katherine Tabb, Mrs. Caroline Eastham, Mr. and Mrs. Norman O. Myers, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Malloy, Dr. and Mrs. George Jeffers, Dr. and Mrs. Merle Landrum, Dr. and Mrs. John Molnar, Miss Gwen Cress, and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Graham.

Flower Show School To Hear Biology Prof. At Longwood Feb. 13

Dr. Robert T. Brumfield, associate professor of biology, will deliver an address on "Native Plants and Adaptability to the Garden" to the Flower Show Judging School to be held at Longwood College February 13-16.

Dr. Brumfield will speak to the group on Tuesday at a meeting to be held in Student building. Also on the program for Tuesday will be Mrs. Henry A. Davenport, of Roanoke, who will speak on "Flower Show Practice."

The school to be held here will be conducted by Dr. A. G. Smith, Jr., of Blacksburg. Approximately 100 people are expected to attend the meeting, representing garden clubs throughout this area. They will be accomodated in the College dormitories and will take their meals in the College dining hall. All meetings will be held in the Student building.

Typical Longwood Student Puts Blame on Professors

by Joanne Steck and Mary Crowgey

A biology major—or perhaps it was a student of chemistry—once observed that the reaction of Longwood "students" to their report cards resembles spontaneous combustion. According to an unofficial tabulation we made, this is true—too true. It is practically always the teachers who are to blame for the sad state of affairs, but never—no never—do students blame themselves. There are several types of reactions, as noted in our station of observation, the post office, where we posted observors on that fatal day of Feb. 1.

Approximately 6.79 of the Longwood student body reacted as did Miss Cyclone Susie. After hitting the ceiling a few times, this girl blew away to the library to read-up on how John Wilkes Booth assassinated Abraham Lincoln. She muttered something about trying it out on several of her teachers.

Next came in Weeping Sally. Only .65 of the College girls fit into this catagory, thank goodness! This young lady took one look at her grades and uttered a howl which could be heard clear over at Dean Savage's house. She goes over to library every night to read-up on how to mix and adminster painless poison (to oneself).

Then there is the little girl trying her best to get an MRS degree. She has been concentrating so hard on men that she has had little time for lesser subject mater. Naturally she is "crushed" by her four "F's," but lo and behold, an "A" on the Marriage and the Family course! It seems that her instructor liked her philosophy of marriage.

Just .01 of the Longwood "lovelies" fit into our next grouping represented by Miss Adora Book, head of the Dean's list. The mystery to all the other girls is how a curve can be so crooked. They figure that according to the law of gravitation, at least .99 of the College girls should make the honor roll.

According to this very scientific investigation we have made, Longwood students should do less wor-

Problem Remains Unsolved.....

With the publication of the letter to the editor from Mr. Malloy, speaking for 13 men students, the issue of women's athletics seems to have drawn to a close. Both sides of the argument have been published impartially by the Rotunda. Following standard newspaper practice, the staff assumes no responsibility for statements made in signed columns or in letters to the editor.

In summing up the situtaion the crux of the problem is "Does the Longwood College women's varsity team play enough intercollegiate games?" The columnist said no; the writer of last week's letter to the editor said yes. Basic differences in physical education theory make impossible the resolution of the problem. Student reaction has seemed to prove that the emphasis placed on intramural rather than intercollegiate sports at Longwood is satisfactorq.

In spite of this, the columnist was well within his rights in the points that he made, which were meant as constructive criticism. Unfortunately students have let personal grudges and petty emotions color their judgment of the controversy.

The Rotunda has been adversely criticized for publishing the controversy on the grounds that such matter is bad publicity for the College. The Rotunda was not established, and is not run, as an advertising medium for the College. We restate that "It aims, by publishing the news of the College, to keep the students, the faculty and the alumni informed as to what is going on; to reflect the opinions of students, faculty and administration on College affairs; and to serve as a current chronicle of College life." This is what students have demonstrated that they want, and this is the policy that we shall continue to follow.

Don't Pass This Up.....

One of the best founded boasts of Longwood College is the well rounded curricula it offers students academically and socially. We are given opportunities to develop in every possible way in class and out.

A phase of this "rounding out" program offered by the college is Religious Emphasis Week. The "Y" in co-operation with the administration has brought to the campus annually, eminent speakers who are anxious to discuss with us questions about life, race and sect problems and a myriad of other pertinent topics.

Throughout next week, the Rev. Byron M. Wilkinson will be on campus to serve in this capacity. In the "bull sessions" and talks you will have the chance to discuss and compare your ideas and opinions with one who has made a specialized study of these important topics.

This is an opportunity created specifically for you — one that will enable you to add to that ever broadening personality. Don't pass it up!

'Hens' Crow Over AKG Party.....

Those unfortunates who for one reason or another are spending the week-end on campus are no longer a forgotten minority. Last Saturday night A. K. G. initiated a program that was and we hope will continue to be a huge success. "Hens" flocked from every building to take part in the activities scheduled in the gym and pool.

Judging from the success of this first "Hen Party", similar events will be in demand from now on. Tentative plans are being made now for future Saturday evening entertainments, some to include dates and some strictly for the "hens".

We feel sure that those who participated in the gaiety of last Saturday night will join with us in giving a vote of thanks to A. K. G. for this entertaining innovation.

OUR WORLD

By Nellie Hart

Scientists, not content with the devastating results of the atomic bombs, have finally discovered, through vast and unlimited experiments, the inhuman hydrogen bomb. With this statement, 12 American scientists issued a warning that this bomb should be used only in denfensive warfare. They further announced that, in their opinion, the bomb should be developed only to prevent its being used by other nations.

The amount of information about the hydrogen bomb held by Russian scientists is unknown, but it is believed that Russia will definitely be able to build the bomb, too. If the fact that Dr. Klaus Fuchs, a once trusted British scientist, relayed secret information to the Russians can be verified, that in itself is sufficient for us to believe that they can duplicate our efforts. Dr. Fuchs had vast access to vital information, not only on the atomic bomb, but also on the data of the proposed hydrogen bomb. If the accusation is incorrect, Russia will have heard of the development of this bomb in the United States anyway through mere newspaper and radio reports, and naturally will strive to equal it.

Dr. Fuchs is the second British scientist to be accused of smuggling information to the Russians. This fact has created quite a disturbance in the United States, and it has been mentioned that it may result in the severing of all connections between Great Britain and the United States in the exchange of atomic information. It is to be hoped that this can be avoided.

Letters To Editor

Dear Editor:

The writer feels that he should call the attention of the student body of Longwood College to the fact that the recent (Wednesday, Feb. 1) Rotunda article, "Scanning the Field", is an expression of personal opinion, and in no way should be interpreted as representing the feelings or opinions of the "Co-eds". This statement, the writer believes, is particularly applicable to those "Co-eds" who are members of the men's varsity basketball team.

The writer feels that there are some valid criticisms of the men's intercollegiate activities which could be made. These, however, will be submitted to the administration of the college in a formal report at the termination of the present basketball season; and in all fairness, it must be added that they are due, in every case, to the novelty of nature of men's activities here at Longwood. In general, the men participating in basketball feel that every effort has been made to assure them of having a place of their own in athletic activities, and are grateful to the College for the opportunities that have been presented.

Sincerely,
Thomas A. Malloy, Jr.,
Faculty Advisor, Men's Basketball Team.

(Ed. Note: Due to lack of space, we have not been able to print the names of the 13 Co-eds who also signed this letter.)

Dear Editor:

Three weeks ago when I handed you that crow to pick concerning anonymous letters in the ROTUNDA, I didn't realize quite what I was rushing into. I hardly expected my crow to come back a buzzard. But—

"Can a student be sure that frank speech will not bring down vengeance from a faculty member?" asks your editorial writer.

Now, Dear Editor, I'm asking you again, if the writer of that question had been required to sign it, would not she have weighed her own words more carefully? Does the problem concern "frank speech" or does it concern ill considered, rash expressions of personal opinions? In the question quoted above, for instance, there is lodged an accusation against every one of sixty or seventy people personally, which if made in the public press might become a cause for libel. Being in the form of a question does not mitigate the charge. The personal and professional honor of every individual in the group is impeached. And by withholding the signature of the writer you have deprived the victims of their right to defend themselves against the accuser. Is the ROTUNDA living up to its responsibility to all concerned? Should not every offender against justice be judged?

Since no one else has seen fit to pick you up on the question, I can't pass it up. In behalf of myself and my colleagues, I deny the allegation. Here we are all deeply obligated "to do justly and walk humbly." And I can assure you that every one of us sincerely and humbly strives to be just, not vengeful. However, until names are named and signatures are signed, wild accusations will continue to be made and no justice will be had. Discord will prevail. Speaking for the heart of the College, the ROTUNDA should exert a unifying spiritual influence among us.

Upon us now rests a critical responsibility for the survival of Longwood College. To survive we must all pull together agreeably. The College has a bright future if all of us team up to carry it through this critical period. There is no way to estimate what a team of over seven hundred people like ours can achieve if they all pull together.

Let the ROTUNDA lead.

James M. Grainger

Editor's note: Mr. Grainger's first quotation is taken from an editor's note attached to his letter in the January 18 issue of the ROTUNDA. It is usually assumed that the editor-in-chief of a publication stands responsible for editorials and editor's notes. The editor's name can be found in the masthead at the lower left corner of this page.

Snag That Stag!

Campus Cogitations

Question: How much would you pay to have someone cut on you at the Junior Dance?

Shirley Atkinson: I ain't got a date.

Hilda Bauserman: That question's not for me. I won't be there.

Jane Grey: They'd pay me if they'd ever danced with my date before.

Helen Connelly: Am I supposed to say something witty?

Janie Lyon: I wouldn't pay 'em a red cent.

Ella Sue Smith: Nothing. I wanta dance with my man all night long.

Charlotte S. Jones: Nothing. I'm satisfied with my date.

Anne McMullan: Mercy, I'm not going.

Anne Joyner: "Giggle".

Jill Pifer: How much would I pay ! !

Sue Brewbaker: They can cut on me as much as they want to—no date.

Nancy Gillie: Nothing. I like to dance with my date.

Patty Walker: Nothing. I'm happy.

Chic Ritchie: Not a copper cent.

Peg Peery: I'd give a balloon big as the moon, cause I'm going stag.

Fran Harper: I don't believe in girl break dances.

Ruth Gills: I'm broke.

Hilda Lewis: Well, now I just don't know how to answer that.

Betsy Wilson: That's a stupid question.

Betty Jones: I'm not taking a date — that answers that.

Claudia Anderson: Any small fee, just so they return my date.

Edith Goff: No, I wouldn't! I'd hate to think I'd take somebody that unpopular.

Lee Wood: Yes, 'cause I get tired of dancing with the same boy.

Sara Cregar: No! I wouldn't pay anybody to do anything at this point!

Jerry Korbach: I'd pay somebody to get me a date.

Lucyle Humphries: I'm on campus! ! !

Jane Lee Kellogg: With what? And besides who'd want to dance with my date? (He can't dance).

Betsy Wiley: Yes, they probably wouldn't break otherwise.

Jean Kreienbaun: That all depends on how much I have to pay them!

Sarah Ann Jones: And leave me standing in the middle of the floor alone! ?

Wanda Karlet: Depends upon with whom I have a date. (English major.)

Jane Lively: After I pay to get my dates, I can't afford to have anyone break.

Audrey Pettit: No, I'd pay them not to break!

Pedro's Pocket

By Jean Turner

It's happened again, Pedro has another mad mania. He is determined to be the most famous athlete on campus. He practices eight hours a day on what he considers the most constructive and manly arts. They consist of marbles, jacks, craps and ping pong. He even does two laps around the tennis courts on his pogo stick every morning.

With all this activity he hardly had a minute to talk to me, but I managed to find out a few little odds and ends.

You all may not think Pedro is the nosey little fella I've often referred to him as, but I have proof—he says that he knows what time all of you got in this week end. Those of you who went to Tech—tut, tut, girls—mighty late hours! And then those who attended the parties (and we use the word loosely) at Hamdie-Damdie—he knows about you too. Pedro wants you to understand that he wishes no harm and only tabulates this information for his own use. He plans a comparative book on human habits and thinks these few little first hand situations will be priceless. And I grant you they are!

The other night Pedro was

THE 'C' AVERAGE HANDICAP

The Student Standards Committee is now considering the advisability of strictly adhering to the "C" average regulation placed on the door of many extra-curricular activities at Longwood. The student, to return to College the following session, must maintain a cumulative quality point average of .50 for freshmen, .78 for sophomores, and .90 for juniors. If the student meets these recognized standards of proficient work, then he should be allowed to engage in the available extra-curricular activities allowed him under the Student Standard's point system.

THE FRESHMAN

As a freshman there are many adjustments necessary before a steady pattern of work may be set up by some students. This is often not necessarily a matter of applying himself to his books for longer hours. His adjustment must be social also; if you limit or restrict this at any point the result instead of being positive may be negative, and at this crucial stage, disastrous psychologically.

THE MEN

In narrowing the picture down to the men's activities in parlicular, there are just not enough men at the present time to enforce such a high standard, and at the same time maintain the important functions of such activities. The men have gone all-out in a sustained effort to develop and maintain a well grounded mens' program that will carry enough monentum to "roll on" in the future years at Longwood. Strictly enforcing the present "C" average rule would remove too many fundamental "bricks", and it would all come tumbling down, heaven knows when to go back up once again. Even small colleges of approximately 500 men find that they can not strictly enfore a "C" average without critically crippling themselves in all phases of the campus life, so they employ a sliding scale similar to the above.

Of course a "C" average should be required for graduation, but the student should be given the time to adjust to college life without the removal of his social potentialities, which is an important phase in the development of maturity, education, and successful living. In many cases this comes as an end product, not neccessarily present at the beginning.

THE TELEGRAM

At Mary Washington College in Fredericksburg last Friday night the men's varsity basketball team received a surprising telegram from the "Longwood Girls" wishing them luck and victory in the highly rivaled contest. In the dressing room there came forth a might "hurrah"; the Pioneers beat MW 62-41 ,their largest victory margin of the campaign. Miss Olive T. Iler, head of the Physical Education Department at Longwood sponsored the message.

Sophomores Win Against Blackstone

by Betty Tyler

The sophomores made a sensational comeback win over Blackstone 33-27, last Saturday afternoon in the College gym. With a half-time score of 17-9, Blackstone's favor, the sophomores played a hard game holding the Blackstone's six to only one score in the final quarter.

Starting the game for Blackstone were: (forwards) Owens, McLawhorn, and Kalabza: (guards) Roberts, Gribbons, and Paterson.

The starting line-up for the sophomores included: (forwards) E. Porch, R. Peters, and P. Harris; (guard) E. Weddle, E. Kennon, and M. Becknor. Substituting for the sophomores were J. Russell, E. Leslie, S. Livesay, M. Thomas, B. Ricks, and F. Ramsey.

Sportin' Around

Now that exams are over, we can settle down to class games and start getting in the practices. Everyone has to have eight practices to play in volleyball and basketball class games. They start the middle of March and six or seven practices won't make you eligible to play.

The next varsity game is this Friday with Roanoke College in the gym. A big cheering squad always gives the team a boost, so come on out and see what you can do for them.

The sophomores made a fine showing in their game with Blackstone, Friday afternoon. The final score after a hard fought game was 27-33 in favor of L. C., of course!

The swimming meet will be held in March. Students must have eight practices, except those who participated in the swimming pageant. They will only have to have four. Practices can be gotten on Fridays from 4-6 p. m. Special practice times will be posted. Those wishing to sign up for the swimming meet should do so immediately on the A. A. bulletin board.

LC Pioneers Defeat MW By 62-41

Keep Winning Lead After Half Tie-Up

by Jack Hueac'

Last Friday evening the Longwood College Pioneers traveled to Fredericksburg and defeated the Mary Washington College men's basketball team by the score of 62 to 41.

Vaughn, Clark, and Bradshaw, members of the second team, started the game and ran up eight points before the opposition knew the game had started. Vaughn was the sparkplug of this early attack scoring eight points in the first few minutes of play. The MW team soon found the range and managed to tie up the score in the second quarter. The Pioneers settled down and pulled ahead, never allowing the opposition to catch up again.

Big Bill Beamer, demonstrated some of his fanciest shooting of the season as he netted eight baskets in the last half rampage.

The team showed more zip and polish than at anytime all season. They entered the game determined to win and carried out this determination. It is difficult to point out any individual performer but the combination of Clark and Bradshaw at the guard posts looked exceptionally good.

Pioneers To Meet Lynchburg JV Team

This Thursday evening the Longwood Pioneers will play the Lynchburg College JV team at 7:30 p. m., in the College gym.

Earlier in the season, Lynchburg defeated the Pioneers 84-54 at Lynchburg. After their victory at Fredericksburg last week the Pioneers feel hopeful of chalking up victory number 4 next Thursday.

Summer Session To Begin June 19, Will Run 9 Weeks

The Longwood summer session has been scheduled to begin on June 19 and end on August 12. Eighty courses in 22 fields will be offered, and eight workshops have been planned in several different fields.

During the periods from July 7 to July 19 and July 10 to July 28, art education workshops will be conducted for both classroom and art teachers. Two workships will be held for teachers, principals, and others who are responsible for guidance activities in the public schools. From June 26 to July 14, there will be a guidance workshop. A counseling workshop has been planned for the period from July 17 to August 4.

Work in music also will be emphasized in the session. A clinic in band and orchestra will be conducted during the period from June 19 to July 1. This will be open to directors of school bands and orchestras and to boys and girls who are members of such bands and orchestras. A seminar in music education for teachers of music will be held from July 3 to July 19.

A physical and health education workshop for teachers who wish to plan and analyze their physical and health education program will run from July 10 to July 22. During the periods from June 20 to July 6, July 7 to July 25, and July 26 to August 11, a general workshop will be conducted for elementary and high school teachers.

For teachers of the elementary schools, there will be a workshop in Virginia geography which will be conducted from June 19 to July 14.

High School Seniors Spend Weekend Here

Twenty-two high school seniors from Glen Allen, Northern Neck, Norton, Wise, Washington, D. C., and Amelia visited the Longwood campus last week end as prospective students.

A tea was held in honor of these visitors Saturday afternoon. Arrangements for the tea were made by Miss Fern Staggs in cooperation with the Northern Neck club.

After a tour of the campus, many of the girls visited the Estate. A large per cent of these visitors have been enrolled already for the coming 1950-51 session.

Next week end more girls are expected from Portsmouth, Norfolk, and Warview. These visiting students will be guests at the junior dance.

Ridenour Reveals Soph. Sing Theme

Theme of sophomore sing, which will be given Saturday, February 11, at 7 p. m., in the small auditorium, was recently announced by Jean Ridenour, chairman. The skit will center around a mock birthday dinner held in the White House for all famous men born in February.

The theme committee, chosen by Jean, includes Betty Scott Borkey, Marian Beckner, Maria Jackson, Joan Prichett, Frances Franklin, and Emma Harris.

Tea Room Gets Curtains

The new curtains which are to be hung in the Tea Room next week were designed and painted by Helen Arrington in the College art department.

Other students in the art department have recently completed some hand-blocked linens for the Home Management house.

walking by Senior building and he heard the girls singing—the return of spirit perhaps? Pedro has noticed since his arrival less than a year ago, the wan of the Longwood spirit to a near standstill. It is impossible for a situation of this type to remain long, however, with the group of girls we have.

Pedro didn't have any more time to devote to me since it was the hour for his Canasta lesson. He said he'll be seeing you in the geography room.

90 LC Students Make Semester's Dean's List

Average 'B' Plus Minimum Grades

Names of 90 Longwood students appear on the Dean's List for the first semester of this session, released yesterday. Prerequisite for the Dean's List is a 2.25 ("B" plus) quality point average on all work taken during the semester. Dean's List students are entitled to unlimited class "cuts."

Students recognized on the List are Gloria Agee, Helen Agnew, Barbara Andrews, Frances Andrews, Helen Arrington, Betty Baker, Flora Ballowe, June Banks, Margaret Beasley and Celeste Bishop.

Also included on the List are Mildred Blessing, Catherine Bondurant, Betty S. Borkey, Marian Breeden, Nancy Bruce, Vera Bryant, Elizabeth Buck, Page Burnette, Harriett Butterworth and Ann Clarke.

Others on the Dean's List are John Cook, Barbara Cotton, Ann Critzer, June Divers, Dorothy Dodd, Edith Duma, Edith Duvall, Jacqueline Eagle, Helen Egerton and Joyce Etheridge.

The List also numbers Shirley Fahrbach, Elizabeth Ferguson, Lelia Mae Ferratt, Anne Foreman, Lauralee Fritts, Nancy Garbee, Penick Gentry, Bonnie Gerrells, Ruth Gills and Sarah Graham.

Other Dean's Listers are Helen Hardin, Arollen Troxler Harding, Betty Lou Harman, Elizabeth Harris, Rena Mae Hayes, Marion Higgs, Jean Hogge, Margaret Dee Hoover, Nancy Hounshell and John Huegel.

Also on the List are Harold Hutter, Mary Isley, Maria Jackson, Nancy Jamison, Jacqueline Jardine, Betty Jones, Charlotte King Jones, Lucy Jones, Helen Kaknis and Nancy Kibler.

Also Nina Ruth Lacy, Anne Lawrence, Willard Leeper, Katharine McCreedy, Sarah McElroy, James Stuart McGhee, Virginia McLean, Virginia Manvell, Cornelia Marston and Mary Leigh Meredith.

Also Ellen Moyer, Pauline Nasser, Anne Norman, James Edward Orange, Evelyn Ray Phillips, Emmma Mae Pittard, Patsy Ann Ritter, Nicole Rothe, Nancy Short, and Mary Jo Smith.

Also Virginia Spencer, Lois Stevens, Elizabeth Stone, Helen Tanner, Patricia Taylor, Vivian Thierry, Mary Patricia Tuggle, Sue Walker, Juanita Weeks, and Martha Alice Wilson.

4 Students Make 3 Point Average

Four students hold a straight A record for the fall semester, according to a report by Virgilia I. Bugg, registrar.

Those students are Vera Marie Bryant, Boykins; Ann Scruggs Critizer, Farmville; Cornelia Adelaide Marston, Shacklefords; and James Edward Orange, Farmville.

Journalism Club Bids 16 Students

Formal Initiation To Be Held March 2

Sixteen upperclassmen received bids to the Journalism Club tonight. They will be iniated and formally admitted to membership on March 2.

The Journalism Club was organized last spring by a group students from the College publications, the Colonnade, the Rotunda, and the Virginian. Membership in the club is open to junior and seniors who have had one year of experience on any recognized college publication and who hold a position equivalent to a departmental head or to the editor, business manager, or associate editors of any recognized college publication.

Among those receiving bids to the Journalism Club were Katie Cobb, Helen Arrington, Lila Easley, Edith Duma, Beverly Smithle, Mary Crowgey, Grace Thompson, and Nellie Hart.

Others bid by the club included Jean Turner, Helen Agnew, Millie Carter, Romine Mahood, Georgia Bailey, "Dot" Newell, Edith Duval, and Frances Harper.

Dean To Attend Richmond Meeting

Dean William W. Savage will present the report of the committee on uniform high school transcripts to the 36th annual meeting of the Association of Virginia Colleges in Richmond on Saturday, February 18.

Dean Savage's report will open the Saturday morning session of the two day meeting to be held at the Hotel Jefferson, February 17-18.

His committee has worked out a plan whereby uniform high school transcripts will be requested of high schools by the 33 colleges which are members of the association. These transcripts have met with the approval of high school principals in Virginia but must be accepted by the Association before going into general use.

Speaks at High Schools

Dean William W. Savage visited Martinsville High School and Schoolfield High School today to speak to prospective Longwood students. Tomorrow he will speak to students interested in attending Longwood College at Averett and Straford, junior colleges in Danville.

Dean Savage will represent the College at the annual "College Day" to be held at George Washington High School on Friday. He will deliver the principal address to the senior class of this high school, concerning choosing a career and a college.

PTA To Hold Meeting On Campus Feb. 20

The Parent Teacher's Association will hold a leadership work shop on the Longwood Campus, February 20 through February 23.

The workshop will be under the direction of Dr. Abner Robertson, executive secretary of the Cooperative Education Association which is the Virginia branch of the National Congress and Parent Teachers Association.

Participants of the workshop will be housed in the dormitories and will be guests in the dining hall during their stay.

Juke Box Dance

A juke box dance will be held in the recreation hall of the main building, Saturday, February 18, from 9 to 12 p. m.

The dance is sponsored by the Commercial Club and will be an informal girl break-boy dance. The charge will be tencents per person.

56 Receive Bids To Join Cotillion Club

'Goating' To Start With April Dance

Fifty-six girls were issued bids to the College Cotillion Club at a meeting held Thursday night, Robbie Cromar, president of the club announced today.

The new Cotillion members will be initiated in the spring when they, together with members bid last fall, will undergo "goating". Part of their initiation will include decorating for the Cotillion Club dance to be given sometime in April.

Those who received bids are Harriet Minichan, Judy Cox, Betsy Hankins, Dot Boswick, Jesse Amory, Kitty Hamlet, Ann Jones, Wanda Karlet, Polly Brothers, Dot Cassada, Betty Barnes and Bert Browning.

Also receiving bids were Virginia S. Webb, Sarah Ann Jones, Jean Krleinbaum, Margaret Taylor, Celeste Bishop, Natalie Bryant, B. J. Ayers, Helen Castros, Diane Pflugfelder, Helen Tanner, and Jane Lively.

Bunny Ricks, Ann Biddlecomb, Shirley Abernathy, Sara Graham, Margie Hood, Nancy Reed, Chalic Hayden, Betty Abbitt, Barbara Dodd, Frances Harper, Ella Sue Smith and Polly Powers were also among those receiving bids.

Also bid were Ann Crowder, Betty Tyler, Sis Burton, Pat Lee, Anne Murphy, Emma Harris, Sarah McElroy, Amanda Wright, Hazel Wilkins, Winston Johnson, Eddie Ann Abbit, Caroline McDonald, Margaret Steel and Betty Baker.

Nell Bradshaw, Nancy Lawrence, Barbara Casky, Ann Boswell, Caroline Lusk, Julia Oliveria, and Jan Van Horn were included in the list of bids.

Cotillion Club is a local organization composed of 250 students whose purpose is to promote good dancing on the campus and to this end they sponsor at least one dance during the year.

Business Students To Hear Mr. Walker At Club Banquet

Mr. A. L. Walker, state superintendent of Business Education in Virginia, will be the guest speaker at the Commercial Club banquet to be held at the Methodist Church, February 16.

Polly Nassar who is in charge of the plans for the banquet has urged that all tickets be purchased as soon as possible. Tickets may be obtained from Jean Boiles, Janice Slavin, Betty Jones, Shirley Roberts, Joyce Cheatham, Doris Jones, and Betty Jane Ayres.

Co-eds To Battle On Longwood Hour

The "Voice of Longwood", which will be presented tomorrow from 4:30 to 5:00 p. m. over radio station WFLO, will feature a quiz between the women and men students of the College. The questions asked will be of general nature.

Ann Nock, senior, will be student announcer. Students participating in the program are Betty Ferguson, Katherine Bondurant, Rena Mae Hayes, and Maria Jackson, women contestants; and John Cook, Jack Huegel, Stuart McGhee, Ned Orange, and Edward Parks, who will compete with them.

Judges for the contest will be Mrs. Katherine Watkins and Mr. John Steck of the Farmville Herald staff. Chuck Mallett, WFLO announcer, will act as master of ceremonies.

Out-Of-Staters' Tuition Boosted By State Board For Next Term

Activity Fee Hiked; Ruling for Dorm Room Fee Changed

President Dabney S. Lancaster has announced increases in College fees for the next session as authorized by the State Board of Education at its last meeting. According to the recent Board ruling, Virginia students will pay an additional activities fee, and out-of-State students will be charged more for tuition.

A new diploma fee and a change in the handling of the old ten-dollar room rent fee were also announced by the President. These fee boosts will appear in the new College catalog for 1950-'51 which is expected to arrive soon from the printers.

Next session, Virginia students will pay an additional five-dollar activities fee for the session which will bring their expense total to $505 for both semesters. An extra $25 per session will be charged out-of-State students, bringing their session total to $630. At present out-of-State students pay $50 per semester tuition which is not charged in-State students.

Beginning this term, senior students will pay a diploma fee of $5. This will be paid in the future at the beginning of the second semester of the senior year. The diploma fee will take care of the new sheepskin certificates which the senior class recently voted to replace the ones formerly conferred here. The senior class decision was subsequently okayed by the State Board.

The $10 room-rent fee paid by students in advance of each session will no longer be applicable to other College fees at the session's beginning as was formerly the custom. Under the new arrangement, the $10 will be held until the end of the session for possible damage to dormitory rooms, and if the student leaves his room in good condition, the fee will be refunded him. Charges for any damage occuring during the nine months will be subtracted from the ten dollars at the end of the spring term and the remainder refunded.

Study Tour Alliance Sponsors Contest

International Study Tour Alliance has announced an essay contest for students, with the chief awards being free study-tours to Europe, fellowships and grants.

The competition is open to all students of American colleges and universities, including schools of fine arts and technical as well as professional institutions. Essay subjects may be chosen from any branch of learning, but must lend themselves to further research abroad. Length of the composition is limited to ten thousand words with a minimum of two thousand. The completed work must be mailed not later than March 31, 1950.

According to ISA, the purpose of the essay contest is to enable tomorrow's leaders to familiarize themselves with conditions abroad, and appreciate the differences in the cultures and institutions of the various peoples living together in this world.

Complete details may be obtained by writing to International Study-Tour Alliance, Inc., 12 East 46th Street, New York, N. Y. Additional information has been posted on the bulletin board in the main hall of Ruffner Hall.

66th Founder's Day Slated For March 25

President Calls For Dorm Bids

Estimates Cost About $196,400

Bids for construction of the new dormitory to replace the burned out auditorium have been advertised, and will be opened in the office of President Dabney S. Lancaster on March 21.

President Lancaster estimated th cost of th buildifig at $196,-400. Plans are specifications for the addition to Annex have been approved by Governor Battle.

The new four-story building will include a recreation hall, administrative offices, parlors and dormitories. It will be of brick colonial construction, matching Annex, and the colonnade will be extended to meet the east wing of Ruffner Hall.

The basement floor will house the recreation hall which will supplement present physical education facilities. New offices for the Registrar with a fireproof vault for records will be situated on the first floor. Each story of the two-floor dorimtory section will feature a kitchenette, pressing room and recreation parlor. The dormitory will accomodate approximately 40 students.

Students Discuss Colette, Cathedrals

Colette, well known French author, highlighted the regular meeting of le Cercle Francais yesterday. Jean Anderson of the advanced class told about the life of Colette, and Jacky Eagle read a selection from her works in French with an English translation.

Elba Castaner sketched le Cure de Cucugnan from the famous short story of Alphonse Daudet. Several students of the intermediate class gave short talks concerning French cathedrals. Slides of these cathedrals were shown. The program concluded with the entire group singing several French songs.

'O', '5' Classes To Have Reunion

The 66th annual celebration of Founder's Day will be held here March 25, Mrs. Coyner, alumni secretary, announced recently in letters to the alumni. Mrs. Coyner added that the Alumni Bulletin, which will carry an announcement and tentative plans for the celebration, has been late in being released, but will be on the way to the Alumni by the end of this month.

Alumni from the classes ending with "0" and "5" have been invited to hold their special reunion here on that day.

Delegates from the reunion classes will begin to arrive on campus on Friday, March 24. An informal "get-together" will be held for those who have arrived. The Founder's Day program will officially begin Saturday morning with a coffee in the Student Building Lounge at which the Farmville Alumni Chapter will be hostess. A business meeting will follow in the auditorium.

Following luncheon in the College dining hall the alumni will attend chapel in the Methodist Church where an Alumni-Student program will be presented. Dr. and Mrs. Lancaster will hold open house for them Saturday afternoon, and they will attend a buffet supper in the Tea Room.

The group will be entertained during the evening with a concert given by the combined Longwood Choir and Hampden-Sydney Glee Club.

Notice

No further changes may be made in class schedules Dean William W. Savage has announced. "This means," said Dean Savage, "that no courses may be added and that no shifts from one section of a class to another will be permitted."

Dean Savage also stated that no student can drop a class after mid-semester estimates are turned in to the Registrar's office without automatically receiving a grade of F on the course.

Premature Spring Weather Teases College Students

With the arrival of the monsoons, gloom, depression, boredom, and just plain misery have settled down upon Longwood College. Is the sun ever going to shine again? Tensional outlets are to be found in the playing of Canasta, excessive sleeping, fierce studying and other things. We should like to have a word with the College girls concerning these "other things".

Now, all you "students" know that you shouldn't roll coke bottles down the fire escape, or let off firecrackers in the halls, or pie trunks in front of doors, especially when the house mother is on the inside. As for cutting the rope to the bell and tossing feathers over the rotunda—shame on you girls!

Begin leading a new life. Save those cap pistols until after class, and start speaking more distinctly in class, so that the prof won't think you are saying, "objective complement," when you are saying, "Hey, kid, what's the answer?"

In order that the girls keep out of "night mischief," we highly recommend their spending the night with the hall president. Such innocent fun as short sheeting the beds or putting salt therein and tying knots in pajamas we feel is permissible.

Dining hall behavior could be improved upon, also. Save those biscuits until you are back in your own little room. When your room-mate keeps talking and you are trying to sleep, you can politely knock her out.

Another place where peace and quiet should reign is in Chapel. Just because you can neither hear nor see the speaker from the balcony is no sign that you should read, write letters, and go to sleep and snore. Your best friend may be a monitor, so look out!

Think what Longwood College could so easily we mean hardly be. A place where dignity and reserve are the key notes to every girl's personality. An institution where book learning is of prime importance. A school where study is facilitated by the quiet darkened halls, where a pin could be heard to fall.

After you have followed our advice and acted like young ladies for a whole day, you will, of course, be ready for the last round-up, but it will do you good anyway.

Out Of The Red.....

Red has been a predominant color on the Longwood campus this year (with due respects to the juniors and frosh.) From every major organization have come cries for help to erase the crimson from their much worked over accounts, and the administration and student body have contributed steadily in an effort to keep these groups that are so vital to student life at the College, functioning. As regular and willing as contributions have been made, however, it is not difficult to see that this situation cannot continue indefinitely.

Partially in response to the need of alleviating this predicament, Dr. Lancaster with the authorization of the State Board of Education has announced a raise in the student activities fee to be effective at the beginning of the next session. The additional five dollars which students will pay is hardly exorbitant and cannot possibly mean that anyone will now be unable to meet the financial requirements of the College. It does mean that Student Government, the Athletic Council, the student publications and other major activities on campus can function free from debt.

Added to this is a $5 diploma fee for seniors to be paid, beginning with the present term, at the start of the second semester. As a result of this additional fee, seniors will be awarded at graduation a sheepskin diploma, a long sought improvement over the former certificates. This action was taken in accordance with the wishes of the present senior class as expressed by a class vote.

Also included in this plan is a twenty-five dollar increase in the tuition of out-of-State students. In view of the fact that the State of Virginia contributes to the support of each student at Longwood from the pockets of its taxpayers, it is not unreasonable to expect greater financial aid from out-of-State residents at the College. These students will now pay a total of $630 for a year's education at Longwood — far less than they would pay at the majority of qualified schools in this part of the country.

Let's Sit One Out..

Last Saturday night, Longwood saw something new in the line of dances — the the cabaret. The success of the few scattered tables throughout the gym can be verified by any one of the gaily clad attendents at the affair.

Of course, in the case of the few dances at which we have a figure, the use of tables would be more of a hindrance than a help. We hope, however, that in the future Longwood planners-of-festive-occassions, will take a hint from the juniors and give thought to the couple who'd like to "sit this one out" by providing chairs and tables whenever feasible.

Welcome Flower Judges..

Welcome, delegates to the Flower Show Judging School! Students of the College feel privileged to act as your hostesses and hosts this week.

We hope that your convention proves to be very successful and that your stay here will be enjoyable. The students of Longwood are glad of an opportunity to be of service to you. We invite you to return to our College on many similar visits .

OUR WORLD

By Nellie Hart

By Mary Leigh Meredith
Guest Columnist

While we Longwoodites worry about nothing more serious than how to turn an arglye heel or, at the most, how to avoid the consequences of an unexcused absence, the world has more weighty problems on its mind. That argle heel might not have much effect on the dilemmas of the world, but the world's problems are yours, whether you want them or not.

It has been suggested by a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that the United States triple its allotment of $29,000,000 to the Voice of America foreign beamed broadcasts. "We're getting licked every day in this cold war of words," the Senator explained.

At the same time another Senator argued that we should clean up our own back yard before spending too much time, energy, or money on spreading democracy to other parts of the globe.

The making of a near violent discussion are contained in those two views. It is obvious that to go to one extreme or the other would be foolish, but is the proper route in the middle or slightly to one side?

It would be hard to count the number of people who have either thought or said sometime in the recent past, "Thank God I'm an American", as they read their morning paper. That America is far from perfect is taken for granted. Perfection is to be strived for but is seldom obtained. But much of the world would agree that what we have is pretty wonderful if they only knew about it.

On the other hand, in America there still exist the problems of race, color, and creed. Slum conditions in our large cities are shameful, a man's religion may cost him his job, and many a bare-foot boy is bare-foot when he'd rather be shod. Shouldn't we tidy up our own house before bragging to the neighbors about how neat we are?

What about it? You find the answers — you're a citizen of the United States, aren't you? Well then, it's your problem — you solve it. Your solution may have world wide consequences, even if it doesn't help you avoid two weeks campus for sleeping through an 8:05

by Bert Browning,
Guest Columnist

Word was just received that Pedro will not be with us this week. Sad to say, but the last seen of Pedro's personal articles was a gay little sombrero perched atop a head perched atop a pillow perched atop a bed. Yes, Pedro is in the infirmary. But he, like the conscientious muchacho that he is, summoned all his strength and from under his little hat, his weak pleading was heard, "On weeth the column; eet mus' not stop." So we couldn't let him down, and I "snuck" to the infirm to tell Pedro I'd try to help him out.

Pedro told some one the other day that at Longwood College, spring was not holding back at all. It was popping out in so many clever little ways. He said that spring chose the "most uncalled for" time to put "seek people in infimary." He named at least 15 "amigos" that were keeping him company. But cheer up, Pedro, you'll all be out in no time at all! Just keep your little sombrero tilted and your temperature down.

Yesterday Pedro told me an anecdote from the Training School where he has been observing classes. He said that a little boy went up to the desk of his new teacher and asked her, "Do you always wear your hair that way?" "What way,?" she replied. "Down in your face. I like it that way," he hastened to add. It was damp out that day, and little boys are so tactful.

Pedro say that he has noticed more dreamy lookin' people wandering around recently and wonders if it was the Junior Dance. Well, Pedro, it might be, but you were hanging on "the swinging doors" that night just enjoying it all so much; so you ought to know!

And the sing? Pedro loved that! He did say that he looked around twice just to make sure that none of the presidents were there to see themselves, but maybe they should have been. They might have improved their politics. And then again, they might have run screaming back to their graves!

Pedro remarked that he hears Mr. "Charlie Hop" French whistling "Don't Fence Me In" an awful lot lately. They must be closing in on him.

Well Pedro has a date with a thermometer, but he'll see you soon—son wait for him! Adns—

Stormy Weather

Campus Cogitations

Question: What do you think of our College program, the Longwood Hour?

Mary E. Watson: I have classes —I'm a phys. ed. major.

Cabell Overby: I haven't heard it but once this year—classes!

Sue Walker: I can sympathize with Watt.

Lila Easley: It's got a good theme song —that's all I've heard.

Hank Hardin: I like it very much and I think it adds a great deal to our College life.

Betty Ferguson: I think there's enough variety in the programs for everyone to enjoy them and considering the amount of work that goes into one, it's a shame that more people don't listen to them.

Harriet Ratcheford: So far, so good.

Dolores Hoback: The program is very good. I especially like music by our "more talented students".

Maria Jackson: It would be nice to have more musical programs.

Nancy Walker: I think the program is fine, but think it should be at an hour when all the students could hear it.

Helen Agnew: I'd like to hear more music on it.

Richard Bobb: I like it, and I think it's a good idea.

Bill Overby: I reckon it's all right.

Shep Elmore: I'd like a quiz program better, if they'd give away quality points.

Deanie Famuelette: There's too much going on around here to see, so I don't have time to hear anything.

Betsy Gravely: I think it's very good if they'd stick to music, because that's interesting to everybody.

Peg Perry: I think they should have more school talent—along the musical line.

Betty Hancock: It's all right whenever I have a chance to listen to it.

Lee Wingfield: Ditto Betty.

Mary Frances Joseph: I think it's O. K.

Hazel Gowen: I think it could be made more pleasant by the addition of more music.

Frances Howell: It could be quite promising.

Sarah Anne Jones: I like it.

Girls! How's Your Makeup? Sloppy? Try Beauty 101!

A release from a well-known cosmetics manufacturer was received in the News office this week and just couldn't be thrown into the wastebasket. Several of the more burly sports writers tried, but the release just refused to be so easily snubbed. Indeed, it was thought-provoking and somewhat unique. It began: "For Immediate Release" (underlined) and was titled: Beauty 101. We decided to take the release apart, read between the lines a bit, and see what it was really worth. Our objective criticism is subordinated in parentheses. The release read:

"If you could put your nose or your eyes on your face each day, would you slap them on in any position? (All right, you've got a point there; continue). Your nose and eyes are there to stay (Flattery will get you nowhere)—but you can place your lip outline each morning. (Like you would outline an essay on Nuclear Fission or a plan for a new parking lot).

"Painting lips, like any other painting, begins with an outline (then slap your face on an easel and smear in the goo) and you, like any other artist, should use a brush such as  lip brush of Russian sable (other styles available: Tibetan mountain goat, New Zealand Apteryx, plain, old, everyday feathers from a tanager's chin).

"First, put plenty of lipstick on the brush to trace a smooth line. (We sell more lipstick that way, too). Keep the lips closed and in repose while drawing the outline (Use thumb-tacks, if you like) because a gold-fish expression distorts the natural lip line (unless, of course, you're a gold-fish).

"Trace the upper lip first (to keep it stiff) from the outside corner to center (as in basketball) and then draw a short, straight line across the bottom of the lower lip. (With a ruler, of course). Starting at the outer corners of the lower lip, indent slightly. (After you've acquired the habit, you can simply use the tabular key and set it for five spaces). And then draw a full, soft curve down to the straight line (continuing up your cheek, making a complete circle around your left eye, and tracing your initials in Old English script on your forehead).

"There's the outline . . . now fill it in with lipstick, not with a brush. (You can use the Russian sable brush on your teeth or for putting black polish on the rim of your shoes).

"Wait! If you're ready to blot that lipstick, drop the tissue! (Sorry, wrong again, we're using an old burlap sack. And quit trying to frighten us). With lipstick, as with any other pigment,

Love Those Profs Dept:

In search of an obvious mark, a friend of ours rhymed on a return-with-mark postcard to his prof:

"In class you were steadfast, you never did sway,

For your mark in advertising, you receive an . . ."
But the prof, o wiley one, replied:

In class you were steadfast, you never did sway,

I've never seen anyone sleep so soundly that way,

But when for the finals, we roused you from slumber,

By dint of sheer guessing, you hit quite a number.

Your poet-ent 90 didn't win the class wreath,

But you did shake an 'A' by the skin of your teeth."

Pioneer Recounts Sad Tale Of 108-41 Defeat By H-S

by Hunter Joe Benedict

I could go all day without giving the score of Monday night's infamous game, but nevertheless, here it is — 108 to 41. Sad isn't it? H. S. was hot—as any fool can plainly see—and we were stone cold dead on the gym floor. In other words, we got "took." It was all the way Hosea, for the Hampden-Sydney squad.

We Pioneers tried, but it was the J. V. squad who blazed most of the trails. With an outrageous score staring us in the face, we never quit trying. They had also the advantage of four teams, so no player got too tired. Ours was a different story. With our tongues hanging out, we watched fresh team after fresh team come onto the floor for the J. V.'s.

Oh Rapture! At times our squad worked together, but a majority of the time it was "I've got the ball now, and I'm going to keep the dern thing." It was during these times that H. S. kept two adding machines busy.

Bobb tried a field goal, but unfortunately missed, Hutter broke his previous scoring record by making a foul shot. Bill Beamer hipped everyone who got within two feet of him, and Jimmie Thompson hooked five too many

RPI Meets Pioneers Sat. Night Here

Pioneers Will Go To Madison Mon.

The Longwood basketeers have an interesting and busy card scheduled for this coming weekend. On Saturday evening they will entertain the RPI squad from Richmond in the gym starting at 7:30 o'clock. The Pioneers opened their season against RPI and found the results not at all to their liking. Everyone concerned is anxious to see that the same thing doesn't happen again.

On Monday evening the Pioneers will travel to Madison and meet the courtmen from that school.

Lynchburg JV's Drop Pioneers By 56-37 Score Last Friday

Last Thursday evening in the college gym the Lynchburg College JV's met and defeated the Longwood College PIONEERS by the tune of 56 to 37.

Lynchburg took an early lead and at no time was the outcome in doubt. They played a fast, steady brand of ball and had little trouble penetrating the zone defense employed by the PIONEERS.

The PIONEERS were a heterogeneous outfit for most of the game and failed to show any of the team work which was responsible for the Mary Washington victory. In the third quarter some of this spirit was revived and the PIONEERS managed to dominate play for the best part of the period.

Longwood Women Top Roanoke Five

In their second tangle with the Roanoke College squad, the Longwood Women's Varsity team came out on top last Friday night with a 56-24 score. Holding a good lead all the way, the LC girls has racked up 29 points at the half to Roanoke's 8.

Starting as forwards for Longwood were Ritter, Roady and Beard. Holding down the guard positions were Langbein, Beeknor and Kelsy. Among those filling in the substitutions for the game were Livesay, Lynch, Allen, Bradshaw, and Brewbaker; and forwards; and Kennon, Weddle, and Egerton as guards.

Sportin' Around

by ANN LYNCH

The reports on the volleyball and basketball practices show that some of the classes still lack practices before there will be enough girls to make up a class team. Several girls have gotten two, three, and four practices, but these will not be eligible to play on the class teams.

Be sure that you get in enough practices before the class games in March. You only have a few more weeks. Special practices may be held at night to help you get enough, so watch announcements, and come down and support your team. Practices must also be gotten in to be contestants in the swimming meet.

Again the varsity basketball team deserves congratulations for their performance Friday night against Roanoke College. Keep up the good work! Our support is behind you in your two forthcoming games.

The Sophomores will play Blackstone College in Blackstone Wednesday. Good luck, sophomores! We're counting on you to repeat the performance you gave against Blackstone last week.

Frosh Announce Production Date

Chairmen Appoint Committee Heads

Freshman production will be held Friday, March 31, at 8 p. m. Virginia McLean and Sarah McElroy, co-chairmen of the production, announced today.

Barbara Caskey has been appointed chairman of the theme committee, while Betsy Hankins will be in charge of the song committee. Bert Browning will head the prop committee and Lucy Page Hall has been appointed chairman of the ticket committee. Dance will be under the direction of Ann Murphy with Amanda Wright handling publicity. Sonia Kyle will head the costume committee.

Virginia and Sarah have asked that all freshmen sign up for committees as soon as possible so that work on the production can proceed.

Library Features Valentine Display

A collection of Valentines, which is now on display in the lobby of the Library, has been taken from the collection of Miss Emily Barksdale, associate professor of languages at the College.

Among the cards are some that date back fifty years. Many of the cards have been personally designed and hand made.

The library is continuing the free distribution of pamphlets according to its established policy, Dr. Beverly Ruffin, College Librarian, has announced.

This material is spread on tables in the Reserve Book Room and is varied in character. In the past, students have remarked that this material has been helpful in student teaching, independent research, and casual entertainment. A large amount of timely and valuable information may be found in these pamphlets. As a demand for material on certain subjects arises, an attempt is made by the library to obtain that material.

11 Fill New Positions On Rotunda Staff As Tryouts Continue

The tryout staff for this issue of the Rotunda was headed by Jean Smith as editor-in-chief for the week, the editor announced. Staff members will continue to tryout for advancement through next week's paper.

Mary Jo Smith filled the position of managing editor this week, and Bunny Gibson served as desk editor. Trying out in other positions this week were Joanne Steck and Betty J. Stoots, co-editors of features; Marty Miller, society editor; Jack Huegel, sports editor; and Bert Browning, art editor.

In the business department Betty Jones served as buisness manager; Claudia Anderson, advertising manager; and Emma Pittard, exchange editor.

Television Company Sponsors Contest

A nationwide collegiate writing competition, designed to encourage the emergence of new television writers is now being conducted according to a joint announcement made by the Columbia Broadcasting System and World Video Inc.

A numbered entry blank must be obtained for each individual script entered in the competition and must accompany the submission. Contest rules and the required blanks must be obtained by writing directly to the Director of the CBS Awards at his headquarters at 15 East 47th street, New York 17, New York.

High School Girls Will Visit College

This week end seniors will be arriving on campus from high schools in Suffolk, Franklin and Montvale. Dean Ruth Gleaves has asked that the student body welcome and help entertain these visiting prospective students.

Students from Roanoke, Waynesboro, and Woodrow, near Staunton, will visit the College February 26 and 27. During the week end of March 4, girls from Appomattox and Highland Springs high schools will visit here.

Colonnade Date Set

The next issue of the Colonnade will be published about the middle of March. All students are reminded that the poetry contest is now underway and will expire on Saturday February 18th. It was previously planned to end on the 15th, but the time has been extended three days.

Any student with interesting experiences while practice teaching are urged to submit them, in poetry form, to the Colonnade. Entries may be given to Barbara Andrews or placed in the Colonnade box.

Spring Convention Of VIPA To Meet At Randolph-Macon

The 1950 spring convention of the Virginia Intercollegiate Press Association has been set for March 3 and 4 in Lynchburg according to an announcement recently received from the host schools, Lynchburg College and Randolph-Macon Women's College. The announcement of the convention was sent to the Colonnade, the Rotunda, and the Virginian all of which are members of the VIPA.

The Colonnade and the Rotunda will both be entered in the competition for the VIPA cups which will be awarded to the best newspaper and to the best magazine.

Members of the staffs of all three publications will attend the two day convention. The names of these delegates will be announced at a later date.

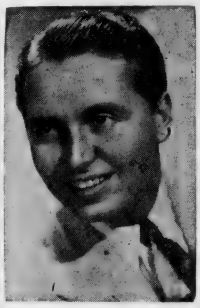
Hal McIntyre To Play Here For Cotillion Dance April 15



Formerly Played With Glen Miller

Hal McIntyre and his band will give a performance here April 15, the date set for the Cotillion Club dance to be held in the College gym, Robbie Cromar, president of the club announced recently.

According to Robbie, McIntyre is known for wide variations in music. His is one of the most modern and polished name bands. He has been ranked with the college favorites of all time.

In 1938, he started playing with Glen Miller where he continued until he formed his own band in 1941. Since that time, McIntyre has recorded with several disc companies. Two of his biggest recording hits were "Commando Serenade" and "Sentimental Journey." His band has been featured in four film musicals.

One of the claims of the McIntyre band is that they carry on the Miller style and traditions. During the war he traveled overseas with the USO to entertain the GI's.

World To Observe Day of Prayer Fri.

"Faith for Our Time" is the theme of World Day of Prayer which will be celebrated this year in more than 10,000 communities across the country on February 24, the first day of Lent.

The Farmville service, sponsored by the Farmville Council of Church Women, will be held in Johns Memorial Episcopal Church at 8 p. m. The Rev. Jean A. Vache, pastor of Johns Memorial, will give the address.

World Day of Prayer was originated by Mrs. Darwin R. James in 1887 when she asked women of the Presbyterian church to pray together on a special day for mission work in this country. The day has become a national, annual event, and will be celebrated this year in 92 countries around the world.

Y' Will Sponsor Red Cross Drive

$250 Goal Set For This Year

The Red Cross Drive sponsored by the Y' will begin on campus Monday, February 27 and last through March 3.

"Every student at Longwood should be grateful to the Red Cross for the aid given to us during the fire last year," Dolores Duncan, president of the Y' said in a recent interview. She added "Money, clothes, sheets and blankets were donated to the students and we hope they will show their appreciation during this drive."

A goal of $250 has been set this year — $50 dollars more than the goal set for last year. Dolores explained that the reserve fund which is used to supplement the drive has been depleted, so that the goal for this year was necessarily raised. Last year students contributed $46 more than the goal which was set at $200.

Student Standards Sponsors Dance Sat. Night In 'Rec'

Student Standards will sponsor a juke box dance in the College rec' this Saturday night from 8 to 12 p. m. to raise money for the Student Government fund.

The dance will be a boy-break girl-break affair and admission will be 10 cents per person. Margaret Beasley, president of Student Standards has asked that the student body turn out to help raise the money necessary to keep Student Government functioning.

Freshmen to Escort 'Sisters' To Party

Freshman "little sisters" will escort their "big sisters" to a Y. W. C. A. sponsored "coke-and-nab" party Monday night, February 27, at 10 p. m., it was recently announced. Lelia Mae Ferratt, chairman of the Y' membership committee, which is in charge of the affair, said that the party will be given in the rec' of Ruffner Hall.

Virginia Westbrook will be responsible for entertainment, Lelia said. It will probably take the form of a variety talent show with group singing.

Freshmen are reminded to invite and call for their "big sisters" to take them to the party.

AKG To Present Program of Slides Tomorrow Night

Regular Assembly Hour Shifted

The local circle of Alpha Kappa Gamma, women's honorary leadership society, will be in charge of assembly tomorrow. The program will be built around the life of Joan of Arc, patron saint of the College and namesake of the Longwood circle of A. K. G. Assembly time will be shifted from the regular hour to 7 p. m. in the Methodist Church, Patsy Ritter and B. Hylton, co-chairman of the program, said.

Joan of Arc

Miss Betty Spindler, of the audio-visual department, will show lantern slides depicting scenes in the life of Joan of Arc. The scenes will be connected by narration of the Saint's life and times by Miss Spindler.

Symbolizes Ideals

"This is a program which I believe should be of particular interest to every Longwood student in view of the fact that Joan symbolizes the ideals of our college," Patsy remarked. The slides which are to be shown are a gift to Joan Circle from the late Miss Lula Andrews, honorary member of the circle. Miss Andrews was a member of the faculty of this college.

Roll will be checked as usual at assembly tomorrow night. Day students who are unable to come will be excused.

State-wide PTA Education Workshop Held at Longwood

The first State-wide Parent Education Workshop to be held has been meeting here at Longwood this week and will be brought to conclusion tomorrow afternoon.

Some 55 representatives from Parent-Teachers' Associations in sixteen counties and seven cities throughout Virginia have met here to discuss problems and to receive leadership training.

Mr. Owen Knight, Director of Pupil Personnel in Montgomery County, Maryland, is director of the conference, assisted by consultant Dr. Abner Robertson, Executive Director of the Virginia Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Mrs. Hunter Barrow, President of the Congress, Mrs. Elizabeth Elmore, Director of Instruction in Dinwiddie County, and Fred O. Wygal, of the State Board of Education, are other consultants. Also serving in this capacity are Mrs. A. Gordon Stuart, a member of the Bristol school board, and Mrs. Q. M. Wiggins, President of the Norfolk City Federation.

Workshop leaders hope that from this conference will develop other similar conferences, in cities, counties, and districts throughout the State, to train leaders for parent education study, and that this same statewide conference might be continued in years to come.

Voice of Longwood To Be Science Show

Miss Elizabeth Burger, assistant professor of science, will has charge of the Voice of Longwood program to be heard over WFLO tomorrow at 4:30 p. m. The program will center around the new Edith Stevens hall and related matters.

Women contestants won last week's quiz given over WFLO by a score of 31-29.

Edwards To Portray Nurse In 'Plum Tree'

STAR of Orchesis, dance drama

March 17 Date Of Dance Drama

Casting for "The Plum Tree," a dance drama to be presented by Orchesis, March 17, is nearing completion according to an announcement made today by Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, club advisor.

Hilda Edwards will portray the part of Nurse Emma Davis, the main character of the drama. Angelina Norton, matron of the Home for Aging Women which she and Emma Davis run, will be played by Jean Farmer.

Narrator

Ann Nock will be the narrator for the drama, tying the scenes together and prompting much of the action.

The three demented women, "Rusty," "Tiddle," and "Christy," will be portrayed by Ray Phillips, Kitty Carmichael, and Jean Ridenour. Ray will take the part of the forgetful Mrs. Rust while Kitty as Miss Tiddle is firmly convinced that she will die at 4 p. m. "I was somebody once, am nobody now" is the plaintive chant of the former schoolmarm. Jean will portray the mad Swedish woman, Mrs. Christianson, who lived a lonely life on the northwestern plains.

Abstract Figures

Among the abstract figures which appear before Nurse Emma Davis are Illness, portrayed by Edith Duma, Old Age, portrayed by Marian Higgs, Death, which will be played by Anna Pamuiatte, Trouble, played by Bobby Pollard, Sorrow, portrayed by Edna Rodriguez, and Laughter, played by Sue Walker.

Robbie Cromar, and Mary Jane Stansbury will portray the little girls who play beside the plum tree in the yard of the Home for Aging Women.

To Be Cast

Players for the parts that have not as yet been cast will be selected from members of Orchesis and from members of the classes in modern dance, Mrs. Landrum also announced.

Major Elections Set For March 8

Hughes Announces Nominations Date

Major elections will be held March 8, according to Judy Hughes, who was elected chairman of the nominating committee, at the recent student body meeting. Included in this election will be the four major offices, president of Women's Student Government, president of House Council, president of the Athletic Association and president of the YWCA.

Judy stated that nominations will be made on March 7, at the table in the main hall of Ruffner. A slate will be presented to the student body which will be drawn up by the nominating committee. This committee is composed of the present major officers, the heads of the three campus publications, and Judy as chairman. Elections will be held on each dormitory hall and every student is required to vote.

Nominations for the minor offices will be held March 14, and the election of these officers will be held on the halls March 15.

Mr. Walker, Business Ed. Supervisor, Speaks at Commercial Club Banquet

Mr. A. L. Walker, State Supervisor of Business Education for Virginia, spoke Thursday, February 16, at the Commercial Club banquet, held in the Methodist Church.

Mr. Walker stated that there were certain topics in Business Education that would be of great benefit to everyone in our modern economic society. He said that at the present time there is an acute shortage of well-qualified secretaries and business teachers. Right now approximately 25% of the business teachers do not hold a state teacher's certificate and therefore are not qualified for their positions.

He urged all who plan to become business teachers to cultivate a professional attitude and to develop an interest in professional Business Education organizations and Business Education literature.

Polly Nasser was banquet chairman. Invited guests were Dr. and Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster, Mr. and Mrs. William Savage, Miss Ruth Gleaves, and Miss Mary Witcher.

The officers of this organization are: Ruth Walker, president; Connie Marston, vice-president; Max Acree, secretary; Patty Walker, treasurer; Janice Slavin, reporter.

STATE SUPERVISOR tells the Commercial Club of business teacher shortage.

Garden Club Ladies At Judge's School Feel Like Collegiates Again

by Mary Crowgey

When ye olde reporter first interviewed the ladies from the Garden Clubs, they were studying in preparation for five examinations. Mrs. F. E. Willard, the state Judging School chairman, remarked that being here was just like going to college again, adding that she just couldn't see why every girl doesn't choose to attend Longwood College.

She raved about the delicious meals served here. It was having dessert for luncheon and dinner both that really had her "sold" on this place. (Wouldn't it be nice if we could have company all the time so that we could have dessert twice a day every day?)

When the visitors were asked what they thought of their instructor from Longwood College, Dr. R. T. Brumfield, they hastily exclaimed, "Oh, he's nice!" After they had taken a Brumfield examination, we asked them again how they liked their teacher. They still were agreed that he was very nice. It must be magnetism!

The guests had quite a full schedule. It reminded us somewhat of three days in the life of a physical education major. They attended classes on mothers, on native plants, on judging horticultural specimens, on flower show practice, and on flower arrangement and judging by point scoring.

In the course of the interviews, your reporter learned much which should be of interest to flower lovers. Most of this information concerns the adaptability of wild flowers to the garden. According to Dr. Brumfield, to be assured of the growth of a wild-flower you are transplanting, place it in an environment which is nearly an exact duplicate of the one from which it was taken. According to one of the delegates, a wild life lover shouldn't have to worry too much about planting native flowers in his garden, they seem to fit quite naturally into the environment of every garden. In fact, most people have a time trying to keep them out!

To the flower enthusiasts, the fire drill last Tuesday night came as a complete surprise, although Congratulations to Cotillion Club.....

The Cotillion Club is to be congratulated for securing, for the first time in the history of the College, a "name" band to play for the Cotillion dance to be held in April. This ranks as a major step in the furtherance of the object of the Club, to develop and promote an interest in the social side of the College life.

But an even greater step could be taken if the Cotillion Club saw fit to open this dance to the student body. In addition to allowing the Club to better serve its purpose, such a move would make the dance much more financially secure.

Membership in the Cotillion Club is limited to 250, a little less than half of the present College enrollment. If tickets to the dance are available only to members, the ticket prices will be, of necessity, higher than the usual dance prices. This may well serve to further limit attendance at what should be one of the biggest and best affairs on the College calendar.

The opening of the dance to the student body has been opposed on the grounds that there would then be no purpose or significance to membership in the Club. Cotillion members could still secure recognition by their participation in the traditional figure. It is general practice among other college cotillion clubs to open dances to the student body.

If this dance, which marks a forward step for Longwood dances, is less than a success, it may discourage any further attempts to secure well-known bands. Financially and socially the dance must succeed if other bands of this caliber are to be invited to the campus. One, and perhaps the only, way to do this is to open the dance to the student body.

Olive Branches And Orchids to Dining Hall.....

The adage about the soothing powers of music gained new prestige in the eyes of Longwood students last Saturday noon when the discs started revolving in the dining hall. The oh's and ah's of contentment that greeted the first strains of dinner music were something to hear.

Unfortunately technical difficulties developed after the introduction of recorded music into the dining hall, but it's reported that these will soon be remedied. Students who were present at that Saturday meal felt the loss of a melodic luxury they tasted only briefly. It seems to be the objective of the dining hall administration to cultivate a calm and gracious atmosphere. No better means than background music could be found to keep 600 often overly-exhuberant spirits in polite restraint. At the same time it's probable that the soothing influence of song will cause a marked decline in critical comments on the fare.

The lyrical element can take credit for another welcome addition to dining hall atmosphere. The evening grace, set to music by the Madrigal Singers, has helped dinner off to a good start. As the musical grace becomes tradition, Longwood's prestige as a singing school increases, and students find meals more pleasant intermissions in their harried days.

The dining hall has often stood in the line of Rotunda fire in the past few years. Now we must extend the olive branch, coupled with a few orchids, for innovations that have warmed student hearts.

Alarmists See Longwood Sliding.....

Longwood has lost its spirit. Cooperation, the keyword which has enabled students, administration, faculty, alumnae and friends to mold an effective and progressive institution is a forgotten quality here. Such are the gloomy judgments a few short-sighted individuals have pronounced recently. Are they so? A loud no is the Rotunda's reply, and 99% of the student body and leaders of this institution will back this up. A great many senior students would be so bold as to say that they're leaving a finer, more progressive college than the one they entered on this same spot three and a half years ago.

The enrollment drop last September gave birth to the pessimists' fears. Their alarm mounted with the appearance of what they considered "leftist" elements in the columns of the Rotunda. A few student members of the fearful lost faith when they noted that academic interests forced many to soft pedal extracurricular camaraderie. The cynics have built up each small sign into a barometer of Longwood's impending ruin. Nonsense! is the Rotunda's view of this uneasy outlook.

No sound-minded statistician would determine a trend from one year's enrollment figures. Yet this is what some of the critics have done with Longwood's current slack period. Enough emphasis must be laid, too, on the fact that matriculation at this college depends heavily on the size of Virginia high school graduating classes. Because of the installaton of an extra year in Virginia high schools, these classes were practically nil in a large part of the Commonwealth last spring.

One troubled observer has detected a "note of Bolshevism" in recent Rotunda editorials and letters to the editor criticizing the College administration. Isn't it a tribute to a wise and democratic administration that students are granted this freedom of speech? Democracy depends upon criticism and ceases to exist without it. Today all outward signs show complete harmony in Russian "democracy." We prefer the Longwood brand.

Proof that Longwood students and executives are a cooperative team lies in their many recent reciprocal and arbitrary decisions governing student life. Gone from the American college scene are the days of student subservience and frustrated discontent. Longwood administrators, in line with universal trends, serve students' best interests by allowing them the greatest possible freedom in the handling of their own affairs.

A small misled element of the student body has mourned the passing of the days when most undergraduates had nothing more important to think about than generating so-called "class spirit." What this group has in the past mistaken for "class spirit" was in reality lack of serious purpose in the college career, with a consequent excess of time for non-academic activity. Those who are winding up their collegiate lives this year are generally agreed that academic and extracurricular work are achieving an increasingly better balance here. While maintaining adequate ties of "spirit," Longwood students are becoming more adult in their outlook.

Alarmists can calm their fears for the future of Longwood. For our money and most of the students', this College is turning out better equipped citizens today than ever before.

Pedro's Pocket

by Jean Turner

After many misdemeanors and pranks, Pedro was finally excommunicated from the infirmary before the week end. He said he had been feeling fine for two days and could see no point in keeping his feet under the cover. The fact that he gave Dr. Moore a hot foot didn't add to his popularity a bit.

Pedro was afraid he wouldn't get out in time to see junior sing, but he was. He practically knocked himself out giggling on the back row over the faculty "take offs." According to Pedro the sing was pretty good laughing material, shaking material (for fear the objects of the jokes would be present) and most any other type of material you can think of.

Pedro noticed last week the excellent (and we use the word loosely) meals we had while the "flower girls" were here. The same delicious food that we always have and ginger bread at lunch too. How well fed can you get? That's O. K. people—don't be discouraged. The "flower girls" had to hand over a meal ticket even after they saw what we were eating!

I tried to get Pedro to relate a few of his humorous (a matter of opinion) anecdotes for the column, but he declined my generous offer to do his washing and chased me out with a meat cleaver. It seems the profs have started their monthly seige and he has several tests tomorrow.

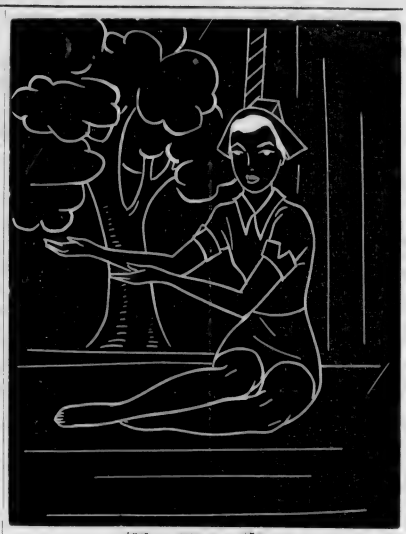
Alumnae News

The Roanoke Chapter of the Longwood Alumni Association has scheduled its annual luncheon meeting on Saturday, March 18. A great many chapters are having benefit bridge and canasta parties in an effort to obtain the remaining $5,000 needed to complete the Jarman Organ fund.

Alumni Magazine

The Alumni magazine has been sent to press and tentative plans have been made to send it to the chapters during the first week in March.

Farmville Card Party



Canasta, Bridge, and Rook will be only three of the games that will be played at game night Thursday, Feb. 23. The Farmville Alumnae Chapter of Longwood College will sponsor the social night beginning at 8 p. m., in the recreation hall of the college.

The merchants of Farmville have contributed prizes for the party.

This affair will be for the benefit of the Alumnae Association. Some of the association's activities are the Mary White Cox Scholarship, student loan fund, donation to the Jarman Organ Fund, graduation party for the college's seniors, reception for the teachers each fall, and returning graduates on Founder's Day.

To Visit Schools

Mrs. Mary Watkins, executive secretary of the college, and Mr. Raymond French, assistant professor of chemistry and physics, will visit schools in Amherst county February 27. On March 13 they will visit five high schools in Halifax county.

The Plum Tree

Campus Cogitations

Question: Do you think political parties should be formed at Longwood College?

Virginia Spencer: No, there's too much friendly spirit and home atmosphere.

Becky Mann: No, there's rivalry on the campus now.

Edith Walker: No. I don't think so. It might help the girls to think about political problems before they reach 21, but it would probably cause dissension.

Bea Johnson: No, because it might create hard feelings among the students.

Clara Cullin: Yes, because it would help us in understanding political problems more thoroughly.

Betsy Hankins: No. It involves too much brain work.

Jane Lively: No, because they're getting along all right now, and it would cause too much conflict.

Challice Hayden: Definitely no!

Barbara Dodd: No, because we have too much else to think about.

Eddie Ann Abbitt: No, because there would be too much argument.

Betty Abbitt: Well, we do like to argue.

Winston Johnson: I don't think it's necessary because there's too much dissension now.

Edith Kennon: Yes, because we don't have enough to argue about now.

Allie Jane Felton: Yes, because it would cause a greater interest on the part of the students in the operation of our government.

Rosalie Spain: No, because we have too much else to consider and too many obligations to fulfill.

Shirley Bloxton: I do not! Because it will make life more confusing than it is now on the campus.

Julia Tuck: No, I don't. Because there's too much dissension already.

Billie Barber: No, I don't believe in politics.

Polly Nassar: No, I have enough trouble remembering the ones in Washington.

Puckett Asher: No, at least not until we have a larger student body.

Library Features Puerto Rican Display

The College library is now featuring an exhibit by Puerto Rican students. The purpose of this exhibit is to acquaint Longwood students with Puerto Rico, its customs, climate, industries, and other characteristics.

According to Dr. Beverly Ruffin, Librarian, Puerto Rican students are often asked questions concerning their native country, such as "Do you have cars in Puerto Rico?" Consequently, says Dr. Ruffin, these students have placed at the disposal of students answers to almost any questions concerning Puerto Rico.

Also on exhibit are handkerchiefs and beads made in Puerto Rico.

High School Seniors To Be Entertained Here Over Week-End

Being entertained here the week end of March 4, 5 will be high school seniors from Suffolk, Newport News, Hampton, and Varina. Also visiting Longwood at that time will be high school students from Charlotte Court House, Appomattox, Blackstone, Victoria, and Buckingham.

Miss Virginia Bedford and Mrs. Janice Lemen will be in charge of a social hour for this group. Tea will be served to the guests in the Student Lounge.

Year Book Notice

Final payments on the 1950 Longwood yearbooks are currently being collected, Helen Kaknis, business manager of the Virginian, announced recently. These payments amount to $6.50 and may be given to Helen or to any member of the yearbook staff.

Helen also issued a reminder to organization treasurers to pay their bills for photographs in the yearbook. These must be paid as soon as possible, she said.

May Court To Be Fitted

The May Day queen, maid of honor, and court will choose their dresses for the May Day program Thursday after 3 p. m. in the YWCA lounge.

Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, faculty adviser for the annual production, has asked that the May queen and her attendants be prompt for their fittings.

LC Women To Meet Madison Rivals There

The Longwood girls will travel down the Shenandoah valley this Saturday to tangle with the Madison girls in the final basketball game of the season.

This forthcoming game promises to be full of excitement and well-warmed rivalry. A glance back over the past confirms this statement. Last year, Longwood won a hard fought battle by one point, which was a repeat performance of the year before with Madison on the winning side.

THE TENTATIVE CONTINUOUS DRIBBLE

The "continuous dribble" regulation now under universal experimentation, and employed by almost all women's basketball teams this season, has yet to offer any really serious threats to Longwood's defense. Also LC's offense seemingly has not been handicapped by the lack of its use, as Longwood's effective passing attack has developed over 160 points in three contests for an extremely high scoring average of 55 odd points per game.

However ,the continuous dribble is winning its place in women's basketball and most likely will receive definite approval next year. It does present an over-all freedom of movement and is in itself a rhythmic pattern which enables less awkward maneuverability, resulting in a higher degree of shooting accuracy, particularly on the shorter "crip" shots. It is an effective method of getting out of "pinned up holes" in order to get the ball back into offensive maneuvers. And lastly, as a result of these, it causes a higher scoring game with less unsuccessful passage up and back the court. It eliminates much of the over-all awkwardness of the women's game and as a whole makes the game much more entertainiing to play and watch.

Of course the continuous dribble, if not used wisely, can be a liability instead of an asset to any team. The dribble does place the eyes relatively to the floor. Many open breaks in split second instances may be missed if it is constantly used, and in this respect it slows down the offense considerably. The defense may further cripple the dribble's effectiveness by taking advantage of its "centralization" of the ball. But the dribble may be used very effectively as an aid to the passing attack—it gives the "little fellow" or small team a much better chance to win.

LANBEIN STARS AT GUARD

Ann Langbein's guarding and effective passwork has been one of the finest examples of guard performance of the year. Her cool head and usual aggressive performances have resulted in her becoming almost a "full game' player. She is one major reason why LC's opponents have been held down such low tallies.

LONGWOOD'S OFFENSIVE SPARKS

The relatively short but significant combination of Beard, Livesay, and Bradshaw executed some of the most effective offensive passwork in the Roanoke tilt. Ritter, as usual, was the main scoring punch for Longwood, but it was Roady, at the foul line from whom the Pioneers could easily take a few pointers—she hardly ever misses.

FARMVILLE AND CREWE REMAIN ON PIONEER SLATE

The Pioneers end their initial 15 game slate on the 25th and 4th as they meet once again the Farmville Town team in the high school gymnasium, and the Crewe Town Team on the home court respectively In two previous encounters with the Farmville club the Pioneers have split, taking the first one 37-31 while dropping the second in an "off" night 37-69. The locals have met the Crewe team once before losing a thrilling high scoring contest 56-69. These last two games the Pioneers are eagerly hoping to win; scores at least predict close games, and the season's experience should enable the Pioneers to bring forth some of their finest basketball. Victories here would make their 1950 debut a a highly successful beginning at Longwood.

Women Take Game From Lynchburg

The Longwood women's varsity basketball team defeated the Lynchburg team by four points last Friday in a close battle on the Lynchburg home court.

At the half the score stood 23-15 in Lynchburg's favor, but the Longwood team forged ahead in the final two quarters. Scoring 24 points to Lynchburg's 12, the girls from L. C. finished up the game with a four point margin. Final score in the upset was 39-35.

Starting the game in forward positions for Longwood were Patsy Ritter, Sue Brewbaker, and Winnie Beard while Ann Langbein, Rebecca Kelsey, and Marion Beckner hedl down the other end of the court.

Substituting on the blue and white team were Frances Allen, Norma Roady, Nell Bradshaw, Anna Famulette, Sue Webb and "Bunny" Ricks.

Pioneers Defeated By Richmond Team With 55-28 Score

RPI defeated the Longwood Pioneers last Saturday night but the high score they expected to run up never materialized, and they had to be satisfied with a 55 to 28 victory, Doc Fraser had his boys in top shape and they played their best game of the season.

The Richmond lads had things all their own during the first half and enjoyed a 30 to 9 lead at that point. The Pioneers could score only three goals from the floor during this half, and it seemed as though they were in for the same kind of shellacking they received in Richmond last December.

Something happened in the third period, and the Pioneers outscored their rivals 13 to 11. This quarter saw the most thrilling basketball played all season. The swiftness of the attack had the visitors gravely concerned. The fourth quarter was primarily a defensive affair with both teams trying to control the ball.

The Pioneers had no outstanding player, but credit must be given to Thompson, Clark, Vaughn, Benedict and Smallwood for their ability to bring the ball up court despite constant backcourt guarding.

Madison Five Take LC Men By 55-39

Score Stands 27-24 at Half

The Madison Dukes defeated the Longwood Pioneers in a hard fought game on the Madison home court Monday night. Final score in the game was 55-39.

A lack of consistent playing seemed to be the main fault of the Longwood five. During the first five minutes of the game the Pioneers scored seven points and at the same time held the Dukes from Madison scoreless. At the end of the first quarter the Pioneers trailed to the tune of 14-7.

At the half the quintet from Longwood, having picked up 17 points in the second quarter, were close on the heels of the Madison five. The score then stood at 27-24 with the laurels going to the Dukes. During the third quarter the score was tied but after that the Pioneers steadily lost ground leaving the final score at a heart breaking 55-39 in favor of the Madison team.

Although the squad from Longwood was off when it came to foul shots, the Dukes were putting them through the strings with remarkable accuracy. The Pioneers' defensive was, on the whole, very good allowing the Dukes to make their points on fast breaks only a few times.

Though definitely not one of the best played games for the Longwood quintet, the game with Madison was one of the hardest played of the entire season.

Pioneers Drop Game To Crewe By 13 Points

The Longwood Pioneers dropped a close game to the Crewe Town Team last Wednesday evening by the score of 69 to 56 in Crewe.

The game was close and the outcome in doubt until the final few minutes of the game when Crewe caught fire and put the game on ice. The game was rough and tightly contested being marked with numerous thrills and spills.

Les Smallwood and Bill Beamer kept the locals in the game with 25 and 18 points respectively.

Sophomores Defeat Blackstone 39-16

The sophomores came through with a 39-16 score in their second game of the season with Blackstone College last Wednesday. At halftime the sophomores were in the lead with a 12-7 score and kept this lead up to the final whistle. They pulled ahead in the second half to run the score up to 39 allowing the Blackstone six 9 points which brought their total up to 16.

most of the Longwood girls knew that there was going to be one. (Rain is a sure sign of a fire drill). The guests like to tell about the lady who grabbed her purse and wore all six of her hats outdoors. They said that after you're married, you don't think about books and towels.

The visitors liked the friendly atmosphere of Longwood College, expressing the wish that they might adopt the entire Student Body, as well as Dr. Brumfield. (Naturally, the Longwood girls think that the Garden Club ladies are pretty wonderful, too). The knowledge which they gained from the course will be put to good use. All of those who do not want to become judges can still make their own homes more attractive. Now that they have had another taste of college life, they are looking forward with much enthusiasm to the next course, which will be taught in August at VPI.

Honor Group Recognizes 5 As Leaders At Assembly

Agnew, Edwards, Hughes, Langbein, Walker Tapped

Five Longwood students were recognized by Alpha Kappa Gamma, women's honorary leadership fraternity, in the tapping service at assembly last Thursday afternoon.

Those who were tapped are Helen Agnew, junior from Burkeville; Hilda Edwards, senior from Buckingham; Judy Hughes, senior from Charlottesville; Anne Langbein, senior from Arlington; and Sue Walker, senior from Pearisburg.

Activities

Helen Agnew has served this year as secretary of Women's Student Government and as managing editor of the 1950 Virginian, yearbook. A Dean's List student, Helen has been Spanish Club secretary this year and was formerly secretary of the class of '51. Honorary organizations to which she belongs are Beorc Eh Thorne, English society; Kappa Delta Pi, education fraternity; Alpha Phi Sigma, scholarship fraternity; H2O, swimming club; and the Journalism Club. Helen is a member of Alpha Sigma Alpha, social sorority, and Cotillion Club.

President of Orchesis, dance club, Hilda Edwards has been a member of the Athletic Association Council, for two years, serving this year as tennis manager. She was recently elected chairman of the 1950 May Day production, and is a member of the May Queen's court. Hilda is a member of the Pan-Hellenic Council, Student Standards Committee, Monogram Club, Cotillion Club, and Kappa Delta, social sorority.

KDP President

Judy Hughes has presided over Kappa Delta Pi during the current year. Now president of the Baptist Student Union, she was vice-president of that organization last year. Judy has served Women's Student Government as treasurer this year and the Dramatic Club as librarian last year. She is a member of Alpha Phi Sigma, the Association for Childhood Education and Cotillion

Local FTA Bids 26 LC Juniors To Membership

Group Initiated Wednesday Night

Twenty-six juniors received bids from the J. L. Jarman chapter of Future Teachers of America last week, according to an announcement made by Connie Marston, president. They were initiated last Wednesday night in the honors room.

Among those receiving bids were Max Acree Georgia Bailey, Hilda Bauserman, Aima Bedinger, Sue Brubaker, Harriet Butterworth, Jackie Carter, Frances Cregar, and Mary Crowder.

Helen Edgerton, Evelyn Farrier, Marian Higgs Peggy Hoover, Betty Johnson, Betty Jones, Ann McMullen, Betty McRee, and Mary Leigh Meredith also received bids to F.T.A.

Others receiving bids were Jane Seward, Helen Smith, Mary B Smith, Virginia Spencer Hattie Swihart, Katherine Terry, Patty Walker, and Fay White.

The association seeks to create interest in professional leadership, to further the understanding of the activities and service of the National Education Association, to study the traditions and practices of the teaching profession, and to develop in the member those powers and qualities recognized as desirable assets of the profession.

In order to become a member of Future Teachers of America, a student must be recommended to the membership by the head of his department.

YWCA To Sponsor Voice Of Longwood Discussion Program

The local YWCA is in charge of the Voice of Longwood program to be given tomorrow afternon at 4:30 p. m.

The program will take the form of a general discussion group headed by Evelyn Farrier and June Foreman. Two freshmen, Sarah McElroy and Patricia Lee, will also participate. Sarah will sing the Y' song, "Follow the Gleam."

The Y' cabinet and the two representatives of the freshman class will discuss current problems with questions slanted particularly at the freshman point of view.

Duma, Meredith, Smith, Jones To Head College Publications

Harper, Connelly Bailey Managers

The publications board, headed by Judy Hughes, has released the names of Longwood publications heads for the forthcoming year. Edith Duma will take over as editor-in-chief of the Colonnade magazine; new co-editors of the Rotunda are Mary Leigh Meredith and Jean Smith; Charlotte King Jones has been appointed editor-in-chief of the 1951 Virginian, yearbook.

Frances Harper, Helen Connelly and Georgia Bailey will serve the Colonnade, Rotunda and Virginian respectively as business managers. Subordinate staff and departmental heads will be announced later by the new editors and business managers.

Edith Duma, who succeeds Anne Langbein in the Colonnade editor's chair, is a junior from Portsmouth. Her magazine background includes this year as managing editor of the Colonnade and former work as a member of the staff.

Wide Background

Mary Leigh Meredith and Jean Smith, juniors from Front Royal and Pearisburg, respectively, have been associated with the College newspaper since their freshman year. Prior to promotion to co-editorship of the Rotunda, Mary Leigh held the positions of news editor and managing editor. Jean this year held desk editorship of the paper and was formerly a reporter.

Charlotte K. Jones, who follows Joyce Webb in the top Virginian position, is a junior from Salem. She was chosen on the basis of her work this year as assistant editor of the yearbook.

Fran Harper, junior of Danville, takes over from Polly Nasser the business management of the Colonnade. A transfer student from Averett College, Danville, Fran was actively engaged

10 Delegates Will Attend VIPA Meet

College Journalists To Go To RMWC

Ten delegates from the Longwood publications will attend the spring convention of the Virginia Intercollegiate Press Association in Lynchburg, March 3 and 4.

Randolph Macon Women's College and Lynchburg College, who are playing hosts to the convention will open the meeting Friday night with a banquet for the delegates.

Frances Harper, newly appointed business manager, and June Raines, a member of the business staff, will represent the Colonnade at the meeting.

Delegates from the Rotunda will include Jackie Eagle, retiring editor of the paper; Mary Leigh Meredith and Jean Smith, who have been recently appointed co-editors; and Janice Slavin, retiring business manager.

Joyce Webb, editor-in-chief of the 1950 annual will represent the Virginian at the convention with Helen Kaknis, business manager; Charlotte Jones, editor-in-chief of the 1951 annual and Georgia Bailey, business manager of the '51 yearbook.

President Lancaster Returns From Meet

President Dabney S. Lancaster has recently returned from Atlantic City, New Jersey where he attended the annual meeting of the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education. Before the meeting began Dr. Lancaster attended a two and one-half day conference of the accrediting committee of that association.

Some of the more important topics discussed at the meeting were "Unsolved Problems in Teacher Education", "Program of General Education needed by Prospective Teachers", "Preparation of College Teachers", "Student Personnel Services."

Building To Have Radio Facilities

President Releases Remodeling Plans

Several items were recently released from the President's office concerning the building plans of the College.

A room equipped for radio broadcasting to be placed in the new auditorium-music building has been planned.

Tentative plans are being made for remodeling the old science hall for the use of all works in home economics. If possible, this remodeling will be done the coming summer.

Bids for the White House replacement will be opened at the College March 21.

6 Join Fraternity

The names of 6 recent initiates of Pi Gamma Mu, social science fraternity, have been announced by Dennise Love, president.

New members are Rena Mae Hayes Mildred Carter, Frances Everett, Calvin Hatcher, Edith Duvall, and Ann McMullen.

Pi Gamma Mu is a national, honorary social science fraternity. Its membership is made up of juniors and seniors who have shown an outstanding interest in the social phase of education.

College Professor Savs Art Shouldn't Be Analyzed

by Bunny Gibson

A group of paintings taken from the works of Mr. Robert Vickers, assistant professor of art, is now being exhibited in the browsing room of the College library.

Among these works, which are principally modernistic, are water colors, oils, silk screens and gouache. Some more realistic watercolors are also included in the show. One piece of sculpture, "Driftwood Forma," is on display.

In a recent interview concerning his modernistic style, Mr. Vickers related that his early works were very realistic, but gradually he began to strive to see and find a way of expressing something entirely new. Taking lines and forms from nature, he tried to capture their mood. His object now, he stated, is to say as much as he can in as few lines of color as possible.

"Talking of my own work, I feel a little hindered, because I am trying to say something about painting that I've already said in paint," Mr. Vickers stated. "Modern art cannot be analyzed and appreciated " he said. "However," he added, "anyone can feel the emotional appeal of color and plane movement." He emphasized his belief that color is the important thing in art.

Explaining his method, Mr. Vickers said that he pain's without looking at subject matter but tries to show something more real than what is on the surface. Mr. Vickers, as well as other modern artists, strives to find a way of saying something new that no one else has found before. Other peoples' reactions do not matter because the artist is interested mainly in arousing feeling, whether it is good or bad.

Some paintings among Mr Vicker's works are now on exhibit in New York and Norfolk. Mr. Vickers is planning a gallery talk on those paintings being shown in the library. The date will be announced later.

Cast For Orchesis Drama 'The Plum Tree' Completed

The casting of "The Plum Tree", the dance drama to be presented March 17 by Orchesis, has been completed according to an announcement made by Hilda Edwards, president of the dance organization.

June Raines will portray the acrobat in the story of the Home for Aging Women and the people within its walls. Elizabeth Orr will play the part of Mrs. Wilcox and Romine Mahood, Betty Tyler, and Liz Lesslie will portray the three women whom she entertains.

Old Women

Portraying the old women in the drama will be Audrey Pettit, Shirley Elmquist, Erma Poarch, Ann Murphy, Hilda Lewis, Peggy Covington, Dolores Hoback, Nancy Walker, Shirley Fahrbach, and Joanne McCombs.

Peggy Harris will play the part of Whipple who spends her time in a wheelchair. Nell Bradshaw, Clara Borum, Edith Kenyon, Rena Mae Hayes, Conway Rice, Frances Stringfellow, and Rachel Peters will portray the "70's", a group of the septuagenarian inmates.

Costumes

Work has been started on costumes for "The Plum Tree", and props are being assembled for the March 17 production.

"The Plum Tree" is taken from the novel by the same name by Mary Ellen Chase.

Absolutely The Last Word .....

Three years and many inches of type ago the senior members of the Rotunda staff had their first fling at amateur newspaper production. Today is the day they've both hoped for and dreaded. Through the dark hours of petty troubles, this day was a goal to keep us plugging—the day of deliverance. But in spite of the weekly fever and grumbles we've known that it wouldn't be easy to say goodbye to the Rotunda. The newspaper has been our baby, the embodiment of ideas, enthusiasm and sweat, and it's not easily renounced.

Mistakes—we've made a million. Triumphs—precious few. (Election issues are always exciting, and we panted while stepping up production half a day to scoop the syndicates on the new College name.) But we have done our best to be good, clean journalists. We've stated our platform often enough. It boils down to trying to be honest, accurate, and fair to all segments of the great group of personalities who make up Longwood College.

To us the Rotunda has been at once play and love's labor. We're indebted to a host of people who helped us in the game. No paper could wish for a more cooperative college administration. And there's always Mr. Harry Lancaster and the entire staff at the Herald office who are patient, cheerful and indispensable to members of the Rotunda staff. Dean W. W. Savage and Dr. M. W. Schlegel have given us valuable advice and backed us up through the minor skirmishes we've seen. We're thankful too to all the fine people at the end of the our beats, notably Mrs. Mary Watkins and Miss Virgilia Bugg, who have gladly taken their precious time to satisfy our demands. Finally, we're grateful to the student body for interest shown in their paper, for criticism and suggestions.

A year ago the members of the old staff set out to debunk the maxim about "pleasing all the people all the time." We tried. Now we turn over the ideal to the eager and capable hands who we know will keep the ball of progress rolling toward an even better Rotunda and that "greater entity", Longwood College.

New Staff Lays Its Planks .....

With the next issue, the new Rotunda staff will take over the Wednesday to Wednesday grind, and the senior members of the old staff will begin their well-earned rest and recuperation.

The new staff, which is only members of the old staff with new responsibilities, will try to live up to the standards set by the retiring staff and to be at all times a true reflection of the life and opinions of the College. The objects of the Rotunda are threefold, to keep the students, the faculty, and the administration informed about the current events of the College, to reflect the opinion of the students, alumni, faculty and administration on matters pertaining to the College, and to serve as a current chronicle of College life. The new staff will attempt to fulfill these objectives and to serve the college through the impartial printing of news and opinions to the best of its ability. But the staff can meet its objectives only with the cooperation and support of the entire student body, faculty and administration. So while we pledge ourselves to serve you, we ask your support and cooperation.

We salute the retiring members of the staff for a good job, well done, and hope that eventually we can fill their shoes.

Our Lost Youth . . .

Listening to the enthusiastic cheers and songs of the crowds at the high school tournaments held here this week brings nostalgia for the days of our lost youth. The intense spirit these groups show is a feeling that comes less frequently in college activities than in high school. Could be that we're growing more staid in our old age, but the spirit at these games was so contagious that even disinterested Longwood student spectators were seen wringing hands and cheering lustily. The local student body could certainly take a leaf from the book of these high school students who show that they know the full meaning of the oft-quoted, too seldom heeded, "support your team."

OUR WORLD

Each of us students is well aware of the fact that only through working togethter as a unit can success be secured. We too often overlook that there are numerous ways in which we can prove to the world that we are trying to understand the customs and attitudes of all our foreign neighbors. Each organization in which we are participating, is one stepping-stone in creating better world relations by bringing together the peoples of all nationalities.

Little attention and emphasis has been placed upon UNESCO in the havoc of our Longwood College life. Often we fail to realize this organization. One of the most important activities of the United Nations Educational, Social, and Cultural Organization is the exchange of students. By studying in foreign nations, a new set of values may be learned in living new lives, new hopes, and new fears. As people study the lives of others, their horizons are widened, their interests broadened, and an understanding of their neighbors developed. This is something that each of us can do, for as Robert Oppenheimer once said, "Perhaps the best way to send knowledge is to wrap it up in a person."

Men and women all over the war-torn world have envied the idealistic American way of life. Each year more and more students from abroad want to come to this country to study and train themselves. Today over 30,000 of these students are in the United States, studying everything from engineering to home economics.

A program for the interchange of students is not easy to undertake. It requires an immense effort on the part of all concerned. The United Nations, the United State government, and various civic and social organizations have expressed a great interest in participation in this activity.

"No one claims that this interchange of persons alone will prevent war. It is only one road towards peace—but it is a wide road," it has wisely been said.

Surely, if such institutions, have belief in the power of UNESCO, we too can do our part.

Letters To Editor

Dear Editor:

It has been brought to my attention that a piece of art work, hanging on display in the hall of second floor library, has been marked up by some thoughtless person. Not only is this an unnecessary act, but more serious than that, it is a definite defacement of the personal property of a student who has labored hard and long on her individual production.

Is this mutilation an example of student appreciation art, or is this "just an adolescent prank?" That is not a matter for the art department alone to deal with, but it is a matter of deep concern for the Student Government Association, as it is a definite reflection on the student body. What satisfaction can one gain from marring the individual work of a fellow student? Certainly, I do not believe that this act is a reflection on the artist's work but it may appear as such.

This is an absolute infraction of the Honor Code, for "the Code requires that any property of another person shall not be taken, injured or disturbed."

May this action serve as a reminder that we cannot progress through life disfiguring the property of others, and I hope there wil be no repetition of this occurrence.

Sincerely yours,
Elizabeth A. Bragg,
President, Women's Student Government Assoc.

Pedro's Pocket

by Jean Turner

With this issue Pedro bids all his Longwood friends a fond adios. There is just entirely too much work to being a senior and having to be interviewed every week for the newspaper too. Pedro is giving it up to devote all his time to his studies.

Pedro is such an inconsistent little fella you never quite know what to expect. Saturday night he was so thrilled over the snow that he stayed out and played in it until seven o'clock Sunday morning. He looked horrible when I saw him—just like he'd been on a week's bender. But he was back in the snow again putting up a supply of snow balls for July—thinks they'll sell.

The editor of this paper informed me that this column had to be long this week 'cause they need it for it for a filler. But Pedro being in one of his less cooperative moods, which have persisted for some time now, wouldn't say much. It seems that he got a second hand dimple machine at an auction the other day and he was eager to try it out.

Pedro's cousin Ambrose came up for a visit last week and that might explain his nasty disposition. If any evil little things happen to you, such as spilling coffee or what have you on your best dress, or getting a run in your brand new hose, or just anything that you're sure couldn't happen by itself—then Ambrose did it.

Pedro insists that regardless of the fact that this is his last little message to you he hopes to remain your friend always. Also he hopes you will continue to bring your little problems to him as he fully intends to keep up his good work in consultation and student aptitude guising. Pedro will be around the campus in June, he is only leaving the Rotunda staff (they're undoubtedly a hard bunch to get along with.) Adios Amigos.

One Way We Show Our Spirit

Campus Cogitations

Question: What does the "Longwood Spirit" mean to you?

Betty Abbitt: Ask the freshmen.

Bert Browning: Mutual friendliness, cooperation and understanding among us all.

Maria Jackson: The Longwood spirit is knowing that there is one.

Peggy Bryant: It means loyalty to the school and a friendly spirit prevailing among all — students and faculty.

Fran Harper: It's a spirit that grows inside you the longer you're here.

Dr. Schlegel: The Longwood spirit is a spirit of friendliness, kindness and cooperation.

Nellie Hart: It's spontaneous combustion.

Jack Huegel: It's the people who make the school spirit.

Lizzie Bragg: The Longwood spirit permeates everything we do. And it is because of this spirit that we strive to become the students that we are.

Dot Dout: It means the most wonderful four years of my life—so far!

Mary Lou Alphin: The way that everyone's friendly and cooperative and the way everyone helps others.

Ann Jones: It helps keep me here when I want to go to Christiansburg.

Liz Leslie: Lots of work and lots of play—I love it.

Ann Crowder: It gives me that extra push when I think of three years before me.

Jeanne Farmer: Friendliness, cooperation and everybody working together.

Dolores Duncan: Quite a bit. That's all I've got to say.

Lester Smallwood: I think it's wonderful—Very seldom seen in colleges and universities today.

Frank Vaughn: Best there is!

Clara Borum: Ask Red & White. They're the only ones that seem to have any.

Rachael Peters: Just don't ask me.

Janie Richards: With Bill's return, I can't be bothered with Longwood spirit right now.

Midge Woods: It isn't so bad! I'm having fun!

Dot Dunford: Friendliness and cooperation with all.

Gloria de Selva: Pep, energy and enthusiasm!

Barbara White: It means a deep loyalty to your class and to the school. It needn't be the loud shouting kind.

Charlotte Robertson: Longwood spirit shows that our youth is not decaying and I would hate to feel decayed!

Marguerite Smith: A friendly spirit among students that goes further than feathers and paint.

Betsy Bevell: Oh Brother!

Joanne Sieck: Being myself under all circumstances and allowing others that same priviledge.

Dot Wood: I like the way everyone says "hello".

June Foreman: It's that friendly feeling toward everyone that can't be topped anywhere else.

Tea Room Offers Peace, Quiet--Plus Delicious Food

by Mary Crowgey

Do you yack vigor and vim? Do your professors' voices grate on your nerves? Do you find that at anytime by merely closing your eyes you fall into a restless nightmare? Do you always feel as though you are walking around on one leg?

Stop to analyze this condition. Can it be because your pyloric lacks a digestible substance? Because you do not have definite periods of relaxation in which to soothe those shattered nerves? You can cure the above-mentioned malady by frequenting the College Tea Room.

Peace and quiet! At this point, freedom from noise is more desirable than freedom from home work. The Tea Room is always peaceful. In the mornings, the sun shines in that direction, and it really is nice!

Mrs. Louise Dugger the hostess, is especially eager to have freshmen and sophomores test her cookery. (At present it seems that the tea room is the hangout of the upper classmen and faculty members.) Town people and guests of the College are equally welcome. Mrs. Dugger enjoys giving dinners for different organizations, last week preparing a D.A.R. banquet.

It you're tired of eating ginger bread, if you see floating biscuits before your eyes, if scalloped potatoes have lost their thrill, why not have lunch at the Tea Room, where you can get genuine imitation of your own mother's cooking? How would you like a big juicy broiled steak with a little ole' piece of chocolate cake, prepared with your own individual taste buds in mind!

If you get up at 7:30 and find, after a mad race to the dining hall the door being closed on your foot, do not mope around the rotunda in hopes of grabbing a crust of bread when everybody else is coming out; do not try going in the back door through the kitchen .Instead of risking your life and reputation, just bring your billfold to breakfast with you every morning. Then when you are locked out, smile. (Because they were probably having fish and tomatoes anyway.) Head for the Tea Room, where the food, fellowship, and service are the finest.

PIONEERS COMPLETE INITIAL CAGE SEASON

The Pioneers initial 15 game 1949-50 basketball season has come to a close. Their record of 3 wins and 12 defeats sounds somewhat dismal, but in reality it represents quite a lot of progress. The Pioneers have come a long way from their opening game with RPI, in the days when the "12 inexperienced court strangers" could hardly get the ball up past the half court mark effectively. With only two dozen men from which to obtain players, the Pioneers have accomplished almost the impossible, in developing a team that could give its opponents a "time of it" despite usual heavily reserved and experienced opposition. They have more than achieved their prime objective—to set up an athletic program for men at Longwood College.

ORCHIDS TO FRASER AND MALLOY

The progress of the men's basketball team this year has been chiefly the result of the untiring efforts of Dr. A. C. Fraser, assisting coach, and Mr. Thomas A. Malloy, faculty adviser. The building, for the first time, of an athletic program at any institution is no simple task; it is not completed in a matter of months, and its time consuming necessities at first do not generally pay off in glamorous records. The results of such work usually show up after the movement has been well grounded.

Although Dr. Fraser has been limited in his available time with the team, it has benefited markedly by his professional instruction. Mr. Malloy started out the season as "green" as the players as far as direct experience in basketball is concerned, but he does have a sincere interest in the development of men's athletics at Longwood, and to this end he has aided the cause tremendously as an adviser and often emergency coach.

GENTRY AND HUEGEL

Buddy Gentry, manager of men's athletics, and Jack Huegel, manager and referee, have contributed in no small measure to the advancement of the youthful athletic program. Gentry's time consuming managerial duties amounted to more "sweat" than the players on the floor. The financial end of the "kitty" inevitably would have been in the red had it not been for Huegel's refereeing which cut the cost of referee's fees. However, at the same time we received no soft-pedaled official in Huegel, as many attendants painfully witnessed.

OTHER SUPPORTERS

The picture of this year's successful beginning for men's athletics at Longwood could not be complete without the recognition of some other, minor though terrifically important supporters. Miss Olive T. Iler, head of the physical education department, through her many official and personal efforts spirited the team to even greater heights. Added to this were the donated services of Dr. Schlegel, Dr. Jeffers, and Mr. Myers. The sacrifice of many "free" afternoons by Mrs. Bettie S. Hammond, dietitian, and staff for the preparation of early "training table meals" can not be forgotten, nor can the noble cheers of the women cheerleaders fade away. Appreciation—a small token for a big service.

VAUGHN ELECTED MANAGER OF MEN'S TENNIS

A recent meeting of the men's division of the Athletic Association unanimously elected Frank Vaughn the manager of the 1950 tennis team. Edward V. Parks, president of the men's committee, announced also that an election of a team captain would come early in the season. Vaughn expressed the desire to set up a definite schedule with possibly Hampden-Sydney, Lynchburg, Bridgewater, and Randolph-Macon Colleges of the Little Six.

Pioneers Downed By Crewe Team In Final Contest

by Bill Beamer

The Pioneers met the Crewe Town team last Saturday night on the home floor for the final game of the season which ended in a 65-39 defeat for the locals.

The ball was up at the sound of the whistle; Crewe made the tip off. The first quarter was rather tight sometimes with Crewe in the lead 2 points and then the Pioneers. Smallwood was sinking the ball from every angle. Clark, Thompson, Vaughn, Benedict and Orange played an exciting game which showed their ability to work as a team.

Going into the third quarter, the Crewe five began picking up a few points, and the Pioneers dropped behind. At the end of the game Crewe was ahead 65-39.

After their final game a representative of the Pioneers stated, "Although we didn't win many games, we enjoyed every minute of the season and are deeply indebted to our sponsor, Mr. T. A. Malloy, and our coach, Dr. A. C. Fraser." He added, "The Pioneers are looking forward to playing tennis in the spring and hope the girls will give their support as well as they did for basketball."

Sportin' Around

by Anne Lynch

The women's varsity team played their last game of the season Monday against Westhampton. During the 1949-50 season the girls in blue won three out of the five games they played and put up a good fight in the two they lost. We're proud of you, team!

Briefly glancing over the scorebooks we come up with the following tabulations:

Jan. 14—Longwood, 67; Bridgewater, 30.

Feb. 10—Longwood, 56; Roanoke, 24.

Feb. 17—Longwood, 39; Lynchburg, 35.

Feb. 25—Longwood, 33; Madison 41.

Feb. 27—Longwood 24; Westhampton, 52.

Don't forget the eight practices which are necessary if you wish to play on the class volleyball or basketball teams. Class games will be played the middle of this month so there's no need to say—time is short. Some classes still don't have enough players eligible to make up a team. So show the Longwood spirit and come out to support your class.

If you've been in the gym in the middle of the afternoon or after supper recently you've probably seen Orchesis busy practicing for their dance recital. Looks good doesn't it? Don't miss it—it's scheduled for March 17.

Westhampton Defeats L C By 28 Points

Richmond Scene Of Last Game

The Longwood women's varsity team met defeat at the hands of the Westhampton team Monday night in the L C'ers last game of the 1949-'50 season by a score of 52-24.

Playing on the Westhampton home court the squad from Longwood lost out in the early minutes of the game and the Westhampton six kept a lead on the girls in blue throughout the game.

At the half the score stood 24-12 in Westhampton's favor.

The starting forwards for Longwood were Ritter, Bradshaw, and Beard. Playing guard for Longwood were Langbein, Webb, and Kelsey. Brewbaker and Roady substituted at forward and Becknor was the sole guard substitute.

Farmville Town Team Scores Close Victory Over Pioneers 52-43

by Jack Huegel

After having held the Farmville Town Team for three periods the Longwood Pioneers fell behind and suffered a 52-43 defeat last Friday night in the college gym. The game was close and hard fought all the way.

The first quarter saw the visitors leading by a 17 to 10 score, but in the second quarter the home team charged full speed ahead and pulled within one point of Farmville. In this quarter the boys showed excellent team work and by sheer pluck and hard fight overcame the first quarter deficit.

The Pioneers hung on by their teeth in the third quarter and every point gathered by both teams was hotly contested. The Pioneers visioned a victory and played their hearts out in this quarter. The quarter ended in a 37-37 tie.

The Farmville team pulled ahead early in the fourth quarter after the locals lost three of their key men by the personal foul route. The scoring punch was lost after this and the visitors could not be held in check.

All season long the Pioneers were plagued by poor foul shooting, and their failure to connect with the free throws was the deciding issue of the game. They outscored Farmville from the floor, but were able to make only 9 throws out of a possible 29.

Madison Team Tops Longwood Six 47-33

The Longwood Women's Varsity dropped their first game this season to the Madison six by a score of 47-33. The game which was played on the Madison court Saturday afternoon was a close fight all the way with Longwood leading by 2 points at the half.

Starting for Longwood as forwards were Beard Brewbaker and Ritter. Guards were Langbein, Webb, and Kelsey Bradshaw and Becknor substituted at forward and guard positions respectively.

Tri-Sig Nat'l. Pres. To Visit Alpha Here

Mrs. Robertson Page, of Newton Center, Mass., national president of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority, will visit Alpha chapter at Longwood College on March 6 and 7.

Mrs. Page, whose visit will be a homecoming since she is a member of the chapter here, is at present on an extended tour of college and alumnae chapters of Tri Sigma in eight southern states.

Mrs. Page, who became national president at Tri Sigma's 50th anniversary convention held in Williamsburg, Va., in 1947, also represented her sorority in the National Panhellenic Conference.

Plans Meetings Here

In addition to visiting Alpha chapter, Mrs. Page will confer with each chapter officer and will also meet with the college president and dean.

After her visit with Alpha chapters, Mrs. Page will leave for Richmond where she will visit the Richmond alumnae chapter. One of the main topics which will be taken up at this meeting with the Richmond alumnae will be the plans for the national convention to be held by Tri Sigma next June 24 through 28 at the Edgewater Beach Hotel in Chicago.

Rotunda Wins Award At Spring VIPA Meet

6 LC Delegates Attend Convention

The Rotunda received an award of honorable mention in the spring collegiate newspaper competition sponsored by the Virginia Intercollegiate Press Association. The award was presented at the spring convention of the VIPA held at Randolph-Macon Woman's Collegiate in Lynchburg March 3 and 4.

Longwood Delegates

Six members of the Longwood publication staffs attended the convention. Representing the Rotunda were Jackie Eagle, retired editor-in-chief, and Mary Leigh Meredith and Jean Smith, co-editors-in-chief.

Joyce Webb, editor-in-chief, Helen Kaknis, business manager, and Georgia Bailey, business manager elect, represented the Virginian at the convention.

Other Winners

The Ring-Tum-Phi from Washington and Lee University received the first place award in the newspaper class. Second place was awarded the Stratford Traveler from Stratford junior college.

In the magazine class the Messenger from the University of Richmond was awarded the first prize. The Engineer from VPI received the second place award and the award of honorable mention went to the Spectator from the University of Virginia.

First place winners in each class received a silver cup; runners-up were awarded certificates.

Elect Officers

Priscilla Smith from RMWC was elected president of the VIPA for the coming year. Also elected at the Saturday afternoon business session were George Taylor from the University of Richmond as vice president and Bruce Lovett from Lynchburg College as secretary-treasurer.

Principal Speakers

Mr. Jack C. McDermott, chief of the International Press and Publications Division of the Department of State, spoke to the convention at the opening banquet on Friday night.

"The goose that lays the golden egg must have the 'propaganda'", said Mr. McDermott as he explained the work of his department. Approximately $30,000,000 is spent yearly in this campaign to show the United States to the rest of the world.

"The Voice of America" is the best known effort of this department but is by no means the only, pointed out Mr. McDermott.

Must Be Factual

"The material used must be both straightforward and factual", said Mr. McDermott. "The foreign editors who censor all this material can not argue with facts."

Only one magazine put out by the department is sold in Russia.

Apprentice Group Present Drama

The apprentice group of the Longwood Dramatic Club presented a one act fantasy entitled "My Lady Dreams" at the regular meeting of the club last night in the small auditorium.

Ann Murphy filled the lead role of the Lady, Betty Scott Borkey portrayed the maid, and Jean Atkins was cast in the part of the Little Old Lady. Amanda Wright took the part of the Other Woman and Mary Crawford and Betsy Hankins filled the roles of the children.

Apprentices from properties, staging, make-up and costuming departments assisted those in the acting department in presenting the play.

Colonnade Picks Burton Leading Poet In Contest

Taylor, Browning Also Winners

First place in the annual poetry contest sponsored by the Colonnade, the College magazine, was won by Mrs. Grace Burton with two poems, "To a Row of Daffodils" and "Allegory of the Sunrise," Ann Langbein, editor-in-chief of the Colonnade, has announced.

Patricia Taylor was awarded second prize for her poem, "Spring Night," and Roberta Browning's "A Rose" won her the third place award.

Other Winners

"The Fantasy of Youth" by Katie Bondurant was given an honorable mention in the contest. Also awarded honorable mention were "The Wig" by John Cook and "The Family Pet," a humurous poem by Betsy Wilson.

The prize winning poems will be featured in the next issue of the Colonnade which will be issued to the students in March.

Short Story

"The Cocker Cupid" by Charlotte King Jones which won second prize in the fall short story contest will also appear in the coming issue of the Colonnade. Among the features in this issue will be several humurous sketches, including "Six Twenty-nine" by Lester Smallwood. Word puzzles and pictures of the Longwood basketball teams will also appear in this issue.

Pan-Hel Council Picks Orchestra

The Metronomes, a nine piece orchestra led by Bert Tillet, will furnish the music for the Pan-Hellenic Dance to be given in the College gym Saturday, March 18.

According to Hilda Edwards, music chairman for the dance, the Metronomes have played at a number of colleges, high schools, country clubs, and shows around the state. They are currently engaged at the Tappahannock Boating Club.

General chairman of the dance is Anne Lynch while Hilda Edwards is serving as music chairman. Marion Breeden, Harriet Ratchford, Anne Nock, and Helen Hardin make up the floor committee, and Helen Smith is invitation chairman. On the decorating committee for the dance is Kackie McCready, Jean Gilman, and Helen Arrington.

Pat Paddison and Jean Smith are on the publication committee while Ruth Hathaway and Laura Lee Stickley serve on the refreshment committee. The entertainment committee is made up of Page Burnette and Charlotte K. Jones and Maxine Watts is clean-up chairman.

Tickets for the Pan-Hel are free to sorority members and pledges. Girls who are invited to the dance will be requested to pay for their tickets.

Prof. To Attend Meet

Dr. John W. Molnar, head of the College music department will attend the conference of superintendents, supervisors and special teachers of the State to be held in Roanoke beginning this Thursday.

Local Professor's Booklet On Va. Geography Ready

Copies of A Geography of Virginia by Miss Grace Moran, of the Longwood faculty, have begun rolling off the press.

The 60-page booklet is written as a State supplement to the Rand McNally series of elementary grade textbooks. The Moran geography is intended for students in the fifth grade.

Generously illustrated with photographs and maps, Miss Moran's book takes up human, topographic and economic aspects of Old Dominion geography in the language of young Virginians. Relationships of needs and supplies are emphasized by the author. A Geography of Virginia is the Commonwealth edition of a series published for each of the separate States to supplement the regular Rand McNally text where it has been adopted.

Topics Covered

Some of the topical headings of the Geography are "Special Coastal-Plain Farm Products", "Tobacco, Product of Southside Piedmont", "Dairying in Virginia", "Orcharding in Virginia", "Gathering Sea Foods in Virginia", "Beautiful Virginia", etc. Miss Moran prepared material for maps on the Commonwealth's growing season, distribution of peanuts, varieties of tobacco, corn, cattle, poultry, apples, mineral resources and coastal fishing.

Miss Moran began work on the Virginia geography last spring and completed the final rewriting this fall. Students and teachers at the local elementary school cooperated with Miss Moran when she tested the first draft of the Geography on Farmville fifth-graders last spring. This enabled the author to modify the booklet to meet fifth-grade needs and understanding.

Visual Appeal

A Geography of Virginia in its informality and visual appeal represents a departure from the usual type of geographical text. It is a compact presentation of a good deal of factual material designed to provide interesting reading for the fifth-grader.

Included at the conclusion of each large topic are exercises constructed to entertain and teach the students at the same time. Speaking of her work, Miss Moran said, "It was a challenge to do a completely original piece of work. Therefre I refrained from reading any other geography of Virginia while compiling the material."

State Approval

The Rand McNally textbook which Miss Moran's booklet will accompany has been adopted on the list of State-approved texts.

Grade Estimates

Members of the Longwood faculty have been asked to submit their mid-semester grade estimates to the Registrar's office on March 30, Dean William W. Savage announced today.

Faculty Grants Extra Cuts to All Students

The Committee on Schedules and Entertainment has made a study of regulations governing cuts and student participation in extracurricular activities. As a result the committee made two recommendations which were accepted by the faculty.

Class Cuts

The first recommendation concerns class cut and will go into effect at the beginning of the next session. Every student will be allowed one class cut in each class each semester. A student with a C average will be allowed two class cuts in each semester. Three cuts in each class each semester will be given to the student with a B average. Dean's list students will be allowed undlimited class cuts as before.

Sliding Scale

The second recommendation was that certain modifications of present requirements for participation in extracurricular activities be presented to student organizations for consideration. It was suggested that a sliding scale with lower requirements for first and second year students be substituted for the present requirements. The Committee on Schedules and Entertainment will meet with the Student Standards Committee, Athletic Association, and Pan Hellenic Council at the regular meetings of these organizations to discuss this recommendation.

Editors Announce Rotunda Staff

Mary Jo Smith will serve as managing editor of the Rotunda for the coming year, Mary Leigh Meredith and Jean Smith, co-editors-in-chief, have announced.

Mary Jo, sophomore from Portsmouth, has had two years experience on the Rotunda staff. She worked as a reporter on the news staff until her appointment last spring as news editor.

Other Appointments

Virginia McLean has been appointed news editor of the Rotunda with Bunny Gibson serving under her as assistant news editor. Mary Frances Joseph will serve as copy editor, also working under the news editor.

Feature editor for the coming year will be Betty Jane Stoots.

Ann Lynch will continue to serve as sports editor. Betsy Wilson has been appointed social editor with Jill Pifer as assistant social editor.

Jean Gilman has been appointed art editor and Jeg Peery will continue as staff photographer.

Polly Powers will serve as advertising manager for the Rotunda and Betty Jones as advertising copy editor. Grace Thompson will continue as circulation manager. Emma Mae Pittard has been appointed exchange editor.

Music Professor To Conduct Band, Orchestra Clinic

Mr. Van Pelt To Lead Summer Work Shops

Merrill B. Van Pelt of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music will be at Longwood College this summer to help conduct the College's first annual band and orchestra clinic during the period beginning June 19 and ending July 1.

The clinic has been planned for teachers of music, band and orchestra directors, supervisors of school music, and boys and girls who are members of high school bands and orchestras.

Clinicians

The clinic will be conducted by Dr. John W. Molnar, head of the College department of music and Mr. Van Pelt. Dr. Molnar will work primarily with the phases of the clinic dealing with orchestras and Mr. Van Pelt will direct those phases dealing with bands.

Mr. Van Pelt is instrumental music supervisor of the public schools of Cincinnati. He holds the Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Cincinnati and the Master of Music degree from the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music.

He has had wide experience in all types of music and has had the unique experience of teaching for extended periods of time, concurrently, on all levels of music education from elementary school through high school, university, and conservatory.

Instrumental Work

For 15 years Mr. Van Pelt was Director of Instrumental Music Activities at the University of Cincinnati. While there his marching bands achieved national recognition. For a period of five years he was instrumental director at Mount Saint Joseph College. Other experience has included two years as band director at Ohio Wesleyan University, seven years as Director of Instrumental Music Education at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, 16 years as instrumental music supervisor at Walnut Hill and Woodward high schools in Cincinnati, and 14 years

Nurse In Orchesis Drama Fears Life's Consequences

Afraid of life and its consequences of trouble, sorrow, illness, pain and death, Nurse Emma Davis performs a dance of anger and frustration before the flowering plum tree. The tree which stands in front of the Home for Aging Women recalls her days as a student nurse. Always young in heart and spirit, Nurse Davis weeps as she recalls the sorrow she has encountered.

Nurse Emma Davis is the main character in "The Plum Tree", a dance drama to be presented on March 17 by Orchesis. On a stage bare of all but the most essential props, Hilda Edwards will portray the nurse who bravely faces those things which she most fears.

Into the theme of her life are woven the pathetic lives of the three demented women, "Rusty", "Tiddle", and "Christy" on whom life's sunset rays are falling.

"Tiddle", the former schoolmarm, wanders forlornely about the stage. "I was somebody once, I am nobody now", is her plaintive chant. "Tiddle" who thinks that she is to die at four o'clock even goes so far as to call the undertakers to give them her final instructions.

Little, forgetful Mrs. Rust can find no place to put her geranium She no longer remembers that on the site of her former home now stands a filling station and she is obsessed with the desire to return home at four o'clock.

Long years on the lonely plains after a happy, gay girlhood in Sweden have made "Christy" forever sad. She too, is expecting something to happen at four o'clock.

Tying the drama together is the voice of the narrator. Explaining and prompting much of the action, the voice emerges from the recesses of the stage.

Basis For Decision . . . . .

You have just elected the four students who will fill the most important student-controlled offices in the College next year. These students will govern you next year; they will set the standards which you are to follow. Upon their shoulders rests a heavy load, but upon yours rested an even heaver load for you were given the opportunity of selecting the right student for the right position.

How well did you know the student for whom you voted? Did you know her qualifications for the office, or purposes or plans for fulfilling her duties should she be elected? Did you vote for her because your best friend did, because you think she's "cute", or because you honestly believed that she could and would fulfill the duties of the office to the best advantages of the student body?

You as a voting member of the student body have an important obligation to perform in the selection of your leaders. How can you do this wisely when you are given no opportunity to know the students running for each office and have no knowledge of their qualifications or willingness to accept the responsibilities of the office?

This year, for the first time, you were at least given an opportunity to associate the name of the nominees with their faces when the pictures of all nominees were posted. This is a move in the right direction, but is it enough? If the opportunity were afforded for each candidate to speak or have someone else speak for her concerning her qualifications and plans for performing the duties of the office for which she is running, you, as a voter could make a much wiser choice. But this opportunity will not present itself unless you demand it. Are you satisfied with making a blind choice of your leaders? Or do you want to know the person for whom you are voting and the reasons for voting for that candidate? Are you going to demand the rights of an intelligent voter? Or are you going to trust to luck that the right student for the right office secures that office?

They will govern you, but you elect them. When you demand and receive the right to know what you are doing you will be more assured of government the way you want it. But it is up to you.

Time For Action . . . . .

A tentative plan to have the library open for student use on Sunday afternoon from 2 to 5 p. m. has been proposed and discussed for several weeks. The administration and the library officials have expressed their willingness to do everything possible to carry out this plan if enough interest is shown by the student body.

Doubtless, the added work and expense involved in keeping the library open Sunday afternoon would hardly be justified if only a few students took advantage of it. A problem of weekends that feature dances here and at other schools would pose a problem also. These problems must be worked out in conjunction with those in charge of installing the plan.

Approval of the idea and a definite interest in it has been evident among the students. In response to a poll taken by the Rotunda in the December issue, feeling has been favorable. But as yet the student body has taken no concerted action.

Logically, the most effective action toward installing this plan will come from a student organization which will confer with the proper authorities and represent the feeling of the student body.

The proposed plan has been thoroughly discussed in the Rotunda, in class meeting, and in bull sessions all over the campus. If the student body is really interested in the proposal, now is the time for action to replace mere discussion.

BIRD'S EYE VIEW

by jacky eagle

Up in the air, junior birdmen! Bird to tower . . . bird to tower. Just sighted flying saucers at close range. Appearance seems to back up Navy Commander McLaughin's theory that the discs are Martian piloted space ships. Clear the field . . . coming in for a landing. Airplanes have been crowded enough without the foreign Martians adding to the jam. It's just not safe for us fowls to take to the air for a weekly bird's eye view anymore. What's a poor bird to do?

Seen from the perch this week 'way over in Lyon, France, was Monsieur Girard, Suzanne's father, receiving the decoration of the Legion of Honor for services rendered his country in commerce during the last war. Bird Club felicitations are in order for Suzanne.

Birds who didn't fly south this season can stop shivering now that old vulture Lewis has finally signed on the dotted line. As a rule we Longwood birds don't like to agree with that bombastic strutter, Pegler, but we have to give him credit for his judgment of the mining unions as trusts in restraint of trade. If the Captiol flock persist in getting cold feet every time Lewis and his buddies pull a fast one, it looks like we had just better get up a formation and head for Florida come fall 1950.

Members of Longwood's most popular club have been gratified by the representation of their favorite animals in the State legislature this session, of Byrd and Bird. H. F. Byrd, Jr., near the top of the Virginia totem pole, seems to be following in his daddy's claw prints by playing up to the public's Scotch side. The younger would save Virginians from paying State income tax in addition to the national levy, while the top bird is chirping out against national deficit spending.

Longwood birds are watching the legislature with sharp eyes during the last week of the session. The budget measures currently coming to the fore will determine the complete equipment of the new College buildings and remodeling of the old ones. Let's hope they'll "bring that bird seed in."

IN MEMORIAM

by Bert Browning

Now that Spring is here, Pedro's fancy has suddenly turned to thoughts of academic pursuits, and so, as he hides his tear-filled eyes behind a psychology book, or similar material, we bid Pedro, once more, a sad and final adieu.

Speaking seriously, we'll really miss Pedro and his quaint little remarks. Pedro has a great talent for easing our pains at times and even making comedies from serious incidents and he is such an unassuming little muchacho, too!

For another thing, Pedro had a truly broad point of view and never was he known to have made a slanderous remark! That's one rose for you Pedro! Or should we say "tortilla"?

All in all, Pedro we just want to thank you for leaving your sombrero on our table top and for using the gray matter under the hat so faithfully. We'll miss you.

Mrs. Nannie E. Fitzgerald presented prizes and flowers to both of the winners.

Difficult Decision

Campus Cogitations

Question: What kind of music do you think should be played in the dining hall?

Nancy Short: What they are playing now!

Doris Carver: Anything as long as I can hear it.

Jackie Wright: Very smooth. Nothing Jazzy—we might die of indigestion.

Ann Lamb: I don't like those old waltzes.

Bobbie Pollard: I don't know what I'd say.

Leonard Shaw: Light and classical.

Mary Lou Woodward: Anything but "Tales From the Vienna Woods."

Ellen Moyer: Jazz!

Donna Kunkler: Popular!

Janice Pinkard: I think a variety is nice.

Mary Helen Cook: I want to hear some Fred Waring.

Mrs. Kathryn Tabb: Waltzes.

Mrs. Grace Slayton: I don't think I like music that has too much color. Let it be even.

Helen Arrington: Classical, but definitely!

Patsy Ritter: Something nice and soft.

Jenny Powell: Being a music major that's not hard—waltzes and classical. I also agree with Sue Webb.

Sue Webb: Something by the three B's—Bach, Brahms and Bethoven.

Mrs. Bowles: Waltzes.

Virginia Manvell: I think some of the selections from the musical comedies, such as the "Desert Song," would be excellent.

Billie Dunlap: Some of each type of music to suit everybody's taste.

Katherine Buck: "Rag Mop."

Students Have Opportunity To Travel With Youth Hostel

New York, February 27, 1950—American students who want to travel this summer have the opportunity of going on a wide variety of low-cost hosteling trips in the U.S. and abroad, it was announced today by Ben W. Miller, executive director of American Youth Hostels at 6 East 39th Street New York City.

In addition to 27 trips planned by the National Headquarters for groups of various sizes, said Dr. Miller, hundreds of other trips are planned by AYH Local Councils throughout the U.S., many of which will cost as little as $1.25 a day.

Hosteling — inexpensive hiking or cycling along established routes with overnight stays in hostels maintained by Local Councils of interested citizens—has long been a popular mode of travel for young people abroad, and is attracting many followers in this country.

Trips sponsored by the AYH National Headquarters will range in length from five to ten weeks and will start in late June and July. On these trips, hostelers will travel in small mixed groups with trained leaders. Estimated costs range from $115 for some trips in the United States to $780 for trips to North Sea and Mediterranean areas. In all cases costs cover the entire trip from starting to finishing points. For overseas trips this means embarkation and debarkation points.

In the United States, hosteling groups will visit northern New England, the Great Lakes, Long Island Sound and the Colonial Virginia area. Of particular interest are the seven-week National Parks-High Sierras trip for hikers and the Rolling Hostel trip in which specially equipped trains will take hostelers cross country, permitting them to cycle in scenic areas, using the train as their Hostel each night. Rolling Hostel trips will go to the Grand Canyon and Yellowstone Park.

Trips planned for the North American continent will take hostelers to the Canadian Rockies, Gaspe Peninsula, Ontario, the Maritime Provinces and the Saguenay River area, all in Canada, and to Mexico, Guatemala and Alaska.

The trips to Europe will include visits to the British Isles Scandinavia, France, the North Sea area, Central Europe, Western Europe, the Mediterranean area and Southwest Europe. Trips involving work projects will also be conducted in Germany and Holland. Possession of an AYH Pass, which costs $2.00 a year for those under 21 and $3.00 for those over, permits a hosteler to remain overnight in any hostel in this country or abroad at a charge of not more than 50c.

Hostel accommodations are located in barns and farm buildings, in cabins and private homes and are supervised by resident houseparents. Each hostel provides separate sleeping quarters and washrooms for young men and women, a common kitchen where hostelers may cook their meals and, in most cases, recreational facilities. Hostelers travel light, knowing that they will find clean blankets, clean beds and cooking utensils at each hostel.

Details of itineraries and costs of trips are available on inquiry at AYH Ntional Headquarters, 6 Est 39th Street, New York 16, N. Y.

The swimming meet will be held March 23. Your practices must be in by this time if you want to participate in the meet. Special sessions will be held Wednesday and Friday from 4 to 6 p. m. for those of you who are behind in those much needed practices.

The girls who were in the swimming pageant must have only four additional practices; those who didn't participate in the pageant must have eight. The girls who take regular swimming classes are automatically eligible for the meet without further requirements.

The class volleyball and basketball games will be played next week, so you still have a few days to become eligible to play for your class.

PIONEER CAGE FLASH BACKS

The 1949-50 cage season may be over for the Pioneers but the rememberance of its brighter reflections remain. It has been a long season for the Pioneers since the first of October — back in the days when we witnessed a confused bunch of inexperienced hopefuls. Their first few practice scrimmages with the Farmville Town Team gave no uncertain picture of what it would require before a decent ball club could be obtained fro mits then clearly awkward, disorganized components.

THE PIONEER PURPOSES

The men realized that in practically every contest they would be greatly over-powered and outclassed, but nevertheless they put everything they had into concentrated practices under the capable direction of Dr. A. C. Fraser, assisting head coach. They had several purposes in mind for carrying out such an undertaking: (1) to establish an athletic program for men at Longwood College as a functioning activity, (2) to gain the necessary cage experience in order that the best possible talent be most effectively organized to produce the highest possible result, which hopefully, may lead to recognition however small by the State's sports world of Longwood College men — a very successful method for attracting the desired men students, (3) to gain the physcial fitness which the strenuous excercise offers its particiopants, (4) to develop the spirit of the Longwood men by presenting satisfactory medium through which to develop it, (5) for the knowledge of the game itself, and resultingly, its enjoyment.

'49-'50 HEROES: BEAMER, CLARK MOST IMPROVED

Taking a look over the past performances of the Pioneers we find first, "Big Bill" Beamer, 6'4" center and forward. He undoubtedly is one of the most improved players on the squad; he has become the best rebound man, he holds down the defensive center zone position most effectively, and in late games has struck the hoop for high scoring honors frequently. Beamer has a good eye for the basket from all angles of the court, but he has been used most valuably under the basket offensively and defensively. Upon Beamer rests the greater responsibility next year for both offensive and defensive leadership.

Jimmy Clark is also one of the most improved pioneers He has worked himself up from a bench position to a starting berth. Clark has at all time more "hussle" than any other player on the squad. He is one of the fastest men with the ball and resultingly he can be depended upon in getting the ball into striking position, alone, if need be. His passes are quick and accurate; he fulfills as position at guard that is now seemingly locked tighter than any other position.

BENEDICT, THOMPSON, VAUGHAN SHINE

Hunter Joe Benedict is one of the better rebound men. He has fouled less than any other Pioneer. He has a dead eye for the basket and his lefthandedness has been an asset in repeated scores from the left side of the court — the supposedly weaker side. Thompson, although small, is the most steady Pioneer on the floor; he has seen more court action than any other player; he excells in speed. Vaughan, one of the greatly improved, has proved to be a very capable reserve forward. Much of the scoring responsibility will rest up him, too, next year.

MR. HOWARD E. CAMP, JR., who will give the Water Safety Course.

Allen Gets Tadpoles Ready For Plunges

A water safety instructor's course will be given this week at Longwood College by Howard E. Camp, Jr., Eastern Area field representative for Safety Services, American Red Cross.

Students taking the rigorous, week-long course have been given preliminary instruction and training by Miss Frances Allen, senior student instructor.

Completion of the course will qualify students for summer or year-round work as swimming and water safety instructors or life guards.

Mr. Camp, a graduate of Louisiana State University, has been in Red Cross work since 1941, teaching swimming and water safety at Baton Rouge, La., and Pittsfield, Mass. As a student he participated in intercollegiate and Southern A. A. U. swimming competition.

Bert Tillet's Band To Provide Music

The Pan-Hellenic Council which sponsors the annual Pan - Hel dance has invited 80 girls to be their guests this year. Tickets, which are 60 cents, may be bought from Marion Breeden.

As was previously announced, the Metronomes, led by Bert Tillet, will play for the dance to be held in the College gymnasium March 18. Mr. Tillet and his orchestra are currently engaged at the Tappahannock Boating Club.

Chaperones

Members of the faculty who will serve as chaperones for the dance are Miss Kate Trent, Miss Florence Stubbs, Miss Virginia Wall, Miss Olive Iler, Miss Virgina Bedford, Mrs. Josephine Phillips, and Miss Lucille Jennings.

Miss Winnie Hiner, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Malloy, Dr. and Mrs. John Molnar, Dr. and Mrs. Brumfield, Dr. and Mrs. Merle Landrum, and Dr. and Mrs. George W. Jeffers will also chaperone the dance.

French Club Gives Program Of Skits

The regular meeting of le Cercle Francais yesterday was a program of skits and songs presented by the French classes.

Two dialogues were given in French by members of the beginner's class. Jimmy Thompson and Madison McClintic portrayed a scene "At the Barber Shop", and Polly Brothers, Betsy Hankins, and Rebecca Mann gave "At the Beauty Shop". The dialogues were staged by Frances Ferguson.

Sara McElroy of the intermediate class sang a solo and Lauralee Fritts, Sara McElroy, Virginia McLean and Margaret Turner, also of the intermediate class, sang "Les Cloches."

Present Farce

A scene from "L'Avacat Pathelin", a farce of the Middle Ages, was given by Helen Hardin, Maria Jackson, Helen Tanner, and Barbara White from the advanced class. Beverly Smethie summarized the story, first in English and then in French.

As a finale, the whole circle joined in singing "Sur la Route de Dijon", "Chantons la Vigne", and "La Marseillaise."

Members of le Cercle Francais will sing a group of gay French songs made up of old folk songs and modern popular songs over the "Voice of Longwood" program tomorrow.

Students Fall Short Of Red Cross Goal

The student body contributed a total of $131.45 to the Red Cross drive sponsored on campus by the Y', Dolores Duncan, president of the Y' announced.

The goal set for the drive was $250. Students fell $118.55 short of this objective.

The local chapter of the Red Cross in Farmville, expressed their thanks to Dolores for the contributions made by the College.

Mrs. Davis To Be Featured Speaker On Founders' Day

Miss Costan, Pres. To Welcome Alumni

Mrs. M. Lamar Davis, of Norfolk, will speak to the Longwood alumni at the Saturday morning session of the annual Founders Day festivities to be held at the College March 24-26.

Miss Helen Costan, of Lynchburg, national president of the Alumni Association, will give the welcoming address to the alumni at this meeting.

Dr. John Molnar, head of the College music department, will entertain the group with a violin solo. He will be accompanied by Miss Emily Clark on the piano.

Birthday gifts to the College from the student organizations will be presented at this meeting.

Mrs. Davis, the former Julia Johnson, taught at Longwood College following her graduation from this institution. Well known as a Virginia poetess, she is the author of several volumes of poetry. Her work has appeared in several well known magazines, both in this country and in England.

During 1948 Mrs. Davis visited England. Last January she spoke before the Farmville Woman's Club describing her trip to England and especially her introduction to the king and queen of England.

Professors Attend District VEA Meet Sat. In Richmond

Dr. Beverly Ruffin, Miss Irving Armstrong, Dr. George Jeffers, and Miss Grace Moran attended the district D meeting of the Virginia Education Association on Saturday, March 11. Dr. Ruffin and Miss Armstrong attended the library and teaching material section, while Miss Moran gave a talk in the social science division. Dr. Jeffers introduced the speaker in the general science section.

Following the meeting, the group traveled to Richmond to visit the final session of the legislature.

Senate Kills Bill Destined To Make LC Coed College

Fears Petitions For Dormitories

The Virginia Senate killed a move to make coeducational schools out of Longwood College and Madison College in the final day of the 1950 session.

It defeated, by a vote of 23 to 13, a House-passed bill that would have given legal sanction to the system of allowing men to take teacher training at the two women's schools.

President Dabney S. Lancaster stated yesterday that he did not know what provision would be made for the men already enrolled at the two colleges but that he felt sure they would be allowed to finish work for their degrees.

Violation of Law

Senator Robert Y. Button, of Culpeper, who led the attack on the bill, conceded that during the war years men had begun attending classes at the two colleges—either through "tacit agreement or violation of the law."

According to Dr. Lancaster the men were enrolled at the two institutions under a ruling by the Attorney-General to the effect that the law did not specifically bar men students.

Appropriations Expected

Senator Button said this bill would pave the way for men students in far larger numbers, to attend the colleges. And he said that in two years the Assembly could expect a petition for apdormitories at the colleges — if propriation with which to build this bill passed.

Senator Charles T. Fenwick, of Arlington, asked if most of the men now attending the college were not residents of the towns in which the schools were situated. Senator Button agreed that this was true, but he said passage of the bill would change this.

He said he felt teaching instruction at two other coeducational colleges—the University of Virginia and William and Mary —ought to be sufficient.

The bill, Senator E. O. McCue, Jr., of Charlottesville, acknowledged, would not have made appropriations now. But he, like Senator Button, said he believed it would lead to requests for increased appropriations at the next Assembly.

Class of 1951's Graduation Endangered By Icepits, Mud

Reports on the new auditorium are few and far between, but here's one that is authentic-straight from headquarters. The auditorium will be completed, that is if no serious complications arise, in time for the class of '51 to graduate. As we see it now, with a few trenches, some string, and a few sticks in the ground it hardly looks like the beginnings of the stately auditorium it will be someday.

Work on the auditorium isn't all sunshine and roses says the boss of the job, there's plenty of hardship plus mud. To add to the hardships caused by the weather, some time ago when the men were digging the foundation for the front wall of the building, they found an old abandoned ice pit. The pit is approximatly 30 feet deep and measures about 15 feet across. The discovery of this pit means that the constructors will have to lay beams across the pit and otherwise bolster the foundation wall, so that the first time someone big and fat walks across it, it won't cave in.

None of the building engineers knew of the location of the ice pit, they didn't even know there was one anywhere within a hundred mile radius, but after the pit was discovered one of the laborers reported that he had lived at the house which Dr. Molnar now occupies and that he could remember when the pit was dug and when it was in use. The pit was used to store ice in the summer after it had been cut from the river in the winter when it was frozen thick on top. Then in the summer they had ice much as we have it in our modern refrigerators today.

Between mud, rain, and ice pits, of which we hope they don't find anymore, we sincerely hope the builders can keep their promise to this year's junior class.

Juniors Win $5 In Sing Contest Sponsored By Y'

Faculty Victims In Winning Theme

The Junior class won the Y' sponsored sing contest and will be presented with the five dollar award, June Foreman, chairman of the sing committee announced last night.

The theme of the junior sing was "Through the Pearly Gates", and the juniors effectively showed the faculty in its attempts to get through those gates.

The freshman, sophomore and junior classes participated in the contest, presenting sings on successive Saturday nights. The senior class was asked to forfeit their sing because of the delay in presenting it.

Five points were considered and discussed by the judges in choosing the best sing. The judges listed these as (1) promptness, (2) costumes and props (3) appropriatness (4) the degree of finish the production showed (5) acting ability. The judging committee was made up of two faculty members and representatives from each class.

NOTICE

The 1950 Summer Session catalogs are now available to all students. They may be gotten from the registrar's office at any time.

Education Systems Will Be Discussed At Thurs. Assembly

The Honorable J. Roger Carter, British Education Officer of the British Embassy, Washington, D. C., will speak to the assembly tomorrow afternoon. Mr. Carter will discuss English education systems in relation to education systems in the United States.

Mr. Carter plans to visit four Virginia Colleges where he will speak on the topic of British education. Among the schools he will visit are the school of William and Mary, the University of Virginia, and the negro college in Petersburg. He will address the faculty meeting tonight at 8 on this subject.

LC, H-S To Present '50 Spring Concert

The combined Longwood Choir and Hampden-Sydney Glee Club will present their spring concert in conjuction with the Founders' Day program in the College dining hall March 25. The concert will be given March 24 in the Hampden-Sydney chapel.

The varied program will include sacred and secular numbers. The sacred selections will be Lenten and Easter in character, in keeping with the season of the year. Included in the secular numbers will be a group of Scotch and Russian folk songs by the Longwood choir, and selections from two American musical comedies and a group of Negro spirituals presented by the Hampden-Sydney Glee Club.

The choir, glee club, and the Longwood Madrigal Singers are under the direction of Dr. John Molnar. Mr. T. E. Crawley will conduct the Hampden-Sydney ensemble. Puckett Asher from Longwood and Preston Sawyer from Hampden-Sydney will give piano accompaniment for the concert.

HILDA EDWARDS, who will portray Nurse Emma Davis in the forthcoming Orchesis production.

Organ Fund Drive Begun

The Alumnae Association began their annual drive among the students for the Jarman Organ Fund today. The drive will be continued until March 23. The association has expressed the hope that they will have raised enough to complete the fund at the end of this time.

A total of $20,000 has been accumulated to date toward the goal of $25,000 which the alumnae have set up. "We are depending on the students to help us reach our objective and complete the fund by Founders Day", Mrs. Ruth Coyner, secretary of the Alumnae Association said in a recent interview.

Colors Complete

A contest between the Red 'n Whites and Green 'n Whites will begin today to see which can raise the most toward the fund. Containers will be placed on the table in the Ruffner Hall with a chart showing contributions of each group.

The organ will be installed in the new auditorium and dedicated with the new building in June, 1951. A contract for the organ has been let, and work is being done on it at present.

Dean To Give Address At Hampton Roads

Dean William W. Savage will take part in a panel discussion on the public's responsibility to young people at a public meeting sponsored by the Hampton Roads Guidance Association tomorrow evening. Dean Savage together with deans from several other Virginia colleges will speak on the public's responsibility to young people going to college. Dr. Morris Allen from Hampden-Sydney will also take part in the meeting.

Dean Savage will speak at a banquet held at the Cumberland High School Friday night. The affair is the annual Father and Son banquet of the Future Farmers of America association.

Kappa Delta Pi To Hold Regular Meeting Tonight

The Longwood chapter of Kappa Delta Pi, national honor society in education ,will hold its regular meeting tonight at 7 p. m. in the Honor's Room according to an announcement by Judy Hughes, president.

This will be a short business session and all members are urged to attend.

Edwards To Star As Nurse Davis

Orchesis will present "The Plum Tree," a modern dance drama, in the Longwood gymnasium March 17 at 8 p. m. Hilda Edwards, president, announced today.

Taken from the novel of the same name by Mary Ellen Chase, "The Plum Tree" is Orchesis' first attempt at a serious drama.

Hilda Edwards will portray Nurse Emma Davis, the main character of the drama. Jeanne Farmer will take the part of Matron Norton who, with Nurse Davis, runs a Home for Aging Women. The action in the play revolves about this home and its occupants.

Three Acts

The drama will be presented in three acts preceded by a prologue. Ann Nock, the narrator, will set the scene and introduce much of the action in the prologue.

Appearing in the first act, the Problematical Present, will be the aging women, Nurse Davis, Matron Norton, and Emma Davis' friend Hawley. Katie Bondurant will play the part of Hawley. Peggy Covington, Shirley Elmquist, Shirley Fahrbach, Dolores Hoback, Hilda Lewis, and Jo Ann McCombs are among those taking the parts of the aging women. Others portraying the aging women appearing in this scene are Ann Murphy, Joan Missimer, Audrey Pettit, Erma Poarch, Norma Roady, Nancy Walker, and Mary Lou Woodward.

Demented Women

The three demented women, "Rusty," portrayed by Ray Phillips, "Tiddle," played by Kitty Carmichael, and "Christy" portrayed by Jean Ridenour, will make their appearance in the second act. The Dinner will be the main theme of this act.

Action in the third act will revolve about the Party.

The suspicious women who point out the three demented women will be portrayed by Betty McRee, Marian Becknor, and Betty House. Jo Orr will play the part of Mrs. Wilcox, and Romine Mahood, Elizabeth Lesslie, and Betty Tyler will portray her three friends.

Peggy Harris will portray Whipple who is confined to her wheel chair. The "Seventies" will be played by Nell Bradshaw, Clara Borum, Edith Kennon, Resa Hayes, Rachel Peters, Conway Rice, and Frances Stringfellow. June Raines will take the part of the

Professor From India To Speak At Chapel

Dr. Eddy Asirvatham, a native of Madras, India, will speak to the student body in a compulsory assembly to be held Tuesday, March 21 at 1 p. m.

Dr. Asirvatham's presence at the College is being sponsored by the Peace Committee of the American Friends Society. A professor of Christian International relations at Boston University, Dr. Asirvatham received his doctorate from Edinburg University. He has spoken widely in India, Burma, Ceylon, Scotland, Denmark, and the United States.

The assembly program for Thursday, March 23, will also be compulsory. At that time, Mr. Davis Paschal, director of elementary education for the State Department of Education ,will speak.

Kiss The Boys Goodby . . . .

In the final day of the 1950 session the Virginia Senate killed a move to give Longwood College a co-educational status. The bill was approved by the State Board of Education and passed by the House committee on education, the House, and the Senate committee on education only to receive its death blows on the floor of the Senate.

Student reaction to this move has been immediate and varied. There are some among the student body who feel that this is, and should remain, a women's college only. But the majority of opinions expressed have been those of shock and disappointment that the bill did not pass.

Among the arguments in the Senate against the bill was the fear that passage of the measure would later entail the expense of building dormitories for the men students. This may be well founded fear, but the death of this bill does in no way insure the continued adequacy of the present dormitory space. That new buildings will eventually have to be built regardless of the defeat of the bill is only a common sense deduction.

But the crux of the matter is still the question of supplying the public school system of Virginia with well-trained men teachers. Men can receive teacher training at the University of Virginia and at William and Mary but only at a much higher cost that at Madison and Longwood. While the schools cry out for men teachers the legislators refute the very measure that would encourage men to enter the field of education. This does not even make good sense and the purpose of such a move is far from understandable.

The Assembly will not meet again until 1952; it is to be hoped that by then even the law makers can see the need of men teachers and set about meeting that need. If Virginia is to have men teachers in her public school system she must first educate them. The days of the "female normal school" are gone or so all but the State Senators agree.

Timely Birthday Greetings. . . .

Five years ago the alumnae association of Longwood began a drive to commemorate the memory of a man who has given forty-four years of his life in service to the College. In choosing a memorial that would leave a permanent touch of his spirit, the alumnae chose to install a pipe organ in honor of Dr. John L. Jarman, whose love for music equaled his devotion to the College.

Now, five years later as the campaign nears completion, the founders of the Jarman organ fund have their goal of $25,000 in sight. Throughout the past years, students, faculty and alumnae alike have contributed generously to the annual drive, and a total of $20,000 has been accumalated toward the fund.

With the completion of the new auditorium, the alumnae hope to see the installation of the organ. A joint dedication of the organ and the new building has been planned for June, 1951. In view of this, the alumnae have already contracted to have the organ built. Although $5,000 short of their goal, they have begun work on their project believing that their backers would "come through" as they so willingly have in the past and fulfill the hope that the fund could be completed by Founder's Day of this year.

Each year it has been customary for the student body to give a "birthday" present to the college on Founder's Day. What more fitting present could we give this year than our wholehearted support of the drive to complete this fund? By our contributions now, we can be part of a project that will bring greater cultural facilities to the College in the near future.

Join The Elite . . .

If you have taken a few minutes to attend chapel recently, you probably felt like quite an individualist. It seems that only a select group takes advantage of this opportunity — so select that the speaker of the day often finds himself addressing a few faculty members and nothing else but thin air.

The administration has taken time and careful thought to bring to the campus for these chapel periods speakers who could impart valuable information, and help us along our tortuous path through college life. Why let such a few have the privilege of hearing these speakers when with little effort the whole college could take part and benefit by it.

by jacky eagle

Longwood birds are squawking this week at the rough treatment they received at the hands of the General Assembly in the final day of the 1950 session. Not only have the penny-wise legislators barred the boy birds from our ranks, but they've turned thumbs down on the proposed pay-increase for experienced teachers.

The legislators' action represents what unfeeling individuals sometimes call "bird-brained" tactics. They've made a mighty effort to raise more school buildings over the State, giving little thought to equipping the schools with the ablest teachers of both genders. This doesn't conform to Longwood logic. However, the Farmville men won't be fenced out so easily. Together with similarly outraged Madison men, they've planned to fly back at the hurried and irrational action which denies them the privilege of adequate teacher training.

Local fowl owe a chirp of thanks to the legislature for "liberalizing" the teacher retirement fund. We'd much prefer, though, a warmly feathered nest while we're still young enough to enjoy it.

The national bird is currently all aflutter over the prospect of adding two more stars to his banner. He's in high hopes of counting 50 if the statehood bills for Hawaii and Alaska escape the Senate committee pigeonhole and survive the vote.

Comrade Stalin and his associates are doubtless overwhelmed with their success on the one-party ticket in the "election" for the Supreme Soviet last week. The peace pleas which highlighted the redbirds' campaign speeches have been interpreted as a sign of increased war scare in Russia. The Russians may rest assured, however, that Americans are biting their nails just as nervously, thanks to the untiring smear campaigns of rabblerouser McCarthy of the U. S. Senate.

Letters To Editor

Dear Editor:

The men at Longwood College feel that we had the door slammed in our face when the Virginia State Legislature during the last hours of the session defeated the bill on coeducation by a margin of ten votes. This had been approved by the State Board of Education, passed by the House, and the Senate committee.

This action of the senate is a great disappointment for the men at Longwood, for we felt relatively secure after the state board of education, in December, gave its approval to coeducation. We thought coeducation at Longwood was here to stay and we had made plans accordingly. The men set up a strong student government and the basketball team has been a success, thanks to long hours of hard work by the team. With this action of the Legislature we feel that much of our work has been in vain.

We are few in number but we do not intend to take a defeatest attitude towards the matter. We have already contacted the student government at Madison College and they have the same attitude towards the situation as we, and they are willing to cooperate with us.

There has been a constant plea for men to enter teaching but any young man in Virginia who wants professional training for a teaching position is penalized as compared with a girl who wants such training. There are four teaching colleges in Virginia for girls but only two state institutions which offer training for men. There is a considerable difference in the total expenses at the two state institutions for men and that at the four girl's colleges.

Does the State of Virginia have the right to make a boy pay more for an education than a girl? We do not think so.

Stecking My Neck Out

by Joanne Steck

After this long struggle of "test taking," we hope everybody will come up with flying colors.

By the way, this idea of music in the dining hall is downright sharp. Now all we need are the dancing waitresses and a floor show. As though we didn't have enough of the latter.

After all the bus riding we of Longwood do, someone should set up a pillow-renting system in front of the bus station. Bet some ready cash could be made.

You know you can always tell what kind of day the student teachers had by the looks on their faces at mealtime. We poor underclassmen have to suffer through the happenings at the training school. "Now, Phyllis cried today, and Johnny threatened to throw me out the window" etc. But we love 'em just the same, the student teachers, that is.

If you happen to walk in a room and the occupants are in wild costumes and acting queerly, don't worry! It's just freshmen, practicing for production.

It's getting warm now and the roof is taking on the look of a roof garden, except that the occupants are all "parallel structured."

There have been both tears of joy and sadness this week. Mainly because the biology students have cast away their dear frogs. We had become quite attached to the Oswalds, Macs and Annabells in one way or another. We felt as though we knew them inside and out.

Spring is here, the grass has riz (except in front of the rotunda), wonder where the birdies is (look in the geography room).

Don't forget all the big dances coming up—see ya

Campus Cogitations

Question: Do you think participation in college activities should be based on an accumulative "C" average or on a "C" average for the preceding semester?

Dolores Hoback: I think activities should be based on an accumulative "C" average.

Norma Gladding: The accumulative "C" average seems to me to be satisfactory.

Martha A. Wilson: Accumulative "C" average would be best, I guess.

Edith Duma: Accumulative, I think.

Anne Lucy: There are some people who never get a "C" average.

Polly Brothers: Preceding semester 'cause it gives the student more of an incentive to work.

Nancy Lee Maddox: I definitely think accumulative, 'cause it gives everyone a better chance. The point is to make your "C" average.

Betty McRee: Preceding semester 'cause I think it will give more people a chance to participate in school activities.

Hilda Edwards: I think it should be based on the average required to re-enter each year, because if you are allowed to come back to school with that average why not be allowed to take part in the activities offered within the school.

Peggy Bryant: I believe it would be better to have it on the accumulative plan because that would show consistency rather than just chance or a sudden spurt of energy.

Joanne Steck: Preceding semester, 'cause if you make it at first you can get in activities and become interested enough to work to keep your average.

Beverly Smethie: Accumulative, 'cause then everybody would have a chance.

Jackie Carter: Preceding semester!

Inez Hughes: Preceding semester!

Rachel Peters: Accumulative, 'cause it would give everybody a chance.

Diet The Ed. Way In Biology Lab

by Barbara White

During your numerous daily trips to the post office, have you detected a faint, repulsive odor of formaldehyde? If you have, you may be sure that it comes from the biology lab or as some students term it, the 'torture' chamber.

Not all of us are fortunate enough to be studying biology, but those who do are well acquainted with the various oddities found there; for example the two-headed calf. Many humorous speculations have been made as to why the poor thing died. Some say it was because he couldn't decide which mouth to use for eating, and since each mouth was determined to do the job, he ate himself to death. Others believe that the heads were so intensely jealous of one another that the calf died of nervous tension. Perhaps one of the teachers could give a more scientific reason.

An important feature of the lab are the assistants. Poor girls. What they have to suffer. Some students seem determined not to do any work, and, consequently, the assistants find themselves doing everything—from skinning frogs to making a sketch of the grasshopper's nervous system. Some students just aren't scientifically inclined!

The lab also has another function. Not so many months ago several scared, shaking freshmen were herded together there to undergo the harrowing trials of Rat Court. The basement and the general gloomy, ghastly atmosphere made the lab the ideal spot. At least the sophomores thought so!

Taking biology has its points, however. You learn all about evolution, amoebae, liver flukes, and earth worms. After a session, you don't feel like eating for another month; this is always nice when you want to lose weight. In what other classes, we ask you, can you devote your time to dissecting a frog? (For good behavior, you may be "graduated" to a cat). After you have had one year of biology, you will be a new person—a more cautious one! You will be on guard against amoebae in your drinking water, and you will never, never eat rare steak again!

CAVALIERS NEED HITTERS; GENERALS NEED PITCHERS

The University of Virginia won 11 and lost 5 baseball games last year to finish second in state collegiate running, but they will have to pick up their hitting considerably, and pull out some reserve pitching from somewhat in order to become a repeated threat to the state crown this year. The Cavaliers lost two outstanding hurlers in Leachman and Wade last year via graduation. David Charles an all-stater in '48, will be around again this year to toss the old apple; he'll also be determined to avenge his relatively poor record last year consisting of only one winning performance.

The Generals nine lost twice all-stater, Brian Bell, and Jim Maver, so-called finest pitching prospect ever to enroll at W. & L. Brian graduated and Maver fell by the wayside academically. Lacy Putney is the only lettered hurler back in uniform. The 7-11 record last year seems weak but the Generals will have a few encouraging bright spots on which to rely in Frank Summers, Jr., son of the famous VMI athletic director, who slings the heaviest club on the team, and catcher Bay Arnold, considered a top pro prospect.

GUSSIE — LACE, BLACK, WHITE PANTS ? ? ?

Gussie Morgan switched from her controversial lace panties to even more eyebrow lifting black shorts last Friday, but took the Egytian international tennis championship in conventional white shorts. Gussie, a beauteous lass from Santa Moncia, Calif., has been touring the world this winter and the Egyptian title is her fourth on tour. She handily defeated Mary Weiss of Argentina, 6-2, 6-3.

GRANBY SLIPS INTO VHSY CHAMPIONSHIP

Granby won the Virginia High School League's Group I basketball championship by beating Newport News 57-34 in the finals. The Granby Comets won the championship the hard way. They were a third place team in the Eastern District with a compartively poor 12-20 season record, and they received the tournament's eighth berth, and at that, there resulted quite a bit of criticism on the part of some coaches who thought that another team should have been invited before Granby. The Comets won the respect of all concerned when they pulled one tournament upset after another until they copped the championship.

TOPSEEDED HAMLINE SHOULD BE HOME COACH SAYS

Hamline University, defending champions and topseeded in the National Intercollegiate Basketball Tournament, according to their coach, Joe Hutton, should have stayed home this year. Despite their record of all wins except to Long Island University and Fepperdine, Hutton feels that his team is only average this year. Well, at least he has a different approach.

WESTERN KENTUCKY'S LAVOY SHINES IN NIBT

Bob Lavoy, Western Kentucy's six-foot-seven inch center almost personally ousted Niagara with some of the most dazzling shooting in National Invitational Basketball Tournament, as Western Kentucky came roaring back in the last half to trip Niagara 7-72 to advance to the quarter-finals. Western Kentucky is the nation's eighth ranking team. Levoy added 32 points to his total, including 12 field goals. He scored more than 600 points for a 44% hitting average on field goals in the regular season.

Defending champion San Francisco, the 1949 sensations, had just about the same team as last year but they went out of play this year by the hands of the CCNY Beavers 65-46.

Sportin' Around

The gym will be full of cheering this week as we start on the second phase of point-winning sports for the color cup—that of basketball and volleyball class games. No more will you hear those words "get your eight practices in because time is short"—because it is too late now.

We'll expect those who aren't on the team to be on the side-lines supporting their class with their cheering. There'll probably be a lot of this because from the looks of things the Red 'n Whites and the Green 'n Whites are pretty evenly matched and the games should show a lot of competition.

The winners for each sport will get 10 points added to their color cup score. The schedule will run as follows:

BASKETBALL

Tues. March 14: 4:00—Fresh. vs. Jrs. 5:00—Sophs. vs. Srs.
Thurs. March 16: 4:00—Soph. vs. Jrs. 5:00—Fresh. vs. Srs.
Wed. March 22: 4:00—Fresh. vs. Soph. 5:00—Jrs. vs. Srs.

Richmond Alumnae Party

On March 6th, year 1950
The Richmond chapter gave a party, quite nifty.
It was held at Curls Neck Dairy,
With forty-one tables, everyone was merry.
We sold "cokes", homemade candy, too.
Canasta was played, also Bridge
by a few.
It was fun seeing friends of yesterday
The Longwood College alumnae whom we all hold so dear.
We exchanged notes on what we had done,
If you were not there you really missed lots of fun.
There was Ferguson, Boo Carter,
Evelyn Bass, and Pat
Who really for Longwood went to bat!
Other alumnae worked hard too
Getting up tables and they got quite a few.
We raised way over a hundred,
wasn't that great?
We'll keep you all posted up to date
What the Richmond girls do and we may be soon calling on
You
Because the Jarman Organ is a MUST!
In you dear friends we put our trust
We're counting on hearing from each of you soon,
We want that Organ sometime in June.

WINCHESTER TEA

Dr. and Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster and Mrs. M. Boyd Coyner were guests of the Winchester Chapter of Longwood College Alumnae Association at a tea given in the home of Mrs. Rhodes Huntsberry, last Friday afternoon, March 10, in that city. Mrs. Huntsberry was formerly Miss Virginia O'Connor. Mrs. Joseph Butler is president of this organization and Mrs. Garland Quarles is the secretary. Preceding the tea Miss Adelaide Coble entertained the honor guests at a luncheon at the "Chanticleer."

Skits Presented To Spanish Club

The regular meeting of the Spanish Club was held last Tuesday, March 7, in the audio-visual room of the College library.

The program was opened by the singing of "Las Mananitas". Bunny Gibson, Helen Tanner and Nicole Rothe presented a "Telephone Conversation".

A particularly interesting and original feature consisting of popular Spanish poems was entitled "Over the Radio". Julia Olivieri was the announcer and presented the following participants: "Nenia", by Marilan Kraft; "la Tierra"; Shirley Elmquest; "Una Carta de un Amigo"; Olga Rodriquez; "Senior Bolivar"; June Rose Morgan, and "Tavare" by Betty Ferguson and Elba Castaner. In between the skits the group sang "Las Chipanecas".

Present Skit

"In Consulation with a Doctor" was a skit showing how a prominent doctor treats aches and pains. The doctor was portrayed by Ruth Lacy. A mother and her son, Helen Agnew and Kitty Beale respectively; Mr. Gomez, Billie J. Barber; a youth, Ann McMullen; and a young girl, Lucy Jane Morton were other members of the cast.

Allie Jane Felton, Helen Kaknis, and Denise Love gave an interpretation of "In the Movies".

Maria Jackson and Jackie Jardine concluded the program with several Spanish poems and their translations.

Dr. Lancaster To Be Keynote Speaker At Soil Meeting

Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of Longwood College, will deliver the keynote address at the first annual meeting of the Virginia Chapter of the Soil Conservation Society of America. Chapter members will meet in the Virginian Hotel in Lynchburg next Saturday at 10 a. m.

Forest Steele, survey superintendent in the Farmvile Soil Conservation Office, will speak at the meeting, also. He will discuss "The National Meeting—A Builder of Morale."

T. M. Dean, district conservationist of Farmville, and other members of the Farmville office will attend the meeting.

The address of welcome will be given at 10:30 a. m., by the chapter president, H. M. Collins, of Chase City, district conservationist for the Southside Soil Conservation District.

Mahood, Gills, Brewbaker, Farrier Take Minor Posts

Other Offices Filled In Recent Election

Romine Mahood, junior from Emporia; Evelyn Farrier, junior from Newcastle; Sue Brewbaker junior from Roanoke; and Ruth Gills, junior from Ballsville, were elected to the positions of vice-president of the Student Government, Y. W. C. A., Athletic Association and House Council respectively in the minor office elections held last week.

Other officers elected at this time were Martha Alice Wilson, sophomore from Farmville, who will serve as secretary to Student Government, and Ann Motley, sophomore from Sharps, who will fill the office of treasurer of the same organization.

Y' Posts Filled

June Foreman, sophomore from St. Brides; Margaret Thomas, sophomore from Atlee; and Mary Winston Johnston, freshman from Franklin were elected to the offices of secretary, treasurer, and freshman councelor of the Y. W. C. A.

Elected to the office of secretary of the Athletic Association was Erma "Bootie" Poarch, sophomore from Emporia. Nancy Walker, sophomore from Marion, will serve as treasurer for the association.

House Council

Mary Crawford, sophomore from Richmond; and Ann Crowder, freshman from Richmond will fill the positions of secretary and treasurer of House Council, for the coming year.

Dining room hostess for next year will be Margaret Ann Shelton, junior from Lynchburg, Charlotte S. Jones, junior from Petersburg, and Jean Carter Watkins, junior from Emporia, were elected as her assistants.

1950 Founders' Day Plans Announced

The 1950 Founders' Day program was recently announced in the Alumnae Bulletin by Mrs. Ruth H. Coyner, executive secretary of the Longwood Alumnae Association. The program will take place on March 24 and 25.

Featured in the bulletin was a message from Dr. Lancaster and one from Helen Costan, the national president of the Association. "From a Freshman's Viewpoint" by Maria Jackson, reviewed the activities of the class of '52 during their freshman year.

A ballot including nominations for first vice-president, second vice-president and director was presented in the bulletin by the nominating committee.

The Founders' Day celebration as stated in the article "Calling All 'Zero' and 'Five' Classes" will be a special reunion for the "zero" and "five" classes.

Registration For Fall To Be Held May 8-12

Registration for the 1950-51 fall semester's classes will be held the week of May 8 to 12 Dean William W. Savage has announced.

According to Dean Savage the registration for next fall's classes will be conducted like that for this semester.

"All freshmen," he said, "should have conferences with the heads of the department in which they wish to major as soon as possible." The freshmen must secure approval from the head of their major department before their schedule can be recorded.

Professor From India Tells Of Ghandi's Way Of Life

Speaks At Dinner Tuesday Evening

Dr. Eddy Asirvatham of Madras, India spoke at yesterday's chapel on "The Significance of Gandhi's Way of Life." Under the auspices of the American Friends Service Committee, Dr. Asirvatham is a well known interpreter of world economic, political and religious problems.

Dr. Asirvatham has recently returned from a special mission to study conditions in the Far East, and from his knowledge of world conditions acquired in this and other travels, he spoke to large audiences at his three appearances here, including a dinner at the Wesley Foundation last night and an address at the Methodist church at 8 p. m.

In speaking of Mahatma Gandhi, "India's greatest leader and a great world power for the last half-century," Dr. Asirvatham told why he thought Gandhi was such a tower of strength to his people: "his unshakeable faith in God and man, his life of fearlessness, and his ideals of love and vicarious suffering."

66th Annual Founders Day Reunion To Begin Here Saturday Morning; Miss Costan To Extend Welcome

Combined Choirs To Give Concerts At Longwood, H-S

Spring Festival Founders' Day

Dr. John W. Molnar, head of the music department at Longwood, has announced the program for the Spring Festival of Music to be given March 24 and 25 by the combined Longwood choir and Hampden-Sydney glee club.

The concert will be presented Friday night at Hampden-Sydney and again Saturday night at Longwood. The Saturday night concert will be part of the 66th annual Founders' Day program at Longwood College.

The Festival will open with the singing of combined choruses "Go Not Far From Me" by Zingarelli and "Crucifixion" arranged by Koshetz. "Ave Verum" by Depres, "Ave Maria" by Viitoria, "Jesus, Joy of Man's Desiring," by Bach, and "All in The April Evening" by Robertson will then be sung by the Longwood College choir under the direction of Dr. Molnar. Third on the program will be three selections by the Hampden-Sydney glee club under the leadership of T. E. Crawley. The songs are "Open Our Eyes" by McFarlane, "Bless the Lord" by Serbian, and "The Creation" by Richter.

Following these selections, the Longwood group will render the three Scotch folk songs "Oh Can Ye Sew Cushions?" arranged by Bantock, "The Flowers of The Forest" arranged by Robertson, and "Turn Ye to Me" arranged by Scott. "Ye Watchers and Ye Holy Ones", German song of the 17th century, "Where'er Ye Walk" from the opera "Semele" composed by Handel, and "Laudamus" arranged by Prothroe will then be sung by the Hampden-Sydney ensemble.

The Longwood choir will follow the Hampden-Sydney singers with three Russian songs. They will be "Chanson Indoue" from "Sadko"

Contract Let For Building Replacement

President Dabney S. Lancaster has announced the awarding of the contract for the White House replacement to the Mottley Construction Company of Farmville.

The building which will replace White House will be an extension of the present Annex building. Included in the plans are a recreation room, offices, dormitory rooms, and kitchens on the dormitory floors. A fire proof vault for the Registrar's records will be built at the same time.

The contract awarded to the Mottley Construction Company covers the redecoration of the colonnade as well as the White House replacement.

Construction on the building will start as soon as possible. "We hope to be occupying the building by next September," said Dr. Lancaster.

Hughes To Serve As KDPi Delegate

Judy Hughes, president of Kappa Delta Pi, was recently selected to serve as the Longwood delegate to the biennial convocation of Kappa Delta Pi to be held in Mitchel, Indiana. Judy will leave Farmville March 27 for Spring Mill State Park, Mitchel, the location set for the convention.

Nine upperclassmen have been issued bids to membership in Kappa Delta Pi, national honor society in education, Judy has announced.

Among those receiving bids were Phyllis Cartwright, John Randall Cook, Dorothy Dodd, Helen Hardin, and Rena Mae Hayes.

Also receiving bids were Lucy Jones, Anne McMullen, Ray Phillips, and Polly Powers.

Membership in Kappa Delta Pi is limited to juniors and seniors. Only those students whose grades are within the upper quartile are eligible for membership.

Business Session To Elect Officers

The 66th annual celebration of Founders' Day will begin Saturday morning with a coffee in the Student Building Lounge.

Miss Helen Costan, national president of the Alumnae Association will welcome the returning alumnae at the Saturday morning session of the Founders' Day festivities. Mrs. M. Lamar Davis, Longwood alumna and Virginia poetess, will speak at this meeting.

Elect Officers

The offices of first and second vice-presidents, the director and nominating committee will be elected at this time. The present nominating committee has nominated Sara Button Rex, '39, Charlottesville, for first vice-president; Emma Mebane Hunt Martensen, '19, Wytheville, for second vice-president; and Ethel Gildersleeve, '20, Hampton, for director.

Candidates for the nominating committee of the Alumnae Association are Helen Draper, Farmville; Mary Dupuy, Hampden-Sydney; and Adelle Hutchinson Watkins, Farmville. Members of the returning classes will vote for these offices during the business sesson Saturday morning.

Special Reunion

The 1950 Founders' Day celebration is to be the special reunion for all "zero" and "five" classes of the College. The class of 1900 will celebrate their fiftieth anniversary and the class of 1925, their twenty-fifth. The oldest and youngest reunion classes will be those of 1890 and 1945.

Saturday evening the combined Longwood Choir and the Hampden-Sydney Glee Club will entertain the alumnae with a concert. Dr. John Molnar, head of the College music department, will direct the group.

Alumnae Luncheon

Following the business meeting, the alumnae will be guests of the College for luncheon in the College dining hall. At 1:15 p. m. an alumnae-student program will be presented in the Methodist church.

President and Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster will hold open house for the alumnae Saturday afternoon. A buffet supper will be served the alumnae in the College Tea Room Saturday evening.

Informal class reunions will be held Friday night before the main events of the Founders' Day festivities begin on Saturday.

British Educator Discusses School Systems In Isles

England is modifying her secondary school set-up to better fit the "age, aptitude, and ability" of the individual student, the Honorable J. Roger Carter, British Education Officer of the Washington embassy, said in his speech in assembly last week.

Describing his countrymen as a fundamentally conservative people who from time to time come to a sudden awakening accompanied by radical reforms, Mr. Carter said that secondary education in England was formerly suited primarily to children who would follow academic courses. Under the new, broader plan of recent years technical schools have been set up, and schooling has been made compulsory up to the age of 18 years.

Now that different types of secondary schools have been created, there is a trend to unify these types within the localities, Mr. Carter stated. The program is a long-range one, and its progress is necessarily limited by physical factors, he pointed out. Teachers, formerly better trained in academic subjects, must now be trained for more specialization for different approaches to children of different interests.

The program is slowed down, too, by a shortage of building materials. Another hurdle before the new schools is achieving equal prestige with older academic institutions. "We are going slowly and cautiously in order to experiment and learn," the education officer said.

County Colleges which provide for an extension of education from the secondary school into the student's life were cited by Mr. Carter as a development of the new program. Here students can obtain an academically slanted, "part-time" education after they have begun work. The County Colleges also offer recreation for young people in the evening. In this way, Mr. Carter indicated, the British are providing for a more gentle transition from school to everyday life with an extension of the education influence into life.

Carmichael, Farmer Chosen Co-chairmen

Kitty Carmichael, senior from Charlottesville, and Jeanne Farmer, junior from Newport News, will serve as co-chairmen of the 1950 May Day dance, Hilda Edwards, Orchesis president, has announced.

Mary Jane Stansbury has been named as chairman of the music committee for the dance.

The May Day dance will be held in the College gymnasium May 6 following the annual May Day festivities held at the Longwood estate that afternoon. The dance is annually sponsored by Orchesis, the College modern dance society, and will be open to the entire student body.

Other committee heads for the dance will be appointed at a later date.

Happy Birthday . . .

This Saturday, hundreds of students and thousands of alumnae throughout Virginia and the 48 states will be saying "Happy Birthday" to their alma mater — Longwood College. The College can look back with a justified glow of pride at the past sixty-six years as a state institution jammed with progress and accomplishment.

The campus has grown considerably in that time, and many buildings have joined the few that made up the physical plant on its first birthday. The administration, faculty and staff and much of the curriculum would seem strange to our founders now, but they would have no trouble in recognizing their alma mater, for the spirit that has brought us triumphantly through these many years has never wavered or changed. This spirit that extends a welcoming hand to the future has been a basic factor in the progress of the College since 1884.

If the plans of the Alumnae Association are carried out, this Founders' day will see the completion of the Jarman Organ Fund, another progressive step for the College which will eventually lead the installation of an organ in the new auditorium. Through their efforts in this drive, the alumnae have shown us that they did not leave the Longwood spirit behind upon graduating.

As the "O" and "5" classes return this weekend let's show them by our welcome that we are carrying on in the same spirit that they upheld so well.

To "C" or Not To "C" . . .

The faculty have agreed to lower the grade average requirements for student participation in extracurricular activities. Now the matter has been placed in the hands of the student body. Through organizations such as the Student Standards committee, the Athletic Association, and the Pan-Hellenic Council, the students must decide whether they want the requirements lowered so that more of the student body can take part in the extracurrcular activties offered, or kept on the same scale thus limiting the number who can participate.

Is the recommended .6 average for a freshman too low? The faculty has already said no. Any freshman who has caught on to the ways of college life and study well enough to make a "C-" average after a quick jump from high school has earned a place in the activities of the College. With the sliding scale that has been proposed, the student must make a .8 average when he becomes a sophomore and a 1.0 average when he reaches his junior and senior years. This sliding scale could and would provide an incentive for the student to work and to keep his place in the student groups.

The question seems especially pertinent to the sororities on campus. Should they continue their interpreation of the requirements as a straight "C" average, or is a "C-" average permissible? Some group activity is important to every student, and not every student can meet the standards now required.

The Rotunda recommends that every student and every student organization seriously consider the question raised by the faculty concerning lowering the present requirements for student participation in extra-curricular activities .

Dig Deep . . .

"Dear to the hearts of many is the Jarman Organ Fund." So writes the national president of the Alumnae Association in her appeal for the completion of this fund this year. Construction on the auditorium is under way, and the plans include space for the Jarman Organ. The alumnae are now calling on the present student body to help them raise the $5,000 remainder of the fund.

Longwood has already given us much —now is our turn to return the favor. What more fitting birthday gift could we give our alma mater than to aid in the purchase of an organ to honor Dr. Joseph L. Jarman who dedicated 44 years of his life in service to this College.

Dig deep; the alumnae, the College are counting on you. Forget that coke, that candy bar, or cup of coffee — it isn't every day that you can help purchase an organ for your College.

Open Sesame . . .

The question of the Library being open on Sunday afternoons seems to have been relegated to the same category as the weather. Everybody talks about it; nobody does anything. The question still remains—do you want the Library open on Sunday afternoons?

If you do, take some action. Speak through your student organization; write a letter to the editors of the Rotunda; talk to the Librarian. The doors of the Library are not going to fly open merely because you sit in your room on Sunday afternoon and wish that the Library were open.

If you decide that you do want the Library open on Sunday afternoons there are still some questions to be decided — at what time do you think it should open, how long do you think it should remain open? Until you decide these questions and until you take a definite stand on the issue the Library will remain closed on Sunday afternoons.

Do you want the Library open on Sunday afternoons? Then say so; keep saying so until it is open.

BIRD'S EYE VIEW

by jacky eagle

This weekend will see graduates of the junior bird club fly back from all over to celebrate Founders' Day here. Local president Stoops has called a meeting at the aviary Saturday night in honor of the founders of the fair fowl organization at Longwood. Members are looking forward to personal greetings from the national president's Washington headquarters.

The latest word from high bird sources is an admonition to all loyal members not to get "shook". Casing the situation from our vantage point in the blue, we see an essentially healthy planet about to fall apart from a simple case of jitters. Members of the communist-socialist and capitalist camps are shaking in their boots, each waiting for the other to make a false move. Flocks are scattering in wild confusion in anticipation of attack by A-bomb, or worse yet, H-bomb.

In the U. S. Senate alarmist McCarthy continues to screech about sedition in the State Department. Our friends in Central America have smelled foul fowl in their midst plotting to overthrow the established governments of Haiti, and the Dominican Republic. Even Virginia organization politicians took up the nail-bitting habit wondering if they would survive such narrow squeaks as the gubernatorial primary, and the poll tax and teacher pay issues in the last Assembly.

Surrounded by widespread hysteria, junior birdmen are wondering if they can keep their feathers unruffled when they solo out into the wide world. The fair fowl in the Bird Club tower say that the secret lies in keeping your wings about you and not getting "shook".

Stecking My Neck Out

by Joanne Steck

Did I say spring had sprung? My, but those blooming jonquils looked lovely laden with snow! This weather is rather confusing.

Been hearing some of the upperclassmen tell about Founders Day during the past years. Some of the ladies will come rushing in and of course the room is corroded with dirt and dust, the beds aren't made and everything is just in the "usual" state. Quote—"Oh, my dear, you know I had this room 45 years ago, but of course we had it fixed a little differently. We had the beds here and the desk here" (she precedes to move the furniture). "Of course our room was always messy just like it is now-er-er, I mean you girls have everything so 'neat'!" But we love them just the same 'cause after all if it hadn't been for them, where would we be?

I'd hate to take inventory of all the broken dates and "stand-ups" this week end. Ah, men! What are they except to worry women? But, sad to say, we couldn't get along without them. Has anybody ever honestly tried?

Met a girl in the hall Sunday, with a huge orchid on her shoulder. Everybody was commenting on it, but she said it wasn't her fault. She was upset 'cause she wanted red roses for Easter and he won't give her anything but orchids! Now I ask you—Is that any kind of "Altitude" to take? Some of us poor crums don't even get a daisy.

Some of the Longwood "ladies" have already begun taking their annual sun treatments, and the race of tans has begun. I'm waiting for the day when all of my freckles run together; then I too can join the race.

We can't pass up a chance to toss orchids to the new major and minor officers. Sho' seems sad though, to see all the old gang settling back to make ready for their departure. We're mo' than sho' tho' that the new ones will do a swell job too!

We have another orchid tucked away here especially to be presented to the entire Orchesis cast for their professional performance of Friday night. Now, perhaps, after her hard work Mrs. Landrum can take one teenie short breath before May Day.

Well, bye now, see you at our daily meeting place—the Post Office that is. Don't forget to bring the dust rag!

Class basketball and volleyball games are now well underway. The sister classes have played each other, and a few games between the colors have been played off. The frosh proved victorious over the juniors in basketball and the juniors won out in volleyball. In the Red n' White games, the seniors won both basketball and volleyball.

The rivalry between the colors began after the final contest between the sister classes had come to an end. In basketball the sophs and juniors tied each other, while the frosh lost to the seniors. With the sophs vs frosh and the juniors vs seniors ahead the outcome of the contest is still the question of the week.

When class games are over and the flurries of March snows cease to prevail, it will be time to journey to the out-of-doors sports of tennis, archery and golf. There are intramural games in tennis and archery coming up soon, so start practicing eearly to add points to the color cup score for your team.

Orchesis Invites 18 To Apprenticeship

UNRANKED, UNSEEDED CCNY TOPS NIT: WARNER STARS

No team has even won two classics in one season, but a scorching bunch of sophomores from CCNY hope to do just that this week, as they enter the NCAA after upsetting the entire major basketball field of the NIT to cop the championship. CCNY was never ranked nationally nor seeded in the NIT but they blasted out a 65-46 decision over the defending champions of San Francisco, murdered the nation's 3rd ranked team, Kentucky, 89-50, and flipped back 6th ranked Duguesne 62-52. The nation's top ranked team, Bradley, also fell to CCNY in the finals 69-61. Ed Warner, CCNY's 6'2" negro star, was voted the tournament's most valuable played. He copped the scorers with 87 points in the four games.

Cary Middlecoff, the National Open Golf Champion, used his "Black Widow" putter to win the top money of $2,000 in the Jacksonvilel Open with a 72-hole score of 279. He was 25th after the end of the first day's play. The title marked Middlecoff's second straight Jacksonville vistory. "Babe" Didrickson Zaharias unveiled a supposedly "secret stroke" and won the women Titleholder's Tournament with a record breaking 298. She is keeping her secret stroke a secret too because she feels others may use it against her. No one noticed her playing any differently, however.

INDIANS NET STREAK SUSPOSEDLY DOOMED

The longest winning streak in the history of intercollegiate tennes is predicted to come to end this year at William and Mary. Brendan Macken, Canadian Davis Cup star, guider of the Indian netmen stated the other day, and his listed Cornell, Miami University of Florida and Princeton as propective spoilers. The Indians have in the past run their consective winning streak to 74, dropping their last contest to the Navy back in 1945. Macken, however, added that the team which is starting this year is stronger than that with which he previously had started out, and the possibilities that they could develop into another sensational vistory marching squad seemed, to him, highly possible.

Class Games In Full Swing In Cup Race

Thundering cheers can be heard coming from the College gym all the time now, for the race for the color cup is in full swing with the onset of the class games.

Surprised was the only word for it when the freshmen topped the juniors 38-8. The seniors were right happy, too, about their score of 23-22 against the soph's although there were some doubtful moments during the feat.

Then came Wednesday and the volley ball games. The spirited soph's tied the seniors in one game only to fall into the depths of despair when the seniors came back with a wallop and beat the next two games. The juniors triumphed over the frosh in their two games.

The fighting (maybe we should say — the good clean fun) was resumed again on Thursday with the sophomores and juniors tying the game. The mighty seniors defeated the hard fighting frosh to the tune of 32-27.

The crowds are still cheering and Green n' Whites and Red n' Whites alike are holding their breath and crossing their fingers waiting to see who will be victorious in the mad scramble to put ribbons on that cup.

Portraits Hung In Library Wings

The library portraits have been hung and are massed in the two reading rooms, leaving the lobby free for current exhibits sent to the College by the Virginia Museum.

On display now is an exhibit of Woodcuts by Antonio Frasconi. The spring book festival is also on display. Next week the Library will exhibit drawings from the elementary school.

Dr. Ruffin, College librarian, has announced that the School Library Conference sponsored by Libraries and Teaching Materials Section, District D, of the Virginia Education Association will be held here Saturday, April 1.

Dean Clarifies Rules Concerning Absences

The office of the Registrar cannot accept absence slips submitted after 4 p. m. of the second day following an absence Dean William W. Savage announced in a memorandum concernng absences.

Students who obtain excuses from the proper person must submit these to the office of the Registrar, signed by all instructors concerned, by 4 p. m. of the second day following an absence (excluding Sundays). Saturdays count as one of these two days even if the student has no class on that day.

Dean's Parlor Given Name, Virginia Room

The reception hall formerly known as the Dean's Parlor has been named the Virginia Room Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dean of Women, has announced.

Plans are now being made to complete the redecoration of the room which was begun shortly before the White House fire last year.

Miss Gleaves has asked the students and faculty to refrain from calling meetings in the Virginia Room. "We want to use the Virginia Room, not as a meeting place for sundry clubs, groups, etc., but as a reception room in which to receive parents of the students and other guests of the College and as an assembly room for guests attending College banbanquets," she said.

Gravely, Ridenour, McElroy Elected to Serve as Heads Of Classes for Coming Year

Classes Choose Other Officers

Betsy has served as president of her class for the past two years, and as vice-president of the class during her freshman year. She is a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary fraternity recognizing leadership. A member of the Monogram club and H2O club, Betsy is also serving at present on the Athletic Association council. She is a member of the Cotillion Club and Pi Kappa Sigma social sorority.

Jean Ridenour acted as vice-president of Freshman Commission last year, and represented her class on the Student Standards committee for the past two years. She is a member of Orchesis, local dance group, H20, and the A.A. council. For the past two years she has actively participated in the College sports program .This year, Jean has served as assistant hall president. She is a member of the Cotillion Club and Sigma Sigma Sigma social sorority.

Sarah McElroy who will take over the leadership of the incoming sophomore class, served as vice-president of her class this year. Sarah is a member of the Richmond Club and Le Cercle Francais. She is co-chairman of the current freshman production, a member of the College choir and the Madrigal singers. Sarah is also assoicated with the Cotillion Club and Pi Kappa Sigma social sorority.

The junior class also elected Betty Jones to act as secretary for the coming year, and Anne Burnette as treasurer for the class. Betty McRee and Charlotte Williams will represent the class on the Student Government Council, and Jean Carter Watkins will act as representative to Student Standards.

Betty Scott Borkey will take over the position of vice-president for the incoming junior class, and Inez Hughes will act as secretary

Application Blanks For Scholarships Made Available

State Announces Requirements

Application blanks for State teacher scholarships are now available in the Presidents office, President Dabney S. Lancaster has announced.

Dr. Lancaster added that he wished to remind those students now holding a state scholarship that they must make reapplication if they wish to receive a scholarship again next year.

The State Department of Education has recently announced a change in requirements for these State teacher scholarships.

Based on a study of the subject fields in which teachers are still required, the changes are designed to insure the scholarship recipients of teaching jobs in the State. The changes restrict the eligibility and set up a list of priority fields for the guidance of local scholarship committees.

Frosh, Soph Restrictions

"The study has led us to restrict the freshman and sophomores to whom teacher' scholarships are given to those who are preparing to teach in the elementary schools where positions will presumably still be plentiful when they graduate," Dr. L. Blair Buck, State co-ordinator of teacher education, announced.

He explained that this move is important to the student, as well as the State, because it will avoid incurring debts for education in fields where positions will be difficult to obtain.

Under the scholarship program those who receive funds must teach in Virginia public schools or pay back the scholarship money. The last session of the General Assembly appropriated $580,000 for the next two years of the program.

Fields Limited

Members of the present junior and sophomore classes in any field may apply for these scholarhips, with the exception of those in curriculum six, or those majoring in history, social science, or English.

Application for a scholarship should be made as soon as possible Dr. Lancaster said.

State Board of Ed. Makes New Ruling On Men Working For Degrees Here

Summer Sessions Dorm's For Men Also Considered

The State Board of Education ruled last week that the men students now enrolled at Longwood shall be allowed to complete the work leading to their degrees. Any men students entering the College for the first time next term will be allowed to do so only with the understanding that they may be asked to terminate their studies in two years.

The Board further ruled that no dormitory provisions should be made available for the men students after this year. The men will be allowed to take their meals in the College dormitory.

Summer Session

Men will be allowed to enroll in the summer session on the same status as women as they have done in the past.

"The Board made these rulings on the stand that the state of emergency under which men were first admitted to Longwood College still exists," said President Dabney S. Lancaster in an interview yesterday. "Indeed, as long as men are enrolled here under the GI Bill of Rights the emergency would seem to exist," he added.

During the past session of the Virginia Assembly, the Virginia Advisors Legislature Committee was instructed to make a study of higher education in Virginia. Their report will be made previous to the next regular meeting of the Assembly. The question of coeducation at Longwood and Madison Colleges will receive further consideration by this committee.

Longwood Men Form First Alumni Chapter On '50 Founder's Day

The formation of the first Longwood College men's alumni chapter was announced at the Saturday morning business session of the Founders' Day celebration.

President of this group is Calvin Hatcher, vice-president is John Cook, secretary and treasurer is Ned Orange, and Paulus Price is historian.

The group is, at the present time, mostly comprised of undergraduates. "We felt it best to organize now while we are all together,' said Calvin.

Library Conference To Be Held At LC

A school library conference will be held in the Longwood College library Saturday, April 1. The conference is sponsored by the District D libraries and teaching materials section of the Virginia Education Association.

Dr. M. Beverley Ruffin, Longwood Librarian, is president of this section.

Registration for the conference will be held at 10 a. m. Saturday, followed by a brief session in the auditorium of the library. Dr. Ruffin will deliver a welcoming address to the assembled delegates at this time. The delegates will then be taken on a tour of the College library.

Dr. Edgar M. Johnson, director of the bureau of teaching materials, and Miss Mildred Kelly, supervisor of Campbell County school and film libraries, will lead the group in discussion following the business session.

After lunch in the College dining hall, the delegates will be taken on a tour of the Farmville high school and the Training school libraries. The conference will adjourn in the high school library.

Native of Nigeria Speaks To Student Group on Peace

"For an effective peace, the youth of today must understand themselves," Mr. S. A. Lawoyin, native of Nigeria, Africa, said in speaking to a group of students Monday. He added that we must get to know and understand the cultural backgrounds of all the peoples of the world in order to better our relations with them in securing peace.

Mr. Lawoyin, a ministerial student at the Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, frankly discussed the customs of his country which we often frown upon without understanding. "Many people still think of Africa as a continent filled with wild tribes, jungles, huge snakes and gold and diamonds," Mr. Lawoyin said, "even modern geography books represent Africa like this." He went on to show that much of Africa could be compared to the United States. "Except for the tall buildings, I found Richmond to be very similar to the capitol of Nigeria," he stated.

In describing tribal life and the use of tribal marks, Mr. Lawoyin compared them to modern fraternities. In discussing other customs of his native country, he explained that the idea many hold that his people buy their wives is a misunderstanding. He pointed out that at the time of engagement, a young man will give a dowry to the girl's father which is usually used to help furnish their future home.

Mr. Lawoyin told the group that progress in Africa has been most visible where Christianity has been adopted. He described conditions in northern Nigeria,

'Good-bye, My Lover Goodbye' To Be Title Frosh Production; Play To Be in Rec' at 8 pm

Tickets On Sale To Student Body

"Good-bye, My Lover, Goodbye", or 'What Did You Expect Me to do While You Were Gone?", a production in six scenes, will be presented by the Freshman Class in the Rec hall at 8 p. m. on Friday night.

Tickets for the presentation went on sale Monday and are being sold each day after lunch and after dinner on second floor Rotunda for 35c.

Hall Stars

Starring Lucy Page Hall as the heroine, Amanda Wright, hero, and Judy Cox as the villain in the feature presentation, the production will go on to present a period of song and dance entertainment in typical movie style with news, comedy, travel-talks, serial, advertisements and a stage show. A take-off on a modern movie with its numerous added attractions, "Good-bye My Lover, Good-bye" will be presented by the freshmen in honor of their sister class, the juniors.

According to Ginny McLean, co-chairman of the production, one can expect to see everything from the cannibals of a south sea island to a big-city night club scene with an added glance into the comic strips. "You won't want to miss seeing the villian as he tries to win the love of the beautiful heroine, or seeing the fly dance a jig with the bumble bee," she said.

Committee Heads

Ginny and Sarah McElroy, co-chairmen, have had a number of committee chairmen serving under them. Barbara Caskey served as chairman of the theme committee; Roberta Browning, the staging committee; Sonia Kyle, costumes; Amanda Wright, publicity, Anne Murphy, dance; and Betsy Hankins, song. The committee heads were helped in writing the script by Pat Taylor and Helen Tanner.

Harvard Ochestra to Give Concert at College April 3

The Harvard orchestra, conducted by Mr. Malcomb Holmes, Dean of New England Conservatory of Music, will come to Longwood Monday, April 3, to present a concert in the College dining hall open to the public.

Known as the oldest college orchestra in the country, the Harvard group has been in existence since 1806. They make many appearances throughout the country every year ,according to Dr. John W. Molnar, head of the College music department. Forty - two members of the orchestra will appear Monday night.

Program

The opening selection for the concert will be "Outdoor Overature" by Copland, followed by "The Faithful Shepherd's Suite" by Handel. The Longwood choir and Hampden-Sydney glee club, conducted by Dr. Molnar, will then sing "Worthy Is The Lamb" and "The Amen Chorus" from "The Messiah."

After intermission, the Harvard group will return to play "Antique Dances" by Resphigi and "Taccota" by Frescobalbi.

The Longwood choir will give a party for the Hampden-Sydney glee club and the Harvard orchestra after the concert.

DR. JOHN W. MOLNAR, head of College choir, who is responsible for bringing Harvard orchestra here April 3.

Mr. Paschall To Give Talk

Mr. Davis Y. Paschall, Director of Elementary Education in the State Department of Education, will speak at assembly Thursday. Mr. Paschall is being sponsored by the Association of Childhood Education, Lelia Mae Ferratt, president of the association said recently.

Mr. Paschall came to the State Department as Assistant Supervisor of Secondary Education on April 1, 1947. Since June 1 of last year he has served as Supervisor of Elementary Education.

With B. A. and M. A. degrees from the College of William and Mary, Mr. Paschall has also had graduate study at Harvard University. For two years he taught in Victoria High School, Lunenburg County, and served for nine years as principal of Victoria High School. During World War II, he served as a lieutenant in the U. S. Navy.

U. Va. Concert Band To Play Sun., April 2

The University of Virginia concert band, consisting of 50 members, will present a musical program at the Farmville High School, Sunday, April 2, at 2:00 p. m. The concert will be open to the public.

The first selection to be played will be "Prelude in Fugue in G Minor" by Bach followed by the "Thunder and Lightning Polka" by Strauss. For the third number on the program, the band will render "Legend" by Creston.

These selections will be followed by "Hora S'accota" by Dinicu, film music to "Things To Come" by Bliss, "Marche Jouiesse" by Charbrier, "Cowboy Rhapsody" by Gould, "Lovely Landscape" by McBride, and "Les Preludes" by Listz.

Alumnae Choose First Vice-Pres.

Students To Hear Educator Thursday

Mrs. Sara Button Rex, '39, Charlottesville, was elected as first vice-president of the Longwood Alumnae Association at the business meeting held Saturday morning. Miss Helen Costan of Lynchburg, national president of the Association, presided over the meeting which was the first formal gathering of the alumnae at the 60th annual Founders' Day celebration.

Other officers elected at the same meeting were Mrs. Emma Mebane Hunt Martensen, '19, Wytheville, as second vice-president and Miss Ethel Gildersleeve, '20, Hampton, as director. Elected to serve on the nominating committee were Miss Helen Draper, Farmville, Miss Mary Dupuy, Hampden-Sydney, and Mrs. Adelle Hutchinson Watkins, Farmville.

Organ Fund

A total of $3,898.67 was reported for the Jarman Organ Fund. Of this amount $252.17 was received from the present student body and the student organizations. The faculty and staff contributed $122.00 to the fund. The alumnae contributed or pledged $3,524.50.

Contributions to the unrestricted fund by the alumnae totaled $1,663.00. This fund is used to run the alumnae office.

The degree class of 1920 and the class of 1940 were co-winners of the Jarman silver cup which is annually presented to the reunion class having the largest percentage of attendance at the Founders' Day festivities. The cup was presented to Miss Ethel Gildersleeve, president of the degree class of 1920, and Mrs. Jane Powell Johnson of Wytheville, president of the class of 1940, by President Dabney S. Lancaster at the concert Saturday night.

Editor Announces New Colonnade Staff Jackson To Manage

Maria Jackson, sophomore from Lexington, will serve as managing editor of the Colonnade, Edith Duma, newly appointed editor-in-chief announced recently. Maria served as short story editor of the college magazine last year and as a member of the board of contributors the previous year.

Nancy Garbee has been appointed as short story editor, and Betsy Wilson will take over the position of essay editor. Joan Prichett, who served as cartoonist for the magazine last year, will be in charge of humor ,and Flora Ballowe will head the poetry department.

Sara Cregar has been appointed to the post of review editor, and Peg Peery will keep her position as staff photographer for the magazine. Lucy Jane Morton will fill the position as art editor and Shirley Atkinson will serve as head typist.

Serving under Frances Harper who recently took over the position of Business Manager, Patty Walker will head the circulation department and June Raines will serve as advertising manager, a position created this year.

Reprieve Granted...

With the new ruling of the State Board of Education concerning the co-educational status of Longwood College in mind the men can take a deep breath and get back to their studies and extracurricular activities.

The State Board assured those men now enrolled permission to complete the work leading to their degrees and also allowed them the hope of new additions to their number next year. Although they will be denied dormitory space, the men will still be allowed to take their meals in the dining hall.

It is easy to see that the State Board has no intention of dropping the co-educational question entirely. In fact, their recent ruling would seem to indicate that they will do their best to get a bill providing for co-education at Longwood and Madison through the next General Assembly. They have given the men students at the two colleges every consideration that they tactfully could. The elimination of dormitories for the men, a sore point with the Senate, was to be expected.

It is now up to the student bodies of the two colleges to prove to the State Board, to the assembly, and to the State that they can and will be as good co-educational institutions as they were "female normal schools". This will take the co-operation of both the men and women students and the faculty and staff.

The men have already taken another forward step with the formation of the first men's alumni chapter which has been recognized by the Longwood Alumnae Association.

As the men grow in number it will be even easier to recognize them as an integral part of Longwood College. The State Board has given co-education a green light —but they can only authorize such a move, the students must make it work.

Hear the Best...

A pleasant surprise in the form of the Harvard orchestra will come to Longwood next Monday night. We owe a vote of thanks to the College choir which is responsible for the appearance of the guest group. Every student and faculty member will have the chance to show his appreciation of the artistic — beauty in music.

The group, known throught the country as the oldest college orchestra, has existed since 1806 and has built a reputation unrivaled by any other college musical group. The Harvard orchestra makes many appearances throughout the country every year.

Learning to appreciate music, drama, and other forms of artistic achievement should be a part of everyone's education—the easy part. But appreciation can come only through contact with those arts. Here's our opportunity. Let's take advantage of it.

A Vote of Thanks...

At the business meeting held last Saturday, the alumnae received a report of the recent drive to complete the Jarman Organ Fund. A total of $3,898.67 was reported to have been donated to the fund by the students, alumnae, faculty and staff.

Although the drive fell $1,101.33 short of its goal, the immensity of this goal must be taken into consideration. All concerned in the recent drive gave the project support that rates commendation and proves once again the effectiveness of the "Longwood spirit."

A total sum of $252.17 was contributed by the students and student organizations of the College. In view of the fact that the often meager student pocketbooks have been taxed pretty heavily this year by successive financial drives, these donations show clearly their willingness to back the alumnae all the way.

With the help of additional funds, the alumnae hope to realize their project of installing an organ in the new auditorium dedicated to the memory of Dr. Joseph L. Jarman. The drive, which has lasted for almost five years, has come to completion and we can do no more now, except to express our sincere thanks to the alumnae who have worked so diligently to give the College a gift which will enhance the cultural possibilities of Longwood, and to add a note of praise for the students who have been faithfully and willingly behind the alumnae in this project.

by jacky eagle

In spite of the cold war a number of Virginia's official State birds have been seen descending on the Longwood vicinity, pairing off and setting up nestkeeping. Disregarding the Cardinal's crimson coat and the Robin's red breast, the Longwood Bird Club, essentially a capitalist group but noted for its broad-mindedness, has issued a mass welcome to all their brothers under the feathers.

Nobody's wondering "where the birdies is" now that this "spring has sprung." Under the combined attractions of clement weather and hospitality provided by the Club, many of our feathered friends have stayed with us right around the calendar. However, if anyone has been too lost in studious thought to note our littlest citizens' presence, they have been reminded of it by the periodic newspaper communications of Miss "Birdie May" Baugh of Birdland Farm at Belona. Miss Baugh seems to be one of the fowl's foremost benefactors in the Commonwealth.

Scanning the situation this week our beady eye first alights on Congress where the battle of the budget is waxing hotter. Legislators of both parties, including the leader of the Virginia flock, are brandishing their blades on the figures that Truman insists are "rockbottom". While the President has been playing among the birds of paradise in his Florida retreat, the House Appropriations Committee has been busy lopping the first million off the "package" budget, and further cuts are threatened in the House. Harry's latest plea, which the butchers may well heed, is to leave the proposed foreign aid appropriations intact.

Lawmakers and the State department are clucking about what to do to continue holding our own in the cold war when the ECA program draws to a close in 1952. Apparently countries receiving Marshall Plan aid will still fall short of economic independence by that date. To keep the Commies from getting a toehold in these countries it's agreed that the U. S. will have to extend financial help as well as raise imports from our hard up neighbors. The State Department has hatched a plan to set up a committee to study post-ECA needs. President Truman is expected to act on this plan soon after he arrives back on the Washington scene April 10.

Stecking My Neck Out

by Joanne Steck

After a sleepless night with this furnace of a sunburn, things have taken a haywire appearance. But existence must go on through sunburn and tests.

One doesn't really appreciate our dining hall until she sees it at concert time—without its usual fragrant aroma. Another professional performance was turned in by the choir and glee club here last Saturday night, not to mention the excellent job done by accompanists and directors. It really makes us proud of our "institute" to see and hear our prodigies.

The place seems kinda quiet since the alumnae left. One of our professors was telling her class the etiquette of entertaining overnight guests. She said it wasn't wise to put out your best silver and linen, etc., but to put out old pewter spoons and "holey" pillow cases. Then when the guest went home, she would think "Why, that child doesn't have a thing in her house. I think two pillow cases would be nice—those holes! And so two lovely pillow cases arrive. Maybe we should take a lesson—who knows, one of the alumnae might have sent us a new rotunda.

Some of the alumnae were telling us about their "courting" places. They said all they had was the rotunda, and of course that wasn't exactly private. One of their favorite places was a graveyard on the edge of Farmville. I can see them now sitting on a polished tombstone discussing the affairs of the world.

The most exciting date on our calendar this week is freshman production, and we're all looking forward to a stupendous, colossal event!

If you should see some of your classmates running around looking like something out of "The Return of the Native"—(the peasants, that is) don't get shook—they're only trying on their May Day costumes.

Here's hoping we can get home Easter in time to intercept those estimate grades—we hope you make it on time!

Letters To Editor

To Whom This May Concern:

This is to inform you that Chi has known since 7:30 Thursday night, March 23, 1950, those who are involved in the forging of its name. Chi wishes you to know that it is a source of shock and disappointment that those whom we think to be some of our closest friends, would abuse our name. You will never know nor will you be able to understand, or grasp the full scope of what you have done. It was an unnecessary and underhanded incident, and one which should have not occurred among girls who possess true Longwood spirit.

We believe that the main purpose of your actions was to destroy the reputation of our organization. You have not achieved the ends for which you strove. You have merely succeedd in destroying something intangible—something which man has termed from time to time as "personal integrity". Only you, yourself, can fully understand what this loss can mean.

Students To Visit Campus

High school students from Martinsville, Madison Heights, Chase City, Rocky Mount, Bedford, Wytheville, Troutville, Eagle Rock, Venton, Hot Springs, and Brownville will visit Longwood's campus April 1. A tea will be given for them in the Student Lounge.

200 Returning L C 'Girls' Join in Founders Festivities

The 66th annual Founder's Day celebration has come and gone with approximately two hundred of "the Girls" attending. Although it had been many a day since some of them could be counted among the students of Longwood, it was quite evident that none of that famed "Longwood Spirit" had been lost during the years.

Auditorium going up, new snack bar for quick cokes, co-eds on the campus, girls smoking and wearing blue jeans—they took it all in their stride. 'Cause underneath it all they knew it was still the same old Longwood they attended and loved so well.

But on to some of the highlights of the 1950 festivities. The announcement of the formation of a men's alumni chapter took some of the alumnae by surprise. In fact it surprised a number of the present student body. 'Course most of the members of this new chapter are still undergraduates, but they're hoping.

(To the great joy of the alumnae, or maybe it should be alumni now that the group includes men) three thousand, eight hundred, ninety-eight dollars and sixty-seven cents (Looks stupendous written out, doesn't it?) was collected for the Jarman Organ Fund. That leaves only $1,101.33 (in figures that doesn't look so big) to be accumulated before the organ can be all ours, bought and paid for. Here's betting that that organ will be right there, ready and rarin' to go, come the completion of the new auditorium.

The Degree Class of 1920, which shared the Jarman Silver Cup with the class of 1940, proudly boasted one hundred per cent attendance at their thirtieth reunion. Both members of the class were here.

Of the class of 1900, whose fiftieth anniversary was celebrated this year, two members were present. Going back five years to the class of 1895 the alumnae had no reduction in attendance—two of their number also attended the festivities.

Greetings from the Royal Hawaiian at Waikiki, Honolulu, Hawaii, added a cosmopolitian touch to the gathering. Mrs. Maria Bristow Stark, former president of the Alumnae Association, gathered together all "The Girls" in the vicinity of the Royal Hawaiian for a luncheon honoring Longwood. Personal greeting from each of these traveled alumnae were sent along to help with the celebration here.

All in all, the alumnae had a grand old time playing "College Suzies" again — the only thing they missed was having an 8:05 physical education class!

The formation of the first men's alumni chapter was announced at the morning business session. Calvin Hatcher has been elected president of this group, which is the first of its kind in the history of the College.

The 1950 class games are gradually coming to a close. With the basketball games over and all but one of the volleyball games completed the season is well nigh over.

The sophs and juniors fought all the way to wind up with a 23-23 tie for the basketball score—the first tied up game of the season. The seniors triumphed over the frosh in their basketball game, 32-27. The frosh came back, tho, to take a 37-27 win over the sophomores, and in the final basketball game, the seniors racked up 29 points against the juniors 13.

The results of the basketball games sees the Reds ahead with two wins, while the Greens scored one win and shared the tie.

At present, with one game yet to be played the Greens are out in front in the Volleyball contests. The frosh trounced the sophomores in both games with scores 16-10 and 9-8. In the three games between the frosh and seniors, the seniors came out in the lead in the first and third with scores of 11-23 and 19-6, while the frosh took one game to the tune of 16-12.

The juniors forged ahead to take

CCNY, BRADLEY AGAIN CLASH — NCAA FINALS

The nation's top basketball quintet, Bradley, had a chance to seek vengence last night when at Madison Square Garden, the Braves once again faced CCNY, this time for the NCAA crown. CCNY, unranked and unnoticed until approximately two weeks ago, upset everybody in the NIT, including Bradley, to cop the championship. Ironically, the Beavers from CCNY were a 100-1 choice not to gain a bid to the NCAA.

SNEAD COPS 4TH GREENSBORO TITLE WITH RECORD

Sammy Snead, the Hot Springs native and 1949's leading golf money winner, set a record breaking 72-hole Greensboro Open Golf Tournament score with an 11-under-par total of 269 at the Sedgefield Country Club. He became the first player to successfully defend his title there. His record breaking 269 bettered the previous mark of 270 held by Snead, Ben Hogan, and Byron Nelson. Snead stated that he wasn't playing unusual golf — just consistent. That's pretty good golf any way you look at it, brother.

GONZALES UPSETS KRAMER

Pancho Gonzales conquered his current nationwide troupe opponent, the world's professional champion, Jack Kramer, 7-5, 6-3, 6-4, in the finals of the Philadelphia Inquirer's world's professional indoor tennis tournament. In the transcontinental tour of professional exhibitions Kramer has taken the measure of Conzales 71 times while dropping only 21 matches. At times Gonzazles has been very effective against the Champion, but Kramer's over-all game, although similiarly played, is much more powerfully accurate. Gonzales is still young at 21. He eventually may be a likely choice to take over Wramer's place the "Big Jake" wears down.

LOUIS TO JOIN THE CIRCUS AT $1,000 A DAY

Joe Louis again denied all rumors to the effect that he would seek the heavyweight championship from Ezzard Charles. Louis has just completed a series of 26 exhibition bouts and is in pretty good shape. He will join a circus at $1,000 a day for three months, and then he will direct his attention to refereeing wrestling and boxing.

Nancy Chaffee defeated Athea Gibson, the first negro finalist to compete. The Indian netmen took their first seasonal tennis match 9-0 from the BPTA Club of Richmond. It was their 75th straight victory. Jerry Cunningham, former University of Richmond No. 1 man, played No. 5 against the Indians but lost easily to a fast climbing rookie, Sam Woods . . . where Mohammedanism still reigns and the people cling to ancient and out-dated customs. Mr. Lawoyin emphasized the need for Christian missions throughout Africa and the good that those who are there now has done.

In answer to questions from the students, Mr. Lawoyin compared the school system in Nigeria with that in the United States. In Nigeria there are two years of infant classes which are comparable to kindergarten, he explained. This is followed by six years of standard elementary school, and four years of high school. A student who wishes to continue his studies abroad may take an examination which will enable him to study in England or the United States.

The study of English is begun in the infant classes and continued through high school. Mr. Lawoyin added, however, that although everyone learns to speak English, his people want to keep their own language as representative of their native culture.

Red n' White Tops Greens In Recent In Swimming Meet

Add Total Of 10 Pts. To Color Cup Score

The Red and White swimmers earned 46 points to top the 27 earned by the Green and White mermaids in the swimming meet held in the College pool Monday.

A total of ten points will be added to the color cup scores for the Red and Whites as a result of the meet.

Telegraphic Meet

At the same time a number of the events were timed for the Virginia Intercollegiate Telegraphic Swimming Meet. These times will be sent to the director of the meet to compete with those of other Virginia colleges. The results of this meet will be announced sometime in April.

Jean Ridenour, Bunny Ricks, Nancy Walker, Marion Beckner, Liz Lesslie, and Ann Harding were the Red and White contestants. They are all members of the sophomore class.

Juniors Nancye Gillie, Jeanne Gilman, and Ann Kemp and freshmen Ann Crowder, Lou Jamison, and Nell Bradshaw were entered for the Green and Whites.

Miss Staggs Attends Home Ec. Conference

Miss Fern E. Staggs, professor of home economics, attended the annual southern regional Home Economics of Education conference in Memphis last week.

The theme of the conference, which lasted from March 19 to March 24 was "Contributions of Home Economics for Life Adjustment." The group comprised 250 teacher trainers and heads of home economics departments who joined in the conference.

Dr. Baldwin Visits College

Dr. J. T. Baldwin, Jr., of the College of William and Mary visited Longwood College Monday. He spoke to the genetics class about his recent trip to West Africa.

Dr. Baldwin has made a number of trips exploring for plants for the Department of Agriculture. His last explorations may prove to be of great importance to medicine.

Recent research has brought to light a drug effective in the cure of arthritis. This drug is a hormone known as cortisone and is produced by the adrenal glands of animals. However, it is not available in sufficient quantity from such sources. A compound similar to cortisone is found in the seed of a genus of plants growing in West Africa. This compound can be converted into cortisone by chemical treatment.

These plants range all along the West African coast. Dr. Baldwin has been collecting members of this plant group to find those most productive of the raw material for cortisone. He now plans additional explorations for a second plant genus which may also be an effective producer of cortisone.

Rotunda Is 'Medalist' In CSPA Press Contest

Ranked First Place In College Papers

The Rotunda received a "Medalist" rating in the twenty-sixth annual contest of the Columbia Scholastic Press Association. The issues receiving this rating were those of the fall semester of this year, put out under the editorship of Jackie Eagle.

The "Medalist" rank is awarded publications especially selected from the First-Place group for outstanding qualities; however, it is accorded to not more than ten percent of all the entries in the class concerned.

The Rotunda received a total of 911 points out of a possible 1000 to place in the top group.

Content Good

Out of a possible 250 points for content the Rotunda received 235 points. Of the Rotunda the judges said, "The Rotunda succeeds in informing the reader and thereby influences them. It is a newspaper of substantial achievement in the teachers' college field."

In the fields of writing, editing, and make-up, the Rotunda received a score of 521 out of a possible 550. In the field of advertising the paper received 80 points out of 100 and 75 points out of 100 were awarded it under the heading general considerations.

Pedro Lauded

"'Pedro's Pocket,' is good college commentary copy," wrote the judges. "Campus Cogitations" was referred to by the judges as a newsy student expression column.

"'Scanning the Field' is expertly written. This is the copy that is typically American and is a fine example to interest the coed in athletics," said the judges.

In summing up their criticism of the Rotunda the judges said "As a planned and departmentalized college paper, the Rotunda brings its story and college life commentary to the readers eye in easy form."

Juniors, Freshman Chose New Officers For Coming Session

Jackie Moodie, junior from Toanna, will serve as vice-president for the incoming senior class. Betsy Gravely president of the class announced recently. Peg Peery, junior from Tazewell, will fill the post as Student Standards representative for the class.

Betty Abbitt , freshman from Madison Heights, will act as vice-president for the '50-51 sophomore class, and Jessie Amory, will represent the class on the Student Government council. Judy Cox will serve as House President for the class.

Professor To Speak To Math Council

Mrs. Josephine Phillips, of the Longwood mathematics department, will deliver an address at the 28th annual meeting of the National Council of Teachers of Math which is to be held in Chicago, Illinois, April 12-15.

The topic of Mrs. Phillips' address will be "Motivating the Study of Solid Geometry through the Use of Mineral Crystals." Her address will be presented before the Senior High School section meeting Friday, April 14, at 2 p. m.

Mrs. Phillips has made a hobby of mathematical study of mineral crystals.

Harris Appointed Assistant Editor Of College Annual

Other New Members Chosen For Staff

Peggy Harris, sophomore from Emporia, has been appointed assistant editor of the Virginian Charlotte King Jones, editor-in-chief, has announced. Mary Crawford, sophomore from Richmond, will serve as assistant business manager under Georgia Bailey, business manager of the 1951 Longwood annual.

Among the other members recently appointed to the staff of the 1951 Virginian are Edith Duval, Polly Brothers, Jean Partridge, Nell Dalton, Vera Bryant, Sarah Graham, and Gerry Newman.

Other members of the new staff are Shirley Livesay, Betty Scott Borkey, Kathryn McCready, Bobbie Brown, Bunny Ricks, and Helen Agnew.

Kennon To Be Fire Chief

Edith Kennon, sophomore from Green Spring Depot, has recently been appointed fire chief, Claudia Anderson, retiring chief, has announced. Assistants which are chosen from each of the classes will be elected at a meeting in the near future.

Edith, a physical education major, is a member of the Athletic Association Council, serving as varsity hockey manager for the past season, and has actively participated in varsity hockey and basketball since her freshman year. She served this year as committee chairman for the sophomore production, and worked on the ticket committee during the recent Orchesis recital, in which she also took part.

4 Social Sororities Elect New Officers To Serve In '50-51

Four of the eight social sororities on campus have elected major officers for the coming year.

Elected to serve as president to Zeta Tau Alpha was Janie Lyons, junior from Holden, West Virginia. Mary Jo Smith, sophomore from Portsmouth, was chosen to hold the office of vice-president, and Nancy Garbee, sophomore from Lynchburg, was elected secretary. Frances Cregar, junior from Roanoke, and Margaret Thomas, sophomore from Atlee, were elected to the duties of treasurer and Pan Hellenic representative respectively.

Registration For Rooms Announced

Major Officers, House Presidents To Have Priority

Registration for rooms for the '50-'51 session will be held April 12, 13, and 14, Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dean of Women, said in a recent interview.

Students are requested to call for registration blanks immediately after the Easter vacation. Juniors may obtain these blanks from Mrs. Eastham's office in the senior building, and freshman and sophomores may get theirs from Miss Gleaves' office. In filling out the blanks, Miss Gleaves has asked that students state the name of their roommate for the coming session and sophomores and juniors give the names of the proposed suite-mates. A first, second, and third room preference should also be noted on the blank.

To Have Priority

The four major officers and the house presidents will have priority for rooms, and should turn their preference in to Miss Gleaves' office before the regular registration takes place.

Juniors will hand in their registration blanks to Miss Gleaves' office Wednesday, April 12, sophomores, Thursday, April 13, and freshman, Friday, April 14.

Deposit Required

A $10 deposit fee is required for room registration and may be paid to the treasurer's office any day next week. A receipt from the treasurer must be presented with the registration blank. This fee will not be applicable to future board and will not be returned to the student as has formerly been done. It will be held by the treasurer until the end of the '50-'51 session at which time it will be returned to the student with any damage expenses that may have been incurred during the year, deducted.

End of Dark, Dreary Days Affects Student Teachers

Another "seasoning" has come and gone, and now spring is "reproaching." Actually, we don't even need the calendar to know that those dark, dreary days have ended. At Longwood College, the student teacher gets so wrapped up in her work that she has neither the time nor the inclination to go scouting around for violets.

Is it really possible for anyone to get completely absorbed by school teaching? That is the question many statisticians have been asking as they study the number of unmarried men and women in that profession. From actual experience and observation, we'd say right off, "It is."

What is it about teaching that is so compelling with this profession (if it is a profession) continues to draw young men and women and to hold them, in spite of thumb-tack manias, comic book crazes, and similiar anti-education epidemics?

The other day the principal of the Farmville Elementary School discovered that the young boys were taking the thumb tacks from the art (?), allowing the pictures to fall to the floor, sticking sometimes as many as fifteen of these little nails in each shoe, and sliding up and down the halls. When the situation was investigated, one little boy, not noted for his mentality but nevertheless noted for his "wise" sayings, said to the principal, "Oh, I bet you used to do the same thing when you were young!" Did our readers do this when they were children, or is this something original?

In spelling class the children were asked to spell the word "quotation." One of the little girls said she was putting quotation marks around the word. "Oh, you stole that idea from me," another girl said.

The young girl who first had the bright idea of putting in the quotation marks wrote the following sentence using the word "visible": "Visible" means can be seen," said Jane."

When asked to write a sentence using the word "erosion," a young boy wrote, "There was erosion in Richmond, Virginia yesterday." Upon being asked whether or not he knew what "erosion" meant, he replied, "No, but that's a good sentence anyway!"

Those sixth and seventh graders cannot be accused of having an excessive amount of intellectual curiosity; they do cruel imitations of student teachers coming down icey steps; they ask embarrassing questions as, "How groups of cells decided to start working together;" and say that ancient birds couldn't sing as well as crows. Still they manage to keep a teacher so very content that she doesn't know whether it's spring or summer, day or night. We never did tell what the big attraction is, did we?

Student Standards Alter Old Ruling On Requirements

New Change Takes Effect Immediately

The academic requirement for holding office was altered at a recent call meeting of the Student Standards Committee, Margaret Beasley president of the Committee, has announced. In lieu of requiring a "C" average of all office holders, only the four major offices and the minor offices will have the "C" average as a prerequisite. This new ruling will go into effect immediately.

The regulation was altered in answer to several organizations who have complained of the severity of the former requirement, Margaret explained. However, the remainder of the requirements for election as stated in the handbook will remain unchanged until the new handbook is published.

At present, the committee is considering a proposal to lower the requirements for the elections next spring. Included in this proposal is a plan to base requirements for office holding on averages for the preceding semester and or a cumulative average, or a sliding scale average.

Notice

Easter holiday will begin Thursday, April 6, at 11 a. m. President Dabney Lancaster has announced. Students will be expected to return to the College April 10, and classes will be resumed at 8:05 a. m. April 11.

HAL McINTIRE, who will play for the Cotillion Club dance here, April 15.

Williams To Be On State Forum

Charlotte Williams, junior from Richmond, will represent Longwood College on the "Freedom Forum," one of the programs to be presented as part of the 26th annual meeting of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce April 13-14.

The forum which is to be held in the roof garden of the Hotel John Marshall in Richmond will be made up of a question and answer panel.

The question panel is to be composed of selected junior and senior students representing Hampden-Sydney College, Longwood College, Randolph-Macon (Lynchburg), Randolph - Macon College, Ashland), University of Richmond, University of Virginia, Virginia Military Institute, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Washington and Lee University, Westhampton College and the College of William and Mary.

Answer Panel

The answer panel will be composed of Governor John S. Battle; Congressman J. Vaughan Gary; Giles S. Miller, Jr., Vice-president, Virginia Bankers Association; Robert S. Graves, President, Virginia Horticultural Society; Dr. W. L. Carson, Presbyterian Minister; N. W. Kelley, President, Virginia State Chamber of Commerce; W. E. Lum, Jr., President, Virginia Retail Merchants Association; and E. J. Robeson, President, Virginia Manufacturers Association.

Thomas C. Boushall, will preside over the forum.

Voice Of Longwood Features Recital

A transcribed piano recital by students studying under Miss Emily Clark, assistant professor of music, will be presented on the Voice of Longwood program Thursday, April 6 at 4:30 p. m.

Puckett Asher will begin the program by playing "Sonata in D Minor" by Scarlatti. Peggy Dee Hoover will follow with "Toccata" by Paradies. "Russian Boots" by Beck will then be played by Jean Watkins. Roberta Wilson will play "Waltz in B Major" by Brahing and "Rush Hour in Hongkong" by Chasins as the final numbers on the program.

Hardin To Lead Traditional Figure

"April Shower" has been announced as the theme of the annual Cotillion Club dance to be held in the College gymnasium Saturday, April 15 from 8 to 12 p. m.

Hal McIntyre and his band will play for the dance. According to Robbie Cromar, president of the club, McIntyre is known for wide variations in music. "His is one of the most modern and polished name bands and has been ranked with the college favorites of all time," said Robbie.

The figure, a tradition of the Cotillion Club, will be led by the officers and their dates. Robbie Cromar will lead with Eugene Riley and Helen Hardin with David Luck, Katie Bondurant will take part in the figure with Jim Carpenter and Peggy White with Micheaux Buchannan.

Chaperones Invited

Members of the faculty and administration who have been invited to the dance as chaperones are Mr. and Mrs. Boyd M. Coyner, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Graham, Mrs. Katherine Tabb, Mrs. Caroline Eastham, Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dean and Mrs William Savage, Dr. and Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster, and Miss Elizabeth Burger.

Microfilm Exhibit Now On Display In LC Library

An exhibit including microfilm and a microfilm reader is now on display in the library. The purpose of the display is to demonstrate the difference in library space needed for books on microfilm and bound paper editions.

Included in the display are 24 volumes of the New York Times for 1948, and a microfilm edition of the New York Times for 1949. A microfilm reader which is necessary in using the film has been loaned to the library by Mr. J. Barrye Wall, editor of the Farmville Herald. The library is at present considering purchasing a similar machine.

Also showing as a part of the exhibit is a copy of the index to the New York Times. This index is published twice a month and is cumulated into an annual volume.

An art exhibit from the training school, grades II through VII, has been put in the lobby of the library. This exhibit includes decorated paper plates, and handwork in crayon, charcoal, and finger-painting.

She Shall Have Music . . .

Monday night the student body had a chance to hear the Harvard orchestra, the best and oldest in existence. Everyone who attended seems to agree that the music and the presentation were hard to beat. But it is possible to try.

Have you ever thought of being a member of a Longwood College orchestra? There's been talk of such a thing, and many seem in favor of the idea. A "String" class has been set up this year by Dr. Molnar, which seems a good start toward something bigger and better. Work, hard and long, would be involved; but work enters every project that becomes a success.

A College orchestra has many points in its favor. One that everybody had a chance to witness Monday night was that of orchestral accompaniment to choral music. Who that heard can deny that it sounded good? Not only those students who played in an orchestra, but also those who heard could develop a greater appreciation of the art of music.

It seems that an orchestra would add to many of the College functions. Assemblies wouldn't be nearly so hard to attend if we walked into the auditorium to the tune of a College song being played by our own orchestra. Commencement and school presentations such as operettas could be enhanced by a good musical group.

According to Dr. Molnar, there is some money available now to buy instruments. And next fall seems as good a time as any to begin something new and good. Anybody interested? Good, let's show that interest and build a Longwood College orchestra.

Bouquets And Brickbats . . .

Bouquets are in order for . . .

. . . the recently retired staff of the Rotunda for the "Medalist" rating they received in the Columbia Scholastic Press Association competition. They did a good job and well deserve the acclamation.

. . . the freshmen for a bang-up production.

. . . . the Mottley Construction Company for the energetic way they've gotten to work on the White House replacement. Keep up the good work — we want that building by September.

. . . the Students Standards committee for liberalizing the rules concerning organization officers so that more students can take a leading part in extracurricular activities.

. . . the choir for the splendid performance they gave in conjunction with the Harvard orchestra,

. . . whoever is responsible for the regulations concerning late hours on the lawn.

Brickbats are in order for . . .

. . . the students who persist in talking, running about, or pulling out their chairs while the blessing is being asked at meal time. A little reverence never hurt anyone.

. . . the students who read or talk to their neighbors in assembly. The speaker is there for your benefit, not his health; plain, unadulterated politeness demands your attention.

. . . . the students who show so little consideration of others as to indulge in horseplay in the library. And that also goes for those who seem to think that whispers belong only in a sickroom.

. . . the dead rat in Cunningham Hall. Why hasn't it been removed?

. . . the professors who demand and take time not legally theirs. We want out on time!

300,000 Killed . . .

Three hundred thousand young people all under the age of 25 were killed or maimed in an automobile accident last night. Pretty shocking isn't it? but of course it isn't true—it didn't all happen last night.

This figure, of 300,000 automobile casualties, has been estimated as the annual average injury toll to those under 25 years of age. Have you helped to add to it? Perhaps not—maybe you've been lucky so far, but with an average like that staring you in the face your luck may give out any day now.

From recent reports of highway accidents in the local newspapers, it would seem that a sign of maturity is the adept and sensible operation of a car. Although it can't be denied that the majority of accidents involve adult drivers, and the cause of these accidents range from drunkenness to carelessness, they are rarely caused by sheer recklessness—a factor that is at the bottom of most teen-age casualties.

Now that the holidays are approaching, the authorities have already estimated the expected casualties and fatalities, 31% of which they expect to happen to the under-25 age group. Why not take a little extra time and thought this Easter and show them how wrong they can be?

by jacky eagle

The bird population has had a busy time of it this week, what with molting new feathers in time for Easter, getting beaks counted in the U. S. census, one thing and another. Members of our favorite Club at Longwood are clearing off their desks, getting credentials together in preparation for the take-off tomorrow.

With the "saucers" flying thick and fast it isn't safe to take a very long bird's eye view. Latest reports dub the saucers as secret military weapons, but the Army and Navy haven't backed up these tales.

For safety purposes a quick glance must suffice these days. That's all that's necessary though to see that in the midst of all the squawking and flying feathers in Washington something constructive is being done. It's comforting to note that Republicans are succeeding in their efforts to bi-partisanize the State Department, even if they are using potentially suicidal tactics to do the job. Such sane G. O. P.'s as Vandenberg and Lodge are doing their best to preserve the opposition's dignity in Congress, but it will take a lot more to rise above the quacking of Wild Goose McCarthy.

Some bewildered birds around here have been wondering how Congress finishes debating and passing one budget bill in time to start again on the next year's. The latest bone of contention in the House's budget battle is the amount to be allotted to the arms race. Defense chiefs and President Eisenhower of Columbia U. have been vigorous in their pleas for greater arms allotments.

Across the pond Chancellor Adenauer of West Germany is going on record in favor of a European parliament including Germany as a full-pledged member. This, coupled with U. S. military reinforcements in Germany, he cites as an immediate necessity against Russian aggression.

Stecking My Neck Out

by Joanne Steck

Well, it seems like the Easter Bunny came a little too early for the girls on Annex. They weren't prepared for their present (speaking of the gentleman). Seriously though, Easter spirits are beginning to show. This place looks like a section right off 5th Avenue We have been furnished a good excuse to lose weight for those Easter "costumes" with all this extra walking we have to do, because of the new building going up. It's worth it though to look out on one side and see the new auditorium—music building and the new dormitory on the other. Watch out, Sweetbriar, we're catching up with you!

By the way, our suntans are getting splotched from the shadows of the workmen up on the roof. That roof seems to leak at the same time every day!

The Longwood "ladies" seem to be ve-r-ry popular with the men these days. All these frat pins and diamonds flying around are enough to make one dizzy.

Think the frosh deserve a pat on the back for production, don't you? Maybe it will help make up for all their monkey-shines at the first of the year.

Wonder how the girls are fixed for dates since the U. Va. boys came here Sunday "en masse." Mary Washington will have to keep on their toes with Longwood moving in.

Well, I hope you all can get rides home for Easter. It sho' would help the purse, but things just aren't cooperating, just right. Good luck! See you after Easter!

Campus Cogitations

Question: What do you think about the proposal to annex Alaska and Hawii?

Clara Ruth Cullip: I think they should be made states.

Barbara Garner: Frankly, I just don't know.

Dot Burnett: I think they should be made states, but I don't know why.

Annie Lee Owen: I just can't think.

"Termite" Tyler: Too far away, one is too cold and the other is too hot.

Betty Baker: (with a shrug) I think it would be just grand.

Dot Reed: I don't like it, too many states now.

Jean Jinnett: The more the merrier.

Barbara Taylor: At least it will keep the number of states in the flag even if they add them both.

Betty Barnes: I think it is nice as long as they don't send a certain cadet over there.

Dot Cassade: I don't know what to say.

June Rose Morgan: I thought they were states.

Gladys Savage: I don't have time to bother with them.

Peggy Wilson: More power to them.

Dot Gregory: It won't work 'cause Betsy Ross isnt alive to remodel the flag.

Ann Lamb: I haven't run for State Senator and therefore I haven't given it a thought.

Frances Creger: I have studied it in geography class and we definitely proved it to be unfavorable.

Martha Kitchen: I've studied it in geography—both pro and con —but I think the added expense which will be created by their addition will be merited.

Helen Holbrook: The annexation of Alaska and Hawaii as states will be advantageous both to the U.S. and to the territories.

Edith Duma: Annex them! I have friends in Alaska.

Jackie Eagle: I think it would be a good thing, because it would provide additional employment for people in flag factories—need a job?

Ann Langbein: I think that their being states would be of great benefit to both Alaska and Hawaii themselves, and undoubtedly to the United States.

CCNY ESTABLISHES THE FIRST "GRAND SLAM"

CCNY tore into the nation's basketball records last week when they edged Bradley, the nation's top ranking team, for the second straight time in the post season tournament finals to cop top place in both the NIT and NCAA. In doing so the Beavers were the first team in history to accomplish the feat of winning the two national classics in one season. The title is particularly sensational for CCNY because until the post season tournament began the Beavers were unranked and almost unnoticed.

When the tournament began, the blazing sophomores from CCNY knocked down practically every top ranking team in the country save none. The CCNY sophomores have completed the impossible—their future seems not the least bit dismal. Can they repeat the feat next year? The odds say no— the grind is too tough. But there is one thing sure, and that is that the odds could not be any greater than they were this year.

CONTROVERSIAL 2 MINUTE RULE IS ELIMINATED

The National Basketball Committee, the final power on the rules of the amateur game, officially eliminated the controversial two-minute rule last week. At the same time, the committee will reemphaize the present regulation on intentional fouls. The law calls for an additional free throw to be awarded if the foul was intentional or avoidable. It was written to cut down excessive fouling in the late stages of the game but was rarely called. Because of its failure, the two-minute rule was passed last season.

The two minute rule proved distasteful to a majority of those concerned with the game, primarily because it virtually wiped out the chance for a team to come from behind in the final 120 seconds. Under the two-minute rule, a team fouled in the last two minutes got the free throw and then was given possession of the ball also.

Marion Becknor will take over the post of class basketball manager, with Sue Webb assisting. Shirley Livesey will manage varsity basketball and Helen Egerton and Peggy Harris will act as class volleyball managers.

Jean Ridenour has been appointed swimming manager with Ann Crowder assisting her. Charlotte Williams will take over the golf management and Liz Leslie will manage the softball teams.

Betty Abbitt and Betty Tyler will be in charge of recreation for the coming year, and Bunny Ricks and Bert Browning will handle the publicity for the council.

Sportin' Around

by Ann Lynch

Spring has finally sprung and we're ready to go to the outdoor sports. The last volleyball set, between the juniors and seniors, gave honors to the class of 1950—they won!

The juniors started off with flying colors, taking the first game from the seniors 11-9. The seniors started the long pull to victory in the second game—walking away with a score of 26-3 in their favor. The third and last game went to the seniors for their 16 points to the 14 chalked up by the juniors.

Softball, archery, and tennis doubles remain to be added to the Color Cup scores. And here we go preaching practice again—be sure to get your practices in—you can't play for your class without the required number and how can they win without you?

It's still a race for the Cup—both sides need lots of cooperation. But if you just aren't the athletic type—you can at least get out there and YELL come game-time.

Students Present Problem; Fun, Fail or Study, Succeed

Whether on the Dean's list or failing, the "students" of Longwood College have a problem to battle against. If they are failing, the teachers all urge that they spend more time preparing their lessons, with a minimum of two hours for each class period. Perhaps the pupils should give the faculty a rotunda party and let them observe the pictures in the Dome showing how to divide one's time. This might at least solve the assignment issue.

When the depressed failures have settled down to a schedule of continuous study and have managed to stay up the larger part of the night before tests and have begun to show those familiar (?) signs of lack or sleep, a few erudite brains slip into their dens and advise them not to study too much. After all, they had only reviewed ten minutes for their test, and didn't they make A's!

Equally depressing is the situation of the Dean's List students. When the news reaches every person on campus of these students' exact averages, a number of well wishers collect and warn against studying too much for it seems that everyone who does attain this average works his little brain off to keep it. Then there are solicitious friends with their casual remarks or taunts about the Dean's List. They seem so surprised when they discover books, hair brushes, and teddy bears being hurled at them.

With a voice of experience after close observation of hundreds of cases, give this one word of advice: Be sure to make your C average. We've seen innocent young women, tears in their eyes, bid farewell to Longwood College forever; when just a few more points could have saved them from this fate. Then we've seen girls who had no cuts, reach the depths of despair because they couldn't quite make it up to Virginia Tech.

The crucial question—Is being a Longwood student worth all this?—losing one's sight, growing prematurely gray turning into a complete intellectual? The answer—Yes, yes, a million times yes!

Stoops Announces Date, Rules For New 'Goats'

"Goating", Cotillion Club initiation, will be held Tuesday April 25, and Wednesday April 26 from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m., Carol Stoops, head of goating has announced. Eighty-eight new goats will be initiated by the Club at this time.

Goat court will be held Wednesday night from 10 to 11 p. m. in the small auditorium. All goats present must be dressed in green and yellow.

Cotillion "goats" include members who have been taken into the Club this year. New members are bid in the fall from old students and in the winter from freshmen and transfer students. The membership of the Club limited to 250 girls.

Cotillion members have compiled the following rules which will be imposed on all goats on the days of initiation.

1. Goats must address Cotillion Club members as "Miss" and must know the last name of all members.

2. Goats must attend all meals in the dining hall and must not go to the Post Office until 3 p. m.

3. Goats must convene in front of the library before and after lunch.

Goats must carry cigarettes, matches, chewing gum and peanuts for old members. They must carry their books in a green or yellow towel.

5. Goats must have appointments clearly written out. Appointments may be as often as 15 minutes apart. Goats must be on time for these appointments.

6 Goats must do a May Day curtsey (low and long) when they pass Joan of Arc.

7. Goats must wear a sign on their backs with their name, and home town printed on it and a picture of a goat.

The first day of "goating" is to be a Music Festival for the first grade and all goats will dress accordingly. All conversation must be sung to the tune of "Rudolph the Red Nosed Reindeer". Goats must carry a comb and tissue paper and blow this melody at all times when not in class or talking to a Cotillion Club member.

To Be Observed the Second Day

Goats must impersonate in dress and manner their favorite campus character or a character from the funny papers. They will have an eight line verse telling who they are. They must wear a large yellow and green crepe paper bow on top of their head or whatever headdress they may be wearing. They must also wear a sign in front telling who they are supposed to represent and continue to wear their sign telling their name, address, etc. on back.

All goats must meet from 5:00-5:30 p. m. on the Athletic field on this day, and be prompt. Goats must wear green and yellow stockings (not socks).

Men To Present Production In May

"How to be an Educated Fool" or "So You Want Some Culture," a production in two acts will be presented to the student body by the Men's Athletic Association, Friday, May 12.

The production, which will be a satire on education, was written and will be directed by Hunter Joe Benedict. Bill Beamer will serve as dance director for the production, and Ed Parks will be in charge of costuming, and Page and Anne Burnette will give piano accompaniment for the comedy.

Shep Elmore, Dick Bobb, Jim Clark and several other men students will be featured in the production. "A laugh a minute is not guaranteed, but there'll be some minutes when you'll have lots more than one laugh," Hunter Joe said in a recent interview. He added, "The theme is explained in the titles; we'll let you find out how on May 12."

Notice

There will be an important meeting of the entire Rotunda staff, in the publications office immediately following prayers tonight. Both editorial and business staff members are urged o be present and on time.

Kennon Places Gilman As As'st. Fire Chief

Jean Gilman, senior from Quantico, will serve as assistant fire chief next year according to an announcement made by Edith Kennon recently appointed fire chief.

Emma Mae Pittard, Dolores Hoback, and Helen Castros will serve as head fire wardens of the senior, junior, and sophomore classes respectively next year.

Hall fire wardens will not be selected until next year, Edith announced. At that time the freshman head fire warden will also be appointed.

Students Bask In Sun Rays, Consuming Food By Tons

Old Man Sol has been honoring Longwood and vicinity with his presence lately and consequently the girls here and maybe a few boys elsewhere are taking advantage of it. The roof over the dining hall looks like Virginia Beach in July. Coke bottles line the wall, interspaced here and there with bottles of baby oil and various other lotions.

Anytime you glance out a window and see thinly clad feminine pulchritude climbing the fire escape, arms laden with blankets and pillows, you needn't be surprised. They're going to take a little sunbath.

Food in huge quantities is consumed by these girls. This is contrary to most beliefs for most people say that when you work you consume a lot of energy and therefore need more food. Since when did lying on a roof baking your brains and body become hard work? Something new must have been added since the last time I took a sunbath in 1900.

After they have stayed out a few minutes or hours, they begin to get warm and their skin turns a little pink, just enough to make them look as though they are eternally blushing and they decide to come inside like good little girls. Of course in a few hours from that time the light pink is a deep brick red, but think how beautiful they will be in a few days, if it doesn't peel and we sure hope it won't.

Suntan is all right, in fact, it is an added factor to summer beauty, but before going all out for it you should know a few things about it. For instance, you should know the results of staying out too long (you probably do already), you should know the advantage of different positions in the sun to prevent that half baked look—Now that you know it all, good luck.

'Y' Will Hold Fund Drive For JICU

Similar Campaign To Be Conducted On H-S Campus

A campaign for the Japan International Christian University fund will open on the Longwood campus April 23 and run until April 30. The campus campaign will be sponsored by the YWCA.

Simultaneously, a like campaign will be conducted on the Hampden-Sydney campus. Local church groups have also offered their help in the campaign.

Virginia Spencer, president of the Longwood YWCA, when announcing plans for the campaign stated that boxes for contributions will be placed in the corridors of Ruffner Hall and also in the dormitories.

Vote for Peace

According to Virginia, each contribution of one dollar or more will be counted as a vote for peace and good-will and the contributor's name will be placed on a roster. The roster from Longwood College, together with those from all over North America, will be presented to the youth of Japan.

"Any contribution, large or small, will be greatly appreciated," said Virginia. "Don't feel that because you can't give as much as a dollar that you should not contribute at all."

The fund is to be used to establish in Japan a non-sectarian international university which will provide training under Christian leadership for qualified Japanese youth.

Organizations Elect Major Officers For Coming Session

ACE

Betty Jane Spencer, junior from Lynchburg, was elected president of the Association of Childhood Education at a recent meeting held in the Y' lounge.

Lillie Lankford, junior from Jarret, was chosen to serve as vice-president for the group, and Helen Smith, junior from Amherst will act as secretary for the coming year. Mary B. Smith, junior from Franklin, will take over the post of treasurer for the association.

Monogram Club

Marian Higgs, junior from Toano, was elected president of the Monogram Club Monday night.

Also elected at the same meeting was Patty Walker who will serve as secretary-treasurer of the club for next year.

Sororities

Three of the social sororities on campus have recently completed their election of officers for next year.

Georgia Bailey was elected president of Theta Sigma Upsilon. Serving under her as vice-president for next year will be June Foreman. Branchey Fris'oe was elected secretary, Max Acree treasurer, and Eleanor Weddle recording secretary. Lillian Shelton was elected as the Pan-Hellenic representative for the group.

Alpha Sigma Tau elected Emma Mae Pittard to the office of president with Betty Jane Spencer as vice-president. Anne Biddlecome was elected secretary and Jerry Newman treasurer. Sally Brickman was elected as Pan-Hellenic representative.

'Virginians' To Set Musical Style For Annual May Day Festivities; Figure To Feature Queen, Court

May Day Prevue To Be Broadcast

Voice of Longwood To Feature Music

A forecast of the 1950 May Day festival, "Waltz Ballad", will be broadcast on the Voice of Longwood program over WFLO at 4:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, faculty advisor to the May Day pageant will be the commentator on the program. Sara McElroy will be featured as singer and yodler and Billie Dunlap and Page Burnette will accompany on the piano.

"'Waltz Ballad' is the story of a dance which conquers the world without sanction of powers that be," said Mrs. Landrum of the 1950 theme. "Its form of arm entwining, hand interlocking and periodic whirling has been built by countless numbers of peoples of diverse nationalities from all walks of life."

Traces History

The pageant will trace the history of the waltz through eight periods of episodes. Beginning with the Landler as it was danced by the peasants of both Austria and Southern Germany a generation or two before the world was ready for the birth of the waltz proper, Mrs. Landrum will relate over the Voice of Longwood the story that the May Day festival will tell.

The Allemande ,the sentimental court form of the waltz, will be followed by the typically Viennese waltzes of the Blue Danube or the Strauss period. The Invitation to Dance or the Weber period will be the third of the waltz episodes.

The Varsovienne, peculiar to the Scandinavian countries, has been divided into several dances, two of which are the Little Four and the To Ting. The American waltz period will depict the modern forms of the waltz.

Sophomores Will Sell Home-made Sweets At Auction April 21

A sophomore auction will be held in the College rec', April 21, from 7 to 8 p. m. Jackie Jardine, chairman of the auction, has announced that home-made cookies, cakes, candy, and pies will be sold.

Maria Jackson will serve as auctioneer. Committee chairmen for the sale have been announced. Betty Scott Borkey will have the ticket committee, while Mary Moore Karr will have charge of the publicity. Price chairman will be May Henry Sadler, and Jean Ridenour will serve as head of the clothes department. Dolores Hoback will be in charge of food.

According to Jackie, only holders of tickets may attend the auction. These tickets may be obtained from almost any sophomore at the price of ten cents each or three for twenty-five cents. Tickets entitle holders to door prizes. Prizes include a full dinner in the Tea Room, a full breakfast in the Tea Room, and a large, home-made cake. Prize ticket holders may obtain their reward up to one week after the auction, and do not have to be present to win.

Entertainment will be provided by Maria Jackson with the assistance of committee members.

Pres. Appears At Various State Meets

President Dabney S. Lancaster will attend a meeting of the Sweetbriar board of Overseers at Sweetbriar College tomorrow. Dr. Lancaster was present today at the first formal meeting of the newly established board of Southern Churchmen in Richmond.

Attends Inauguration

Last Friday, Dr. Lancaster attended the inauguration of Dr. H. Sherman Oberly as president of Roanoke College at Salem. Dr. George Jeffers also attended the inauguration.

On Saturday, Dr. Lancaster was present at a meeting of the board of Episcopal High School in Alexandria. The purpose of the meeting was to appoint a head master for the high school.

At Charlottesville Meeting

In Charlottesville, Monday, Dr. Lancaster was among a group of presidents and deans of Virginia colleges who met to discuss the possibilities of developing a State-wide program of graduate work in education.

Yesterday, Dr. Lancaster attended a meeting of the executive board of the Southern Virginia Diocese in Norfolk.

Carlton Provides Music For Cotillion

Russ Carlton's orchestra from Danville, provided the music for the April Showers dance sponsored by the Cotillion Club Saturday night.

Russ Carlton was contracted for the dance following an announcement last week from Hal McIntyre. Mr. McIntyre, who had previously announced his intentions of playing for the dance, was unable to keep his engagement here.

Dance Success

"The dance was a huge success," Robbie Cromar, president of the Cotillion Club, stated. Robbie added, "attendance was well above average, and everyone present seemed to thoroughly enjoy the affair."

Helen Hardin with David Luck, and Robbie Cromar with Eugene Riley led the figure which formed a parasol on the dance floor.

Chesterifeld To Hold Telephone Quiz Here

A telephone quiz sponsored by the Chesterfield Company will be conducted on the Longwood campus, Betty Ferguson, representative for the company has announced.

Calls will be placed to all the dormitories at various times. Persons answering the phone call with the letters "ABC" will receive a pack of Chesterfields. whoever has answered the call will then be asked a question pertaining to the history of Longwood. A correct answer will gain the contestant a carton of Chesterfields.

Dance Chairmen Announces Heads Of Committees

The "Virginians" from Emporia will set the musical style of the 1950 May Day dance according to Mary Jane Stansbury, music chairmen of the annual dance. The dance which will be culminating event of the May Day festivities May 6 will feature a figure by the queen and her court.

Co-chairmen of the dance, Jeanne Farmer and Kitty Carmichael have recently announced the committee heads for the dance. Betty McCree is chairman of the decorations and Marian Higgs is in charge of tickets. Marian Beckner and Jean Ridenour are in charge of publicity. Katie Bondurant is chairman of the floor committee; and Shirley Fahrback is in charge of the clean-up committee.

Pete Weaver's "Virginians" who have been contracted to play for the dance provided the music for the junior dance given earlier this year. "Everyone enjoyed their music so much then that I'm sure the entire student body will be glad to welcome the 'Virginians' back to the campus," said Mary Jane.

Tickets for the dance will be priced at $2.40 drag and $1.50 stag. First choice of tickets will be given to those in the May Day pageant before the sale of tickets is opened to the student body.

Pageant at 3 p. m.

The May Day pageant which has as its theme this year "Waltz Ballad" will be presented in the amphitheater at the Longwood Estate Saturday, May 6 at 3 p. m.

Dolores Duncan and Barbara Sours as queen and maid-of-honor, respectively, will reign over the festivities.

"'Waltz Ballad' is the story of a dance which conquered the world," said Hilda Edwards, chairman of the 1950 May Day. A forecast of the May Day pageant will be presented on the Voice of Longwood over WFLO tomorrow at 4:30 p. m.

National Fraternity Accepts Petition Of Journalism Club

The College Journalism Club has had its petition accepted by Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary journalism fraternity, and plans are now being made for the installation of the Longwood Chapter.

The announcement of the petition's acceptance was made at the last meeting of the Journalism Club by the president, Jackie Eagle. Tentative dates for the chapter installation and the initiation of the chapter members were set by the club.

The Journalism Club was established last year by a group of students representing the three major publications on campus, the Colonnade, the Virginian, and the Rotunda. The thirteen members of the original group will be initiated as charter members at the chapter installation to be held sometime in May.

This spring the Journalism Club issued membership bids to 16 members of the publications' staffs all of who will now be eligible for membership in Pi Delta Epsilon.

We Want Out . . .

Every Longwood student heartily throws bouquets of orchids to the administration and to all those responsible for building White House replacement. The College needs the building; it will be beneficial to have new, more modern office and dormitory facilities, and the students are willing to undergo some inconveniences for the rest of the term to gain these facilities. BUT when those inconveniences interfere with leaving or entering the Student and Annex buildings almost every night, it seems that it is too much.

Admitted, the sophomores seem hindered most, because they can leave Annex only by the Student Lounge door and the lounge is often being used for a meeting, tea, or some other gathering. Surely there are other rooms, such as the small auditorium and the 'Y' lounge, which could be used by these groups. Freshmen and upperclassmen are also inconvenienced in that piano students, publication workers, and girls going to class meetings are met with the embarrassing situation of interrupting a meeting.

This does not occur every night, but even so, when students are granted only one entrance and one exit to the sophomore dorms, they should have access to that door at all times. The students request that the situation be remedied if at all possible.

Broke . . .

A drive to obtain donations to the Japanese International Christian University Fund will be conducted on this campus next week. The aim of those sponsoring the drive is to have each student donate one dollar to the fund. To date, this is the sixth organized drive for funds held on the campus this year.

During this school session students have been asked to contribute anywhere from 25c to $1 to such causes as the Red Cross Drive, the Student Government Drive, the World Student Service Fund, The Jarman Organ Fund, and the March of Dimes. All of us will readily agree that each one of these causes is worthy of our fullest cooperation, and yet every drive that has been conducted on campus this year has fallen short of its goal.

To students, the majority of whom must stick to a pretty strict budget to stretch their allowances over an allotted period, the answer is obvious. They cannot be accused of lack of interest in these drives—only of lack of funds. However, the demands such drives make on a student pocketbook are not so strenuous that they cannot afford to make some contribution to them all.

Often a campus drive is begun with little advance notice and at a disadvantageous time, and a student finds that although he would like to donate to the fund, he has spent this month's allowance on movies or a previous week end trip and there isn't anything left to contribute.

We feel that a solution to this problem would be the formation of a Campus Chest, at a specified time during the school year, each student would be asked to contribute a set sum—sufficient to cover contributions to whatever drives may occur during the year. In this manner, the student could have an idea of how much he will be expected to put toward contributions during the year, and could plan in advance and set aside this sum. With careful management the Chest would then be enabled to divide contributions among the many annual funds resulting in a substantial student donation to every campus drive.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 19, 1950

Bad Deal . . .

"The Cotillion Club dance was a huge success." So remarked the president of Cotillion Club in connection with the dance presented last Saturday night in the Longwood gymnasium. It is with pleasure that one reads that statement for the majority of the student body felt that they had been done an injustice concerning the dance.

Hal McIntyre, who had previously announced his intentions of playing for the dance, telegraphed the club exactly eleven days before dance time to announce that he could not be here. In spite of the fact that Mr. McIntyre had sent word to the club that April 15 was an open date on his calendar and had sent to the club a contract to be signed by them and returned to him for his signature, he did not play for the dance.

The fact that Mr. McIntyre had not returned the contract and therefore is guilty of no illegal acts does not endear him to the hearts of the Longwood students. They feel that while his actions may not have been illegal they were most certainly unethical.

But the Cotillion Club itself is not entirely without blame. They announced on February 22 that Hal McIntyre would play for the dance. Long before April 5 they should have demanded that the contract be returned to them or have made provisions for another orchestra. Without the signed contract in their hands they had no assurance that Mr. McIntyre would be on hand for their dance. This they discovered the hard way. They were extremely lucky in securing Russ Carlton's orchestra at that late date.

The Rotunda would like to suggest that other organizations make their dance arrangements far enough in advance that no announcement of the orchestra is made until a signed contract is received from said orchestra. It seems that a bandsman's word is not good enough.

BIRD'S EYE VIEW

by jacky eagle

While baby birds are busy breaking out of shells and mamma birds are out scratching for worms, members of the red flock across the sea are sharpening claws and polishing their spurs in indignation over the U. S. plane incident, in addition to other injuries, real or imagined. Evidence to back up Russian claims that an American bomber last week fired on Russian fighters over Latvia is slim. The State Department is scratching furiously, trying to dig out the facts of the case, but until something turns up on the American patrol plane which disappeared in the Baltic area at the time of the alleged bomber firing, it will be hard to get a straight story on the affair.

With the red birds getting their feathers so easily ruffled and actually fabricating excuses to fly up at the U. S., the smallest slip can start the feathers flying again in the dreaded Third World War. High low in the hierarchy of the Longwood Club were heard last Thursday, (weekly "telling" day telling what they thought of their red friends. In a bitter denouncement of Communist elements of the International Bird Club, they stated that if the safety of millions of innocent birds wouldn't be endangered, they would purge the reds, right out of the Club. (This, of course, doesn't include Virginia cardinals who are most regretful about the color of their coat.)

Our crimson antagonists are doubtless delighted that such influential figures of J. F. Dulles, newly appointed special consultant (Republication) to Acheson, and Trygve Lie, secretary-general of the U. N., have come out in favor of recognizing Communist China in the United Nations Organization. Although this would give Russia another advantage of recontrol of the world orgnaziation, it indeed seems the only realistic thing to do.

Stecking My Neck Out

by Joanne Steck

Judging from all corsages this week end that old saying seems to be true, after all. You know that one about—"In the spring the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of—women" (the other woman, that is.

Boy! Having a man on the roof really brings fast results around here—a lock. Now for the windows!

It seems the laundramat is really getting a lot of business from the Longwood ladies this week what with all the "pie" beds. Don't you all be surprised if your sheets come back from the laundry with a slight odor—its only perfume.

I'm afraid somebody's gonna get a concussion or something if they don't stop hanging by their heels or what have you, from the Rotunda railing when the dance week ends make their appearance. 'Tis a matter of great importance.

A suggestion has been made that a snack-bar be opened on the roof. One could sho rake in a lotta dough. A fortune could likewise be made on the deposits from the coke bottles up there.

Just think, only six more weeks before school is out and all will travel homeward for a nice summer of good clean fun and fellowship—providing you don't crack up during exams first!

To Tan Or Not To Tan

Campus Cogitations

Question: Would you like to see Longwood have a College orchestra? If so, what instrument would you like to play?

Nancy Lawrence: Yes, I'd like to play a violin.

Sarah McElroy: Certainly! I'd like to play the drums.

Frances Creger: Very much so. Every college needs an orchestra. It's a little late for us juniors to think about taking part unless we already know the instrument.

Kitty Carmichael: It's about time.

Alma Scott: Yes. Cymbals, 'cause they make a lot of noise.

Billie Dunlap: Yes, man! Piano, it's the only thing I know.

Bobbie Dodd: Yes, but I just want to sit and listen.

Margaret Thomas: Okay by me, just so I don't have to play an instrument.

Mary Crawford: Yes, so we can go on a tour to Harvard. I want to play an oboe.

Anne Foreman: Yes, I'd like to see it very much.

Virginia Spencer: It would be very helpful culturally. It's too late for juniors to take part.

Nellie Hart: Yes, I'd like to learn to play the violin.

Mary Lou Woodward: I don't think we are quite big enough. It would be somethin' new anyway.

Betsy Wiley: Yes, we need some kind of outside entertainment.

Polly Brothers: Yes for the first time, no for the second.

Andrea Adams: I definitely would. I think it would put Longwood on a level with other larger colleges. It would interest more music majors.

Peggy Bryant: Yes, piano is fine.

Shirley Simmons: Yes, definitely. I think it would help the College spirit.

Billie Marie Wood: Yes, I've always wanted to play a clarinet.

Nancey West: Yes, I'd like to see a College orchestra, hear one too.

260,000 FANS WITNESS MAJOR LEAGUE OPENING TILTS

The 1950 major league baseball season is underway with an estimated 260,000 fans, including President Harry S. Truman, out to witness the bottle breaking events in eight cities. The National League starts its 75th season and the American its 50th. The American League may reach a new over-all attendance peak this year bettering the 1948 record total of over 20,000,000.

BOSTON RED SOX AND BROOKLYN DODGERS ARE FAVORITES

Everything seems to point to two more hotly contested pennant races that should thrill the fans right on down to the last day. So conditioned has the baseball public become in recent years to hair-raising finishes that it more or less expects to sweat through a couple more next fall. Rare indeed is the expert who picks the winner of either league with any degree of confidence.

Still fresh in memory are the feverish closing hours of last year's struggles, in which the Brooklyn Dodgers, of the National League, and the New York Yankees of the American, clawed their way past the St. Louis Cardinals and the Boston Red Sox into a World Series that was almost anticlamactic.

Joe McCarthy's Red Sox, who have missed by such thin margins the past two years, have been established favorites in the American, followed by the Defending Champion Yankees, Detroit, and Cleveland. In the National League, Brooklyn looks like the nearest thing to a standout in either league, reflecting respect for the Dodgers hitting, pitching, and deep replacements from their farm system if needed. The St. Louis Cards, Boston, Philadelphia, and New York are expected to follow in order.

DEMARET TAKES NORTH FULTON OPEN BUT McCOY IS HERO

Jimmy Demaret made it two in a row Monday when, after taking the Augusta Masters Crown, he wrapped up the $10,000 North Fulton Open golf title with a five-under-par 66, and a 270 tournament total. He broke the field record the day before with a course record of 64, which all but spelled "No first" for fast climbing Sammy Snead, the PGA champion who finished 2nd, four strokes behind, tied with Jim Ferrier.

While the professional stars were fighting it out at the top, closely behind them was Robert McCoy, of Atlanta, who led the amateurs and many of the professionals to card a 284. McCoy's performance, although only five strokes behind the leader at one time, did not rate an over-all sensational description. However, he captured the hearts of all concerned and walked off with highest honor of all—heroism. McCoy rode a motor scooter about the rugged course and edged out favored Frank Stranaham, of Toledo. He has lukemia. Loser? Only in score.

Allen Announces May 15 Deadline On Swimming Test

The beginner's swimming test required of all students before graduation, must be taken before May 15, Clem Allen, swimming instructor, has announced. All juniors and seniors who have not yet passed the test must take it before this time.

Any student who has taken, and passed, any of the swimming classes offered by the College is automatically exempt from the test, but all others must pass the test before they can receive a degree, unless excused by the College Physician.

The pool will be open for practice or for those wishing to take their test on Mondays and Wednesdays from 4 to 6 p. m.

"Seniors who do not pass their swimming test by May 15 will be seen on the Longwood campus again next year," said Clem concerning the tests.

WHO'S

—IN THE—

Senior Spotlight?

Tardiness to class seems to be everybody's trick, at least this week. The young lady in question now also claims to have a special knack for being tardy to her classes. Her looks must get her out of such little scrapes though. She's a tall, willowy brunette with blue eyes and freckles. And then again, maybe she commands disregard for tardiness with what she calls her "foghorn" voice.

The senior on whom the spotlight is shining this week is a sociology major who is now teaching sixth, seventh, and eighth grades at the high school. This senior's special interest lies in the University of Pennsylvania.

What more need I say after I've said that this young lass has slaved her senior year away working at the post of president of Student Government. She is also a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary leadership fraternity; Cotillion Club; and Sigma Sigma Sigma, social sorority. This senior was selected as one of the college members of Who's Who for the past year. Can you guess? If not, tune in next week and learn the identity of our "Miss of Mystery."

There seems to be one brown-haired, green eyed senior who likes her senior teaching so well she forgets to be present to receive her Alpha Kappa Gamma honor. This young lady who wears "Specks" and majors in math, is going to teach that subject in high school.

Everyone has a special interest and this college "gal" is no exception. When she's not thinkin' of triangles, circles, and quadra ic equations, her mind is at N. B. C. in Roanoke with someone named Jimmy.

An active member of many organizations, this senior now serves as president of Student Standards committee. She is also a member of Zeta Tau Alpha Social sorority, Cotillion Club, Beorc h Thorne, English honorary soc-ty, and Future Teachers of merica.

Will guessing? In that case, re's another clue. You can't iss when you find out that this Miss has to go through Tennessee to get to the "Gap" in Virginia that she calls home. Oh yes, she aid to tell you that she's always tardy to class.

LC Elects Ferguson Miss Fashion Plate In Revelon Contest

Betty Ferguson, senior from Prospect, has been voted "Miss Fashion-Plate of 1950" by the students at Longwood College. The contest which began March 22, and ended April 15, was sponsored by the Revlon Products Corporation.

Betty will be presented with a year's supply of Revlon's cosmetics and will enter a national competition with candidates selected by colleges and universities throughout the country.

Colonnade 2nd Place In CSPA Competition

Gains 100 Points Over Last Rating

The Colonnade received a second place rating in the annual Columbia Scholastic Press Association contest for College magazines. The issues receiving the award were those published during the fall semester under the editorship of Ann Langbien.

The magazine received a total of 833 points for make-up, content, and advertising out of a possible 1,000 points to place in the second high group.

Content Good

Out of a possible 490 points for general content the Colonnade was awarded 416 points. In this field essays, fiction, verse and features were considered. Editorials, humor, naturalness, English standards, and student interest were also considered in judging this phase of the magazine. The judges noted that "Much excellent prose and verse" were included in the fall Colonnade issues.

In the advertising field, the Colonnade received 48 out of 50 points. Layout, advertising directed toward student interest, and use of complimentary ads were considered in awarding points in this field.

Cover Improved

In judging the make-up of the magazine, the CSPA awarded the Colonnade 273 points out of a possible 345 points. The judges considered cover design, title page make-up in this field. Art and type used was also judged. "There has been a big improvement in cover design" the judges commented.

The Colonnade was given a third place rating in the last CSPA contest, in view of this the judges offered their congratulations to the editor on the improvement of the magazine and added "An increase of over 100 points since the last rating is unusual."

JICU Fund Drive To Continue Here Through April 30

YWCA Sponsors Campus Campaign

A campaign to raise funds to help build a Japanese International Christian University began on this campus last Sunday and will continue through this next Sunday, April 30.

This campaign has been held throughout the country in church groups, women's organizations and in youth groups, in an effort to raise money for the University. The drive on this campus is being sponsored by the Y. W. C. A.

"The decision to attempt such an undertaking came as the result of a suggestion by Dr. John Allen MacLean, who felt that the Japanese should be repaid in some measure for the injustice done to them by the dropping of an atomic bomb there," Virginia Spencer, president of the Y said in a recent interview. She added, "This friendship fund will be used to help build the great International Christian University near Tokyo, Japan. Each contribution will be considered a "vote" for peace and good will on the part of its donor."

Boxes for contributions have been placed in the corridors of Ruffner Hall and each dormitory.

High School Band Will Give Program

The Farmville High School Band will present a musical program in the recreation hall tomorrow for the regular program.

The band, under the direction of Mr. Elmer H. Gish, will play a variety of numbers. Included in their repertoire will be a medley of Strauss waltzes and various numbers from the Merry Widow operetta by Franz Lettar. Several marches will also be among the numbers the 35-man band will render.

Waltzers Take to Outdoors As Date of Pageant Nears

Waltz gently over that dandelion, please, and don't drive too many of those gay, young blades of grass underground—yep, May Day practice has moved to the great outdoors — to the College Estate, to be exact.

Problems? Oh yes, multi-problems, but what's a problem or two between friends when there is a pageant as picturesque and as beautiful as "Waltz Ballad" to portray?

Loading the approximately 175 students participating in the pageant into one medium size truck to be carted to the Estate is only a minor difficulty. That can easily be solved by having a few (approximately 150, preferably) members of the cast don their hiking shoes and hit the trail. Of course the fact that they are most too tired to do much dancing after they arrive is beside the point. A couple more trips, and don't forget the return journey, and they'll be quite used to it—or dead.

But on with the story—the folk dances introduce the primitive form of the waltz and from there we go on to the most waltzing waltz of them all, the Blue Danube. The Allemande, the Viennese waltzes, the Weber dances, the Varsovienne all make up part of the "Waltz Ballad".

The Queen and her bevy of beauties will make their grand entrance to Tchaikowsky's Waltz of the Flowers. As the court forms a heart figure about her the queen will be crowned and will take her place as the reigning beauty of the 1950 May Day festival.

On hand to watch all the goings on on that sunny (we hope) day in May will be the remainder of the student body, their guests, the faculty, the administration, and many proud mamas and papas come to see dear daughter perform. Since it traditionally rains for all Longwood May Days, the wiser and more experienced onlookers will come prepared to ward off anything from a gentle shower to a full-sized hurricane. But, who

Committee Passes New Regulations On Elections

Lists Offices Which Require Academic Ave.

The Student Standards committee has passed new requirements for the student-held offices on campus. The new requirements will become effective next September and are to be printed in the 1950-51 Student Handbook. These requirements must be followed by every organization holding elections after next September.

The first of the five regulations passed by the Student Standards committee reads as follows: A student may hold office in a maximum of three organizations at any one time and may be the head of only one organization.

Limited Membership

The second regulation is: No student may be a member of more than eight organizations. Excluded from this rule are the automatic memberships in the Y.W.C.A., Athletic Association, Student Government Association, French Circle, and Spanish Circle. The latter two organizations meet as classes.

The third regulation reads: Organizations scheduling meetings only twice each year will be exempt from the rule pertaining to a limit on membership.

These first three regulations have not changed since last semester and appear in the present Student Handbook as written above.

Offices Effected

The fourth regulation which will appear in the 1950-51 Student Handbook for the first time, consists of the following statements: The following officers are subject to eligibility requirements:

Student Government Association
- President
- Vice President
- Secretary
- Treasurer
- Class Representatives

Y.W.C.A.
- President
- Vice President
- Chairman of the Prayers committee
- Chairman of the Service committee
- Chairman of the Membership committee

Calendar Committee Sets Meeting Time

At a recent meeting of the heads of all organizations, organizations were reminded that no meetings were to be held at any times except after lunch and at 10 p. m. This practice must be followed if conflicting meetings are to be avoided.

Copies of the activities calendar are available to all heads of student organizations. Miss Elizabeth Burger has requested that the chairman of the calendar be notified if the meeting time of any organization is not suitable for the coming year.

May Day Co-Chairmen Announce 'The Waltz' as Theme of Dance

Visiting Students Send Applications

119 Senior Guests Here This Session

Over 49 per cent of the high schools from which senior classmen were week end guests of the College this semester have had one or more of their seniors apply for admission and be accepted for the 1950-51 term at Longwood College.

One hundred and nineteen high school seniors, representing 51 high schools were guests of the College during this session. Fifty seven students representing 25 of these high schools have already been accepted by the College for next year.

All of the high school students who were guests of the College were entertained by a committee of the faculty appointed for that purpose. Mr. Raymond H. French was chairman of the committee. Working with him were Mrs. Ruth H. Coyner, Miss Gwen Cress, Miss Ruth Gleaves, Miss Fern Staggs, Mrs. Katherine W. Tabb, and Mrs. Mary W. Watkins.

Any additional prospective Longwood students who visit the College during the remainder of the session will be the guests of individual members of the student body. The College, however, will provide rooms and meals for these visitors at no expense to either the visitor or her hostess.

LC Organizations Choose Officers

Choir

Jean Carter Watkins an incoming senior, was elected president of the Choir at a meeting held Monday afternoon. Jeanne Powell was chosen to serve as vice-president for the Choir for the coming session.

Anne Moody was chosen by the Choir members to serve as secretary for the group and May Henry Sadler will be the new treasurer.

Pi Kappa Sigma

Mary Minta Crowder, junior from Blackstone, was elected president of Pi Kappa Sigma social sorority at a recent meeting. Helen Egerton was elected to the office of first vice-president and Mary Helen Cook will serve as second vice-president.

Peg Peery was elected treasurer of the group and Patty Walker was elected corresponding secretary with Nell Bradshaw as her assistant. Virginia Westbrook was elected recording secretary. Sue Brewbaker will serve as Pan-Hellenic council representative for the sorority.

Commercial Club

Betty Jones was installed as president of the Commercial Club at a meeting held April 20. Mary Crowder and Betty Lou Harman were installed as vice-president and secretary respectively at this meeting, and Jackie Moody and Max Acree were installed as treasurer and reporter respectively.

Following the installation the club passed a motion to hold its annual picnic on May 11 at the Longwood Estate.

Pi Gamma Mu

Edith Duvall was installed as president of Pi Gamma Mu, national social science fraternity, at a meeting held last week. Rena Mae Hayes and Frances Everett were installed as vice-president

College News Main Topic In Mass Meet

A Campus Committee has been appointed to protect the newly planted lawns on campus. Charlotte Williams will act as chairman of this committee, Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dean of Women, announced in a call meeting of the student body Monday night. Frances Creger, Nell Dalton, Helen Castros, Catherine McCready and Betty Jo Jennings will serve on this committee. Jimmy Thompson will represent the men on the committee.

Report on Trip

At this time, Miss Gleaves told of her "recruiting" trip in the southwest Virginia area. She enumerated the schools she and Miss Virginia Wall had visited on this trip and requested that students who had graduated from these schools come to see her the following day.

Miss Gleaves also announced the initiation of a College flower garden, sponsored by the Exterior committee. Flowers obtained from the garden will be used for decorative purposes in the lounges and the dining hall. Students were requested by Miss Gleaves to bring contributions from home such as seeds, bulbs or slips from blooming shrubs.

Burnette Installed

Ann Burnette, junior from Farmville, was installed at this meeting as representative to the Student Government Council for the town girls.

Helen Agnew, president of Student Government, restated the rule printed in the Handbook concerning off - campus picnics. The rule as written in the Handbook states "The time of off-campus picnics shall be at the discretion of the Dean of Women." Helen added.

Orchesis Sponsors Annual Festivities

"The Waltz" has been selected as the theme of the 1950 May Day dance to be given May 6 in the College gymnasium Jeanne Farmer and Kitty Carmichael, co-chairmen, of the dance have announced.

Decorations for the dance, annually sponsored by Orchesis, will feature waltzing figures. The sentementality of the waltz will be reflected in the liberal use of hearts in the decor.

Tickets on Sale

Tickets for the dance will be priced at $1.80 stag and $2.40 drag. First choice of tickets will be given to those in the May Day pageant. Tickets will be placed on sale to the entire student body the first of next week, Kitty and Jeanne have announced.

In the receiving line for the dance will be Hilda Edwards, president of Orchesis, Patsy Ritter, general chairman of May Day, Jeanne Farmer and Kitty Carmichael, co-chairmen of the dance, and Sue Walker, secretary-treasurer of Orchesis. Other members of the receiving line will be President and Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster, Dean and Mrs. William W. Savage, Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dean of Women, and Dr. and Mr. Merle Landrum. Mrs. Landrum is the faculty advisor to Orchesis and to May Day.

List Chaperones

Among the members of the College faculty and staff who have been asked to chaperone the dance are Dr. and Mr. Landrum, Mr. and Mrs. James M. Grainger, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel L. Graham, Miss Olive T. Iler, Miss Catherine Osborne, Dr. and Mrs. Marvin W. Schlegel, and Mr. Robert Vickers.

Others who have been asked to chaperone the dance are Miss Virginia Bedford, Mrs. Janice Lemen, Dr. and Mrs. Edgar M. Johnson, Dean and Mrs. Savage, Mrs. Katherine W. Tabb, Miss Gleaves, Mr.

Stoops Announces Officers For Alpha Chapter of SPBB

Sara Creger has been named president of the Longwood Bird Club for the 1950-51 session, in a recent meeting of the Alpha chapter of The Society for the Progression of the Brotherhood of Birds.

Carol "Bird" Stoops and Patsy "Bird Kimbrough, retiring president and vice-president respectively, have also announced additional new officers. Chic Ritchie has been named keeper of the Credentials and Bootie Poarch is the new publicity chairman.

Other Officers Chosen

Among the other new officers named at this time were Nancy Walthall, keeper of the bird seed; Mary Hunt Brame, Balfour representative; Audrey Pettit, nest cleaner; and Virginia Westbrook, chairman of the Bird Bath fund.

Peggy Harris will serve as membership chairmen, and Betsy Gravely will be bird call collector. Also selected as new officers were Betty Scott Borkey, bird bulletin board tender; Ann Harding, filing case keeper; Mary Jane Stansbury, keeper of songs; and Bobby Brown, music chairman.

Awards Given

"Although the Bird Club is predominately of Red and White patronage, some Green and Whites have made very worthwhile contributions to the club," Carol "Bird" Stoops said in a recent interview. She then listed several freshman who have received the Bird Club award of recognition. Among those receiving the award were Ann Murphy, Fanny Howell, Jane Lively, Mary Frances Joseph, Betty Abbitt, Lucy Page Hall, Judy Cox, Betsy Hankins and Donna Kunkler.

Appointments recently received from National Headquarters listed the new alumni officers for next year. Barbara Hawkins and Betty Foster will serve as president and vice-president respectively of the Richmond Chapter, and Henrietta Taylor and Rudy Nock have been selected as president and vice-president respectively of the Eastern Shore chapter.

"The members of the club wish to extend their heartfelt thanks to all members of the faculty and administration as well as to the students of Longwood College for the cheerful cooperation and participation they have displayed during the first two years of the Bird Club Era," the retiring president said. She added, "Stay on the wing for May Day, everyone. Many alumni members will be flying low over Farmville that day."

How's Your Average . . . . .

The Student Standards committee has recently passed some new regulations concerning the student-held offices of the College. The new regulations set aside certain officers in each organization which the committee feels should require an academic standing of a certain degree. In making these reservations they conferred with the heads of the organizations concerned.

The organizations not specifically mentioned in the regulations are free to follow their own discrimination in the election of any and all of their officers.

In setting up a sliding scale for the academic averages required to hold the specified offices the committee has taken a mighty step toward the active and leading participation of many students formerly barred from office. Juniors and seniors, who will still be required to have an academic average of 1.0, or the much discussed "C" average, may take as the basis of this average either their cumulative average or their average for the preceding semester, whichever is more profitable for the student concerned. This will be invaluable to many organizations who find, when election time rolls around, that their best leaders, while having a good academic average of 1.0 or above, have failed to "make their grades" the previous semester.

The committee is to be recommended for the work and thought which went into the compiling of these regulations. The student organizations will find the new regulations much easier to follow than the antiquated point system formerly used and much less subject to misinterpretation than the regulations passed by the committee last spring.

Your Move . . . . .

A plan for installing a Campus Chest at the College, as proposed in last week's Rotunda was met with varying expressions of interest and doubt according to the poll published in this issue.

The results of the poll show the main objection to the proposal is that students possibly cannot afford to give to such a Chest one lump sum large enough to cover contributions to the numerous drives that come up throughout the year. We continue to feel, however, that with a certain sum set before the students to be paid on a predesignated date the system would be a relief for, rather than a strain on, student pocketbooks. The opportune time for a Campus Chest drive would be immediately after the fall session is begun. The majority of students have more money at the beginning of school than they will have for the remainder of the year due to summer jobs or beneficent parents.

The proposal could not possibly succeed, of course, unless it was backed with full cooperation from the students. This would entail approval of the plan by the entire study body as well as by those campus organizations who annually sponsor specific arives. If "Campus Cogitations" is a true indicator of campus feeling, we have no assurance of such approval and cooperation, and under that circumstance the plan may prove to be a worse alternative than our present system of haphazard collections.

The next move, either for or against the proposal, is up to the students. They can ignore the suggestion and thus reject the plan, or they can put it into effect, experimentally or permanently, by working through the 'Y', Student Government, class meetings or any other organized campus group.

Open Sesame . . .

From Ohio State University comes a contender for the position of patron saint of all students, Professor Jacob Verduin. Speaking before the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Dr. Verduin urged that students be permitted to open and use their books during examinations. "Memory tests with closed books do not test a students' ability to use information," he said, "they test only his ability to retain a few facts."

We're right behind you, Dr. Verduin; examinations have long been the plague of college students. And most students can testify to the fact that the multitude of facts crammed in at the last minute rarely ever stay with you much longer than it takes to pass the examination. Dr. Verduin is surely on the right track when he observes that a student who intends to use his college-learned facts after graduation "should never trust so faulty a source as a memory to provide them."

Open book examinations might not necessarily prove to be any easier than the traditional type of examination but the strain on the student, both physical and mental, would certainly be lessened. And after all, according to many educators the only true learning is derived from research and one certainly can do little research of any value within the confinement of one human brain.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 26, 1950

BIRD'S EYE VIEW

by jacky eagle

Happily flapping feathers and chirps of congratulation are the order of the day in the local aviary as identities of the new Bird Club officers are revealed. BC members are greeting the news, which has just been released by Mary Margaret and the national council, with expressions of confidence that the new formation leaders will carry on in the true tradition of the friendly fowl. Emulating the progressive leadership of Grand Exalted Birds Stoops and Kimbrough provides a real challenge for the new officers.

Announcement of the lastest top birds on the Longwood pole comes simultaneously with the great feather-preening operations prior to the annual May Day celebration. Our adversaries of the crimson clan are also placing beaks to the grindstone preparing for the annual May Day proletarian demonstrations so dear to communist hearts.

Casting our beady eye about for the bright side of the news we find only one feebly glimmering item. Truman, radiating health and good spirits after the Florida interlude, assures us, with the backing of his rosebespectacled economic advisers, that the U. S. can look forward to a season of comparative prosperity. College birds expecting to try their wings come June had better grab off a job and put their nest eggs in production right soon. So runs the song of other more hard-headed economists because, they say, the increasing heat of deficit spending from the consumer on up through government is likely to burst the balloon of prosperity before long.

We see by the papers (Russian planes and the "saucers" have driven us out of our proper sphere) that senior undergrads are pulling all sorts of wild tricks out of the bag to impress prospective employers. Some of the gimmicks listed are billboard advertisements, colorful brochures, match book ads, and check-lists of job candidates' qualifications. Rooting around the local scene for job leads, we have decided that brushing up on our bird-calls is the likeliest gimmick within the range of our talents and pocketbooks to help bring the bird seed in.

Stecking My Neck Out

by Joanne Steck

Well, since opening sentences are a problem in this column, this one will have to serve the purpose.

From all outward appearances Randolph-Macon really took over this past week end! Everything moved too fast-confused?-couldn't even keep up!

May Day preparations seem to be coming along pretty well, peasants and all.

One can't tell whether spring is here or not with the mixture of cotton, silk, woolen, broadcloth, waffle weave and what have you that everyone is sporting. Everyone probably wished that they were taking swimming instead of whatever class they happened to be attending in the heat Monday. But, as Confusicious or someone once said—"It's not the heat, it's the humidity!"

The United Nations could well take lessons from third floor rotunda here recently. Things got pretty bad up there for awhile. In fact things got so bad that it was found necessary to draw up a treaty in which all those signing agreed forever after there would be no more "pie" beds, short sheets, etc. If the treaty is broken by any of the signers the remaining members are to see that justice is wrought. As each "victim" signed the treaty she also confessed to her previous actions concerning these matters. So far-so good!

Hope everybody is lucky enough to beg, borrow or steal a date for the big May Day dance coming up. Sho gonna be nice from all I hear—and I hear plenty!

Getting out a joke column is no picnic. If I print good jokes, students say it is filthy; if I don't they say I am too prudish. If I publish original matter, they say I lack variety; if I publish things from other newspapers, they say I am a plagiarist. Like as not someone will say that I swiped this from an exchange. I did.

Campus Cogitations

Question: What do you think of the idea of a Campus Chest as suggested in last week's Rotunda?

Indie Shackleford: It's not a very good idea. Some can't afford it all at once.

Patsy Stringfellow: I don't think it's a good idea because some people could afford it and some couldn't.

Georgia Bailey: I like it very much 'cause that's the only time I have any money.

Jean Turner: Good idea!

Ann Burnette: I'll be darned. The suggestion is superb.

Virginia Westbrook: That's a good idea.

Hop Critzer: It's a good idea, for that's when everyone has money to give.

Evelyn Farrier: A lot of girls don't have money at different times throughout the year, and they do have it at the beginning of the year 'cause that's when they pay their bills.

Helen Fones: I don't think everyone would contribute.

Roberta Browning: I don't exactly think that most people would contribute unless at that time there was an immediate need for money.

Winston Johnson: I think it would be profitable, but I don't think many people would contribute.

Barbara White: Splendid! Catch me the first week of school when I have money, and it will save my saying, "I'm sorry, but I'm broke" the rest of the year.

Alberta Hawley: I think it is a better plan, because I can't always afford it out of my allowance.

Ginny McLean: I don't like it for I never have that much at one time. I like to dribble a little out of my allowance at a time.

Pat Paddison: I think the suggestion includes an idea I fully endorse.

Joan Prichett: Excellent idea!

Nancy Walker: Good idea!

Gwen Cress: I think it's a good idea sometimes, but then there are sometimes that you might contribute more than others.

Pageant Rehearsal Schedule

The May Day pageant, "Waltz Ballad", will hold a rehearsal at the College Estate every afternoon next week Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, faculty advisor to May Day, has announced.

On Monday, May 1, the Danube and Weber dances will practice at 2:30 p. m. followed by the court at 3:30 p. m. A mass rehearsal will be held Monday at 4 p. m., if the weather permits. On Tuesday at 4 p. m. the Yodelers, the Band, the Landler, the Varsovienne, and the Americana will rehearse.

Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 there will be a mass rehearsal of everyone in May Day. On Thursday at 3:45 will be held the first mass dress rehearsal.

Final Rehearsal

On Friday afternoon at 2:15 will be held the final dress rehearsal of the pageant .The entire May Day cast will assemble at Longwood at 1:30 on Saturday.

The above times are the times of the rehearsal. The truck will leave the back entrance of Ruffner Hall in time to get the May Day participants to the Estate for the practice.

As the time draws near for the spring sports, we ought to be reminded to sign up for archery and tennis tournaments. There's a sheet to sign up on posted on the A. A. bulletin board, so do your signing up right away. The archery tournament will begin around May 12 and the tennis contest will follow as soon as possible, so be sure that practice makes perfect and work, work, work for your class.

Some of you may not realize the importance of individual care of the athletic facilities provided by the school. Wearing tennis shoes on the tennis court and not playing when the courts are wet are small considerations, but they may mean the difference between really good tennis courts and ones that are rough and run down. It is up to each student who takes advantage of the athletic facilities provided by the College to try and keep them in tip-top shape by a little care and thoughtfulness.

For the first year on the Longwood campus, students will see an intramural golf tournament. The tournament, which will be held during the week of May 8, will be sponsored by the Athletic Journal in cooperation with the National Golf Foundation. There will be an entry sheet posted on the A. A. board May 1, and those interested are requested to sign up by May 5. A certificate and a gold medal will be awarded to the winner of the tournament.

Scanning The Field

By LESTER SMALLWOOD

THE PIONEER TENNIS QUESTION

Considerable discussion particularly among the men students this week has been directed toward the apparently dropped cause of men's tennis, in the light of another intercollegiate activity at Longwood.

Jolted by the completely unexpected reversals by the hands of the General Assembly last February, the men's activities at Longwood summoned all their efforts in an impetuous drive against the opposition to co-education in the State teacher's colleges. Upon receiving the green light again, men's activities are now back in demand.

VAUGHAN IS ELECTED TEAM MANAGER

In the fall, the men's Student Government wholeheartedly favored the installation of a spring tennis team at Longwood; it was verified repeatedly throughout the winter. In March the Government met and elected Frank Vaughan team manager with instructions to proceed to arrange intercollegiate matches. It also decided to postpone the selection of a tennis leader until the potentialities of all participants were fully realized by court experience, which was meant to be early in the season, presumably in the latter part of March or the first of April.

The latter part of April is here (the time most teams are half way through a regular schedule) and no organization is yet in force. The lack of organization is due, to the most part, to the failure of the Government to realize the importance of getting the situation well in hand before actual training begins. The biggest step is the first one.

MEN'S INTERCOLLEGIATE TENNIS AT LONGWOOD?

The development and production of a men's tennis team at Longwood, where there are only approximately two dozen men at the present time, is a pretty big order. It has its many complications. Spring sports are many. Consequently tennis gets less attention, resulting in fewer over-all participants. It follows that accessible potential tennis players are few and far between because unless some early activity has been experienced talent usually will not show up overnight—it takes years. The possibilities of developing a tennis team at Longwood that would justify its needs, are at the present time, debatable. It usually takes an enrollment of some 500 men to keep a 10 men squad going today. Tennis teams in our class are few and of course at even further distances than experienced in basketball last winter. The result is needed money, and cash the men do not have at the present time.

After securing a well scheduled basketball slate, and finding clear evidences of sufficient funds, interest, talent, and backing to warrant putting tennis on an intercollegiate calendar, then with the proper organization, go ahead by all means, but otherwise tackle only one item, the most beneficial, at a time. In the meantime there should be nothing stopping a well organized intramural tournament program. This seems to be only logical procedure at the present time.

THE PIEDMONT LEAGUE OPENS TODAY

The Piedmont League opens its 31st season today featuring Portsmouth at Richmond, Roanoke at Norfolk, and Newport News at Lynchburg. The class B league placed second in its drawing cards to only one other league in the country. Portsmouth is expected to make a strong bid for top honors when the pennants are dished out in the fall—they finished 2nd last season. Newport News will be close on the Cubs tail. The Roanoke Red Sox seemingly have what it takes in at least pitching; they accomplished almost the impossible recently in beating their parent club the Boston Red Sox of the American League, in a splendid pitching performance. Farm calls will come at the end of May for the linked teams.

JETHROE, PREDICTED $100,000 FLOP, IS HOT

Sammy Jethroe, the Braves $100,000 negro rookie, recently purchased from their International League farm system, all through the Grapefruit League proved to be anything but a smashing sensation. He too, was being linked with a nest of sensational rookie flops that cost their sponsors a pretty penny. He was hitting poorly, fielding awkwardly and everything imaginable to give the Braves dizzy spells. However, on his first major league appearance he slammed out a home run and has all but driven the pitchers crazy with his dazzling speed on the base paths. The Braves have temporarily, at least, breathed a sigh.

SNAGS . . .

Hampden-Sydney is currently the hottest baseball team in the State. They are at the present the only remaining unbeaten team; they have excellent pitching, and every regular is batting over .300 save one. At this pace they seemingly are destined for the State crown.

Smallwood Fills New Sports Post

Ed. To Continue Current Column

Lester Smallwood will take over the newly created position of men's sports editor of the Rotunda, Jean Smith and Mary Leigh Meredith, co-editors-in-chief, have announced.

Lester joined the staff in the fall as a reporter and since then has worked with both the news and the sports staff. His column, "Scanning the Field," has regularly appeared in the Rotunda since September 28.

According to Jean and Mary Leigh, Lester will not necessarily confine his duties to the field of men's sports. "We have always had trouble getting good sports writers, or for that matter, any sports writers and can not afford to relegate any one person to only one phase of that field," they stated.

Lester will continue to write his column. His appointment as men's sports editor will have no effect on the column or its subject matter.

'Plum Tree' Pictures Displayed In LC Gym

Four mounted pictures of the Orchesis production, "The Plum Tree", have been placed on exhibit in the gymnasium. The pictures were taken by Burman Scott prior to the presentation of the dance drama.

Hilda Edwards, as Nurse Emma Davis, is shown as she danced beside the plum tree. Another shot shows Nurse Davis and the abstract figures which haunted her. The other two pictures show two of the demented women, Kitty Carmichael as "Fiddle" and Ray Phillips as "Rusty", as they were plagued by the suspicious women, Betty McCree, Betty House, and Marian Becknor.

Also on display are several pictures taken during the 1949 May Day pageant at the Longwood Estate.

The dance will be the culminating event of the annual May Day festivities. The May Day pageant, "Waltz Ballad" will be presented at the College Estate May 6 at 3 p. m.

WHO'S —IN THE— Senior Spotlight?

An elementary major is in the senior spotlight this week, an elementary major who couldn't possibly do without her "green teaching shoes." This young lass with black hair and big brown eyes just can't seem to find anything to be troubled about, so she spends much of her time laughing. You don't think that could happen up here? Just listen intently during one of your meals in the dining hall, and you'll know just who I mean. May I offer a suggestion? Thank you. Listen tonight as she reads this article.

Just like every other college girl, this senior has a special interest. Her mind is forever wandering to Harvey and Virginia. Of course, there are moments in every day when she must think of her little first graders in the training school.

The young lady in question has served as president of Kappa Delta, social sorority, this year. She is also a member of Cotillion Club, Student Government, and the 1950 May Court. Can you guess?

A French and English major pops up next to be reviewed. And there's a secret about her that I have to tell. There happens to be one thing she likes better than her major—newspaper work. We've heard that she has a "nose for news", but she tells us that the rumor is true only when she's not unconscious.

As for special interests, this senior simply yearns for her home among the apple blossoms and a well-paying job after she graduates. Who doesn't yearn for the well-paying job?

I think I've said all when I tell that this college gal served as editor of the Rotunda her senior year. She is a member of Pi Kappa Sigma, social sorority, Cotillion Club, Journalism Club pledged to Pi Delta Epsilon, honorary journalistic fraternity, and Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary leadership society. This senior was also selected to the 1950 College Who's Who.

In case you're having a hard time, she has red hair and she says they call her Moby Dick 'cause she always has "a whale of a tale."

Business Students Enter Ad Contest

Eighteen business education students have entered an advertising contest sponsored by the American Safety Razor Corporation. These students comprise the advertising class taught by Mrs. J. P. Wynne.

The contest, which opened competition in February, centers about developing a plan for advertising and promoting the new Gem Feather Weight Razor for a full page advertisement in LIFE magazine, copy for a college newspaper advertisement, and a statement of recommendations for marketing the razor as a whole.

Among those who have entered the contest from this College are Max Acree, Laura Buchanan, Harriet Butterworth, Sarah Dickinson, Dot Doutt, Millie Evans, Frances Garnett and Ruth Gills.

Others in the advertising class who have entered the contest are Helen Holbrook, Geraldine Huckstep, Ann Kemp, Valerie Macpherson, Connie Marston, Frances Minter, Beverly Smethie, Iris Sutphin, Ruth Walker, and Joyce Webb.

$250 First Prize

A U. S. "E" Bond worth $250 will be awarded as the first prize, the second prize will be $150 in U. S. "E" Bonds.

Entries prepared by the advertising class for the contest, which closes April 29, will be on display in the Business Education department today and tomorrow.

Sliding Scale

The fifth and last regulation passed by the Student Standards committee regarding elections reads as follows: To be eligible for election to any of the previously listed offices, a freshman must have an academic average of at least 0.6 for the preceding semester; and a sophomore, 0.8, juniors and seniors, 1.0 for the preceding semester or cumulative average. In order to hold office after election a student must maintain the academic average required of her previously stated according to class.

The change in regulations by the Student Standards committee was felt necessary because of the misinterpretation of the former regulations.

Seniors in last week's spotlight were Margaret Beasley and Elizabeth Bragg.

Asher Will Present Piano Recital Here

Puckett Asher, senior music major, will be presented in a student recital to be held Saturday, April 29, at 8 p. m. in the small auditorium.

A motion that each student who felt sorry for their actions in the College dining hall last Thursday night should personally apologize to Miss Gwen Cress, and an amendment to the motion that a formal note of apology from the student body be sent to Miss Cress was passed by a majority vote. The meeting was then adjourned.

Annual Celebration of May Day To Honor Waltz, Queen, Court; Festivities Will Begin at 3 P M

Speakers Announced For Commencement

Drs. Stiles, Adams Will Give Address To Graduating Class

Dr. Lindley J. Stiles and Dr. Theodore Floyd Adams will be the guest speakers for the 1950 commencement exercises to be held June 4 and 5.

Dr. Stiles, who will deliver the address at the graduation exercises Monday, June 5, became Dean of the Department of Education at the University of Virginia at the beginning of this session. He received his doctorate of philosphy degree at the University of Colorado and has served as head of the Department of Education at the College of William and Mary. Dr. Stiles was at one time also a member of the staff of the Department of Education at the Ohio State University.

Dr. Adams, who will give the baccalaureate address Sunday, June 4, is serving at present as pastor of the First Baptist Church of Richmond. He received a doctorate of divinity degree from the University of Richmond in 1938, Denison University in 1940 and the College of William and Mary in 1940. In the past, Dr. Adams has served as pastor of the Cleveland Heights Baptist Church, Cleveland, Ohio and the Ashland Avenue Baptist Church, Toledo, Ohio.

Alumnae To Meet At College Sat.

The Executive Board of the Longwood College Alumnae Association will meet here on May 6. Beginning at 10 o'clock in the morning in Dr. Lancaster's office, the Board members will meet under the leadership of the president, Miss Helen Costan, of Lynchburg.

According to Mrs. Ruth H. Coyner, Executive Secretary and Treasurer, of Farmville, they will lunch together in the Snack Bar and attend the May Day festivities in the afternoon.

Rotunda Receives 2nd Class Rating In ACP Contest

News Field Lauded; Sports Criticized

The Rotunda received a rating of second class in the 42nd Associated Collegiate Press All-American Critical Service. The papers entered for the A. C. P.'s criticism were those published during the first semester of this year under the editorship of Jackie Eagle.

The Rotunda was among 51 collegiate newspapers entered as weekly papers from colleges or universities with an enrollment of 500-999.

A total score of 780 points was received by the Rotunda. Of this 200 points were for news values and sources, 205 for news writing and editing, 180 for headlines, typography, and makeup and 195 for department pages and special features.

Coverage Excellent

The judges cited the Rotunda as being excellent in news coverage and very good in the selection of stories. They criticized the lack of speech reports and outside news fields, and the lack of good news-feature copy on the front page.

The Rotunda's features and news stories were judged very good. The inclusion of non-essential details in news stories and the lack of a colorful style in features were both criticized.

The sports page was criticized for lack of color and for too routine display. The completeness of the sports coverage was also questioned.

NOTICE

The College Library will be closed Saturday, May 6, at 1 p. m. for the May Day celebrations.

Conveniences of New Dorm To Console Inconvenienced

A new dormitory is being built at Longwood College to replace that which was destroyed last year by fire. The little girls who have been inconvenienced by the building can find consolation in thoughts of the completed structure, which will contribute much to the campus life.

The new building will be an addition to Annex. The final result will be a long three-story brick structure, having two stone entrances. In accordance with the needs of the new building, the colonnade will be made longer, having the steps moved to the center. Since the new dormitory will be "a thing of beauty," it should be "a joy forever" to Longwood students.

Part of the basement space will be used for a recreation room. Most of the remaining space will be used for a treatment room, consultation room, and waiting room.

Registrar To Move

The registrar and her assistants will have three offices, a work room, and a fireproof vault on the first floor. There will also be two student bedrooms, a room and an office for the matron, and two parlors on this floor.

Future Longwood girls who live on the second floor will have a kitchen, a sitting room, a pressing room, and nine new bedrooms, including one for the housemother. The third floor will be similar to the second floor.

The new building will have an important bearing upon life at Longwood College. It will mean that the College can have added space for recreation and plenty of space for increased enrollment. It will mean that the infirmary will be able to take care of a larger number of patients. Since the Registrar's office is moving to badly needed new quarters, the College publications' offices and Student Government office may be moved to the rooms in Main Building formerly occupied by this department.

The sophomores have had distance added to their walk to Main Building. They and the freshman are being disturbed by noise from steam shovels, hammers, and saws. (Perhaps the worst is yet to come). But if everything goes according to plan, the building will be ready for occupancy in the early fall, in plenty of time for the members of these classes to partake of its advantages.

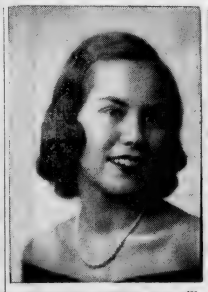
'Virginians' To Preside

"The Waltz," the queen and her court, and the "Virginians" will be the main topics of interest at the 1950 May Day dance to be presented in the College gymnasium Saturday, May 6, at 8 p. m.

"The Waltz" has been chosen as the theme of the annual May Day dance carrying out the theme introduced earlier in the day by the pageant "Waltz Ballad" to be presented at the College Estate.

The figure performed by the May Day queen and her court will be the featured event of the last ofrmal of the College session.

Music for the dance will be provided by Pete Weaver's "Virginians," from Emporia. The "Virginians" made their 1950 debut at Longwood College at the annual junior dance in February. "They were a big hit then and I'm sure everyone is looking forward to dancing to their music again," said Mary Jane Stansbury, music chairman of the dance.



Hearts and Waltzers

Decoration for the dance, annually sponsored by Orchesis, will feature waltzing features. The sentimentally of the waltz will be reflected in the heart figure formed by the queen and her court and in the liberal use of hearts in the decor.

The receiving line will form in the Student Lounge at 8 p. m. Kitty Carmichael and Jeanne Farmer, co-chairman of the dance, have announced. Intermission will be held at 10 p. m. and the dance will be brought to a close at 12 midnight.

Tickets for the dance are priced at $1.80 stag and $2.40 drag. Only a few tickets are left, Marian Higgs, ticket chairman, has announced.

Co-chairmen of the dance are Jeanne Farmer and Kitty Carmichael with Betty McCree as decorations chairman, Marian Higgs in charge of the tickets, Mary Jane Stansbury in charge of music, and Marian Becknor and Jean Ridenour in charge of publicity. Katie Bondurant is chairman of the floor committee, and Shirley Fahrback is in charge of the clean-up committee.

BARBARA SOURS, who will attend the queen as maid of honor in the May Day Pageant Saturday.

DOLORES DUNCAN, who will reign as queen in the May Day Pageant Saturday.

LC Beauties Will Reign

The stirring strains of the waltz will officially open the 1950 May Day celebration at Longwood College as the "Waltz Ballad", a pageant in dance form, is presented at the College Estate at 3 p. m. Saturday, May 6.

Dolores Duncan, senior from Norfolk, will reign over the May Day festivities with Barbara Sours, senior from Chatham, as her maid of honor.

Gathered about Dolores and Barbara will be a bevy of beauties representing the four classes at Longwood. Representing the senior class will be Marjorie Boswick, Frances Dodson, Hilda Edwards, Betty Ferguson ,and Frances Garnett.

Other members of the senior class on the 1950 May Day court are Helen Hardin, Martha "B" Hilton, Patsy Kimbrough, Norma Roady, and Peggy White.

Upperclassmen Beauties

Junior members of this bevy of beauties will be Claudia Anderson, Charlotte K. Jones, Romine Mahood, Frances Minter, Isaac Velazquez, and Charlotte Williams.

From the sophomore class will be Anne M. Motley, Jean Ridenour, and Frances Turner. Representing the freshman class on the court will be Jean Kriembaum and Margaret Taylor.

'Waltz Ballad'

The 1950 pageant will trace the history of the waltz through eight periods of episodes each depicted in dance form. Beginning with the Landler as it was danced by the peasants of both Austria and Southern Germany a generation or two before the world was ready for the waltz proper the pageant will trace the waltz through the sentimental court forms, the Strauss period, the Weber period and down to the modern forms of the waltz.

Tchaikowsky's "Waltz of the Flowers" from the Nutcracker Suite will form the background music for the entrance of the May queen and her court, the crowning of the May Queen and the heart figure which follows.

Registration Scheduled May 8 to 12

Registration for fall classes will begin May 8, according to an announcement by Dean William W. Savage. Students returning for the 1950-51 session must have their schedules completed and approved by 5 p. m. Friday May 12. Those students who have not completed their class registration by this date will be required to register Wednesday, September 20.

Students have been requested not to interrupt classes for registration. The faculty office hours for this week will be posted on the respective doors. Freshman and sophomores have been advised to discuss their plans prior to the week of registration with the head of the department in which they wish to major.

Students are cautioned to keep in mind that certain courses having hyphenated numbers, such as "211-212," require completion of both semesters before credits earned in either semester may be applied to the required number of credits for graduation.

The procedure to be followed by students in registering for classes has been posted on the bulletin boards throughout Ruffner Hall. The class cards have been revised and samples showing them filled out correctly have also been posted on the bulletin boards. Students have been especially requested not to detach these cards.

Men Nominate 3 For Presidency Of Student Gov.

Lester Smallwood, Jimmy Thompson, and Frank Vaughan were nominated for the presidency of the Men's Student Government Association at a meeting of the men yesterday.

Nominated for the office of vice-president were Jack Huegel and Harold Hutter. Bill Overby and Madison McClintic were nominated for secretary and Hunter Joe Benedict and Leonard Shaw were nominated for treasurer.

Poll Days Set

The men will conduct the elections for their Student officers on Thursday and Friday, May 18 and 19, in Dean William W. Savage's office. All balloting must be completed by 5 p. m. on Friday.

"This should prove to be an interesting and hotly contested campaign," Calvin Hatcher, present Men's Student Government president remarked. "The men nominated for office are all capable and the outcome of the election will depend largely on the platform each candidate selects and the policies he advocates."

Student Art Exhibit Set Up For May Day In Art Dept., Library

The annual student art exhibit sponsored by the College Art Department will be set up for the May Day week end and will remain on exhibit through the week of May 6-9.

Guests on campus for the May Day week end are especially invited to see the display in the corridors and class rooms of the Art Department, Miss Virginia Bedford, head of the Art Department, has announced.

In addition to the part of the exhibit set up in the Art Department the Library browsing room has been given over to the work of the water color and oils classes. The work in ceramics will remain in the cases on the main floor of the Library.

Men Boast Culture, Comedy In Forthcoming Production

Hey, brats, why be an icky hicky? Drag it on down to the men's A.A. Production in the Rec' Friday, May 12 at 7:30 p. m., and absorb some culture. When the curtain rises, the men will start vibrating with said culture for you.

Is your dancing shot? Well, take lessons from such masters as Shep Elmore, Jack Heugel and Jimmy Thompson—they'll show you how to shake on the Samba and bow in the ballet.

Is your fashion knowledge nil? Mr. John Cook, Esq., will put you up to date on the latest frock fashions. His styles are out of this world!

Is your etiquette atrocious? Bill Beamer and Hunter Joe Benedict will show you how to make Emily Post look like an amateur.

Are you out of voice? If so, Jimmie Clark and Madison McClintic will give some special lessons in waxing vocal, while Frank Vaughan will tell you the consequences of failing to make that "C" average—all to music.

Dick Bobb will be featured as a famous singer and an average wife arising in the morning. Mr. Leonard XIX will be the master of ceremonies. Mr. Shaw was chosen for this position due to his stately and dignified bearing.

The men guarantee you'll get your money's worth in laughs if not in helpful tips. If you want some confirmation on this statement ask Miss Iler who has been in on these antics—we think she'll agree. By the way admission price is thirty cents only.

Why Chi . . . .

"Chi's burning!" As the cry echoed down the corridors of Longwood College approximately 600 students dropped whatever had previously occupied them and dashed madly outside. For half an hour they stampeded back and forth between the two most obvious sites for Chi's bonfire, the athletic field and the lot behind the Library, before they were rewarded for their vigil by the sight of Chi's flaming torches on the athletic field. The eight senior members of Chi were revealed to the student body and a few select members of the four classes were commended by Chi.

Earlier in the year the freshman and sophomore dormitories were thrown into midnight confusion by the simple statement. "Chi's walking." And walk they did —all the way across the colonnade.

As far as the student body is concerned these are the only two outstanding achievements of Chi during the current session. And constructively speaking, these two were not very outstanding after all. Just what has Chi accomplished this year besides twice throwing the student body or part of the student body into an uproar? And above and beyond that just what does Chi intend to accomplish? In other words, what is Chi's reason for existence on a campus already overcrowded with organizations?

If Chi's main excuse for existence is to cause periodic furors among the rest of the student body, then its aims have been accomplished and it may retire well pleased with itself. If Chi exists on campus as a "Boogie man" to scare the student body into obeying the rules and regulations of the College, then it has done little. The students who are afraid of Chi are few and far between these days. In addition to this fact, college students are generally supposed to be adult, and adults seldom respond to scare tactics. With little or no predjudice it can be stated that the majority of the student body obeys the rules and regulations of the College for a multitude of reasons, none of which is fear of Chi.

Year before last, Chi dispatched to Boston to be refinished the replica of the Capu "listening" statue of Joan of Arc which stands in the rotunda. A worthy project indeed, since Joan had been covered with over 300 signatures and was missing several vital parts such as toes, fingers, etc., but unfortunately for Chi, Joan does not need refinishing every year and that cand hardly be taken over as a full-time objective. What then are Chi's objectives? Does Chi have any purpose for existence and, if so, why cannot these be made public?

Has Chi, whose objectives must have once been worthy or it would never have been organized, deteriorated into a social organization and worse yet, into a secret social organization? Surely, tradition or no tradition, secret societies with no acknowledged purpose have little place on a modern college campus. Is Longwood College to be an exception? Does Chi still have a right to existence?

Extra . . . .

"Too many extra-curricular activities" is a constant cry from faculty and students alike on the Longwood campus. Students who find themselves dashing from one meeting to the next with little or no time left to spend on studying are beginning to realize that their extra-curricular life is catching up with them. Professors, too, are teaching classrooms filled with students worn out by their rugged activities schedule and offering these activities as excuses for not studying or preparing assignments.

At present, the College boasts (?) approximately thirty recognized organizations not including social sororities, denominational organizations and societies such as the Bird Club, Cahoots and Chi which are not listed in the College Handbook. That the campus is over-organized is obvious, but a solution to the problem is far from clear. The majority of these organizations are worthwhile and contribute beneficially to the College materially and socially.

The only visible solution to the problem lies in the ability of the students to say "no", and to recognize that their classmates are human and only capable of doing a good job in a limited number of fields. Annually freshmen are counselled to choose one or two fields in extra- curricular life in which to specialize. During the year the majority of them are then asked to join several organizations; all of them are expected to contribute to the Circus stunt, class production, May Day, and athletic contests. The merry-go-round of organization membership usually spins at an increasingly hectic rate until the senior year when the student no longer ponders over finding time for these activities but vainly tries to sandwich in a few moments of study between meetings, social events, and athletic meets.

The student must realize that the primary purpose of a college is an academic education and socialization is merely a by-product. Despite the acclaim given now to those who participate in a myriad of organizations, as adult students we surely know that no one person is so versatile that he can excell in all the campus activities By specialization in one or two fields, competent leadership can be developed from a much larger portion of the student body. We also must recognize the fallacy of expecting our classmates to take part in every extra-curricular phase of college life.

Over-organization is not at the crux of the situation, but over-participation certainly is. Perhaps by taking a little more seriously the counselling given us as freshmen and choosing our activities wisely, we can be assured at the end of our fourth year of being well rounded—and graduated.

BIRD'S EYE VIEW

by jacky eagle

Feathers are still flapping all over birddom, the present motive being to shake the raindrops out. Local birds have decided to play it smart this May Day, traditionally a wet weekend, and oil their feathers as a precaution against the liquid sunshine. The aviary is aflutter with plans to welcome BC alumnae flying back for the festivities.

Longwood fowl are joining their capitalist friends all over the world in heaving a great sigh of relief at the comparatively peaceful outcome of Communist labor celebrations last Monday. The only violence reported came from highly combustible Berlin where teen-agers staged a rock-throwing anti-Communist riot of minor proportions. With admirable self-control policemen of both sides succeeded in reining in the demonstrators after a few minutes.

But most of the friendly fowl are still a little jittery wondering what's going to "hoppen" in the hot city on Whitsun weekend. That's when Red youth are scheduled to march 500,000 strong on the Western sectors of Berlin, if they make good their threat.

Stecking My Neck Out

by Joanne Steck

Seems to me that it ought to be pretty well rained out in these parts by now so let's hope the sun can come through for a little while next Saturday and give us a pretty May Day.

With the numerous big dances here and there that Longwood socialites have been gadding about to recently, there seems to be no time for such trivial things as "larnin'." Wonder if we couldn't work out a system where students with a "C" average would be exempt from exams. Whatta you think seniors? We're just full of brilliant suggestions like that.

The roof is getting so crowded on those few and far between sunny days that in order to get sunning space you'll have to mark off a plot and put a chain around it with a "No Trespassing" sign.

That old maxim "It's a woman's privilege to change her mind" was certainly proven true here this week end. After scrounging around through all their neighbors closets, without fail the party-bound lasses in search of new apparel went back to where they started — their own closets. Even we have to admit sometimes that women are the strangest people.

The movies that have been featured around here recently plus the men have certainly put us all on edge. If it's not the Man of The Eiffel Tower following you up the street it's the Black Robes of Bagdad.

Well, see you all at the big dance—I hope!

MEN'S INTERCOLLEGIATE TENNIS APPEARS AT LONGWOOD

Much to the amazement of everyone concerned, Longwood's first men's intercollegiate tennis match was held Friday afternoon on Farmville's courts. It featured the Lynchburg College JV's against a rustled "spur of the moment" team representing Longwood. The score ended 8-1 in favor of the Baby Hornets.

THE BIG MIX UP

The big mix up resulted from the failure of the Lynchburg College officals to interpret correctly a letter sent by the Pioneer team manager, Frank Vaughan. He wrote that the present conditions at Longwood indicated that no spring tennis team would be organized at Longwood this year, and consequently no matches could possibly be carried out between the two schools this season.

On the previously specified afternoon, April 28th, the Lynchburg netmen were here and raring to go. Seven men were rustled up by the Longwood receptionists and after considerable delay the Pioneers were out on the courts sweating out their first intercollegiate tennis match.

THE PIONEER NETMEN PERFORM WELL

Despite the fact that there had been no previous organization, the tenative Pioneer roster played exceedingly well under the circumstances. They faced an experienced squad, who had faced 5 previous foes already this season, and were exceedingly well coached by the Hornet sports staff, who in the past few years have turned out one of the hottest tennis teams in the entire state despite the college's small men's enrollment.

TENNIS IS NOW EAGERLY CONSIDERED BY THE MEN

The emergency tennis match with the Lynchburg club proved to be so successfully gratifying to all concerned that everyone seemed glad that the mixup happened. Desire for a regular intercollegiate schedule with effective organization of a Pioneer tennis squad has quickly spread throughout the men students. Complete organization is expected to come within a few days, and it is hoped that a six match schedule may possibly be completed before the end of May. Two matches with both the JV squads of Lynchburg and Hampden-Sydney are now being arranged. The Bridgewater College varsity squad is also being considered; they are an active participant in the Mason Dixson and Little Six Conferences.

Due to the delay in organization the possibilities for developing to the fullest extent the potential talents of each prospective Pioneer netman, are limited. Pre-season lecturework, practice, and all-around training cannot be replaced by artificial, hurried, and abbreviated last minute measures.

UPON PRODUCTION HINGES RESPONSIBILITY FOR FINANCE

Since it has become obvious that the men's activities are eagerly desired by students, faculty, and administration alike, funds are desperately needed. Profits from the basketball games were nil — the treasurer's books now show a deficit of some odd $30.00. Tennis will at least double that amount. The men's production, which will be given by the men's AA on May 12th, is at the present time the only practical fund raising devise — may the "house" runneth over.

SNAGS . . .

Many many thanks go to Miss Olive T. Iler, head of the Physcial Education department, from ALL the men students at Longwood for her most generous and spontaneous aid in making possible the emergency tennis match last Friday with the Lynchburg College JV's. Thanks also go to all the girls who came out to witness the previously unknown event — it was all deeply and sincerely appreciated.

Pioneer Netmen Drop Opening Match To Lynchburg College Jr. Varsity 8-1

Sportin' Around

by Ann Lynch

Red n' White and Green n' White double tennis matches are now well under way and, as usual, the rain is here in its' true Farmville fashion to force postponement of several of the games. The game scheduled for last Monday will be played as soon as the weather permits. Smallwood Scores Tally In No. 1 Slot

Last Friday afternoon a hurriedly organized Pioneer tennis squad played their first intercollegiate tennis match on the home courts. The Lynchburg College JV's were the foes and they defeated the Pioneers 8-1 in the bottle breaking encounter.

Lester Smallwood, the only heavily experienced Pioneer, scored the lone tally for Longwood by trimming Seward Ling 6-3, 6-0, in the No. 1 slot.

Summary

SINGLES: Lester Smallwood, (Long) defeated Seward Ling 6-3, 6-0; Braxton Dawson (Lyn) defeated Bill Overby 7-5, 6-2; Doug Curtis (Lyn) defeated Calvin Hatcher 6-1, 6-1; Dave Palermo (Lyn) defeated Jimmy Thompson 6-2, 6-2; Bill Motley (Lyn) defeated Frank Vaughan 6-0, 6-2; Grant Hudson (Lyn) defeated Sandy Sanderford 6-1, 6-2.

DOUBLES: Dawson - Curtis (Lyn) defeated Smallwood-Overby 3-6, 6-2, 6-2; Ling-Hudson (Lyn) defeated Hatcher-Thompson 6-2, 6-2; Palermo-John Crank (Lyn) defeated Sanderford-Shapard Elmore 6-2, 6-2.

Senior Spotlight?

Frankie Dodson and Jacky Eagle were the seniors in last week's spotlight.

This week's spotlight is centered on a blond, brown eyed biology major who, at the moment, is teaching general science and English at the high school.

Although her special interests seem to be playing and sleeping, she now is frantically looking for a good teaching job. (What senior isn't?) In case a prospective employer happens to read this article, this week's senior has asked me to announce that the job must be well-paying with plenty of time for loafing.

In a few years this college lass may be living in an igloo or in a thatched hut 'cause she has applied for positions in Alaska and Florida. Know who I mean now?

Hailing from Martinsville, this gal is an active member of Cotillion Club, Journalism Club pledged to Pi Delta Epsilon, and Cahoots. Put on your thinking caps and give with the answer.

Also basking in the brilliant rays of this week's spotlight is a senior whose middle name is "Modern Dance." Betcha I could stop there without keeping anyone from guessing who I mean.

This brown haired, brown eyed gal has very special interests in the previously mentioned modern dance and a fellow named Bill at Annapolis. She wants to teach physical education, "if she can get a job."

Our miss has a question that needs answering. Seems as though all her students (practice teaching) want to know, "Teacher, what makes your hair grow up instead of down?" Can you tell us?

Serving as president of Orchesis this year, this senior is also a member of Kappa Delta, social sorority; Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary leadership society; Cotillion Club, Athletic Association, Student Standards and Cahoots. Know who she is?

Council Changes AA Constitution

The Athletic Association constitution has undergone several changes, Ann Lynch, president of the A. A. has announced.

The following revisions to the constitution will appear in the 1950-51 Handbook.

1. A "C" average will not be prerequisite to membership on any varsity team at the College.

2. Blue and white blazers will be awarded at the beginning of each year to those seniors who have shown outstanding achievement in athletics during their college careers.

Stu. Standards Elect Thomas Chairman

Margaret Thomas, sophomore from Atlee, was elected chairman of Student Standards committee at a recent meeting.

Also elected at that time were Marion Beckner, secretary; Janie Lyons, chairman of the point system; and Dolores Hoback, chairman of the year's calendar.

The Student Standards committee works to bring about a spirit of cooperation in the solution of student problems and to foster high standards of action and scholarship in the College.

May Day Officials

Patsy Ritter, senior from Winchester, is general chairman of the 1950 May Day celebration. Connie Marston, senior from Shackelfords, is business manager.

Working with Patsy and Connie are Betty House in charge of staging, Page Burnett and Billie Dunlap in charge of music, and Hilda Edwards in charge of dance. Janie Lyons and Evelyn Farrier are in charge of costumes and Helen Kaknis is transportation chairman.

Pageant Leaders

Sarah McElroy will be the yodler for the peasant form of the waltz. Betsy Wiley and Hazel Wilkins will lead the dancers in the Landler. Music for the Landler has been arranged by Dr. John Molnar, head of the College music department, and will be played by a six-piece band composed of Farmville high school boys. The band is under the direction of Mr. Elmer Gish of the Farmville high school.

Frances Garnett, Helen Hardin and Jean Krienbaum will lead the Allemande. Ann Murphy and Nancy Walker will lead the dancers in the Blue Danube figure. The Blue Danube will feature Audrey Pettit, Liz Lesslie and Patsy Ritter.

Sue Walker will lead the Invitation to Dance and Marjorie Boswick and Hilda Edwards will lead the May Day court in the "Waltz of the Flowers" figure.

Mary Miller is featured in the Dance Americanna as the figure caller.

Student Art Exhibition Now on Display Features Varied Subjects, Media

Represents Work Of All Classes

Art in a variety of mediums is now on display in the halls and classrooms of the Art Department and in the browsing room of the Library. The annual student art exhibit is representative of the types of art work completed by the students in the department during the year.

The aim of the department has been to combine the creative expression with sound principles and techniques and the work on display is as varied as the personalities of the students represented.

Classes in art structure have on display work representing their experiments with color and design painting, theories and techniques, interior and exterior house planning, ceramics and sculpture as well as many craft mediums.

Figure Classes

Advanced design and figure drawing classes have on display sketches of models and compositions of varied mediums and subject matter. Among their subjects for figure composition are sunbathers on the roof and construction workers about the campus.

The work on display from the elementary education art classes is in such mediums as chalk, tempera, crayon, water color, cut paper, paper mache, and others adaptable to elementary school use including three dimensional models related to the general elementary curriculum.

Ceramics and craft class work on display include metal etching, jewelry, linoleum block printing, and cardboard construction. Other objects on display which represent the work of these classes are fired and glazed bowls, plates,

Webb Dedicates 1950 Yearbook To Dr. Lancaster

Theme Stresses Events Of Year

Students crowded the science hall lawn yesterday afternoon to witness the dedication of the 1950 Virginian to President Dabney S. Lancaster. Following the dedication, the crowds flocked into the science building to pick up their blue covered and white lettered books at the earliest date in several years.

The Outstanding Events of the College Year was taken as the theme of this year's annual and the motif was carried throughout the three books, which included The College, The Classes, and Activities.

Announcement of the six senior personalities chosen by the student body is an annual top feature of the Virginian. Yesterday, students discovered they had picked Lizzie Bragg, Ray Phillips, Jackie Wright, Jackie Eagle, Norma Roady, and "B" Hylton as the outstanding seniors for 1949-50.

Senior Personalities

Joyce Webb headed the staff of the '50 Virginian, with Helen Agnew serving as managing editor. Helen Kaknis headed the business department of this year's annual and Mr. T. A. McCorkle, who has been with the annual for several years, served again this year as faculty advisor for the year book. Georgia Bailey filled the post of photographic editor, Virginia Spencer served as literary editor for the book.

Men Form Tau Theta Pi Local Frat On Campus

New Group Chooses Orange, President For Coming Session

In response to a growing desire and need the Men of Longwood College recently organized a social fraternity, Tau Theta Pi, the first social organization proposed by the men on the campus. An invitation was issued to all men presently enrolled at the college to join the new organization.

The purpose of the new organization is to establish between its members a brotherhood, and to promote better relations between its members and the faculty, administration, and student body.

Orange President

In an election held recently Ned Orange was elected President; Shep Elmore, Vice-President; Jimmy Clark, Secretary; and Berman Scott, Treasurer. It was decided at the time not to fill the remaining offices and committees until next fall when the organization has had time to outline its activities and determine its needs.

Throughout the year numerous students have called upon the Men's Student Government to organize a social club. A committee was appointed, headed by Jimmy Thompson, to investigate the feasibility of such a club and determine student opinion on the subject. The response to the idea was over-whelming and meetings were immediately called to lay the ground work for the new fraternity. The name Tau Theta Pi was decided upon and a constitution was drawn up and ratified. At the time of ratification an election of officers was held and the fraternity officially activated.

Future Plans

Next fall Tau Theta Pi will participate in all appropriate activities on the campus and have a program extensive enough to interest all male students. It hopes to be-

'So You Want Some Culture' To Title Men's Production; Admission Price To Be 30c

Play To Be Given In LC Gymnasium Friday, May 12

"How to be an Educated Fool" or "So You Want Some Culture", the men's A.A. production, will be presented Friday, May 12, at 7:30 p. m. in the gymnasium. The admission charge will be 30c.

"Richard "Fats" Bobb's imitation of Rose Murphy is well worth the admission price," Hunter Joe Benedict, director of the production said. He added, "Fats is also portraying another famous singer and an average wife arising in the early a. m."

Shep Elmore, looking very much like Carmen Miranda, will head the samba, and do a take-off on the overbearing wife, while Jimmy Thompson will portray the henpecked husband.

Madison McClintic will introduce the cultural touch with his solo, "My Foolish Heart." Bill Beamer will also take solo honors with his version of "They Can't Make a Lady out of Me."

"Sandy" Sanderford, Harold Hutter, and Bill Beamer will offer a note of nostalgia with a hillbilly number. Sandy of North Carolina, Hutter and Bill hailing from the hills of Virginia all claim it "Taint hard to sing that-a-way."

Jimmy Clark will portray a grandmother, while Calvin Hatcher blushes beautifully as an embarrased young gentleman at the hands of Mac McClintic—a she-wolf.

Ensemble numbers to be seen in the forthcoming production will include the Ballet de Corpse, the Samba, and a fashion show.

"Come and bring someone, anyone or everyone with you" advises Hunter Joe.

Organizations Elect Heads To Serve in Coming Session

French Circle

Dolores Hoback, sophomore from Wytheville, was recently elected president of Le Cercle Francais. Chosen to serve as vice-president for the coming year was Maria Jackson, sophomore from Lexington.

Other Circle officers selected for the coming session were Helen Tanner, as secretary; Barbara White, as treasurer; and Sarah McElroy, music chairman. Penny Gilmer will assume the duties of reporter and Virginia McLean was chosen as accompanist for the group.

Granddaughters

Nancy Walker was elected president of the Granddaughters Club in a recent meeting. Betty Abbit was chosen by the group to serve as vice-president and Margaret Taylor will fill the post of secretary.

Polly Brothers will take over the position of treasurer for the coming session, and Kitty Hamlet and Lelia Anne Wingfield will serve as co-chairman of the social committee. Sarah Graham was chosen to serve as town girl representative for the group.

Kappa Delta Pi

Hilda Bauserman, junior from Luray, was elected president of Kappa Delta Pi, national honor society in education, at the last regular meeting of the group.

Other officers elected at that time were Alma Bedinger, vice-president, Polly Powers, secretary, Emma Mae Pittard, treasurer, and Mary Leigh Meredith, historian.

Corrections Announced

The following corrections have been made to the 1950-51 schedule of classes.

In addition to those classes in English and Speech listed in the present schedule, the following will be offered. English 365, 366 at 10:05 MWF; English 367 at 8:05 TTS; English 405 both semesters at 10:05 MWF; English 411, 412 at 10:05 MWF; Speech 201, 202 at 10:05 TTS; Speech 321 second semester at 8:05 MWF; and Speech 431, 432 at 11:05 MWF.

These changes have also been made in the present schedule. Phys. Ed. 351, 352 will be taught at 11:05 TTS; instead of 8:05 TTS; History 448 at 11:05 MWF; Music 231 at 8:05 MWF; Psychology 221, 222 at 9:05 TTS; and Home Economics 421 at 8:05 TTS.

Eagle Announces PDE Installation

The Longwood chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon will be installed on May 29, according to an announcement by Jackie Eagle, president of the group.

The 12 charter members of the Journalism Club which was formed on the campus last spring and which has recently had its petition to Pi Delta Epsilon accepted will be initiated as charter members of the national collegiate journalism fraternity.

Three alumnae members of the club are included in the charter group. Other members which will be initiated May 20 include Dr. Marvin W. Schlegel, Mr. Thomas A. McCorkle, and ten new members of the Journalism Club.

The program for the installation of the local chapter includes the initiation of the charter members in the afternoon, a banquet, and the initiation of the faculty and other actives following the banquet.

Elect Officers

Recently elected officers of the journalistic group are Jean Smith, president; Frances Harper, vice-president; Mary Leigh Meredith, secretary; Millie Carter, treasurer; Georgia Bailey, historian; and Dr. Schlegel, grand councilman.

Academy Of Science To Meet In Roanoke

Dr. George W. Jeffers, professor of biology, and Miss Susie V. Floyd of Newport News high school, will deliver an illustrated lecture on "The Egg, the Sperm and I," before the teachers of science section of the Virginia Academy of Science in Roanoke May 12.

Dr. Jeffers is chairman of the science museum committee of the Academy and is a past president of the group.

Among the other members of the College faculty who will attend the twenty-eighth annual meeting of the Academy are Dr. Robert T. Brumfield, associate professor of biology, Miss Vera Baron, instructor in biology, Mr. Thomas McCorkle, professor of chemistry and physics, and Mrs. Josephine Phillips, assistant professor of mathematics.

Students attending the meeting include Frances Creger, Barbara Andrews, Ann Langbein, Helen Arrington, and Mary Leigh Meredith.

The meeting of the Academy will begin on Thursday with the Junior Academy meetings and the Senior Academy council meeting. The section meeting will begin on Friday and continue through Saturday afternoon.

Thomas Announces Annual Law Course

The Parlimentary Law course required of all heads and vice-heads of all organizations began Monday, May 8, according to an announcement by Margaret Thomas, president elect of Student Standards.

Dr. Marvin W. Schlegel, assistant professor of history, is conducting the classes which meet at 5 p. m. on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday of the weeks May 7 through May 27. Class attendance is compulsory.

Robert's Rules of Order will be the textbook used for this course. The purpose of the course is to acquaint leaders of organizations with the correct procedure of conducting a meeting.

'LC Career Bulletin' Published By College Copies In Circulation

The first article in a series entitled "Longwood Career Bulletins" is now in circulation. The initial issue is concerned with the teacher in business education, and includes such information as the duties, advancement and earnings, personal qualifications and training as related to the business education field.

The bulletins will be issued periodically for high school students and any others interested in the College.

The recently published bulletin will be listed in a fall edition of Guidance Index, and will be reviewed by the Ballot Sheet, a professional business education journal.

Mathematics Dept. To Give Discussion

A round table discussion will be presented by the mathematics department on the Longwood Hour over WFLO tomorrow at 4:30 p. m. The topic for the discussion will be "Common Economical Usages of Mathematics."

Margaret Beasley will lead the discussion which will include aspects of simple numbers, arithmetic, algebra, geometry, and calculus.

Ellen Moyer, Martha Alice Wilson, Frank Vaughan, Harold Hutter, and Jimmy Thompson are the members of the discussion group.

Men Give Platforms In Election Campaign

Smallwood Backs Co-ed Cooperation

by Lester Smallwood

My platform is as follows:

"Intensive Specific Improvements With Continued Cooperation With The Administration And Women Student Organizations."

(1) To set in the constitution laws that will produce an Honor Council of 5 men, including the president and vice president of the student government, and 3 appointed members ratified by the student body. The Council will organize a graduated system of penalties subject to the approval of the student body, and will have the power to inflict penalties on all student violators. Four of the 5 Councilmen's verdict of "guilty" to an expulsion charge will necessiate expulsion. All cases may be appealed to a faculty commission of more than one.

(2) Cooperation between the men's Alumni Association and the Student Government Association in seeing that the co-educational bill does not become a dead issue in the next tell-telling year.

(3) To change in the constitution the deadline of the final student government elections. It should read "to be held in the month of April."

(4) The appointment of functional committees or otherwise a complete and immediate re-or-

Thompson Favors Protective Rights

by Jimmy Thompson

We enjoy many rights and privileges which must not be taken for granted, but should be protected. I believe whole-heartedly that we should avoid additional regulations unless they are deemed necessary.

Last winter, the State legislature failed to recognize Madison and Longwood as co-educational which was a blow to the men at Longwood. However, the issue is not dead yet, and with an organized program, the Men's Student Government can play a large factor in establishing a sound co-educational program at Longwood College.

There has been a lack of interest in the Men's Student Government this year due to the fact that the majority of the men's student body didn't know what was going on. If the members were kept posted on the activities of the organization through carefully prepared reports and meetings (scheduled in advance), the interest in the Student Government would develop to the fullest degree possible.

If I am elected, I shall strive to carry out the duties of the office to the best of my ability and work to build a bigger and better Men's Student Government.

Vaughan Will Use Existing Facilities

by Frank Vaughan

The male students attending this fine institution have cooperated at every opportunity with a spirit and heartiness that many people throughout the country today are losing or have lost. What this country needs isn't bringing back the five cent cigar; instead it needs societies which can and are willing to make use of what they have on hand. Similarly, since any College is a step toward these societies, it must follow that we students should make use of every opportunity to learn to think in terms of, and in accordance with, the means of the day. Where there is no opportunity, we should create one.

When you men turn out to vote on Thursday and Friday, May 18th and 19th, it is imperative that you put into office those men who can get things done with the use of existing facilities.

The platform offered by the Popular party consists of a six point program that has been made known to all. We know there isn't a point listed upon which we can't exert positive influence. But this program has been set up with student cooperation as its foundation. If you want to see the Popular party in office, vote ac-

The Situation Stands . . . .

The Rotunda this week presents a letter to the editors and to the student body from Chi. The letter speaks for itself as did the editorial which it answers. Lack of time and space prevent further quibbling over the editorial wordinf; such is merely superflous. The facts are these:

1. Chi has been challenged to prove it has a reason for existence. Chi retaliates with questioning the Rotunda's right to question Chi's right to existence and insists that as a secret organization its purposes must remain secret. The Rotunda and the rest of the student body must rely on their own imaginations, or lack of them, to provide Chi with a legitimate excuse for being.

2. Chi has been questioned as to its accomplishments. Chi replies that no trumpets shall hail their doings. Chi's accomplishments are to remain unknown to the Rotunda and the rest of the student body.

3. The place on modern college campuses of secret societies with no acknowledged purpose has been questioned. Chi replies that they do exist on many modern college campuses. The Rotunda and the rest of the student body are to assume that this is justification enough.

4. Chi has informed the Rotunda, and through it the remainder of the student body, that it knows little about Chi. According to Chi they will remain uninformed.

5. Chi has accused the Rotunda of creating detrimental attitudes among the student body. The Rotunda's ability to "create" attitudes is indeed questionable.

6. Chi has stated that it is cooperating with the administration and that were its cause unworthy it would have been deactivated. The worthiness of Chi's purpose was not questioned; the existence of a purpose was. The statement that it has not been disbanded for unworthy accomplishments or aims is negative and has little bearing on the original question.

The situation remains clouded rather than cleared. We have taken our stand on the question; we feel that student opinion is behind us. But until this opinion or an opposing one is publicly expressed the matter is closed.

You Name It . . . .

Name a building! The students of Longwood have been invited to put on their thinking caps and suggest names for buildings of the College that have not been named. And after the names that have been suggested by students, faculty, and alumnae are put together, the students are asked to participate by voting for the name they prefer.

Two of the names recently selected for College buildings were those of two of our former presidents. The main part of freshman dormitory was named for William Henry Ruffner, the founder and first president of the College. The new auditorium-music building now being erected will be named Jarman Auditorium. Dr. Joseph Leonard Jarman was the fourth president of our College.

The new science building has been named Edith Stevens Science Hall for a former member of the biology department. While here, Dr. Stevens worked untiringly as a member of the committee for drawing up the plans for the new science building.

Sophomore dormitory being erected as an addition to Annex, and the west wing dorm now known as Library Hall, have not yet been named. Names have been suggested by faculty members and alumnae. Those receiving the largest number of votes were: Mary White Cox Hall for sophomore dorm, and Jennie Masters Tabb Hall for Library Hall. Mrs. Cox was head of the home department for many years, serving her girls faithfully. The old White House was named for her. The name of Portia Lee Morrison Hall has also been suggested for the sophomore dorm.

Since many students have had no chance to know the teachers and administrators of the College, they must consider seriously the bases for selecting a name for our buildings. When a college building is named, it should be for life; therefore, the name should be meaningful to both the alumnae and the students of the college. It has been the tradition of this college, as well as many others, that dorms and office buildings be named for deceased members of the faculty or administration. This is no hard and fast rule that must be followed; it is simple a tribute to those who have served the College. Although the majority of the College buildings have been named for members of the administration, there is nothing that says they may not be named for former teachers. In fact, there are some who seem to feel that the name of teachers should be considered more seriously.

Consider what information is available, put on your thinking cap, and come out with names that everyone will like. The College wants your interest and participation.

BIRD'S EYE VIEW

by jacky eagle

Longwooders are finding it hard this week to settle back down on the roost after last weekend's merrymaking. It's a sad flock around here since the take-off of the convey of staunch old Bird Clubbers who flew in for the May Day festivities. Rumor has it that even Mary Margaret, incognito of course, showed up for the pageant, but ex-veep Kimbrough refused to get shook about it and made all the members of her organization proud of their representation on May Court.

In the course of our weekly reconnaissance flight we bumped up against Trygve Die, UN Secretary-General, in Geneva. "How're you fixed for accommodations from the Red-birds?" he chirped, going on to tell us how Thursday they're sending a plane to pick him up to take him to Moscow. Once there he plans to storm Joe Stalin's coop to find out how Comrade's fixed for patching up the crumbling remains of the United Nations. BC officials say Trygve is a wily old bird if he can lure the Reds back into the UN flock.

A glance across the Pacific reveals Chiang and the Chinese Nationalists still scratching around for American aid in their last stand against the Communists. The Nationalist fowl are looking pretty forlorn backed up in their Korea corner. Opinion around the local aviary has it that if the US State Department would come out clearly for or against the Nationalists, it would make things easier for Trygve in Moscow.

A dispatch from national Bird headquarters says, "Watch Congress for good laughing material!" Taxpayers who fear that their hard-earned cash is going for nought can rest assured that they're getting their dollars' worth in the entertainment department at least. The farce of the red herring on the Capitol stage gets just too hilarious as ex-Communists grimly accuse others of also being ex-Commies, or at least acting like it, if they weren't bonafide Reds. Oh well, we can always join our friends, the goony birds, on recently executed Wake Island, when we're sure that "All the world's queer but thee and me."

Letters To Editor

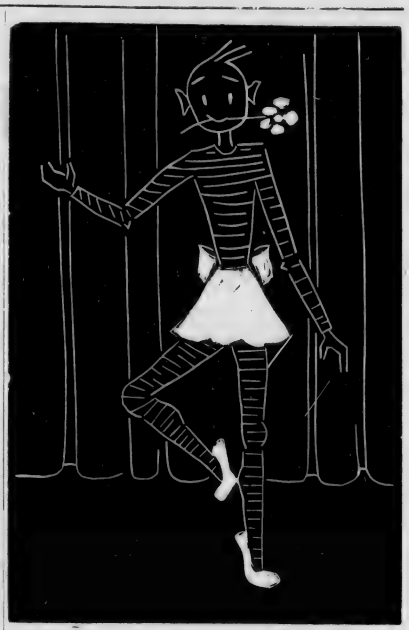
To the Editors and the Student Body:

Is the Rotunda at such a loss for editorials that it has to resort to the criticism of an organization that it knows little about? If the editorial, in the May 3 issue of the Rotunda entitled "Why Chi?", had been based on substantial evidence, and had contained constructive criticism, we would have accepted it and appreciated the interest shown by one who was trying to better our organization, for we realize that no organization is perfect. But this editorial, written in a sarcastic tone, has caused considerable injustice not only to the immediate members of Chi, but also to those in the past, as well as to its advisor, Mr. French, who, we all know, has the best interest of the College and its students at heart.

You have asked, "What Chi has accomplished...?" You have asked, "What...are Chi's objectives;" does it have a "purpose for existence"; and "Why cannot this be made public?" We would like to state that we do have a purpose: we have accomplishments to our credit; but these cannot be made public. Let us quote to you a definition of the word "secret": "withdrawal from public view or knowledge; that which is purposively concealed or left untold; not revealed." Chi is a "secret organization" and acts as a secret organization. Therefore, in order to retain this title, it is obvious that our objectives, and the outcome of our objectives must be "concealed or left untold. "It is often times advantageous to go about one's activities quietly without "trumpets".

You have questioned our right to existence. We question your right to question "our right to existence." Secret organizations stand on many "modern college campuses" throughout the country, and we assume that Longwood is a modern college. The actual purposes and objectives of these organizations are seldom questioned or presented openly to the student body. "Is Longwood College to be an exception?"

You referred to "walkirig" and "burning" as our "two outstanding achievements...during the current session." We regret that you have misinterpreted these as achievements, for as you say, "these two were not very outstanding." We ourselves do not consider these as "achievements."



Any group on campus should have as its aim the betterment of the College. We feel that commending people rather than constantly condemning them can be a great step in this endeavor toward retaining the spirit of our College. If the student body (of which we, as Chi, are members) could emphasize the many pleasant and laudable aspects of our College life rather than those which create an abundance of gripes and complaints, the spirit would be the "true Longwood spirit."

"'Chi's burning...the cry echoed down the corridors of Longwood College." This echo is part of a tradition which has existed on this campus for over a quarter of a century. You can't kill such a tradition by a few critical articles in the College paper, creating detrimental attitudes among the student body. Chi is persistent and will continue to be so. Efforts to destroy it in a drive to improve the "campus already overcrowded with organizations" are futile.

We do not exist on campus "as a 'Boogie Man' to scare the student body into obeying the rules and regulations of the College", for after all, we too are students; and when we signed the Honor Code, we pledged ourselves to respect and abide by it as every student should. If you have misinterpreted our action as "scare tactics" and if the student body goes into "periodic furors," as the editorial claims, it seems you are insinuating that the student body is not so adult after all, if "adults seldom respond to scare tactics."

In conclusion, Chi is a secret organization with secret purposes and objectives; therefore, we see no reason to publicize them. We are cooperating with the administration and will continue to do so. If our cause were not worthy, authority, better informed than

Softball Tops For Dull Afternoons May Help Class Win Color Cup Too

by Lou Jamison

Are your afternoons dull? Would you like something exciting to do? If you would, I'll let you in on that exciting something. Out on the athletic field each Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday at 5:00 p. m. is the most terrific game of softball you would ever want to play.

Can't you picture it? You walk up to the plate, pick up the bat, and wait for the pitch. There it comes — it's low for ball one. You take your stance again. This time it's a fast incurve. You swing—pow—and it goes far into left field for a home run. You did it once; you can do it again and this time for your class team!

What's that you say? I haven't convinced you yet? Listen to this then: Today is the day of the big game. There's Red and White against Green and White. Boy, what a game! Here you come up to bat again, and the bases are loaded. It's the last of the final inning, and the score's tied. Your team has two outs, so the game is up to you. Are you going to strike out, hit a pop fly ball, or pull through with that good old home run? Remember, what ever you do that your team is depending on you. Without you there isn't any team.

Let's get this ball (softball, that is) rolling! Come out all you red and green blooded Longwood gals and support your colors. Get in your eight practices, so you'll be out there slugging for your team. Be useful instead of being an afternoon Sad Sack singing the "This-is-such-a-dull-place-blues." After all, everyone agrees the Color Cup is worth winning.

Journalism Group To Sponsor Picnic

The Journalism Club will sponsor a picnic supper for the members of the three major publications' on Thursday, May 18, from 4 to 6 p. m. Both new and old staffs of the Virginian, the Colonnade, and the Rotunda have been invited to attend the picnic which will be held at Hampden-Sydney.

Members of the staffs wishing to attend the picnic should contact their editors as soon as possible. There will be a charge of 50c per person for the supper. Transportation will be furnished by the Journalism Club.

TENNIS TEAM DROPS PROPOSED MATCHES

Proposed matches with Bridgewater, Roanoke, and Hampden-Sydney Colleges were tossed aside Friday afternoon by the net squad. The recent and late organization of the tennis team gives possibilities for only a limited amount of matches for the current season. It is felt by a majority of the team that numerous scheduled events at this late date in the season would critically effect the present and more important activities on the campus, mainly, the Men's Production, which is to be held by the Men's AA this Friday night. The Production is at the present time the only practical means of raising funds for the continuation of men's intercollegiate athletics at Longwood.

The tennis team may, however, schedule two more contests with the relatively close Lynchburg College junior varsity, if satisfactory dates can be arranged between the two schools again.

PIONEERS MAY DROP H. S. FROM SPORTS SLATE

The Longwood men in the past have scheduled the Hampden-Sydney College athletic teams in all sports in which the two schools have been able to compete on comparatively equal terms. This policy may in the near future be discontinued. The relative closeness of the two schools can be advantageous but in many instances the intense rivalry that usally develops, produces serious and undesired consequences.

HOGAN TIES PGA RECORD WITH 259 (AP)

Bantam Hogan made good his "come back" to professional golf by winning the 72 hole $10,000 Greenbrier Open with a record-tying 21-under-par 259.

It was Hogan's first PGA tournament victory since his return to tournament wars after a near fatal automobile accident in February 1948. Hogan has been trying to win since January. On the first attempt he tier Sam Snead at the Los Angeles Open with 280, but later lost in the play off. He lead the field for a while in the Masters, but faded in the final rounds. His late victory netted him $1,250. Snead was second, ten strokes behind winning $1,050.

SNAGS . . .

One of the brightest new stars on the University of North Carolina tennis horizon is Delmer Sylvia, a freshman from Richmond. Sylvia, a State scholastic champion while at Thomas Jefferson high school, has been playing in the No. 1. slot for the Tarheel Babies, but recently was declared ineligible for further freshman competition—Sylvia attended the Richmond Professional Institute for a semester before going to Carolina . . . Hampden-Sydney baseball team began ounce more clubbing its foe after dropping three straight games, as they trounced Roanoked 15-2. The Tigers have temporarily lost a step in the State Championship Bid . . . The Boston Red Sox moved back up within 42 percentage points of first place after their feeble opening performances . . . From the books the Washington Senators are playing way above their heads at .500 ball thus far.

Lynchburg Junior Varsity Defeats Pioneer Tennis Club

Groups Play Match At Lynchburg

The newly organized Pioneer tennis team saw its second 8-1 defeat last Friday afternoon at the hands of the Lynchburg College Junior Varsity. The match was played on the Lynchburg courts.

Lester Smallwood, Pioneer player coach, had an unexpected marathon with the Baby Hornets new no. 1 man, Jack Cook. Smallwood came from behind in two sets to clinch the only Pioneer tally, 7-5, 7-5. Calvin Hatcher, currently the No. 3 or 4 man, replaced Smallwood in the No. 1 doubles and teamed with Hunter Joe Benedict, who played the No. 2 position for the first time — they gave the Baby Hornets' top duet a run for their money before dropping out 6-2, 6-4.

Sportin' Around

by Ann Lynch

The golf tournament, originally scheduled to begin next week, has been postponed 'til May 15, so you've got another week for practicing up. Arrangements may be made with Mr. Graham to go to the Estate almost any day to practice. The tournament will be made up entirely of Longwood girls—by the way, it's not too late yet to sign up on the A.A. bulletin board for the tournament if you hurry.

The College chalked up another "first" this week by entering a national archery tournament, which Longwood has never done previous to this date. The contest is now underway. Class tournaments in archery will be held as previously scheduled.

Softball practice has begun and wil continue for about two weeks. At the end of the two weeks, Green n' Whites and Red n' Whites will be up there slugging it out for the color cup, so you better be gettin' in shape pronto.

WHO'S —IN THE— Senior Spotlight?

Miss Lackey and Miss Edwards were the seniors in last week's spotlight.

This week's senior is a lass with brown hair and hazel eyes. She is majoring in biology and chemistry.

Her special interests and what she hopes to do after college seem to center about the same thing, that of eating and finding a good job. There have been hopes, or should I say wishes, of going to Oak Ridge in Tennessee to find that job.

This college gal has served as president of Alpha Sigma Alpha, social sorority; and vice president of Student Government this year. She is also a member of Cotillion Club, Monogram Club, Alpha Kappa Gamma, Chi, and May Court. Just wander down the alphabet a couple of steps. You'll catch on.

The spotlight now shines on a senior who hopes to, after she graduates, leave her shoes in Virginia and go to the University of Tennessee to go to school some more.

This phys. ed. major whose special interests center right here at Longwood in the Athletic Association and a certain man student, has had her troubles. I'm sure you'll know who I mean when I remind you that ye olde Plymouth would never start on the days she had to go to Rice to student teach.

Serving as president of the A.A. this year, she is also a member of Cotillion Club, Alpha Kappa Gamma, Alpha Sigma Alpha, social sorority, Kappa Delta Pi, and Orchesis.

Watercolor Oils

The work of the watercolor and oil classes has received special emphasis this year. Examples representing the best student work done in these classes throughout the year are on display in the browsing room of the Library and in the galley between the west wing of Ruffner Hall and Library Hall. Additional work of the ceramics class is on display on the main floor of the Library.

Among the students who have work on display in the annual student art exhibit are Helen Arrington, Ruth Hathaway, Anne Kelly, Pat Paddison, Jean Turner, Charlotte Newell, Elizabeth Buck, and Emma Mae Pittard.

June Smith, Hattie Swihart, Joan Pritchett, Mary Moore Karr, Lucy Jane Morton, Nell Gilley, Jean Gilman, and Bunny Ricks are also among those whose work is on display.

Others who have art work in the exhibit are Roberta Browning, Gene Moore, Hunter Jo Benedict, Ed Parks, Barbara Andrews, Tommy Beckham, Anne Nicholas, and John Cook.

Anne Lawrence, Mary Helen Cook, Harriet Minichan, Jan Van Horn, Dorothy Fugate, Mary Steele, Earline Harding, Wanda Karlet and Lou Jamison also are represented in the exhibit.

All of the classes which are represented in the exhibit are taught by Miss Virginia Bedford, Mrs. Janice Lemon, or Mr. Robert Vickers.

2. To call a sufficient number of meetings to cover all business and to keep the men's student body well informed as to all matters pertaining to their status.
3. To improve and promote interest in the Student Government and to better co-educational relationships.
4. To develop and carry out a well organized program to raise funds for the Men's Student Government.
5. To stress the importance of co-education in teachers' colleges throughout the state of Virginia.

Alpha Kappa Gamma Bids 4 Juniors to Group At Assembly Thursday

Chapel Features Joan Of Arc Slides

Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary leadership fraternity, tapped four girls for membership at the assembly program last week.

Those who were recognized for their leadership ability are Anne Lynch, Romine Mahood, Virginia Spencer, and Mary Crowder.

A program of slides depicting the life of Joan of Arc, patron saint of the Longwood chapter of Alpha Kappa Gamma, was also presented to the assembly.

AA President

Anne is president of the Athletic Association, and served this past session as secretary of the A. A. Council. She is also a member of the Monogram Club, and has served as sports editor for the Rotunda during the past year. Anne is a member of the Cotillion club and Pi Kappa Sigma social sorority.

Romine Mahood has recently been elected to serve as vice-president of the Women's Student Government Association. She represented her class on the Student Government Council during the past year. She served as treasurer of her class during her freshman year, and vice-president of the class this year. A member of the Journalism Club, Romine has worked on the Virginian staff for two years. This year she holds the position of assistant business manager of the annual. Romine is a member of the Monogram Club, Cotillion Club and Apha Sigma Alpha social sorority.

Y' President

Virginia Spencer has recently taken over the position of president of the Y. W. C. A. She served during the past session as secretary of the Y' cabinet. Ginny has been associated with the choir for three years; she also served as president of Alpha Phi Sigma, honorary scholastic fraternity, during her sophomore year. She is now a member of the Future Teachers of America, Kappa Delta Pi, honorary education fraternity, and Le Cercle Francais. Serving as secretary of the Association for Childhood Education this year, she also worked as literary editor of the Virginian. Ginny is a member of Theta Sigma Upsilon social sorority.

Mary Crowder served as treasurer of the Athletic Association Council during this past year, and is now chairman of the social committee for the A. A. She holds the position of vice-president of the Commercial Club and is a member of Kappa Delta Pi, Future Teachers of America and the Monogram Club. Mary is also a member of the Cotillion Club and Pi Kappa Sigma social sorority.

Britannica Company Offers Summer Jobs

Encyclopedia Britannica, Inc., will offer summer vacation work to undergraduate students.

The work will involve showing Britannica educational programs and Britannica Junior educational programs to interested parents and teachers during the summer months. Mr. J. C. Lienhard, Richmond branch manager, has announced that students may earn between $75 and $125 per week in this work. Further information may be obtained from the address printed in the Britannica advertisement in this issue.

Choir To Present Assembly Program Of Special Music

Asher To Serve As Accompanist

The College Choir, under the direction of Dr. John Molnar, will present a program in assembly tomorrow. Puckett Asher will serve as accompanist for the group.

Two ecclesiastical selections, "Ave Maria" by Vittoria and "Ave Verum" by De Pres, will begin the concert, followed by Robertson's "All in The April Evening," and Mozart's "Alleiujah."

A group of Scottish folk songs presented by the chorus will include "O Can Ye Sew Cushions" by Bantock and Robertson's "Flowers O' The Forest." An English folk song, "My Love Dwelt in a Northern Land" by Elgar will also be included in selections given by the chorus.

The Madrigal Singers will present two selections including Shubert's "Serenade" and "Lass With a Delicate Air" by Arne.

The next group of selections will include "Chanson Indoue" from "Sadko" by Rimsky-Korsakov and "Chorus of the Polvetzian Maidens" from "Prince Igor" by Barodin. "Russian Picnic" by Enders will also be among the numbers in this group.

"Let My Song Fill Your Heart," a composition by the American composer Charles, will complete the program of special music.

Pres. Lancaster Attends Meeting

President Dabney S. Lancaster attended a joint meeting of the education committees of the governor's council on State's Economy in Richmond yesterday.

Dr. Lancaster presented a report on teacher's education to the group. An account of the year's work in teacher's education was also submitted to the committees.

Journalism Fraternity Will Install Chapter Here

12 Charter Members To Be Initiated At Service Saturday

The Longwood chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon will be installed this Saturday at special services conducted by Mr. Edward McDonald, grand executive secretary-treasurer of the national honorary collegiate journalism fraternity.

The installation of the chapter and the initiation of the 12 charter members of the group will be held at 2 p. m. Saturday. The other members of the group will be initiated at 4 p. m. followed by a banquet at the Hotel Weyanoke at 6 p. m.

The Journalism Club which has recently had its petition accepted by Pi Delta Epsilon was formed on the Longwood campus last spring by a group of 12 students. These students represented the three major publications on campus, the Colonnade, the Virginian, and the Rotunda. Their main objective in forming the club was the establishment on the campus of a chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon to recognize the journalistic achievements of the members of the publications' staffs.

Requirements

Members of both the editorial and business staffs of the publications are eligible to membership in the fraternity. Membership is limited, however, to juniors and seniors who hold a position equivalent to department head and who have served a year or more on the staff of one of the publications or who have served two years. Editors-in-chief and business managers are automatically eligible to membership regardless of their length of service.

In addition to the 12 charter members, two members of the faculty, Mr. Thomas A. McCorkle and Dr. Marvin W. Schlegel, and ten new members of the club will be initiated Saturday. Among the charter group are three alumnae, Lee Robertson, former photographer for the Colonnade and the Rotunda; Anne Orgain, former business manager of the Rotunda; and Betty Spindler, former editor-in-chief of the Rotunda.

LC Men Restate Platforms

Smallwood Stresses Drive, Enthusiasm

by Lester Smallwood

Popularity is to no extent a measure of ability. But ability is not the only characteristic that the presidency of the Student Government now demands. It also requires an unlimited supply of enthusiasm, "drive", and determination, that has but one major interest at heart—the betterment of the Government. This is no time for the installation of any soft-peddled dead beat who has not the rigid specifications which the office now demands.

The past Student Government recognizably has been a heterogeneous group of views, principles, and beliefs. Often prejudice crept into issues to knot up the sincere efforts of those elected to leadership. There has been, surprisingly enough, big things accomplished this year, but the need of tomor-

The Men's Student Government has the job during the next scholastic year of establishing a well-rounded program. This program should have a three fold purpose; first, to legalize co-education at Longwood College; second, to create interest and pride among the students in their school; and third, to increase the enrollment of men at this institution.

It is therefore necessary that we place in office a man who is familiar with the present organization and program of Student Government, and one who realizes the deficiencies of this organization. A man with the experience that will enable him to meet the problems that will arise with the best solutions.

Longwood Acquires Culture In Large Doses From Men

by Billy Barber

Culture came to Longwood College Friday night, when the Men's A. A. Association decided that it was high time the girls absorbed some of said culture. In a series of skits, songs, and dances called "How to Be An Educated Fool," they poked fun at the female members of this so called "Institute of Higher Learning." Leonard Shaw as master of ceremonies, introduced the typical college girl, impersonated by Frank Vaughan, who sang, "I Can't Make my 'C' Average." Next claiming that the girl's main objective was getting a man, they showed their ideas on how to get and much more important, keep one. Their ideas on the subject were uproarous, first catching him by a flying tackle and then a typical breakfast scene and getting up in the morning as two excellent ways to get rid of him once you have him fastened securely to your hook.

Bill Beamer posed as a girl that couldn't be cultured when he sang, "You Can't Make A Lady Out Of Me." Next on the list of culture was the Samba. The boys went through a typical samba routine with chorus lines. The only word that could possibly describe the costumes or the dance is unique.

The men decided that a famous painting who came to life would have something cultural to say. Their first choice was Whistler's Mother, who gave out with "Hey Baba Riba." Three famous musical sisters of Boston were next with the latest in hillbilly songs. Soyas graceful ballet girls had nothing to say, but they didn't need words. This skit had the audience in stitches and by this time they were ready for any unexpected developments. The last painting "High Yellow," featured a terrific dance by Hunter Joe Benedict and Bill Beamer.

A fashion expert straight from London brought some of the latest fashions. Most of them were a little extreme for any of the LC girls to wear to class, but the coeds might appreciate some of them on a movie date. Besides all these educational numbers there were several songs strictly for amusement. "Fats" Bobb sang, "Toot Toot Tootsie, Goodbye" and "I Can't Give You Anything But Love"; a blackface trio rendered "Steal Away," as the closing number.

Page and Ann Burnett played between costume changes and accompanied the acts, to add much to the show. The Men's Production was, everyone will agree, one of the best to be seen at LC. If that is culture then I'm all for it.

KDP Will Honor Dean's List Group

The annual tea honoring the members of the freshman and sophomore classes on Dean's List will be given by Kappa Delta Pi tomorrow afternoon from 4:15 to 5:15 in the Student Lounge. Hilda Bouserman, newly elected president of the national honor society in education, announced that all freshmen and sophomores on Dean's List, all members of the faculty, and all old members of Kappa Delta Pi have been invited to the tea.

Among the students in the receiving line will be Judy Hughes, retiring president and the newly elected officers, Hilda, president; Alma Bedinger, vice-president; Polly Powers, treasurer; Emma Mae Pitttard, treasurer; and Mary Leigh Meredith, historian.

LC Literary Society To Present Program Of Virginia Poets

Boerc Eh Thorn, honorary English society, will present a program featuring the works of Virginia poets over the "Longwood Hour" on May 18.

Lois Stevens, president of the society, will act as student announcer for the program. Betty Johnson, Ann Langbein, Beverly Smethie, John Cook and Page Joyner, will participate in the program by reading selections from the works of Virginia poets. A summary of the work now being done by the Poet Laureate of Virginia, Mrs. Ruby Altizer Roberts, will also be included in the program.

College Profs Give Talks

Dr. M. L. Landrum and Mr. Norman O. Myers of Longwood College attended the spring meeting of the Virginia Business Education Association and In-Service Teacher's Training Conference, which was held at the Hotel Roanoke. The Convention theme was "Evaluation of Outcomes in Business Education."

Mr. Myers and Dr. Vance T. Littlejohn, head of the Department of Business Education, Woman's College, University of North Carolina, were the guest speakers for the sectional meeting on typewriting.

Richmonders Elect Williams President, Caskey Vice-Head

Charlotte Williams was elected president of the Richmond club at a meeting held early this week.

Barbara Caskey, a rising sophomore, was elected to the office of vice-president. Chosen to serve as secretary-treasurer was Dot Dunford. Virginia McLean will serve as reporter for the club next year.

The Club will hold a picnic at the College Estate tomorrow afternoon. All students from Richmond have been invited to attend.

A tea for incoming freshmen will be held in Richmond during the summer, Polly Nassar, president of the club, has announced.

Men To Vote On May 18, 19

Lester Smallwood, Jimmy Thompson, and Frank Vaughan have begun their respective campaigns for presidency of the Men's Student Government. Jack Huegel is running for vice-president on the Popular ticket with Frank Vaughan, and Lester Smallwood is being sponsored by the Progressive party. Jimmy Thompson represents no distinct student party. Harold Hutter, who is also a candidate for the vice-president's post has not affiliated with any group or party.

During the election which will be held May 18 and 19, a government secretary and treasurer will also be chosen. Bill Overby and Madison McClintic are candidates for the secretarial position and Hunter Joe Benedict and Leonard Shaw have been nominated for the post of Treasurer.

Lester Smallwood, junior from Boydton, served this year on the men's division of the A.A. Council, and as the men's fire marshall. Filling the post of columnist and sports editor for the Rotunda, Smallwood also has been feature and sports writer for the Colonnade. He served this year as player-coach of the Pioneer basketball and tennis teams and has organized and directed the tennis tournament during the summer of 1949. At present, Smallwood is a member of the committee to produce a Handbook for the men in 1951.

Smallwood has set up a platform of fifteen points which stress the stand the Progressive party will take in the election. These fifteen points bring out the proposed plans of the party which include "Intensive specific improvements with continued cooperation with the administration and women student organizations."

Jimmy Thompson, an incoming senior from Crewe, served this year as chairman of the Men's Recreational Activities committee and was a member of the executive committee of the Men's Student Government. He also headed the committee for organizing Tau Theta Pi, local social fraternity.

Mr. Myers Speaks To Men's Fraternity At Business Meeting

Mr. Norman O. Myers, recently elected Faculty Advisor to Tau Theta Pi, the newly formed men's social fraternity, spoke to the group last Wednesday evening at a regular business meeting.

Mr. Myers commended the group for the "Democratic spirit" of its constitution and told the men that if its provisions are enforced and adhered to its success will be assured. He concluded his remarks with the assurance of Administration and Faculty support for the fraternity.

Notice

The publications picnic, sponsored by the Journalism Club, and scheduled for Thursday, May 18, has been canceled due to conflicting schedules.

Money for the picnic will be refunded to members of the publications who have paid.

Pioneer Spirit . . .

In naming their athletic teams the Pioneers, the men very aptly have tagged their whole group. In the past two weeks, they have pioneered in a new field, one that should have interesting and far-reaching results. For the first time in Longwood history, candidates for a major office are stating their platforms in regard to the office they hope to fill and are advertising their qualifications. In the past few days, three respective campaigns have gotten under way with a gusto that reminds us of Mr. Truman's efforts in 1948.

The men cannot be commended highly enough for the spirit they've shown in this as well as in every phase of College activities. It has been only a short time since the male population at Longwood received quite a slap in the face from the State legislature in the form of a negative attitude on the co-educational bill. This was blow enough to bring chaos and disorganization even to a much better established group. On the contrary, however, the men not only stuck together, they pushed forward together.

Their first move after learning they were "illegal" was to establish a committee to protest that legislature's actions in the Southside newspapers. The committee did a splendid job. Since then, they have shown increasing interest in the College and their status here. Last Friday, the Longwood women saw a production written, produced, and acted entirely by the men in an effort to raise funds for their Athletic Association. At present, they are going all out for a campaign that will insure their getting the best man to head their group.

The much-talked-of Longwood spirit has found a partner and perhaps even a rival in the Pioneer spirit that has developed in the men's student body. If its present pace is an indication, this spirit is going to push forward until Longwood is a recognized and well established co-educational college.

The 'Ayes' Have It . . .

Music, music everywhere . . . at least that's the way it looks from here. According to a recent poll taken among students of the four classes, the "ayes" have it when the question is raised concerning a Longwood College orchestra. Many seem to feel that the presence of such a musical group in the College would not only be enjoyment for everybody, but it would also put the College on a level with larger colleges and would interest more music majors.

Dr. John Molnar, head of the Longwood music department has announced that next year, the school will have a library of orchestra and band music and funds for the purchase of instruments making the establishment of an orchestra possible. Any student who has an instrument at home is cordially invited to bring it to college next fall and join in with the music making . . . either the band or the orchestra. Knowing how to play is not a prerequisite. There will be string and woodwind classes next year where students can receive credits while they're learning to play. Dr. Molnar also said that any student who did not have an instrument, yet wishes to play, could let him know, and instruments would be ordered during the summer.

Here's the chance—the College campus is expanding; why can't the College talent? Interest was evident in the results of the poll; that interest should be transformed to action.

A Good Example . . .

The Rotunda this week continues the statements of and for the candidates for president of the Men's Student Government Association. The pocket-size political campaign which the men have been and are conducting has been backed whole-heartedly by the men. Not one of the men who will cast their votes tomorrow and the next day can say that they do not know the views or plans of the man for whom they vote.

The Rotunda would like to see a similar campaign conducted by the women students in the race for presidency of the Women's Student Government. In order to vote intelligently, the voter must be granted an opportunity to know for whom and what he is voting. To a large extent such an opportunity is denied the women student.

Many Thanks . . .

Under the heading "We Want Out . . ." the Rotunda in the April 19 issue presented the case of the sophomores trapped by the multitude of meetings held in the Student Lounge. Since that time the number of meetings held there has been cut to the barest minimum.

Many thanks are in order to the members of the faculty and student body responsible for rerouting these meetings. The sophomores and the members of other classes attending or returning from meetings in the Student Building are no longer trapped within the building. We appreciate the cooperation of those who made this statement possible.

BIRD'S EYE VIEW

by jacky eagle

Senior birds yesterday left the school in a twitter of excitement as they pulled their surprise "Senior Sneak Day" coup. Participants in the administration-sanctioned walkout are taking their bows for the best-kept secret since the atomic bomb. Unlike the Russians in the UN the seniors were obliged to return from their temporary boycott of classes in order to settle down to concentration on graduation.

The local aviary has recently cited "Oot" Newell as being the member most deserving of a rose pinned on her shirt. Oot's citation comes as a result of her heroic and human action in rescuing a wobinwed-bweast trapped in the hot house last Sunday morning. "Operation Liberation" was accomplished in the best tradition of the friendly fowl with complete unruffled calm on the part of the liberator and a minimum loss of tail-feathers on the part of the liberated.

Tracking Truman in his far-flung political stomping tour and keeping up with Congressional scraps over Fair Employment Practices legislation and the bulging budget was just too much "strain" on our beady eye in this week's survey. But focussing on West Germany revealed quite a hopeful eyeful.

Here we saw our non-Communist friends holding their own against their Red cousins in free elections, West Germany being counted in on plans for the Council of Europe, and France and West Germany together working out a common destiny through a projected steel cooperative agreement. Keeping up the good work, West Germany should have some accomplishments to crow over by next fall, in spite of the national handicap of remaining treatyless and bisected.

Letters To Editor

Dear Editors:

We as a group are writing you concerning your editorial which appeared in the May 3rd issue of the Rotunda, entitled "Why Chi?" It is our opinion that this organization has a purpose which cannot be revealed for reasons of its own. If the administration and Student Council recognize Chi and respect its opinions on matters, then who are we to question Chi and its purposes? Chi would not be a secret organization if its purposes were made known to the public.

In our short time here, we have come to respect Chi and its purposes, whatever they may be. We feel that they uphold certain standards of the College which no other organization upholds. They do not appear to us as a "Boogie Man" organization and we do not fear them at all.

In closing, we should like to say that there are many others who have the same opinion as we.

Sincerely yours,
Helen E. Castros
Ann Crowder
M. Frances Joseph

Dear Editors:

After having worked as President of the Men's Student Government throughout the current year, I feel that I am in a position to have a fair knowledge of the conditions (merits and liabilities) of the Men's Student Government Organization.

I feel that this past year's government has often lacked efficiency, cooperation and enthusiasm. In many instances important functions of the government have failed due to the lack of interest on the part of its members — many issues were left undone.

I believe that a strong candidate is now both necessary and urgent. He must be a man of action with disgression and enthusiasm, particularly at this critical time of coeducational controversies. He must be a "pusher," an organizer, and an efficient and capable leader in every sense of the word. This all, to me, points to one and only one, namely Lester Smallwood.

During the summer of '49 Lester organized and directed the most successful summer tennis tournament at Longwood, when basketball was organized he put in endless hours of hard work as coach and captain before seeing the activity a success. This venture might have failed as it had twice previously, had not Lester continued his untiring efforts. He was often under much criticism, but he never once stopped working for the team's progress.

I feel that one of the biggest mistakes which I have made this year as President of the Men's Student Government was in failing to appoint him as a member of the Student Government Council, for he has been of invaluable service to me throughout the year in many instances, particularly when after having appointed committees which failed to function, I very often found myself going to Lester for help, advice and constructive criticism, for I knew that he was one man on the campus who had the interest of the Longwood men at heart and he would work with me on anything which I might have asked him.

Although he is scheduled to graduate in February, I feel that if the student government fails to elect him President it will have lost its most able leader, whose potentialities, I feel assured, are unexcelled at Longwood. I think that it is extremely important that in our election of men student government officers every man should vote the way his honest opinion directs his judgements of the most capable candidate, for the most important office of all — President of the Student Government. I wish to emphasize the fact that this election is not by any means a popularity contest.

Sincerely yours,
Calvin Hatcher

GILLIE AND BORUM REACH FINALS

The latest action in the world of sports at Longwood is on the tennis courts, where the women's doubles tournament is closely maturing to the predicted hotly contested finals. Nancy Gillie, runner-up in the fall singles competition, is teamed with Clara Borum, a sparkling freshman standout, to offer the hotest current court action, under the green and white stripes. The Gillie-Borum combination has lost but four games in downing both the quarter and semi-finalists.

The greatest opposition to Gillie and Borum will most likely come from the slightly favored Frances Allen-Betty Ferguson duet. The Gillie-Borum vs. Allen-Ferguson affair would almost be a toss of the coin. Gillie and Borum are probably weaker sing but often times two such players turn out a terrifically air-tight doubles team by the overlapping of weaker by stronger points in the doubles positions.

In general serious double matches are but a contest between the two weakest opposing players. This would throw our proposed match to Borum vs. Ferguson; it would to Borum's smashing serve against Ferguson's consistent ground game. The edge is usually given to the server. This would indicate a green and white victory, but the determined effort of Allen will not remain still, and so the more experienced red and white combination is favored, however, only slightly. It all seems to indicate an exciting match to observe.

LOYOLA TAKES M-D TITLE BY H. S.'S DEFAULT

Loyola, underfeated Northern Division winner, was announced last Monday as the Mason Dixon Conference Champion. The Greyhounds were declared the titlists because the Hampden-Sydney club declared that the Tigers would be unable to play in the scheduled playoffs. H. S. clinched the Southern Division title last week by finishing with a seven-Zero mark. The Tigers declined the playoffs because of its unusual comparatively early examination period. The rule states that when one league titlists declines then the championship goes to the other. There are many that feel that the second club in the Division should be allowed to play in the playoffs in the declined club's place.

SNAGS . . .

Bob Feller, Cleveland's sensational fireballer who in the last couple years has cooled down, hit his 6th home run in 14 years of baseball against the Chicago White Sox last Sunday . . . Tunney wishes that Dempsey would have fought him for the third time after the "long count" bout in 1927 when Tunney retained heavyweight world's championship he took from Dempsey a year earlier. Tunney believes they would have drawn $3,000,000 . . . Thomas Jefferson High School of Richmond romped to its second successive State tennis championship by crushing Jefferson Senior, of Roanoke, 8-1 . . . VPI blanked Virginia's underfeated baseball team by a convincing 9-0 margin. The Cavalier's received only 3 hits. This puts Tech and the Hampden-Sydney Tigers back in the running for the State crown.

Local Dance Group Choses Becknor Head For Coming Session

Marion Beckner was elected president of Orchesis, local modern dance group, at a recent meeting. Edith Duma was elected secretary-treasurer at this time also. Jean Ridenour was chosen to serve as costume chairman for the group, and Joanne McCombs will act as her assistant.

Orchesis issued bids to eight girls recently. Among those receiving bids were Helen Egerton, Jesse Carson, Dolores Hoback, and Ann Crowder.

Also receiving bids were Jane Lee Kellogg, Marjorie Hood, Jean Elliott and Sarah Crocker.

Men To Vote

Thompson played on the Pioneer basketball team this winter, and is now a member of the tennis team.

Thompson has advocated in his platform keeping the men well informed as to the functioning of their government; promoting interest in the government; improving co-educational relationships; and raising funds for the Student Government. He has also pledged himself to keep restrictions to a minimum except where they are absolutely necessary and definitely advantageous; and stressing the importance of co-education in teacher's colleges in Virginia.

The Popular party with Frank Vaughan as its presidential candidate has developed a platform which includes a workable honor code; improved relations with the Women's Student Government; and a program to arouse student spirit. He also advocates cooperation with the Athletic Association; advancing the legislation of co-education at Longwood; and establishing reliable government committees.

Winner's Pts. To Go Toward Color Cups

The first round of the Spring double tennis matches which were scheduled to be played off by Monday May 1, had to be delayed until Tuesday May 9, because of wet courts. The first round found Ridenour and Beckner losing to Gillie and Borum, 6-0, 6-2, and Jamison and Obenshain losing to Allen and Ferguson 6-1, 6-1.

One game in the second round has been played off. Hayden and Boswick losing to Gillie and Borum, 6-0, 6-2. The other game in the second round is Ferguson and Allen against Jardine and Hoback. The winners of this match will play Gillie and Borum for the final match which will give points toward the color cup.

Sportin' Around

by Lou Jamison

In spite of all our new scientific knowledge, it seems that the weather triumphs over everything. The spring double tennis matches are no exception. With one weeks delay the first round was finally played off. I can't predict any outcome for you, as Red and White and Green and White are neck and neck up to this point. But we should know the final outcome this week.

If you're planning to stroll across the Athletic Field between 3 and 5 p. m. this week, I'd advise you not to try it. All our Longwood Robinhoods are out there pulling for their colors in the archery tournament. The tournament is really no cinch this year, as each person must shoot 24 arrows at 50, 40, and 30 yards distance from the target. Believe me, at 50 yards hitting that target is like finding the well known needle in a hay stack. Your guess is as good as mine concerning the winner.

Those of you who like to swing a mean club (golf club, that is) and have signed up for the golf tournament are in for a week of swinging. The tournament began Monday and will end Friday. I'm sure glad I'm not a golf ball!

Senior Spotlight?

Martha "B" Hylton and Ray Phillips were the seniors featured in last week's spotlight.

Roommates popped up this week to bask in the senior spotlight. The first of these was a brown-haired, hazel eyed gal who majors in physical education.

Having spent the first semester of this year teaching at the high school and elementary school, she is spending this one worrying about the typical senior question, "Where can I find a job?"

This senior Miss has served as president of the senior class this past year. She is a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary leadership fraternity; Orchesis, Alpha Sigma Alpha, social sorority; Monogram Club, Cotillion Club, Athletic Association Council and Chi. She was also chosen as one of the Longwood seniors in Who's Who and May Day.

In case there's anyone who is having trouble guessing her identity, this week's senior has terrifically short hair.

The second of this week's pair has brown hair and blue eyes. She, too, seems to like physical education 'cause that's her major. She taught in the elementary school her first semester.

This college gal has special interests in Tech and Virginia Beach. Sounds good, huh? Oh yes, she'll be teaching in Winchester next year.

An outstanding member of the senior class, she has served as president of the Monogram Club, H2O Club, and captain of the varsity basketball and hockey teams. She was chosen this year as Alpha Girl of Alpha Sigma Alpha, social sorority. This week's senior is a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary leadership fraternity; Future Teachers of America, Cotillion Club, Orchesis, and Athletic Assocation council.

Still wondering? Well, she gave me permission to remind you that people often tease her about her "walk."

Just think only a few more weeks 'till the daisy chain and the weeping? seniors. Don't worry seniors—at the rate most of us are goin—you can come back within the next trillion light years and we'll still be here.

Hope all you had a happy mother's day—see you next week. I hope.

Clark Enumerates

Jimmy Thompson is the only candidate for the presidency of the Men's Student Government who has served on the governing body of that organization as a member of the Executive Committee.

He has served as chairman of the circus committee for two years, which has been the major source of income.

He has been active in all college activities such as basketball, circus, tennis and productions.

He served as chairman of the committee of organization for our local fraternity which is without a doubt the largest accomplishment of the Student Government to date.

He is a member of Tau Theta Pi and is well liked by the students and faculty.

"Every committee he has ever served on in Student Government has functioned", stated Calvin Hatcher, president of Student Government for the 1949-50 session.

Stuart McGhee, President of Student Government for the 1948-49 session has made the following statement: "This in no way is an indication of my preference of the candidate, but I would like to state that while I was president of the Men's Student Government, Jimmy Thompson was helpful and cooperative in the assignments given him."

When the polls open on Thursday, May 18, let us elect, as president of Student Government, a man who is the best qualified and will work to build a bigger and better organization in the 1950-51 session.

Smallwood Stresses

row over shadows such past monuments to a pin point. The constitution is but one example of the Government's infancy—it has still, as expected, many incompletions.

In the future ,the men at Longwood must seriously throw off all of these adolescent "plugs" to clear thinking, otherwise all of the past efforts of the men and even women will drown in vain, and only because of self-satisfied selfishness and neglect. We must think straight, clear ,and true regardless.

The Popular platform is too broad to have any real concrete meaning. Thompson's platform misses the vital issues and is filled with vague generalities.

Last year's Government had as an objective, "a workable honor code", but nothing was accomplished. As a voter you want to see how and why the Popular party believes that it will put over this important issue. Relations and cooperation with the Girl's Student Government and AA could not have been asked to have been more satisfactory.

How does the Popular party plan to boost the spirit—that's a very broad point indeed. The appointment of reliable committees is its only gratifying point. A program of emphasis for co-education is heartening, since the chairman of the all-important "letter" committee this year, did not see the job to its eventual completion. Yes ,as a voter you want omething a little more concrete than "positive influence" on "broad and intangible" points. You want to see definite and convincing proposed action on vital issues of the day.

Thompson's first point does not make sense. How can you obtain "protective rights"? And what "restrictions" are, or are about to be placed on the men here? Last year every Student Government meeting had an excellent attendance record, and all issues were brought to the floor and notices were posted. His third point on improving interest in Student Government is too broad — his platform should convincingly indicate this. His fund raising point is good. On his last point he goes flying off on a tangent. It happens to be too big a job for 27 men to teach the State the advantages of co-education — that is a minor point of many stronger points favoring co-education at State teacher's colleges.

Seniors To Be Feature Of Assembly Tomorrow; Awards To Be Presented

Seniors Bid Adieu In Song, Speech

Senior assembly will be held in the Methodist Church tomorrow at the regular assembly period.

Norma Roady, president of the 1950 senior class, will deliver a farewell speech and Betsy Gravely, president of the incoming senior class, will give a response.

The color cup award and other such awards will be made during the assembly. At this time, Betsy Gravely will announce the name of the senior whom the juniors have elected to be their honorary classman. Traditionally, the honorary classman returns in the fall to lead the figure for the senior dance with the president of that class.

The seniors will stand and sing their farewell songs to the College and upperclassmen. They will then form an arch with their caps, and the junior class will march out to the tune of "Red and White." The juniors will, at this marching, take the first step toward becoming full fledged seniors.

This will be the last assembly program of the year.

Seniors To Give Traditional Sing

The traditional senior sing will be held by the 1950 class Saturday, May 27, in the auditorium.

At this time the seniors will bestow upon the underclassmen their most cherished possessions acquired while at Longwood College. After the will has been carried out, the seniors will sing a few songs to their College and classmates.

This will be the last of the festivities of the seniors before the commencement week end begins. No parties or other entertainments have been scheduled during the week of examinations.

Final Colonnades To Be Distributed During This Week

Cover, Feature To Be Surprise

The third and last issue of the Colonnade for the present session will be distributed to the student body during the next several days, according to Edith Duma, editor-in-chief. The issue is the first to be put out by the new staff.

"The Notion," third prize winner in this year's Colonnade short story contest, written by Nancy Jeffreys, will appear in the magazine. "Poetry in Meditation," third prize winner in the poetry contest, will also be published in this issue. The poem was written by Barbara Andrews, former poetry editor.

Features Graduation

One of the main features of this issue will be an article on graduation, "Alma Mater, Farewell," by Grace Burton. "Goldilocks and the Three Squares," a satire on modern slang written by Joan Pritchett, will also appear in this issue of the magazine.

Articles and pictures concerning May Day celebration will also be included.

According to Edith, the cover of this last issue will be kept secret until distribution. She has also announced that the main feature of the magazine will be a surprise for the student body.

"These two surprise features of the last issue of the Colonnade will remain secret even to the ex-editor and senior members of the staff," said Edith.

Science Bldg. To Be Opened This Summer

Home Ec. Classes To Be Given Use Of Vacated Bldg.

Most of the science classes taught in the 1950 summer session will be conducted in the new Edith Stevens Science Hall, President Dabney S. Lancaster recently announced.

"The equipment is now being installed and it is hoped that the chemistry, physics, and science departments can move in before the summer session begins on June 19," said Dr. Lancaster.

"Due to some difficulties in securing the equipment for the biology department, that department will remain in the basement of the post office building for the summer session," he continued.

Home Ec. To Move

The old science building, which now houses the chemistry and physics departments and part of the home economics department will be given over entirely to the home economics group. The rooms on second floor Library hall which will be vacated by the home economics department will be used for the expansion of the art department.

Upon completion the new science building will be one of the finest in the State for colleges of our relative enrollment," remarked Dr. Lancaster. "It will be a credit to Longwood College."

The Edith Stevens science hall has been under construction since the fall of 1948. It is located on the south west corner of the campus, facing Chambers street. A three story brick building of modern design, the science hall will house the departments of chemistry, biology, science, and physics. A green-house for the use of the botany classes will be located at the rear of the building, and museum spaces for all four departments have been alloted on the second floor of the building.

Dr. Styles Will Deliver Speech To 1950 Graduating Class; Exercises To Be In Dining Hall

Commencement Rules Issued For Seniors, Little Sisters

Regulations for commencement week end have been issued to seniors and the little sisters or brothers by Mr. T. A. McCorkle.

Mr. McCorkle has asked that student participants in commencement follow these regulations carefully and report promptly to all appointments.

Senior Regulations

These regulations pertaining particularly to seniors are listed as follows:

Thursday, June 1—1:05 p. m. Seniors will report to the physics lab for their hoods.

Friday June 2—7:00 to ? Seniors will report to the recreation hall in main building for rehearsal. Seniors are asked to bring caps, hoods and be accompanied by their little sisters or brothers. Further instructions will be issued on arrival.

Class Day

Saturday, June 3—3:40 p. m. Seniors will assemble in front of Student Building for class day exercises. They will wear caps and gowns and bring little sisters or brothers with them.

Richmond Pastor To Address Srs.

Dr. Lindley J. Stiles, Dean of the School of Education of the University of Virginia, will deliver the commencement address to the class of 1950 at the commencement exercises in the College dining hall June 6.

Dr. Stiles' address and the awarding of diplomas will be the culminating event of the 1950 commencement week end which will begin with the traditional daisy chain on Saturday at 3 p. m.

Dr. Theodore Adams, of the First Baptist Church in Richmond, will deliver the baccalaureate address to the seniors in the Methodist Church at 8 p. m. on Sunday.

Class Day

The senior class day program will be presented immediately after the daisy chain on Saturday. Saturday night at 10:15 the seniors and their little sisters or brothers will march in the traditional lantern parade in front of the rotunda.

During the commencement services on Monday the College Choir, under the direction of Dr. John Molnar, will sing Mozart's "Alleluiah."

The announcement of the retiring faculty members and the new members of the faculty and staff will be made by President Dabney S. Lancaster.

Dr. Lancaster will award the degrees to the graduating seniors who will be hooded by their senior little sisters or brothers.

Students Make Plans For Coming Year; Majority Choose Teaching Profession

Of the 153 seniors who will be graduated from Longwood College on June 5 or at the end of the summer session, seventy-six already have made definite plans for next year. Not included in this number are those planning to get married in the near future and put in their time doing housework.

Four of the present seniors have made plans to continue their studies by doing graduate work. Barbara Andrews will attend Stetson University in Florida; Buddy Gentry will do graduate work at the University of Virginia; Jane Grey will do graduate work at Columbia; and Ray Phillips will continue her studies at the University of Tennessee.

Another four have already made plans to contribute their talents to fields other than teaching. Dot Carter will do home demonstration work in Appomattox; Helen Holbrook will work in Petersburg; Sally Land will work for the Virginia Electric Power Company in Richmond; and Laura Lee Stickley will work for the Appalachian Power Company in Lynchburg.

The teaching profession is making a mighty haul among the members of this class — 68 members of the class have signed teaching contracts for next year, according to Mrs. Mary W. Watkins, executive secretary of the College.

In or around (Henrico County) Richmond next year you will be able to find Irma Lee Allison, Nancy Bruce, Margaret Farmer, Connie Heather, Betty House, Patsy Lindsey, Sally Droste, and Mary Eva McBride.

Installing knowledge into the heads of the younger generations in and about Portsmouth will be Jean Anderson, and Jean Hogge.

Teaching in Norfolk, city or county, next year will be Marian Avedikian, Frankie Dodson, Dolores Duncan, Lelia Mae Ferratt, Ann Foreman, Jeanne Hobbs, and Peggy Smith.

Petersburg will claim Barbara Grizzard, Elizabeth Harris, Rebecca Kelsey, Ellen Moyer, Jean Pritchett, and Polly Richardson. Practically next door to them in Hopewell will be Rosalie Spain.

Calls from the tidewater section of Virginia have been heard and answered by Puckett Asher who will teach in Princess Anne county, Page Burnett in Ivor, Mary Crowgey, Mary Ann Ford, and Betty Sekeres in Smithfield, and Patricia Davis and Ruth Hathaway in Hampton.

Dennis Love and Janice Slavin will take their teaching talents with them to Gloucester.

Patsy Ritter will return to Frederick county to do her teaching and many others will follow her to the Valley. To name a few — Evelyn May Elder, Esther Slagel, and Ann Younger will teach in Roancke next year, and Jean Otis will teach in Albemarle county.

Frances Johnson, and Marilyn Wheeler will teach in Franklin. Beverly Smethie will be among those present in Fairfax. Lucy Tyler Thrift will not journey far — Just to Crewe.

Anne Terry will teach in Rockbridge county, Ann Nock in Accomack, Doris Old in Cumberland, Julia Hughes in Dumbarton, and Lucy Jones in Altavista.

Winnie Beard will teach in Rocky Mount, Lynda Black in Charles City, Harriet Bowling and Ruth Walker, in Chase City, Marian Breeden, in Hanover county, and Elizabeth Buck in Culpeper.

Teaching in Amelia will be Dot Caldwell; in Blacktone, Mrs. Ann Scruggs Critzer; and at Charlotte Court House, Emma Crute.

Lucy Ann Edmunds and Shirley Simmons will teach in Holland (the one where you don't have to speak Dutch to qualify). Allie Jane Felton will be teaching in Chuckatuck (pronounced just exactly as it is spelled — it's easy — try it).

"Hank" Hardin will go classy

Biologist To Join Summer Faculty

Mr. Virgil D. Beckner, head of the science department at the E. C. Glass High School, in Lynchburg, will join the college biology staff for the 1950 summer session, President Dabney S. Lancaster, has announced.

Both Dr. Robert T. Brumfield, associate professor of biology, and Miss Vera Baron, biology instructor, will be absent during the summer session. Mr. Beckner and Dr. George W. Jeffers, head of the department, will conduct the summer session classes in biology.

Mr. Beckner received his Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Missouri and his Master of Arts in Education from the University of Florida. He has also done graduate work at the University of Virginia and at Peabody College. His major work has been done in the field of biology, but he has also had training in the fields of chemistry, physics, mathematics and agricultural sciences.

From 1926 to 1943 Mr. Beckner taught in high schools in Florida. Since 1943 he has been head of the science department at the E. C. Glass High School.

Upperclassmen Asked To Register Soon For Y' Little Sisters

All freshmen, sophomores, and juniors who wish to have freshman little sisters next year are to sign up for them on the YWCA bulletin board this week, Bobbie Obenshaine, chairman of the YWCA membership committee, has announced.

For those who have a preference there will be a special list.

Bobbie reminded everyone to put their summer address beside their name so that they may be contacted during the summer months.

"When the Y' sends you the name and address of your little sister, be sure to write her immediately," said Bobbie. "Be a good big sis."

Pollard Announces Unlimited Lights

Unlimited light priviledges for the examination period will go into effect Sunday night, May 28, Bobbie Pollard, president of House Council, has announced.

Bobbie also issued a reminder to all students that they are expected to remain quiet at all times during the examination period. One call down received during this period will result in a week's strict campus, effective at the time the call down is given.

Students Present WFLO Program

"The Voice of Longwood" will present a piano concert at 4:30 over radio station WFLO tomorrow. Peggy Dee Hoover, Billie Dunlap, and Roberta Wilson will take part in the program.

Four piano selections will make up the program. They will include a gavotte from the "French Suite in G major" by Bach; a prelude by Hamen Simmons; "The Lorelei" by Franz Lietz; and "Golliwog's Cakewalk" from "The Children's Corner" by Claude Debussy.

Rena Mae Hayes will act as student announcer for the program.

Last Issue Of Paper To Be Printed June 5

The last issue of the Rotunda for the 1949-50 session will be published on June 5. All students who are not planning to be in school on that date but would like a copy of the paper are asked to leave a stamped, self-addressed envelope in the Rotunda box (under the bulletin board).

Only envelopes which are at least 3" x 5" can be accepted, Grace Thompson, circulation manager of the Rotunda, reminded students. No Rotundas will be sent out for which a smaller sized envelope has been left.

LC Organizations Choose Officers

Cotillion Club

Jeanne Farmer, junior from Newport News, was chosen as president of the Cotillion Club at a recent meeting of the group.

Elected to the position of secretary-treasurer was Millie Evans. Jill Pifer will serve as business manager for the group, and Charlotte Williams was selected as figure leader.

Mr. Boyd H. Coyner was elected to serve as faculty advisor to the Cotillion Club.

Dramatic Club

Mary Brownly Smith, junior from Franklin, was elected to head the Dramatic Club for the 1950-51 session at a recent meeting of the club.

Nancy Garbee was elected vice-president in charge of production of the group and Jeanne Gilman will serve as vice-president in charge of programs. Betty Scott Borkey was elected business manager and the position of secretary will be filled by Helen Tanner.

Among the committee chairmen elected at the same meeting were Amanda Wright, publicity chairman; Betsy Hankins and Donna Kunkler, social chairmen; and Claudia Bradshaw, chairman in charge of rentals.

Department heads for the 1950-51 session were also chosen. Mary Crawford will head the acting department; Edith Kennon, staging; Harriet Butterworth, make-up; Lucy Jane Morton, costuming; Barbara Caskey, lighting; and Margaret Turner, properties.

Honor Bright . . .

In less than a week the majority of the student body will be facing or have faced that cloud of college life—examinations. With examinations always arises the problem of honor—and the Longwood Honor Code. What is dishonorable and what is not? The question always arises.

Longwood students have long lived by the dictates of honor and honesty. The trust which the faculty, the administration, the staff and the rest of the student body have in the honor of each individual is a precious thing. Few students want to lose it, but all students want to pass their examinations and their courses. And so the question of what is honorable arises.

The senior for whom failure in one examination or one course means failure to graduate, the underclassman who must "make his grades" in order to return to Longwood next year, these are the ones who have the hardest decision to make. Is honor worth the personal and family disappointment of not graduating or not returning to school? But then the question can be reversed—is graduation or returning to College worth the sacrifice of honor which the handbook, and the conscience of the honorable person, terms "a person's most cherished posession"?

The question of what is honorable can never be solved for the individual with pat little phrases by another. The questions of honor are personal ones and they must be solved personally.

Next week will witness one of the major demonstrations of the Longwood Honor Code at work. You are on your honor—do your best by it.

A 'Real' Big Sis . . .

Have you thought about being a "real" big sister next year? There's quite a bit of meaning in that "real." It means that when your little sister arrives on the college scene next year, completely lost in a sea of new faces, you will be "johnny on the spot" to help her find her way around. In fact, she can have that super feeling of already knowing you. All you have to do to make such a thing possible is to write a letter and enclose a snap shot as soon as you're notified of your little sis's name during the summer.

But that's not all it means; it means that your visits to her won't be limited to a scant two or three stretched over a period of nine school months. You'll visit her often during the fall to help solve little questions that loom big in a freshman's life.

Show her you can be a good sport by giving up an evening of fun with the "crowd" and going to the movies with her or asking her over to the room for a "get acquainted" talk. These little tasks won't seem difficult if you think back to you freshman year and remember how your "big sis" treated you. If she was ideal, then you can remember what a help she was and follow her example. If she was a sister who didn't materialize, then just think back on how lost you were, and take a hint from that.

When an upperclassman signs up to be a big sister, she should feel that she is pledging herself to take the time to see that freshman is made to feel at home and that she begins her college career happily. Go ahead and sign up, and while you're doing so, make up your mind to be a "real" big sister.

Men Winning Battle Of Sexes . . . .

During the past two weeks, interest on the Longwood campus has been aroused by the innovation of political campaigns. In their elections of a president for the Student Government Association, the men made sure that they were picking the very best from among their ranks to lead their government during the coming session.

By the use of posters, handbills, and articles in the Rotunda, the three candidates took their stand, and made public their qualifications for the office, and the platforms they would carry out if elected. The Rotunda has stood firmly behind these campaigns, recognizing them as being the only sure way to attain the best in leadership. Not one member of the male population at Longwood could have had any doubt as to whom and what he was voting for last Thursday and Friday.

Although personal popularity inevitably creeps into any election held in as small a community as this campus, the choice of major officers should not rest solely on a personality factor. Too often is the past, however, the women's elections have had just such a basis. Students, especially the comparatively new freshmen, often knew little of the candidate except that she was "cute" or had a winning personality.

In the February 22 issue of the Rotunda, Campus Cogitations asked for student opinion on this subject. The majority of the students interviewed showed a negative attitude toward the proposal. All of the reasons given expressed the feeling that such a contest would create ill feeling among the student body. After witnessing the recent men's campaigns, the student must now realize that elections can be held in this manner without personal animosity entering the scene.

This year, the women students noted a marked advance in election procedure in the posting of candidates. But knowing how the candidate looks isn't enough. We should also be informed as to her capability, interest, and plans for her stay in office.

The men have shown an amazing amount of spirit in all their undertakings, whether it's been sports, social activities, or politics. If they continue in this tempo, they will soon have outdistanced the women in many phases of the College life. If for no other reason than feminine pride, we at least should strive to keep abreast of our co-eds. One place to begin to catch up with them is in our method of holding elections.

BIRD'S EYE VIEW

by jacky eagle

The local aviary has a forsaken air this week. It seems that most all of the reputable Birds have retired to their respective nests where the wheels of studious thought are creaking into action. Bird brains begin to buzz in a pre-exam spurt of activity. Friendly fowl who want to retain good standing in the Club are admonished to "Hit the books!" And then there're the senior birds who won't get to try their wings unless they keep their standing on the scholastic totem pole.

The perspective offered by our perch makes it more obvious each week that fowl all over the globe are rushing to join one of the two great militant flocks, those of East and West. Rearmament is no longer a last-ditch alternative in the cold war but is today a cold reality. Action taken at the recently ended Atlantic Pact ministers' meeting in London forced us to open our beady eyes to this glaring fact.

Wincing at the menace of Red rearming, the Pact ministers have worked out a detailed defense plan of their own, each nation serving a separate function in the potential war machine. Feathers bristling, the ministers have embarked on a "We'll show Joe!" campaign, and it looks as if the cocks are in their corners, ready to come out fighting.

Letters To Editor

"Ruthven"
Holdcroft, Virginia
May 20, 1950

Dear Editors:

Your recent editorials concerning Chi have been sent to me, and I want to add my voice to the loud approval that I know from personal experience you must have received verbally from the faculty, the administration, and from the student body.

As a member of the student body on your campus a few years ago I had ample opportunity to observe first-hand the activities of Chi, and though I searched for them, I could never find evidences of any contributions that the organization — as such — made toward the bettering of student behavior or college spirit. I understand from members of the current student body at Longwood that, whether by administrative decree or by tacit admission of the organization itself that it had overstepped its bounds and was headed for complete extermination unless it changed, the scare tactics of Chi have been somewhat modified and that certain of the more objectional activities have been curtailed in recent years. However, there seems still to be no justification for the existence of such an organization on the campus of a democratic college today.

The organization may have had a worthy purpose and creditable achievements in the early years of its existence and for that reason has been allowed to remain. But an organization cannot rest on the laurels of many years ago, and even "tradition" (of creating turmoil among the student body) is no justification for the continued presence of Chi. The members of such an organization who are also members of the Student Government Organization make a farce of Student Government and of the Honor Code they are pledged to uphold, and surely a social clique that sets itself up to pass judgment on non-members' behavior has no place on any college campus!

I congratulate you on the stand you are taking.

Sincerely,
Jane Waring Ruffin,
Class of '45

(Editor's note: Miss Ruffin served as editor-in-chief of the Rotunda during the 1944-45 session. During her editorship, she published an editorial concerning Chi, similar to the one published in the May 3 issue of this year).

Alumni Notes

May 13 — Richmond Chapter of the Longwood Alumnae Association Meeting Place — Fairview Farm, Richmond. Hostess—Mrs. Thomas Scott.

On Saturday, the 13th of May,
Our alumnae and outing had on this day.
The skies were overcast, but just about noon
The sun came out—gone was all the gloom.
A goodly crowd gathered at Fairview Farm
Old ones, young ones—these fine school "marms"
Our hostess, Mrs. Scott, was most gracious
With the use of her home, so charming and spacious,
Luncheon was served at half past one.
The food wa the "bestest" under the sun!
It was served in buffet style—we laughed and chatted all the while.
Then on the lawn we all gathered,
Our meeting to hold—at which time Evelyn Bass to us told
Of the three distinguished guests who from Farmville had come
To be with us on the occasion and join in the fun.
Mrs. Coyner, so sociable with her winsome smile,
Talked about the Organ and other things worthwhile.
Ruth Gleaves, tall and stately, made a fine showing.
As a Dean of Women, she is one worth knowing.
Dr. Lancaster has personality plus—
And over him we made quite a fuss—
He made a fine talk—he loves

Campus Cogitations

Question: In your opinion, what it the purpose of examinations?

Beverly Smethie: To give everybody a nervous breakdown.

Jo Phipps: I haven't found any purpose yet.

Marian Higgs: Just something to make us work a little harder.

Iva Jean Hurst: Just to make people cram.

Sis Burton: A storm before the calm.

Joyce Gatling: A headache.

Helen Holbrook: To find out how long we can endure staying up all night.

Ann Kelley: To find out how much you don't know.

Mary Quinn: It's beyond me.

Jenny Powell: For the life of me, I can't think of one.

Bill Overby: Just something else for us to do.

Shep Elmore: To pull down high grades.

Frank Vaughan: To make a student study at least one day in each subject.

Ray Phillips: To find out how much I don't know.

"Fats" Bobb: Is there any?

Ed Parks: Just a bunch of memorization — the next day you've forgotten it.

Jack Huegel: Don't quote me!

Miss Jennings: To show the whole design and to give a student an opportunity and a chance to prove that he has grasp of the subject as a whole.

Mr. Snead: To use the last club you have over a student.

Miss Moran: They provide an opportunity for the student to think through and organize the work and the reading done during the semester around thought provoking questions.

Margaret Forrester will be spreading the old book larning about down in Lancaster county and Anne Lucy will be doing the same in Mecklenburg.

Nancy Lee Maddox will do her teaching in Lynchburg, Jean Oliver in Chester, Connie Marston in Tappahannock, Thelma Peake in Hurt, Lucy Vaughan in Suffolk, and Jackie Wright, in Warwick county.

So far almost 50 per cent (only lacks about .4 of a per cent) of this year's seniors have made definite working or studying plans for next year. And that's no bad average as you will realize from one quick glance at the paper (any paper, it doesn't make much difference). The lack of jobs available for the graduates of 1950 is making the front pages these days, but it looks like the Longwood grads are doing okay for themselves.

Granny Rustled Pantalettes For Color Cup 30 Years Ago

Do you think much of having your class's colors on the Color Cup? Your Granny did if she was fortunate enough to attend dear old State Normal School 'way back yonder in 1919. Believe it or not, Grannys were quite the athletes! In the fall of 1919 the Athletic Association decided to present a loving cup to the class that could rustle their pantalettes at a fast enough speed to score the most points in hiking, tennis, basketball, and field day activities.

Mind you, some of these sports were very daring indeed, and had the strictest regulations concerning them. Printed in a 1920 issue of the "Dummy," an ancient version of the Rotunda, are regulations concerning hiking. These regulations are complicated to say the least and state that all hiking must be done with at least six girls and a captain approved by the Physical Education Department. Futhermore, a party must hike at least one mile every twenty minutes and must not hike except between 2 and 6 p. m. This all sounds quite exciting, but apparently car riding proved more attractive, and the good old sport died out.

In 1920, the loving cup was called the "Athletic Cup," and it was decided to pass this cup on to the class scoring the most points from year to year. It wasn't until 1921 that the idea of class colors was added to the athletic events. Also in this year baseball was added to the intra-mural sports program. The two baseball teams were called the "Kittens" and the "Lambs."

Field day caused great excitement for a good many years at "ye old Normal School." Sometimes I think Granny was more sportsminded than we are today. To begin the grand rush for the Color Cup and to start Field Day, Granny marched proudly up High Street along with her fellow contestants. Upon returning to the Athletic Field she marched in a strict drill formation. Things finally got off to a rip-roaring start with a calisthenics drill. This was followed by a shuttle relay, running high jump, potato race, forty yard dash, arch goal relay, baseball far throw, three-legged race, suit case race, hurdling, and javelin throw. At this point I'm beginning to feel as if I might have a little trouble keeping up with the old girls! It is also to be noted that over 75% of the Normal School girls participated in at least one of the above mentioned sports.

Not only does the Color Cup mean a lot to us, but it's plain to see just why it means so much. Let's not lose the spirit that has been built up for us all these years. A tradition this old is certainly worth the spirit to make it live on through this and future years.

13 Men Receive LC Monograms

Presentation Made At AA Picnic Fri.

Monograms were presented to 13 of the men students for participation on the men's varsity basketball squad at a picnic held by the men's division of the Athletic Association at Longwood last Friday.

Among the men receiving monograms for their participation on the varsity basketball squad were Dick Bobb, Hunter Joe Benedict, Bill Beamer, Frank Vaughan, Jimmy Thompson, Jimmy Clark, and Harold Hutter.

Also receiving the blue and white monograms were Bob Bradshaw, Shep Elmore, Buddy Gentry, Jack Heugel, Ned Orange, and Lester Smallwood.

Tributes for their cooperation and help were made to Mr. Malloy and Dr. A. C. Fraser, coach of the men's basketball team.

Red n' White In Lead In Archery Tourney

Allen Scores High With 218 Points

Completion of the archery tournament sees Red n' White again taking the athletic lead. Clem Allen topped the Longwood Robinhoods with a score of 218 points and 46 hits, way ahead of the runner-up, Alberta Hawley, who tallied 150 points and 32 hits.

Scoring for the tournament was based on individual efforts rather than the total racked up by the separate teams. The total score for the 11 Red n' Whites was 771 points and 1058 points for the Green n' Whites. The top individual scorers were as follows:

	Hits	Score
Allen, Frances	46	218
Hawley, Alberta	32	150
Gillie, Nancye	34	146
Bloxton, Shirley	33	135
Castros, Helen	31	120
Dunford, Dorothy	29	108
Tyler, Betty	23	101
Lesslie, Elizabeth	36	86
Total Score	245	1064

Those placing highest in the class placement contest were Helen Castros for the freshmen with a total of 120 points; Alberta Hawley for the sophomores with a score of 150 points. Nancye Gillie came through with 146 points for the juniors; and Frances Allen racked up 218 points for the seniors.

Men Elect Shaw Chairman Of AA

Leonard Shaw has been elected to the position of chairman of the men's division of the Athletic Association, Frank Vaughan, newly elected president of the Men's Student Government Association, has announced.

Shaw will replace Ed Parks who served as chairman of the men's division of the A.A. for the 1949-50 session.

Shaw, a junior from Lynchburg, has also been recently elected to the position of treasurer of the Men's Student Government Association.

Sportin' Around

To be a softball tournament or not to be. That is the question in the minds of our softball players on the campus. It seems that not enough girls have gotten in their eight practices to make up four class teams, and with exams only one week away the opportunity of scheduling more practices is very doubtful. What's wrong with that usual exuberant school spirit, girls?

Our Robinhoods finally put away their bows and arrows last Thursday as the archery tournament drew to a spectacular close. Red and White was victorious again as they have been so many times this year. Frances Allen brought victory to the Red and Whites by the marvelous and almost impossible score of 218 points. Congratulations, all you Red and Whites!

The tennis tournament finals are here at last. The one game left to be played is between Betty Ferguson and Frances Allen for the Red and Whites, and Nancye Gillie and Clara Borum for the Green and Whites. I've had a tip that the game is being played today. Remember girls we're all rooting for you.

As the end of the semester draws near, no doubt many of us are wondering what we'll do next year without those athletes who are leaving us. We'll certainly miss you who have given us so much of our school spirit and who have made our athletic programs possible. May you continue in the future to take life in the same fair, enthusiastic way that you have shown in athletics here. Best of everything—a Longwood girl deserves it.

WHO'S

—IN THE—

Senior Spotlight?

Who should arrive on the scene this week to be dazzled by the spotlight other than a cute little senior whose short, curly, blond hair makes her look just like a little cupie doll. The big blue eyes make the picture just right.

Of course her major in art is very important to her "cause she wants to teach it after she graduates." She got some practice for teaching by taking it out on the poor little elementary gals and boys the first semester this year. But figuring most important in the life of this senior miss is a young man named "Itchie" who attends Hampden - Sydney. In case you can't guess who I mean, just find the dark-haired fellow I spoke of and the blond with him will be the girl in question.

This senior is a member of Cotillion Club, H2O, and Alpha Sigma Tau social sorority. During the past year she served on the Rotunda as author of "Pedro's Pocket," a view of Longwood life as seen through the eyes of her Mexican friend who visited the campus.

In case you have any doubts as to whom we are describing, this week's senior has a terrific store of jokes.

Brownish hair, blue eyes, and the most appealing smile ever, describe perfectly this senior lass who steps into the spotlight. And her ways are as winning as her smile.

She majored in business, but apparently became sidetracked 'cause she's going to teach in elementary school in the home town of Morrison next year. Teaching and business aren't all she's interested in: have you ever heard of the University of Virginia? So has she, and she likes it.

This senior gal has served actively as president of House Council, Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary fraternity, and the President's Council this year. She is also a member of Cotillion Club, B.S.U. Council, Student Standards, Student Government, and Alpha Sigma Alpha social sorority.

Can you guess? I'll bet not. Anyway here's another clue: Although she may be wrong, she is always right.

Seniors in last week's spotlight were Patsy Ritter and Norma Roady.

Seniors in this week's spotlight are Jean Turner and Jackie Wright.

Dr. Moore, Miss Neal Share Tribulations With Christine

Oh, how would you like to live down in the infirmary
Down in the underworld?
Oh, I do think it would be the most awful thing
That could ever happen to a girl!

(Modern poetry having no rhythmical pattern.)

The above opinion is mine and not Christine's. She has been doing odd jobs down there for many years. I've been there only a few times. Closing my eyes, I see a gloomy picture—phys. ed. majors trooping in with dislocated knees and broken toes. Christine has tried to give me five good reasons that every day spent at the infirmary is an unforgetable experience.

"For one thing," she said, "there's Dr. Moore. There never was and never will be another like him." To me, that sounded logical.

"There are none in this world like the rest of the people who work here, also," she added.

"That is all quite true," I subtracted.

After describing the meals that are served there—food from the Longwood Dining Hall—she began telling me about the unique characters who occasionally haunt the place.

Christine said that there are a few little girls who come down there to weigh twice every day. She figures that the walk is doing them a world of good.

This season Christine and I hope that the college girls will take extra precautions against poison oak, colds, dislocated knees, and food poisoning. (For a plan to help you avoid food poisoning and also to lose weight, see Joanne Steck. For Joe Bonomo's address, see Marquerite Smith.) Above all, we want them to avoid getting over-heated. After all, spring is a season fair, and we don't want anybody to miss a single day of it. Not even for the unforgetable experience to be had by staying in the Longwood infirmary.

Scholarship Honors Taken By Theta Sig

Theta Sigma Upsilon has the highest scholastic average for the fall semester, 1949-50, among the eight social sororities on campus according to an announcement by Miss Ruth Gleaves, faculty advisor to the Pan-Hellenic Council.

The scholastic average of the Theta Sigs for the fall semester was 2.06. Zeta Tau Alpha placed second with an average of 1.96. Placing third was Alpha Sigma Alpha with an average of 1.92.

Fourth place went to Kappa Delta with a scholastic average of 1.75, followed by Pi Kappa Sigma in fifth place with an average of 1.73.

Alpha Sigma Tau and Sigma Sigma Sigma placed sixth, each with an average of 1.68. Delta Sigma Epsilon placed eighth with an average of 1.64.

Brewbaker Named Pan-Hel President

Sue Brewbaker, representing Pi Kappa Sigma, was installed as president of the Pan-Hellenic Council last week by Betty Ferguson, retiring president.

The representatives of the other seven social sororities on campus were installed by the new president. Pat Taylor, representing Alpha Sigma Tau, was installed as vice-president. Lillian Shelton, the Theta Sigma Upsilon representative, will serve as secretary for the 1950-51 session.

Representing Delta Sigma Epsilon, Anne Joyner was installed as treasurer of the council. The position of social chairman will be filled by Pat Tuggle, representing Sigma Sigma Sigma. Shirley Livesay, representing Alpha Sigma Alpha, will serve as keeper of the records.

Jill Pifer, Kappa Delta representative, will serve as publicity chairman. The position of rush chairman will be filled by Margaret Thomas, representing Zeta Tau Alpha.

The services for the installation of the sorority representatives was held in the small auditorium.

YWCA Sponsored Reception Will Be Held Tonight In Gym

Leaders Of College To Be Introduced

The annual YWCA sponsored Big Sister-Little Sister reception will be held tonight in the College gymnasium at 8 p. m.

The receiving line will form in the Student Lounge. President and Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster, Dean and Mrs. William W. Savage, Dean Ruth Gleaves, and Miss Evelyn Hamner, chairman of the YWCA Board will be among the members of the administration in the receiving line.

The student officers of the YWCA, Virginia Spencer, Evelyn Farrier, Margaret Thomas, and Winston Johnson, will also take part in the receiving line.

Helen Agnew, Student Government president; Bobbie Pollard, House Council president, and Anne Lynch, president of the Athletic Association will also be introduced to the freshman and transfers.

Meet the Wheels

This reception is annually sponsored by the YWCA to introduce the new students to the administration and to the leaders of the College. Each new student will be escorted to the reception by her YWCA "Big Sister."

In the gymnasium refreshments will be served and a program will be presented. Included in the program will be some of the talented new students.

Among the guests at the reception will be the ministers of the town churches, their wives, the entire college administration and faculty, and all new students and their big sisters.

Professor Writes Norfolk's History

Dr. Marvin W. Schlegel, associate professor of history at Longwood, has been employed by the Norfolk War History Commission to write a history of the city in the cyclonic years from 1940-45. Dr. Schlegel finds a unifying conception for three file cases of facts available in a tentative title, "Conscripted City."

The first draft of his manuscript is completed. Revisions and refinements will be finished by Christmas, according to Dr. Schlegel's plans, and publication will be "sometime in 1951," a phrase allowing for the vagaries and uncertainties of the crowded printing trade.

Dr. Schlegel began his work on the Norfolk story in December, 1948. He returned in June and November of 1949, and again near the close of August, spending several days each time in research and in conferences with the commission.

Objective Report

He said he has made every effort in the forthcoming book to look at Norfolk objectively, "in a detached manner as if it had all happened a century ago." His problem is to interpret a city virtually drafted in toto for its country's war effort, the problems that resulted, and how they were met.

The study will cover the intense population increase pressure, which was one of the nation's highest; the unparalleled housing situation; the confusion of naval and civilian authority; the various forms of crime and delinquencies that arose—the sordid with the noble, the blunders with the achievements, and the humorous sprinkled through the serious.

Campus Leaders Speak To Frosh On College Life

Addresses Included In Orientation Week

A series of talks by members of the faculty, staff, administration and student body was incorporated into the orientation program for freshman and transfer students this year.

President Lancaster began the week of orientation by his annual welcome to the freshman Monday morning. Dr. Lancaster expounded further on Longwood College Thursday morning when he spoke to the new students concerning the history and traditions of the College.

The Student Health Service was explained and discussed for the new students by Dr. Ray A. Moore, College Physician, and Mrs. Katherine F. Thompson, College Nurse in the Methodist Church Wednesday morning. Following this discussion, students met and talked with their pastors.

Discuss Honor Code

Wednesday afternoon, Dr. C. G. G. Moss, faculty advisor for the Women's Student Government Association, spoke to the freshmen and transfer students on the importance of an effective and working honor code. He stressed that each student new and old must stand by the honor code if it is to fulfill its purpose.

Bobbie Pollard, president of the House Council, introduced the members of the council and the house presidents to the new students Thursday morning. Bobbie discussed briefly the activities of the council and each student's responsibility toward it.

Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dean of Women, spoke to the new group concerning the orientation program Thursday morning. Miss Gleaves also discussed the social sororities on campus at this time.

Academic Regulations

Following lunch Thursday, Dean William W. Savage met with the freshmen and transfer students to discuss class work, academic regulations, class absences, and the student personnel program. Students filled out their personnel records after Dean Savages discussion.

Dr. Beverley Ruffin, College Librarian, also addressed the new students Thursday afternoon concerning the services of the College library. Motion pictures on this subject were shown following Dr. Ruffin's talk.

New students met with the orientation leaders for a discussion period.

Castaner Appointed Spanish Informant

Elba Castaner, sophomore at Longwood College, will act this year as the student informant in Spanish.

Elba graduated from Julia Richmond High School in New York City, after which she attended Fordham University for one year. Although she has spent several years in New York, Elba says she "likes the south better than the north."

She will teach Spanish one day a week in each class during this year.

Pres. Lancaster Attends Meeting Of Va. Educators At Natural Bridge

Conference Results In Statewide Plan For Graduate Study

President Dabney S. Lancaster met with presidents from Madison College and Radford College and representatives of the Education School of the University of Virginia and the State Board of Education in a three day conference held at Natural Bridge Hotel.

The conference which was held Sept. 7, 8, and 9 resulted in a plan for a statewide cooperative program leading to graduate degrees in education. At present, the University of Virginia, V. P. I., William and Mary and the University of Richmond alone offer courses leading to graduate degrees. According to the plan formulated at this meeting, in the future, students working toward higher degrees will enroll in one of the four institutions offering graduate degrees while taking courses at any of the college participating in the program.

The graduate courses offered at the participating colleges will be controlled and directed by an executive committee from the four universities. Only those Virginia colleges meeting regional and national graduate study requirements can participate in this program.

To Study Curricula

A suggestion was also brought out at the conference that all colleges planning to participate in the program form steering committees to study and improve curricula now offered. Longwood College has already established such committees made up of faculty members who are now studying our present curricula. The elementary education curriculum

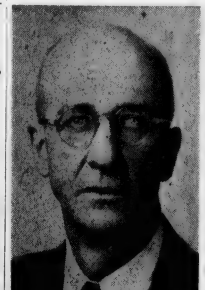
President Lancaster Announces Addition of Six New Members To 1950-51 Longwood Faculty

Huegel Replaces Vaughan As Pres. Of Men's Gov't.

Activities For Year Start With Smoker

Jack Huegel automatically received the reins of the Men's Student Government Association for the coming year after the sudden announcement that Frank Vaughan, elected president, would not return to the campus. Huegel was formerly elected to fill the vice-presidency on the Popular ticket, last spring.



Huegel, senior from Lancaster, Penn., graduated from Lancaster High School, where he served on the school paper staff. He entered the army and served four and a half years, two of which were in Brazil. He later entered Georgetown University and was in the school of foreign service before coming to Longwood in 1949.

Calvin Hatcher, retiring Progressive president of the Government, expressed extreme confidence in Huegel's ability to carry on effectively the rapidly expanding pace that the Longwood men have set in the past few years. He specified that under Huegel's leadership and with continued income and support of new men, he could foresee nothing but a more eventful year than the last for the "co-eds."

Smoker Held

Huegel announced that government activities would get underway immediately. The traditional "Smoker" was held last night

PRESIDENT DABNEY S. LANCASTER, announces additions to College faculty.

Men's Stu. Gov't. Prints Hand Book

Booklet Contains Rules, Hints, Data

Another chapter in the history of the Men's Student Government Association at Longwood was written this fall with the publication of a handbook for the freshman and transfer men students. Calvin Hatcher, last year's president of the men's governing body, was responsible for the handbook's completion. It has been a major project of the government for several sessions.

The handbook included letters of welcome from President Dabney S. Lancaster and from Jack Huegel, the newly installed president of the men's government. A complete copy of the present constitution of the Government Association, a "Who's Who on the Longwood campus," class absence regulations, pre-induction schedules, and a list of general helpful hints for the new students were included in the handbook.

According to Huegel the men's Student Government Association is planning an even more extensive handbook for the coming sessions and the book is to be placed on an annual basis. It is hoped that the project can be put on a self supporting basis in the future.

'How To Use Library' Courses To Begin

Courses on the use of the library for all freshmen, presented in connection with History III and Geography 141 will begin Monday, Oct. 2. The courses, taught by members of the library staff, will run on Mondays and Thursdays for six weeks.

Freshmen may obtain the required textbook, Use of the Library, by Aldrich, from the bookstore.

Dr. Ruffin, librarian, announced that assistant librarians will remain the same for the fall term and listed the following student assistants: Barbara Booker, Hunter Jo Benedict, Bunny Gibson, Page Joyner, Ann Lawrence, Nancy Lawrence, Rebecca Mann, Virginia Manvell, Winnie Murdock, Helen Tanner, Maxine Watts, Barbara White and Donna Staples.

To Fill Vacancies In 3 Departments

The addition of six new members to the faculty of Longwood College for the 1950-51 session has been announced by President Dabney S. Lancaster. They will teach in the fields of geography, health and physical education, art, English, and music.

Charles Franklin Lane, associate professor of geography, came to Longwood from the faculty of the University of Georgia. He holds degrees from Vanderbilt University and the University of Tennessee.

Miss Rebecca Brockenbrough, former headmistress of St. Margaret's School at Tappahannock, has been appointed assistant professor of health and physical education. She holds the master's degree from Columbia University.

Miss Annie Lee Ross, instructor of art, is a former member of the faculties of Bethany College at Lindsborg, Kan., and Athens College, Athens, Ala. She holds degrees from Bethany College and Ohio State University. She has had experience as an art supervisor in the public schools of Arizona and Kansas and as a director of crafts and arts at the United States Hospital at Camp Carson.

Barter Director

Alec W. Finlayson, instructor of English, holds degrees from the University of Richmond and the University of North Carolina. He has served as an assistant to the director of the Barter Theatre at Abingdon and has had experience with dramatic and musical groups in Massachusetts and New Jersey.

Walter J. Kerfoot and Joel K. Ebersole have been appointed assistant instructors in music. Both are graduates of the University of Cincinnati in music education. Mr. Kerfoot will instruct in the instrumental music of the college and Mr. Ebersole in choral and voice classes and groups. Both have had experience in directing musical groups of the armed forces abroad and church groups in this country.

Alpha Kappa Gamma Will Sponsor Dance Tomorrow In Rec'

The first juke-box dance of the year will be held to honor all new students Saturday night in the rec' hall of Ruffner Hall. The local Joan Circle of Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary leadership fraternity, is sponsoring the dance which will be held from 10:00 to 11:45 p. m.

Members of the Hampden-Sydney freshman class will be guests of the College.

Members of the College staff who have been invited to chaperone the dance are Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dean of Women, Miss Gwen Cress, Miss Dorothy Daniels, Miss Betty Spindler, Dr. and Mrs. Merle Landrum, and Mr. Raymond French.

Proceeds from the dance will go to the "discretionary fund" which the Joan Circle is raising for the use of the Home department to purchase records, pieces of pottery, and other things needed throughout the College.

Admission to the dance is ten cents per person.

GREETINGS

To Longwood Students:

Although I have welcomed you new students in person on more than one occasion this past week, it is a pleasure to tell you again through the columns of our fine college paper, The Rotunda, just how glad I am to have all of you with us.

May you have a year filled with worthwhile accomplishments in your studies, your recreational activities and in making new friends.

We are already proud of you for you give promise of becoming one of our very best classes.

Of course I am delighted to see you old students with us again.

Dabney S. Lancaster, President

To each student enrolled for the 1950-51 session I should like to extend a personal and sincere word of welcome. It is a real pleasure to see again the former students and to know that they are back on the campus. It is an equal pleasure to greet our new students and to realize that they are now a part of us.

Mrs. Savage joins me in the hope that each of you will have a truly profitable year. In the days and months ahead, you are welcome both in my office and in our home.

Sincerely yours,
William W. Savage
Dean of the College

The members of the Home Department Staff join me in giving our new students a most cordial welcome. We trust that you will call upon us if we may serve you in any possible way.

I am sure that you are conscious of the friendly atmosphere here at Longwood and we hope that you already feel a part of the college.

We are delighted to have you with us and may the time spent here prove both pleasant and profitable.

Most sincerely,
Ruth Gleaves
Dean of Women

Freshman Whirl . . . .

The strenuous orientation period to which every Longwood newcomer is subjected is almost over and all freshman and transfers are now expected to be absorbed into the life of the College with little or no further ado. But in reality their orientation is just beginning. In the next few weeks the proverbial book will be thrown at their heads.

The whirl of classes, assignments, sports and social activities may prove overwhelming for the unwary novice. In addition the new student will find that the upperclassmen who have been so handy and so helpful are suddenly engulfed in their own classes and activities and the newcomer may find herself suddenly deserted in her hour of greatest need.

The differences between high school and college classes are many. It will take a while for most of our new red 'n whites to become used to the three day class schedule. the flexible assignments, the advanced lecture style teaching, and the absence of the school study hall. Note taking may be a new experience for some but it is an art that must be mastered and the sooner the better.

The new student will all too soon be faced by a bevy of organizations begging for her services. Tempted though she may be to join one and all she will soon find that for her own good and for the good of the oranization or organizations she picks she must limit her activities.

The new student will soon find that time is of great importance. With only twenty-four hours in the day and only seven days to the week she may find it quite difficult at first to find time for classes, studying organizations, social activities, meals, play, and sleep. All of the important components of a well rounded college life must be taken into account and time allotted for each. This is her own responsibility since she knows her own capabilities and limitations better than anyone else does or can.

The energetic freshman can soon find many more stumbling blocks than cited here but with a little time to analyze her own problems she will soon find the solutions. There are always those to whom she can go for help, the Dean of Women, the Dean of the College, her faculty adviser, her "Big Sister", or almost any upperclassman. The problems are not new—the sophomores, the juniors, the seniors, and even the faculty took their turn at bat as a freshman too.

Open Letter To Longwood Students . . . .

Dear Students:

The past week has been a rather strenuous one for us all. But it has served to prove that although many students have come and gone through the years since our college was established, one thing has remained certain, and that is our famous Longwood spirit.

That spirit has been shown in hundreds of ways in these few days: in the friendly help of the "Y" girls; in the cheerful smiles and hello's of all the students; in everyone's willingness to lend a helping hand; and the pleasant associations between student and professor. Even the freshmen have caught that wonderful spirit, learning our college songs and singing them with that certain touch that is so typical of Longwood.

How did we get this spirit? That would be a hard question to answer. My guess is that it began with the very first students that Longwood had. We have a lot to thank them for, you know, for they helped to form the basis of what our college is today. Theirs was the task to begin the work which has resulted in the close relationship and friendly attitude of our students. The ground work of that Longwood spirit is theirs. They have given it to us, and it is now ours to take and give in return. We are making a contribution of our own, however; for in accepting and exercising this wonderful spirit, we are keeping it alive for those who follow.

Sincerely,

Helen M. Agnew
President of the Women's Student Goverment Association

Bippity - Boppity - Boo . . . .

Yesterday afternoon the freshman were taken on a tour of Longwood campus by their orientation leaders, but what about the upper classmen? With the multitude of additions and improvements to the College plant during the last three months, the sophomores, juniors and seniors, too, would seem to need a trip around the campus to re-acquaint them with their Longwood surroundings.

There are few upperclassmen who cannot remember the barren field behind the library, the gaping hole between Annex and Ruffner Hall, or the weeds and woods behind Cunningham Hall. As if by a wave of a wand or the magic words "bibbitty-boppity-boo" these eyesores are being transformed into beautiful, modern additions to our campus facilities.

Since our last sojourn here, Edith Stevens Science Hall has been completed except for the finishing details. Classes were held there this summer, and many more students were introduced to its large bright classrooms, and efficiently equipped laboratories when classes began today.

The class of '51 has particular reason to rejoice every time they glance behind the library and realize that what was just a "big hole in the ground" last spring, is rapidly growing into Jarman Hall. In view of the progress made in the past three months, the seniors have a right to be optimistic about leaving the dining hall strictly for the purpose of curing hunger pangs.

It will take a rainy day before the sophomores will really appreciate the advances made on the addition to annex. No more treking across the campus in cold and wet weather, for although the building needs something added to its wire walls, it's a building and a roof over our heads.

Stecking My Neck Out

by Joanne Steck

Well it sho is good to be back here amongst friends and neighbors once more, really does me ole heart good.

Haven't heard too many little tales to tell you all-uh-except-did you hear about the two new gals who went to get their post office boxes? Seems they went to the post office downtown, by mistake, of course. The postmaster thought they were slightly off or trying to be elite or something. Oh well, we live and learn.

Want to welcome all the frosh and transfers to dear ole Longwood C. I know you'll love it here more and more by the day. From all reports there seems to be plenty of talent in the new class. Hope too much of it isn't along the sports line—I only hope the green and whites can get the Color Cup once more before I climb into my wheelchair.

Hear tell the upperclassmen aren't supposed to be giving out too many ideas about the so-called "traditional" doings of the freshman class. It seems that the upperclassmen's and the administration's ideas about "traditions" differ a bit. Might be possible however that if we conform to the administration's slant the College might stand a few decades longer.

Seems kinda funny to see our little juniors as the big, big seniors now! They're still doing swell jobs though—in everything.

That's all for now—see you next week—I hope!

Campus Cogitations

What was your first impression of Longwood College?

Nancy Tigner: I just loved it as soon as I got here.

Elizabeth Garnett Haskins: Badly in need of escalators.

Caroline Trayham: The first thing that hit me was the new furniture.

Cleon Holladay: I wainted to go home.

Peggy Manning: I thought that everybody was just wonderful and friendly.

Lu Beavers: I felt lost

Jean Newcomb: I was crazy about it.

Mason Moore: Its great!

Dot Stringfield: I thing it's awful nice.

Louise Minor: I think that all the girls are as friendly as they can be and the college is something to brag about.

Betty Islin: My first impression was to cry, but after I got to my room and met the girls, I loved it.

Blanton Ferguson: On my first visit to Longwood College I knew I just had to come back.

Liz Browning: I love it!

Ginny Dents: It's much larger than I expected.

Julie Patson: I was surprsed that everyone spoke to everyone else.

Maxie Dize: It's wonderful and I was dying all summer to come here.

Sylvia Reames: There's no place like it in Virginia. I'll be here for four years.

Carolyn Leffel: I was impressed by the friendly spirit and how much all the sophomores came to see us.

Ann Edmonds: I don't think you'll ever gain weight with all these steps.

Mary Denny Wilson: The friendly girls made you feel as if you were coming into a group of friends.

Bird Club Installs Officers; Goals Set For New Session

The Society for the Progression of the Brotherhood of Birds welcomes freshmen and transfers. ("Aren't they adorable.") We are looking forward to having you "on the wing" this year.

Officers of the alpha chapter of our notable international organization are Sara Creger, president; Mary Helen Cook, vice-president; Chic Ritchie, keeper of Credentials; Bootie Poarch, publicity chairman; Nancy Walthall, keeper of bird seed; Mary Hunt Brame, Balfour representative; Virginia Westbrook, chairman of B. B. F. (Bird Bath Fund); Peggy Harris, membership chairman; Betsy Gravely, bird call collector; Betty Scott Borkey, Bird bulletin board tender; Ann Hardin, filing case keeper; Mary Jane Stansbury, keeper of songs; Bobby Brown music chairman.

To replace Bird Audrey Pettit who flew the coop, the Executive Board has appointed Marion Beckner as nest cleaner. In addition we wish to announce that Marie Jackson, who previously had too many extra curricular activities, was awarded Bird Club Membership. Bird Jackson was appointed chairman in charge of correspondence to Mary Margaret Truman, honorary member.

Year's Goals Set

In our recent meeting, the members established the following goals for the coming 1950-51 session:

(1) Eliminate B. O. (Bird Odor) in the student body. The Bird Club suggests Birdecol to be manufactured and sold in Junior kitchen with the permission of "Happy" Eastham and "Tippy Toe" Tabb.

(2) To secure maple from the the freshman class for the construction of a contribution box to be placed in the Weyanoke Hotel lobby.

(3) To hold meetings in the geography rooms where maps will be available to plan bird tours.

(4) To hold a Fowl Dance in the near future at which time the Turkey Trot will be featured.

We are happy to announce that Mary Margaret Truman who sings so birdful, has been invited to represent us in circus this year. We request that the student body meet our talented guest upon her arrival on the BLACK CROW. Bobby Brown, music chairman, will lead songs with her musical pitch pipe.

For temporary relief of Bird Odor, we wish to suggest TWEETY, the sensational perfume chosen by the executive council. It is available in leading drug'stores in Farmville, Crewe, Sprouse's Corner, and Washington, D. C. We request the cooperation of our new Red n' Whites. Let's stay on the wing for circus as many alumni will be flying low at that time.

Huegel Announces Committee Heads

Jack Huegel, president of the Men's Student Government, announced yesterday the appointment of the Recreational and Publicity Committee Heads for the coming year. The new appointees were Jimmy Thompson and Lester Smallwood respectively. The president and the appointed major committee heads make up the Student Government Council which, at the present time, also acts as the Honor Council.

Sophs Set Tentative Date For 'Rat' Day

Tuesday, Oct. 6, has been set as the tentative date for the annual "Rat" Day. Rules for Rat Day have been approved and will be published a week before the big day.

Sarah McElroy, sophomore president, has announced that capping of the freshmen will be postponed due to delay of the manufacturing company in sending the caps. The date for capping will be announced next week, if possible, she said.

Lou Jamison is head of Rat Day, and those students receiving orchids as frosh rats last year will head the various rat courts.

Ex Longwood Prof. Speaks To Students At Business College

Dr. Francis Butler Simpkins, former professor of history at Longwood College and author of The South: Old and New spoke to the student body of the Pan-American School Aug. 17.

Dr. Simpkins spoke to the group on "Women Can Be Independent." "The business woman has changed the social picture in the South" observed Dr. Simpkins in his talk. He is of the opinion that teaching is but a step to what school teachers "consider a more exalted state: motherhood."

Dr. Simpkins is now professor of Southern history at the University of Louisiana at Baton Rouge.

SOPHOMORES BECOME CLASS HOCKEY FAVORITES

The 1950 graduating class took away many Longwood honors and among them those now seniors of old were quite a few exceptional athletes. But an end has come to the unchallenged monopoly that the past senior class relentlessly held for two years in almost every sports activity. Even so, the potentialities that made such a feat possible, made the names of many LC's athletes recognized all over the state. Some of them achieved All-State honors in varsity competition.

STRONG VETERANS

But in casting our eyes on the present as well as the future we are able to see another class rising slowly, but seemingly, probable to gain powerful athletic leadership. This class now aids the green-white cause in being the 1950-51 sophomore class. Strong veterans, who gave even the senior class of last year a thrilling run for their money, are back to stack the Sophomore stock as high, if not higher, than any other class at the present time. Tyler, Webb, Bradshaw, Crowder, and Borum should form an exceedingly strong nucleus to the '53 hockey squad. The addition of Castros makes a list that is also a highly probable championship basketball team. And to boost the Sophomore hopes even higher, they should received substantial help from their new transfer students that will join the rank immediately.

Borum should carry the green and white banner well into the tennis tournament. And in archery, the possibilities that the Sophomores can hold their own seem encouraging. Expectations for the incoming freshman class are unusually high, particularly in basketball, but generally a year's experience is essential before a class can settle down to upsetting the upperclassmen.

THE AMERICAN LEAGUE IS AT IT AGAIN

If you will glance back one year ago in the Rotunda, you will find in Scanning The Field the account of two unusually blistering final stretches for two clubs in each of the American and National Leagues. Not until the very final day were the penants decided in either League. This year, although a new first division club, the Philadelphia Phillies, has pretty well had the National League under constant control all season, we find another terrific battle in the American League between three top ball clubs, the Detroit Tigers, the New York Yankees, and the Boston Red Sox. Cleveland, although in the race until recently, faded quickly after an unmerciful barrage of attacks opened by the lowly St. Louis Browns, who occupy the American League cellar.

DETROIT SLIPS

Detroit, who has led the league all season long is finding extreme difficulty in holding its few games leadership in this the final stretch of the 1950 season. With twelve games to go, we find that the Yankees are now on top leading the league in its seesaw battle by half a game, followed by the Tigers and the Red Sox who are both tied for second place.

Vacancies In Hockey Varsity Present Problems to Coach In 1950 Team Formation

by Lester Smallwood

Coach Olive T. Iler will have to dig deep into her reserves and her freshmen prospects this fall to replace the seven strong players that are missing from this year's Hockey starting line up.

Ritter, Phillips, Hyiton, Phipps, Lesslie, Grimes, and Anderson of yester-fame left the Varsity its present school of vacancies. They combined with this year's most outstanding veterans, Borum, Biddlecomb, Webb, Bradshaw, and Tyler, form one of the strongest teams in recent years at Longwood.

Bradshaw and Tyler, a pair of capable secondaries last year, will most likely fill the holes at center forward and full back on this year's starting line up, but the vacancies at both half backs, inner, full back, wing, and goalie are seemingly left wide open. Development of the reserves is the keynote of the day on the hockey field.

The fall tennis singles should reveal some highly competitive finals this year, with the presently favored Nancy Gillie, a green-white senior, receiving plenty of argument from the rapidly climbing Clara Borum, last year's green-white all-sports freshman star. The field seems more vulnerable this year, however, making the possibility of some "unknown" upsets much more likely than in recent years.

War Call Hurts Men

In the men's sport camp, remnants of the summer's war calls brought keenly felt vacancies on the basketball squad both on the starting and secondary fives. Big Bill Beamer, the club's second highest scorer at center and forward, Hunter Joe Benedict, the team's best defensive man, and Jimmy Clark, one of the fastest ball carriers, are missing from last year's starting quintet. Frank Vaughan, an extremely improved secondary, and Dick Bobb, rookie utility man, complete the list of Pioneer casualties.

Ordinarily these losses would almost automatically "break the back" of last year's fatally reserve deficient squad. However, there is an encouraging note from the records of the new freshmen men which indicate bright new hopes for an even better team than last year.

For the first time the Pioneers will have experience in its new

Sportin' Around

By LOU JAMISON

Hi eveybody! Now that the greetings and salutations are over, how about turning toward sports? Freshmen, you can take it from the upper-classmen tht you'll really be missing something this year if you don't take part in Longwoods sports program. It won't be long now before Color Rush, and then you'll see just how exciting fighting for your colors can be.

Hold on there upper-classmen—I haven't forgotten your part in sports. Of course, all of you can remember what a wondetrful time we had last year on the tennis courts, the hockey field, the basketball courts, the swimming pool, etc. With all that to remember, you sheuldn't need any urging when it comes to participating in sports.

Come on Longwood Girls! Let's really go all out for sports this year

President Opens Bids For New Equipment

Bids will be opened in President Lancaster's office Sept. 27 on equipment for the auditorium now under construction. This equipment will include a complete set of stage curtain, lighting equipment and seating facilities for the auditorium, classrooms and studios.

An order has been recently placed to provide the new auditorium with a Steinway concert grand piano, ten practice pianos and a Baldwin electronic practice organ. Orchestral equipment was also included in this order. Dr. Lancaster explained that this equipment will be as complete as possible for our present requirements.

Religious Groups To Give Reception For New Students

Parties To Be Held Tomorrow At 8 P. M.

All students have been invited to the church of their choice for a reception this Saturday night at 8 p. m. These parties are given annually by the church congregations of Farmville for new students.

A "Barn Party" given by the Canterbury Club will be held at the Episcopal parish house. The party will feature a real swing-your-partner barn dance.

The Westminster Fellowship group is having a "Travel Party" in the Presbyterian Church. Miss Virginia Barksdale, new student director, will help in leading the party. Hampden-Sydney students have been invited.

Moron Convention

A "Moron Convention" will highlight the Baptist's reception. Members of the congregation and Hampden-Sydney boys will be there. All Baptist girls have been invited.

The Methodist Wesley Foundation will feature an "Eighth Wonder of the World" party at the Methodist Church. The major officers of the club are planning the entertainment and they will be helped by the council in receiving the new students according to Andy Adams, vice-president.

Newcomers Entertained

A picnic for students, faculty and administration at Longwood Estate Tuesday afternoon was one of the highlights of the orientation program held for new students this week.

During the picnic, several new students were interviewed on a program presented over WFLO. Class songs were also part of the program and the president of the men's and women's Student Government Associations were introduced as well as the vice-president of the women's government association who was in charge of the orientation program.

New men students were entertained at open house held by Dean and Mrs. W. W. Savage Monday night. The new women students were feted with a coke and nab party in the recreation hall.

New students met Wednesday morning with Farmville pastors. A party was held for the new students Wednesday night by the junior class, sister class to the freshmen.

Men students held a smoker in the student lounge Thursday night, and the women students will be honored at the annual Big-Sister, Little-Sister reception held by the Y. W. C. A. tonight.

A tour of the college, talks by faculty, administration and student members and discussions of traditions and rules were included in the program designed to make the new students truly a part of Longwood College.

Boston has come surging back for the third straight year from the second division only to lose the penant on the last day. For several years now they have had the individual talent to predict a top team by the records, however, the Red Sox have painfully realized that penants aren't won in records, but on the field.

ROANOKE RED SOX BLOW PENANT

A similiar grim tale is the story of the 1950 Piedmont League outcome. The Roanoke Red Sox after having possession of first place all season by a comparatively safe margin suddenly blew up in the final week of play and lost to everyone and slipped straight into second place. The Portsmouth Cubs took over and copped the penant. Yep, the Red Sox jinx seems to "root" out even throughout its own farm clubs.

SNAGS . . .

The Washington Senators of the American League who finished last in 1949 and were predicted by many of the experts to make a repeat performance this year ,have stayed undisputedly in 5th place. The Richmond Spiders after a relatively poor record last year are tackeling an even tougher gridiron slate this year. Experts grant only a probable win over its opener against the Randolph Macon Yellow Jackets, whom they greatly outclass each year . . The Hampden-Sydney Tigers are having pass defense problems of late in rounding up their squad for opening game tilts. . . Little VMI may become the State's third ranking gridiron powernouse this year.

These new hopefuls will join last year's returning secondaries, combined with the club's returning "starting five" veterans, Jimmy Thompson, a fleety guard, Ned Orange a towering center, and Lester Smallwood, player-coach, who releases his captaincy at the team's next annual election.

The Pioneer cagemen expect to begin organizational drills in the very near future with the expectation of an earlier scheduled season. It is hoped that the team will be able to obtain again this year their last year's coach, Dr. A. C. Fraser, a renowned sportsman of Farmville, and Mr. Thomas A. Longwood Dean's List Recognizes 47 Students

Unlimited Cuts Given To Students With B-plus Avg.

The Dean's List for the spring semester of the 1949-50 session has been released from the Registrar's office. Fourty-seven students attained the B-plus (2.25) average requisite for the Dean's List. Ninety names appeared on the list for the Fall semester last year.

Students whose names appear on the Dean's list are entitled to unlimited cuts. New students will be eligible for this scholastic recognition next semester.

Seniors who are recognized on the Dean's list are Georgia Louise Bailey from Brookneal; Hilda Marie Bauserman, Luray; Alma Porterfield Bedinger, Norfolk; Harriet Boiling Butterworth, Richmond; Mildred Catherine Carter, Sutherland; John Randall Cook, Crewe; Mary Minta Crowder, Blackstone; Edith France Duma, Portsmouth; and Frances Burton Everett, Bon Air.

Other seniors obtaining the recognition were Rena May Hayes, Norfolk; Marian Virginia Higgs, Toana; Margaret Dee Hoover, Portsmouth; John Edward Huegel, Lancaster, Penn.; Mary Armistead Isley, Hampton; Mary Anne McMullan, Rapidan; Mary Leigh Meredith, Front Royal; Anne Lucille Norman, Chatham; James Edward Orange, Farmville; Emma Mae Pittard, Buffalo Junction; Polly Ann Powers, Hopewell; and Virginia Mildred Spencer, Scottsville.

Juniors who made the required B-plus average were Flora Alice Ballowe, Farmville; Mildred Marie Bryant, Boykins; Lauralee Fritts, Nimivar; Nancy Adams Garbee, Lynchburg; Bonnie Lessie Gerrells, Danville; Norma Mae Gladding, Mears; Sarah Ann Graham, Farmville; and Dorothy Ann Gregory, Skipworth.

Other juniors on the Dean's list are Betty Lou Harman, Tazewell; Maria Hagsdale Jackson, Lexington; Nina Ruth Lacy, Farmville; Anne Rowlette Lawrence, Portsmouth; Katherine Meir McCready, Stuart; Rachael Elizabeth Peters, Moneta; Mary Jo Smith, Portsmouth; Catherine LaVerne Stevens, Portsmouth; Mary Patricia Tuggle, Wytheville; and Martha Alice Wilson, Farmville.

5 Home Ec. Majors To Manage House

Five senior home economics majors will occupy the Home Management house this semester. These students will take up residence on October 5.

The new residents in the house on Buck Street will be Nancy Henderson, Janie Lyons, Jo Ann McCombs, Jane Seward, and Faye White.

On October 12 and 13, Evelyn Farrier, Longwood senior home economics major, will attend the workshop of the Pennsylvania Providence II of American Home Economics Association of College Clubs at Juanita College, Huntington, Pennsylvania.

Dean Savage Announces Additions, Changes For Class Cut Regulations

Several additions and changes have been made to the class absence regulations this year. Students who have not done so, should make a careful study of these alterations as ignorance of the regulations will not be accepted as a legitimate excuse for any violation, Dean William W. Savage has announced.

Additional Cuts

Perhaps the most favorable change from the point of view of the students is the addition of one set of cuts for every student. Under this new regulation each student having an average of B for the preceding semester now has 3 sets of cuts instead of the 2 sets previously awarded him. Similarly, a student with an average of C, will be allowed 2 sets of cuts, and every student with an average below C will be allowed one set of cuts.

An addition to the former regulations state that only students who are "official representatives designated by officials of the College" and who meet academic and social standards will be allowed class cuts for conventions. These cuts will be issued by Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dean of Women. Students who wish to attend conventions taking their alotted class cuts, however, may do so.

Field Trip Absences

Field trips conducted by faculty members that will involve absence from other classes must have the permission of Dean Savage. Otherwise, each student making the trip will be expected to utilize his allotted cuts.

Student teachers who are absent from their teaching duties for part of the day or the entire day will be charged with one absence according to the new regulations. Each student who makes appointments with prospective employers during his class time will be expected to use his allotted cuts. However, if the employer sends a statement to the Director of Placement indicating that the appointment is necessary despite the fact that the student is not entitled to class cuts, the student will be excused from his classes for the appointment.

Upperclassmen are particularly urged to carefully study former regulations as well as new changes in the rules to avoid any violation that may incur penalty.

DEAN WILLIAM W. SAVAGE calls student's attention to new class cut regulations.

Library Features Famous Sketches

Twenty-five original sketches by Gari Melchers, world-famous artist who made Virginia his home during his last 17 years, will be displayed from October 1 to October 15 in the browsing room of the Longwood College Library, through special arrangements with the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts.

Sketches have been called an artists "hand-writing," and many of these by Melchers are "notes" from nature which he jotted down for future reference. Others are first studies for works beginning to take shape in his mind, such as the taut, ceremonious figure of the "Fencer," the full-size canvas which is in the Virginia Museum's valuable Melchers collection.

In these twenty-five spontaneous sketches, the great artist is off guard, working quickly and solely for himself without any intention that the work would ever be seen by others. The results reveal a master draftsman and sensitive colorist.

Melchers was born in Detroit, Mich., in 1860. His first teacher was his father, Julius Melchers, a sculptor and wood-carver, who, in 1877, sent 17-year-old Gari abroad to study art. Because his mother thought Parisian studios to be "dens of iniquity," Gari first attended the Royal Academy of Art in Dusseldorf, and then, in 1881 went to the Academy Julien in Paris.

In 1888 he won a First Class Gold Medal in Munich, the first American to capture that honor. Second-class winner in the same competition was James McNeil Whistler. Melchers and Sargent were the only American medal winners in the Paris International

Notice

No further changes will be permitted in class schedules after 12 noon, Saturday, September 30 according to Dean W. W. Savage.

No classes may be added after that date. Students may not drop any class after the mid-semester estimate has been prepared by his professor.

LC Student Chosen To Be Youth Pastor In Baptist Church

by Lester Smallwood

Forest Pillow, one of the most outstanding freshman men students at Longwood this year, was named "Youth Pastor" at the Farmville Baptist Church this week by the Rev. R. B. Bruner, pastor. Rev. Bruner presented the keys to the Church to Pillow and Durwood Guthrie, the latter of whom was made Chairman of the Board of Deacons. The ceremony marked the beginning of the "Youth Week" program being put on by the Church for an eight day period. Pillow accepted his new responsibilities capably by conducting in professional order the regular Sunday evening services at the Church. His 25 minute sermon was labeled "What Is YOUR Purpose in Life?" taken in accordance with his chosen scripture text, 1st Cor., 12th chapter, 1-11 verses.

The "Youth Week" is an effort by the Baptist Church of Farmville to get its youth at least temporarily acquainted with positions of Church leadership which they will eventually assume. During the week all regular church meetings and functions will go on as scheduled but with its youth in complete command of all such functions.

Pillow graduated from Farmville High School last June where he was the Valedictorian of his

AKG Elects Lynch Head Of '50 Circus

Committees, Theme Will Be Announced

Ann Lynch, senior from Tazewell, has been chosen AKG chairman of the annual Circus festivities, Romine Mahood, president of AKG, anounced today.

Ann, who is a physical education major, is serving this year as president of the Athletic Association. In the past three years, Ann has taken active part in the class stunts presented at Circus.

Romine added to her statement that commitees and the theme would be picked sometime in the near future. Class committees, and the Circus queen and court will also be chosen during the coming weeks.

The Joan Circle of Alpha Kappa Gamma annually sponsors the Circus festivities in the fall. The celebration includes a stunt prepared and presented by each class, a Circus court of beauties with representatives of each class, and refreshments and dancing following the main event. A circus parade including a bevy of clowns and animals, the ring master and portions of the class stunts will march through Farmville the afternoon preceding the gala event.

Music Department Adds New Organ

A new Baldwin electronic practice organ has been purchased and is now in Room 22. The organ which is eventually intended for the music room in Jarman Hall, is now available to organ pupils who wish to practice. Plans are now underway to offer organ lessons at the College.

Dr. John W. Molnar, head of the Longwood music department, requests that all students interested in participating in the band or orchestra see him or Mr. Walter J. Kerfoot as soon as possible. Dr. Molnar also stated that a class will be formed for all who are interested but need special lessons. If instruments are not available, students are asked to furnish their own. However, some will be furnished by the music department for those who need them.

Those students interested in choir work are asked to sign up on Dr. Molnar's classroom door for appointments this week. Tryouts are required for both old and new members.

Huegel Appoints 'Code' Committee

Council Now Judges Honor Violations

by Lester Smallwood

Jack Huegel, president of the Men's Student Government, announced yesterday that a committee that will work on "an honor code" was appointed at the regular Men's Student Government meeting yesterday.

At the present time the Men's Student Government Constitution contains no specific laws concerning the existence of an honor code, nor has it given any powers to a special "Honor Council" for the trial and punishment of honor cases. All breaches of law are now under the jurisdiction of the Student Council alone which is made up of the officers of the Student Government and the president's appointed major committee heads.

Huegel, in commenting said, "There are many necessary revisions, changes, and additions to be made to the present Men's Student Government Constitution. We are now only beginning what I would call an extremely important, as well as difficult, stage in the men's development at Longwood. The next few years will measure either the firmness or instability of the early foundations of the men here."

Seniors To Receive Caps In Ceremony Thurs., October 6

Approximately 120 students will be recognized as seniors at the annual capping ceremony tentatively scheduled for Thursday, October 6, according to Betsy Gravely, president of the class of '51.

At this time, President Dabney S. Lancaster will place the traditional mortar board on the head of each member of the class of '51. Senior little sisters will assist in the ceremony.

Frances Harper will be in charge of obtaining caps and gowns for the seniors. Any senior who needs a cap, gown, tassle, or collar should contact Frances immediately.

Colonnade Story Editor Announces Beginning Of Short Story Contest

Contest Deadline Set For Oct. 18

The annual short story contest sponsored by the Colonnade begins today, September 27 and will run until October 18, according to Nancy Garbee, short story editor of the Colonnade.

Any student at Longwood College is eligible to enter any number of original stories in the contest. Manuscripts submitted to the contest may be placed in the Colonnade box under the main bulletin board or may be given to Nancy or to Edith Duma, editor-in-chief of the magazine.

The board of judges will consist of three faculty members, three students and the Colonnade short story committee.

Winning stories will be published in the Colonnade during the 1950-51 session. Prizes will be awarded in assembly period following the judging.

Any subject in short story form will be accepted, and Nancy urges all students to contribute to the contest.

Editors Announce Rotunda Openings

Tryouts for a place on the staffs of the Rotunda will begin tonight at the regular meeting in the Publications office after dinner. Co-editors Jean "Little" Smith and Mary Leigh Meredith urge all students, new and old, experienced and inexperienced, to come and give the Rotunda a try out.

Staffs on which new members are needed are news, headed by Ginny McLean, which involves the hunting out and writing of fact stories; feature staff, lead by Betty Jane Stoots, which involves creative writing. The sports staff who write up all the current sport events is headed by Lester Smallwood and Lou Jamison.

Another department of the paper needing workers is business, headed by Helen Connelly, which takes care of all money matters, circulation and advertising. Typists and proofreaders are also needed.

Sophomore Ratters Confront Freshmen With Ye Old Rules For Rodents' Big Day

Rat Day will be held Tuesday, October 10, from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m. Lou Jamison, sophomore head of ratting, announced today.

"Little Rat Courts" will be held at 10 Tuesday night. Each court will be headed by those members of the class of '52 who received "orchids" and honorable mention last year. These girls will also make up the "Big Rat Court" which will be held Wednesday night.

The sophomores have compiled the following rules which will be imposed on the freshmen on the day of initiation.

Rat Rules

Freshmen must:

1. Not go to the post office until after 6 p. m. and must not ask upperclassmen to go for them.

2. Fall on their knees in front of Joan of Arc each time they pass the statue saying "Hail Joan; One so noble must surely be a sophomore."

3. Report to the sophomore Annex whenever they do not have an appointment.

4. Report in front of the colonnade immediately before lunch, and to the library steps immediately after lunch.

5. Must report to the gym at 6 a. m. and line up for inspection fully dressed as stated below and also carrying shoe polish and clothes brush to brush the sophomores' clothes and polish their shoes.

6. Not smoke or drink cokes until after 6 p. m.

7. Make up a song praising the sophomores (done by entire class).

8. Not wear any jewelry or make-up (this includes watches).

9. Wear a rat trap containing a toy rat on a green ribbon around the neck. Have a sign with name and address in green paint tied to the rats tail.

10. Know all sophomores by name and call them "Miss."

11. Learn the sign off which is printed below, and be able to repeat it whenever requested to by a sophomore.

12. Carry books, chewing gum, candy, matches and cigarettes (Lucky Strikes, Camels, or Chesterfields) in a shopping bag for sophomores. Print the letters "Praise '53" on the side of the bag in big green letters.

13. Report to Little Rat Court if notified. All freshmen must report to Big Rat Court wearing green and white.

14. All rats must resemble 1908 bathing beauties. This will be accomplished by wearing one long green stocking having three vertical white stripes above the knee,

Try Us Out . . . .

Come on, take a chance and read this editorial. You freshmen and new students especially, 'cause the old ones know what's coming. In case you're interested, and we hope you are, the Rotunda stages a "try-out" about this time every year. The College newspaper should be a highlight of College life, and only the students can make the weekly sheet a big success.

Numerous events take place every day of the week and every week of the college year that no one would know unless those reporters run them down, the typists type them up, and the circulation group puts them out. And without the advertising staff to bring in the money and the business staff to take care of it, the paper couldn't be published. So there you are. There are dozens of places that Longwood students could work and have a lot of fun too. Work nights are never droll, but mixed with laughter and good times.

Experience? Nice, but not at all necessary. Students who never had the chance to find out what goes on in a newspaper office have become so interested in the Rotunda that they have surprised themselves with their ability to do a newspaperman's job.

Tryouts on a college newspaper aren't nearly as mean as they sound. There's no one to watch and wait while the "cub" writes his first story or feature or to pounce when it's not the best in the world. Instead, the student works along with the rest of the staff just as if he had always been there. Then at the end of six weeks or so, new names are added to the masthead, unless that cub simply "sits" for six weeks. You can't even get away with that in class.

The Rotunda needs helpers, and the College needs a newspaper. We'd love to have you working with us.

Cut It Out . . . .

If the Rotunda were to ask each student "Why did you come to College" and get really sincere answers, modern educators might get pretty much of a jolt. Nevertheless, most colleges are established on the assumption that its undergraduate membership want to learn, and these institutions, of which Longwood is no exception, attempt to educate them by a series of organized classes.

If you are ready to jump to arms and loudly declare that no one comes to college unless he wants to learn, settle back and take a look at the facts—the facts regarding class absenteeism. In the past, this problem has been such that this year approximately six pages of the Student Handbook are taken up with regulations and restrictions concerning class excuses and cuts.

Your next cry of protest will be that college students are mature young men and women and do not need to be told when to go and when not to go to class—the cry is very familiar, but the number of students who failed to make the necessary "C" average during the last term is just cause to make the administration wonder how mature and study-bent we are.

On the other hand, of the 47 students who comprise the Dean's list for their work during the spring semester of last year, 36 had the priviledge of unlimited cuts the preceding semester. This would seem to indicate that there are students who can regulate their class attendance to the best advantage. These students, however, are those who have already shown themselves to have outstanding scholastic ability.

A third group is made up of those students who consistently make a good "C" average. Are these students passing because they are forced to go to class? Or are they being penalized with cumbersome rules and regulations because they do not have outstanding scholastic ability? They have had little chance in recent years to demonstrate that they could regulate class attendance themselves.

As long as there is as high a percentage of "D" students as there has been in recent years, the administration will feel well within bounds in enforcing class cut regulations. However, if Longwood can reach the point where lack of a "C" average is a rarity class absentee restrictions may eventually be banished from the campus.

Don't Get Personal . . . .

With the addition of those perky white caps the freshmen have been initiated into the realm of ratdom. Next on their agenda is that day of sophomores "Rat Day", Elsewhere in this issue that date and rules for rat day are announced. It will take only a brief look at them for every freshman to realize that they will be most ridiculous looking and acting on that day.

This ridiculous feeling is all part of the plan. Theoretically rat day is supposed to initiate the novice into College life. In practice however the purpose would seem to be instilling the freshman with her own inferiority and the superiority of the sophomores. With the aid of the ridiculous clothing, sayings, and acts this is most favorably impressed upon the rat for at least one day.

Humiliation, however, is another story and one that we hope will not be gone into this rat day. Too often upperclassmen take advantage of rat day to vent personal feelings. High strung freshman are sometimes goaded beyond their endurance and at the end of the day the Longwood spirit is a far distant thing and they are ready to pack and leave.

Rat day can and should be fun for all concerned. Freshman should remember the day not with bitterness but with a sense of pride and a knowledge that now they "belong". If the sophomores are careful to administer impartial and impersonal ratting this can be true. Otherwise they are defeating the very purpose of the day.

The uuperclassmen also have a part in rat day and that part is "out". This day belongs to the freshmen and sophomores—the juniors and seniors are welcome spectators but no coaching from the sidelines, please.

Stecking My Neck Out

by Joanne Steck

Guess everybody is beginning to feel at home by now. But what with all these new buildings going up the ole place just "ain't quite the same." Now if it just weren't for classes - - - - ? You know thought has been given to starting an S. P. C. S., known hereabouts as the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Students. The proposed constitution would include no studying, no homework, no professors, no call downs, no lights out, etc. After careful consideration, however, former enthusiasts decided that the society would probably also eliminate school altogether, all Longwood good times, and our old and dear campus friends leaving us to face the big, wide, wicked world.—So I guess the S. P. C. S. will never become a reality.

We want to congratulate the Y. W. C. A. on its fine, 'upstanding work in the community. Its members have certainly done a wonderful job of getting the frosh to feel right at home.

You know Smiling Charlie and His Boys (picking and playing) are sho' getting around these days. Coke and Nab Party Baptists asked 'em to sing last year. Guess they'll never make that mistake again. Methodist's invited them this year. Charlie says he's gonna start charging, seeing as how they've toured the world as the lebenty-ninth wonder!

Have you ever noticed the street view from 3rd floor Annex? Ve-r-y interesting! All you can see is legs—just legs. Right funny to try to attach those legs to whomever you think it is—comes out rather peculiar sometimes. Specially when the faculty walks by.

Well—bye now, if all's well—we'll see you next week.

"Y" LINES

by Ginny McLean

The annual Big-Sister, Little-Sister reception was held Friday night. The freshmen and transfers were escorted by their big sisters and introduced to administration and student leaders of the school.

The 'Y Cabinet presented the first Sing Saturday night with a take-off on the freshmen during the first day at Longwood. Sing this Saturday night will feature new-found Longwood talent, with members of the freshman class and transfers in the lime-light.

Mr. Jack Noffsinger, of the Tabernacle Baptist Church in Richmond will be the guest speaker at prayers tomorrow and Friday nights. He is the guest speaker at the Baptist Youth Revival to be held at the First Baptist Church in Farmville this week.

Thespians Will Hold First Meeting Wed.

The first dramatic club meeting of the year will be held at 7:00 p. m., Wednesday, October 4, in the small auditorium. This meeting is being held to acquaint freshmen and new students as well as old with the details of dramatic club life.

A party, with Hampden-Sydney students as guests, will be held immediately after the meeting.

Mr. Alex W Finlayson, advisor to the dramatic club, plans an active year for the club, according to Amanda Wright, publicity chairman. The group has already chosen a play to be presented this fall.

Campus Cogitations

What was the most interesting event of your summer?

Joyce Hamlet: Bill!

Fran Harper: My trip to Florida.

Kathryn Terry: Virginia Beach with Jerry!

Joyce Adams: Dating Harold every night and not having to be in by ten o'clock.

Nellie Hart: Absolutely nothing, but flirting with Betty's "Pie."

Betty Johnson: Everything I did was interesting.

Martha Atkinson: Moving back to Virginia.

Peggy Bryant: The things I think were exciting wouldn't interest the rest of the people.

Nell Gillie: Took my kids fishing one day, playground kids, that is!

Helen Agnew: Virginia Beach.

Betsy Gravely: Spending a week at summer school.

Helen Egerton: The water fights at summer school.

Sue Brewbaker: Buying a seven-eights coat.

Anne Lynch: Billy.

Marian Higgs: My experiences with William and Mary football players.

Ruth Gills: Virginia Beach.

Margie Hood: Worked at Orkney Springs.

Bunny Ricks: Ditto!

Shirley Livesay: Houseparty.

Marian Beckner: Working on 7th Street in Lynchburg.

Jean Ridenour: My crush on the beach boys and representing Longwood on the Miller & Rhodes College Board.

Mary Jo Smith: Anywhere Skippy was was interesting.

Lee Wood: Living a life of leisure at Longwood. Big joke!

Stokes Overby: Working at the Nature Center in Danville and learning about the birds and bees.

"Sis" Burton: Letting "Joergoer."

Anne Murphy: My meeting the West Point cadets at Virginia Beach.

Donna Kunkler: The week end Steck, Graube, and Jean Partridge came down to the beach.

Frances Graube: Getting them "goodies" at the beach.

Joanne Steck: The night life at the beach.

Janie Jackson: My vacation!

Pat Altwigg: Me and the fishes had fun.

Eleanor Koch: Going out to Steel Pier in Atlantic City.

Caroline Traynham: Reading "War and Peace."

Virginia McGlothlin: Writing an illegal deed in a lawyer's office while working there.

Freshmen, We Love You! Doubt Us? Just See Below

If you're looking for a "Welcome to Longwood" from this corner, save yourself some time and hurriedly flip the page once over lightly. Here's one kid who prefers to skip that pater and let you in on the uncoated truth.

The fact is, you're not welcome. Your coming here has ruined everything. Last spring all was well. Each boy had his girl; each girl had her boys. And we had it fixed so that just about everyone held a school office of some kind (we must admit that we had a devil of a time getting volunteers for the position of sergeant-at-arms in the senior 'rec. Yes, we were a happy little group.

Petty Disturbances

Oh, we had our petty disturbances. . .an indignant sophomore set fire to the registrar's books. . . the administration instituted several slander suits in connection with class cuts, but withdrew them in the face of overwhelming evidence. . .a potential Beore Eh Thorn clawed his English professor upon receiving a final grade of B plus plus plus. . .the comparative anatomy class toned down after a series of scathing reprimands from the Legion of Decency. . .an ambitious upperclassman ammassed a mighty bank balance by selling toilet tissue which he had appropriated from various places on campus (the Honor Council had to admit defeat when said student pointed out there was no precedent for establishing the fact that the principles of the Honor System applied to the places involved). . .but understand, we were getting along rather nicely, thank you.

Conditions Deplorable

And now you little monsters have descended upon us like a horde of locusts to disrupt our campus life. Already we have noted some of the consequences. . . housing conditions are deplorable. . .three of our shorter students have been assigned quarters in a discarded filing cabinet in the Alumnae Office. . .the college has had to install an amplifying system for the bell in the Post Office building in order that the men residing in a quonset hut in Crewe might have some taste of campus life. . .we now have a Dean of Men, A - M, and a Dean of Men, N - Z. . .the larger organisations have requested the use of the A. A. field for their meetings. . . These are but a few of the results of your invasion.

We tremble at the thought of future consequences. . .the Methodist Church balcony will sink lower. . .leaves in Farmville will be an oddity after each of the battalion of freshman biologists has snared the required hundred. . .fresh supplies of oxygen will have to be piped into Annex first and sec-

Hockey Season Comes 'Round Again, Teams Need Everyone's Support

by Lou Jamison

Well, the time for hockey has rolled around at last. Once again we start thinking in terms of hockey sticks, shin guards, and hockey balls.

Everyone has had a wonderful summer no doubt, but as all good things must come to an end, it's back to the well-known salt mines for all our Longwood hockey players. Really though, there isn't a better autumn recreation on campus than hockey. You don't have to break your neck or pull strings to get in on this sport either. It's ready and waiting for you on our spaceous athletic field every Tuesday and Thursday at 3:05 and 4:05 on Tuesday Wednesday, and Thursday. Also you should remember that you need eight practices to play on your class team.

If you don't know how to play hockey already, please don't feel left out of this terrific sport. All we ask is the desire to learn, and the willingness to come to practices. With a little effort it won't take long before you're as good or maybe better than a girl who learned to play a year or two sooner than you. If you already know how to play, that's fine. Just come out and brush up on your game and rules.

Last but not least, here's a word to all of those who feel a little too lazy to come to practices or who feel that there is more fun in spending the afternoon downtown. It won't be long until your team is out there on the field trying their hardest to win that all important game. They'll need your help! Are you going to let them lose the game just because you didn't get in your eight practices?

LET THERE BE LIGHT

With the oncoming men's basketball season in mind, there comes once again to the lips of all concerned, returning questions of how to face another intercollegiate basketball schedule in our gymnasium without adequate or sufficient lighting. Promises are a dime a dozen, but only the gym speaks most effectively the woesome tale of competitive blindness. It does seem that something could somehow be done to alleviate the harmful situation in the gym. Let there be light—for sight.

LITTLE VMI HUMBLES BIG WILLIAM AND MARY

Last Saturday the VMI Keydets completed one of the most remarkable feats in Virginia football history—it conquered the mightily William and Mary Indian football club and in no light manner. The three touchdown favorite Indian club ,however, led 19-18 as the last 45 seconds on the clock were ticking away. But ,back surged the jetted Keydets and back William and Mary went until the Keydets scored and won the ball game. Not since 1939 had William and Mary lost to a state team and only last year the Indians humiliated the Keydets 54-6. Of all the teams in the state, the Keydet "spirit' oan not be surpassed. Otherwise, VMI, a school of 700, could not satisfactorily remain in the tough and big Southern Conference—it has to produce regularly what ordinarily would seen unusual team productions for a school of its size. VMI, however, does it consistently and this year is threatening to challenge the Duke Blue Devils for the Conference crown with an undefeated Conference record.

The Keydets were recognizably better this year but no one could predict a team that may receive the state's top honors as well. To the Keydets the victory may be the greatest accomplishment on the gridiron since their mightily "Flying Squadron" that was a national powerhouse in football in the 1920's. But the ability of the Keydets to become a well recognized state gridiron power will depend on how well they handle the George Washington Colonials next week. But, regardless, the big teams will not lightly consider VMI this year and most of them will greatly dread the highly spirited Keydets.

RANDOLPH MACON GAINS SPIDER RESPECT

Another little team that is not going to be pushed around by the big fellows this year in the Randolph Macon Yellow Jackets. Through three quarters of grueling battle the Jackets outplayed the Spiders and went into the final quarter with a 6-0 lead, and with high hopes of making another incredible upset by the small college elevens. However, the Spiderman got together their battered weight and power in the last quarter and "broke the back" of the terrifically stubborn little Jacket club. The final score: the Spiders 20, the Jackets 6—a great ball game.

THE HSC TIGERS LOSE TO GUILFORD 21-19

The favored Hampden-Sydney eleven lost 21-19 on failure to produce placements last Saturday at Death Valley. The Quakers brilian quarterback, Al Johns ,and the golden toe of Bob Yarborough were mainly responsible for the Tiger defeat. The mighty Quakers were always driving hard into Tiger territory and only on brilliant runs were the erraticly spontaneous Tigers able to keep abreast to the Guilfordmen. The first Tiger marker came when the Quakers were deep into HSC's territory. Dameron intercepted a pass to score after running a total of 101 yards.

YANKEES BEGIN SELLING SERIES TICKETS

The New York Yankees quite optimistically began selling World Series tickets today after they streched their American League lead to 2½ over the Detroit Tigers. If the Yankees storm into the pennant it will be for the second straight year. The Yankees have the confidence and they are not losing those ball games. The Yankee stock runs high at the moment. The Tigers have sadly faded and the

Pioneer Team Plans Earlier Start

Season tickets for the Pioneers' home basketball games will go on sale to Longwood students for $1.00 according to a decision reached Monday afternoon by the Men's Athletic Association. A season ticket to the six tentatively scheduled home games will be priced at $1.50 for all others.

The season tickets will go on sale in the near future and will be sold up to the time of the first Pioneer game. Admission prices at the door for those not holding a season ticket will be $.30 for Longwood students and $.50 for all others.

The Pioneers hope to begin their 1950-51 schedule at a much earlier date than the 1949 December 3 opener. Last year's 15 game slate will be somewhat modified this year, but the Pioneers hope to keep R.P.I., Farmville Town Team, Lynchburg College JV'S, and the Madison and Mary Washington's men's teams on the schedule.

The Pioneers hope to add to their schedule the squads from Furman Junior College and the Extension of VPI in Danville.

Unlike last year the Pioneers will have on their squad few inexperenced men. The incoming crop of freshmen add to the Longwood five both height and experience. A repitition of last year's 12 losses in a 15 game schedule is not anticipated

Sportin' Around

by Lou Jamison

You don't have to wait any longer for fall sports, old and new Longwood athletes—they're here! This very week hockey practices began. I know everyone who is interested in sports will want to get in their eight practices as soon as possible, because there are many other sports available now.

From what I've heard, all of us had better get out our tennis rackets and put those tennis courts to use. It seems that the freshmen have something up their sleeve in this tennis deal. A member of their class happens to be a junior champ who intends to offer lots of competition to any tennis playing upper-classmen. That fall singles tournament isn't far off, so watch your p's, q's and tennis strings. All the luck in the world goes to the frosh with their champ, but please upper-classmen, lets not lose our prestige by being beaten by a freshman.

Not all of summer is gone yet—at least not a touch of summer sports. You can enjoy swimming all winter long at our steam heated pool. I know this sounds like a radio commercial, but really you'll find swimming a barrel of fun. Just set aside one afternoon a week, probably will make you feel like a million.

Freshmen Find Rooms Complete With New Maple Furnishings

The 1950 freshman were met by a much pleasanter interior view of Longwood College this fall than in previous years, as they were directed to dormitory rooms completely refurnished with modern maple bedroom suits.

Each room on Ruffner Hall has been completely outfitted with a maple suit of furniture. The average room is equipped with an eight piece suit including two single beds, two chests with attached mirrors, two night stands, a desk and chair. A matching comfortable chair will be added to the ensemble in the near future, according to Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dean of Women.

The rooms on Library Hall and Post Office have been redone in walnut finished suits. Miss Gleaves stated that future plans include putting furniture similar to that in Ruffner Hall on these two halls. Eventually, the Business Office hopes to entirely refurnish every dormitory on the campus.

Damage Insurance

Upperclassmen as well as freshman are reminded that their ten dollars room deposit is being held to cover any damages that dormitory rooms may incur during the year. Several rooms have been completely repainted this year and any damage apparent at the end of the year will be charged to the occupant of the room at that time. In those rooms that have not been refinished, charts have been made by the home department showing what has been done to them up to the fall semester, any destruction not shown on this card will be charged to the occupants at the end of the year.

ond on the more humid days... and only those on the Dean's list will be allowed in Harry's.

No Passionate Welcome

You must realize by now why we have failed to work up a passionate welcome for you. If any of the old guard flashes his molars in extending a greeting to you, remember... those teeth are gritting, not grinning.

As long as you're here, though, we may as well get you straight on a few matters. First, disregard that item in the Handbook about discarding your Rat caps if you beat the Sophs in hockey Thanksgiving. The new rule is that you may throw away your rat cap only if the Juniors win the intramural song contest in May. Next, remember to run to the bookstore immediately after the first session of each class before your professors have a chance to change the editions of your texts. Don't go near the third floor of Stevens Hall. A few of the laboratory assistants are working on a nerve-shattering problem... finding the mechanical advantages of the lever. Start making contacts with the midgets in your neighborhood and work up an agreement of some sort whereby she will take your clothing after you have sent it to the college laundry.

Make Yourself Known

The most important thing you can do here at school is to make yourself known. Toss a firecracker into the mashed potatoes at the Dean's table; or get together with your roommate and butt heads for an hour or so in front of the rotunda; or sing "Marching Through Georgia" on your way to classes. There are all sorts of possibilities.

Well, you've got the general idea now. Just one parting warning—the administration frowns on manslaughter after sunset.

Red Sox just aren't in the battle anymore. However, the Tigers are still clinging to last minute breaks of the game that produce many a turn over in baseball. Expectations for the Tigers and Red Sox now are not great, however, because at this point both teams are playing poorer ball than their accumulative records indicates. A team that will go on to the pennant must at least continue setting the high winning pace that put them up there, and usually it requires more, because invariably up surges a rejuvinated team with a last minute high fever and seemingly undefeatable potentialities.

EMORY AND HENRY WASPS AGAIN STING

The Emory and Henry Wasps are off to a quick start in their effort to duplicate their undefeated season on the gridiron last year. Saturday they trounced Milligan 41-0. With Bob Miller, All-State back, they seem ably gunned to mow down the grass. The Wasps were the most impressive small college team in the region last year and resultingly added to their regular season several Bowl games. The small colleges really have the football teams this year from all reports.

Registrar Enrolls 598 Students For Fall Session

202 New Students Register As Frosh; Transfers Total 47

Five hundred and ninety eight students are enrolled at Longwood College for the present semester according to an announcement by Miss Virgilia Bugg, College Registrar.

Two hundred and two students are registered as freshmen for the 1950-51 session. This is the largest freshman enrollment at Longwood since the 1947-48 session and is an increase of approximately fifty per cent of the 1949-50 freshman enrollment.

Forty seven of the 249 new students enrolled for this session are transfers from other colleges. Among the transfer students are members of the sophomore, junior, and senior classes.

24 Men

Men students for this semester total 24, a slight decrease from the enrollment of men during the 1949-50 session. Sixteen of the men are former students and eight are transfers or members of the freshman class.

The total enrollment shows only a slight increase over the 1949-50 figures but according to Dean William W. Savage, Longwood is one of the few colleges in Virginia which did not have a decrease in enrollment this year.

"The graduating class of 1950 was one of the largest in the history of the College which accounts for the only slight increase in total enrollment despite the large increase in freshmen," added Dean Savage.

College House Council Will Sponsor Dance In Rec. Hall October 7

A juke box dance will be held this Saturday night sponsored by the House Council, Bobbie Pollard, president of the group has announced. The dance will begin at 8 p. m. and will last until 12 p. m. Admission will be 10c per person regardless of whether they are stag or drag.

Similar dances will be held throughout the year Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dean of Women, said today. These dances will provide entertainment for those girls who remain here over the week end as well as means of raising funds for the various organizations on campus.

Apprehensions are greater in proportion as things are unknown. —Livy.

Friendliness at Longwood Impresses New Instructor

MADELEINE BIGOT

"The friendliness of the people at Longwood, and everyplace I have seen has been the most impressive part of my stay here so far," Madeleine Bigot, the native French instructor who recently arrived from Paris has revealed in an interview today.

Madeleine, who has journeyed from France to join the Longwood faculty as Latin teacher and informant in French, has previously visited in England and Scotland. She taught in Scotland for a year.

When Madeleine returns to Paris, she will join her father and brother in the teaching profession and will continue to work on her doctorate degree.

Madeleine remarked that she was a friend of Yvette Ancey, who was instructor of French here two years ago, and who is also a native of Paris. "It was through Yvette," Madeleine said, "that I became first interested in Farmville."

Madeleine hopes to travel and "expects to take advantage of every opportunity to do so" while she is here. Although Madeleine thinks Virginia is very pretty, she admitted that she was "disappointed not to see any peanuts or cotton growing here." She has visited Richmond since her arrival here, on shopping and sightseeing tours.

Madeleine is the possessor of the Licence Es Lettres from the University of Paris, which is the American equivalent to a masters degree. She has specialized throughout her studies in the classics and the English language.

Madeleine has already begun to adapt herself to Longwood life. She has joined the College choir with the intention of furthering her musical abilities. She will help each of the French classes to learn to sing her native songs in the periods she meets with them each week.

Evidently charmed with the friendliness of Longwood students, Madeleine has expressed the hope that more and more of them will visit her at her room in Cunningham Hall.

Rotunda Wins Honor Rating

The Rotunda received an honor rating of Second Class in the 43rd Associated Collegiate Press All-American Critical Service. The issues receiving this rating were those published between February 1 and May 15, 1950.

The Rotunda was awarded a total of 785 points in the critical review. For news values and sources The Rotunda received 205 points, for news writing and editing 220 points, for headlines, typography and makeup 185 points, and for department pages and special features 175 points.

"Student newspapers of today are far superior to those of 10 years ago," said the judges in the ACP Critical Service. "Each year improvements are noted and as a result standards are higher. This constant improvement means that no matter how good a paper may have been yesterday, it is surpassed today, unless it too has progressed."

Dean's List Cuts

Those students entitled to Dean's list priviledges will not be required to fill out class cut excuses in the future, according to Dean W. W. Savage. He added that periodic checks will be made with faculty members on the affect of unlimited cuts on the academic standings of those students entitled to them.

College Lists Transfer Gains

Forty-seven students have transferred to Longwood for the 1950-51 session from almost as many colleges. Four of the transfers are seniors, twenty-six are juniors and seventeen are sophomores.

New senior students are Martha Bolling Atkinson who attended Montreat and Shorter Colleges before coming here; Peggy Janice Ragland, Averett College; Jerry Joseph Shevick, Jr., Duke University; and Robert Hunter Williams, Lynchburg and Elon Colleges.

Junior transfers are Lois Marie Ash coming from Averett; Martha Corine Blankenship, Madison; Phebe Drucilla Bolton, Virginia Intermont; Sara Lucille Bradshaw, Averett; Mildred Humphries Bright, Lees - McRee College and University of Virginia. Other juniors are Janet Marie Cline, who transferred from Virginia Intermont; Patricia Ann Dudley, Ogontz Junior College; Irene Novella Goode, Madison; Shirley Anne Grogan, Averett; and Nettie Ann Harden, Averett.

Other new junior students are Dolly Virginia Lonas, from Marion Junior College; Lelia Adrenne Motley, Mary Washington; Anne Oakley, Averett; Carolyn Stokes Overbey, Averett; Nancy Farrar Park, Stratford; William Lawrence Carter, V.P.I.; Lucy Jane Perkinson, Averett; Alma Jo Price, Averett; Nancy Celicia Purdum, Averett Patricia Ann Reid, Guilford;

Library Students Will Give Exhibit On Virginia Poets

Display Will Honor State Poetry Day

Library science students will compile an exhibit of information concerning Virginia poets and their work to be shown in the library during the week of October 15. The display is being formulated in honor of Virginia Poetry Day, which has been set for October 15 by Governor John S. Battle.

Mrs. Ruby Roberts, poet laureate of Virginia, has helped with the project in an effort to familiarize Virginia college students with the work of their native poets.

Included in the exhibit will be works by Mrs. Roberts, Benbellitt, Thomas Lomar Hunter and Lawrence Lee. Mary Sinton Leitch, Virginia Kent Cummins, Nancy Byrd Turner, Karl Shapiro and Blanch Williams will also be featured in the Virginia group.

Manuscripts and printed poems by Miss Elizabeth Eggleston of Hampden-Sydney and poems by students and alumnae of Longwood College will also be featured in this exhibit. The work of Miss Josephine Johnson of Norfolk and Mrs. Grace Burton will be included in this group.

Miss Elizabeth Burger was chosen to serve as sponsor to the class of '54 at the class meeting held Monday evening.

Miss Burger, who is traditionally sponsor to a red and white class, relinquished her duties as sponsor to the class of '50 upon graduation last June. Associate professor of Science, Miss Burger also won international recognition this summer when she toured England and South Africa with the United States Hockey Team of which she is captain. She will take over her duties immediately as advisor to the newest Longwood Class.

Cleo Holliday and Mary Dinny Wilson were chosen at the same meeting to act as co-chairmen of the freshman stunt for the coming Circus festivities. Class officers, student government and student standards representatives will be chosen in the near future.

Science Professor Will Relate Events Of S. African Trip

Miss Elizabeth Burger will discuss her recent trip to South Africa on the Longwood Hour, presented over WFLO Thursday at 4:30 p. m. Miss Burger, who is associate professor of science at the College, journeyed to South Africa this summer as captain of the American Hockey Team. She fills the position of goalie on the team.

Miss Burger will be interviewed by Margaret Ann Shelton, Betty McRee and Jean Ridenour, and will attempt to give a summary of her trip to the land below the equator. She will tell of the celebrities she met, the famous towns she visited and the native customs she observed during her trip. Ann Dudley will serve as student announcer for the program.

Dean Savage Announces Date of Registration For LC Evening Classes

Plans Are Made For 1951 Annual

Virginian Prices Remains Stable

At their first meeting of the year, Monday night, the annual staff made additions to their group, set prices for the 1950 Virginian, and made plans for the coming year.

Sale of the '51 Virginian will begin this week. The prices are the same as those of last year's annual: $7.00 plain, $7.40 with the engraved name on the cover, $7.55 with a padded cover, and $8.00 for a padded cover and engraved name.

A new photographer, Mr. Fred Dudley, has been chosen to do the photographic work this year. He is scheduled to begin taking pictures October 9. The annual staff believes that Mr. Dudley's photography will make the Virginian better than ever and urges each student to order his as soon as posible.

Other members of the staff are Edith Duvall, Vera Bryant, Polly Brothers, Sarah Graham, Gerry Newman, Kathryn McCready, Peg Perry, and Bobby Brown.

Capping Postponed

Senior capping has been indefinitely postponed according to Betsy Gravely, president of the senior class. A date for the ceremony will be set as soon as the class has been outfitted with caps and gowns.

Classes To Begin Week Of Oct. 7

Registration for the fall semester of the Evening Division of Longwood College, will be held Friday night in the West Wing of the College between 7:00 and 8:30, according to an announcement made by Dean William W. Savage. Classes will begin the following week.

Two courses have been planned so far for the coming session. One of these will be oil or watercolor painting and the other in music. The course in painting will be taught by Miss Annie Lee Ross of the college department of art. The course in painting is a continuation of the one offered in the Evening Division for the first time during the 1949-50 session.

The course in music, entitled "Music that We Hear Today," will be conducted by Dr. John W. Molnar, head of the college department of music. The course will consist of a study of the types, background and development of music heard today in the Concert hall, recital, church, theater, and radio, from the time of Bach to the present.

Each class will meet one night per week for a period of sixteen weeks. Tentative plans indicate that the course in art will meet on Thursday nights and the course in music on Monday nights. Class periods will run from 7:15 to 9:50 p. m.

Each class will be offered with or without credit as the participant wishes. Dean Savage added to his announcement "If a sufficient number of people do not register next Friday night, the classes will not be held."

Dean Savage added "Our experience has shown that the majority of persons interested in courses will register for them at the time of official registration." He pointed out that decisions regarding the operation of the classes will be made as soon as registration is over on Friday night. The nights tentatively designated for each class may be changed in the future if it is agreeable to all concerned.

New Longwood Buildings Cost Students Late Sleep

Look at 'em—we got buildings we haven't even used yet! Isn't it wonderful! Of course it is a little annoying to be awakened at the crack of dawn by hammering, riveting, etc., but what are a few such minor difficulties when the finished products will be such a thing of beauty and a joy forever?

Why just last spring our big, beautiful Edith Stevens Science Hall was little more than an empty brick shell full of workmen's tools, and crated furniture —just look at it now! There are still a few workmen about, and some of the furniture isn't quite all uncrated but any Longwood student lucky enough to be taking a course in biology, science, physics, or chemistry can trek right over and take up residence. Course we miss having Charlie Hop, Mr. Mac, Dr. Jeff, Dr. "B," Miss Baron, and Miss Burger right in the middle of things over on the "old campus" but anyone can plainly see they are all about to burst their buttons with pride over their new headquarters. And quite rightly too!

The new, improved annex is not quite completed but when the seniors of '50 took their leave those bare girders were anything but inviting looking. Before we know it we will have a whole new set of dorms, plus a new registrar's office, parlors, and what have you right under our noses. One end of the colonnade still has that beat-up, slightly used look but won't be long now before it too will be right in style.

Hey all you "old girls," remember that forlorn looking bit of foundation they were beginning to lay over there beyond the library last spring? A far cry from the present state of our Jarman Hall isn't it? Our new auditorium and music building is really going to be a beauty. Even in its now embryonic stage we can tell that—a fitting place

Frosh 'Rats', Soph' Ratters' Express Opinions of Rules

by a Sophomore

Since the freshmen have expressed their opinions concerning "Rat Day," the sophomores hardly need to express theirs. After all the majority of the class's feeling came out when they approved the present "rat" rules.

Of course it is not the nature of the lowly sophomores to be cruel and heartless—if only we could seek out revenge on the present junior class—heh-heh! Since that is impossible we must let our blows fall where they may and that happens to be upon the heads of the innocent young frosh. Sophomore attitude seems to be mainly made up of the realization that "We know you all haven't done anything to us, but that's the way

From a Rat

Naturally, all the freshmen have expressed opinions about the recently published rat rules. Different words have been used for these opinions, but they all add up to the same general theme: "We don't like them!" That's putting it mildly, of course. The first thought that came into everyone's mind was, "I want to go home." But, after the first horrible shock had subsided, we all decided to take it with a big wide smile and keep in mind the day we will be "ratting" instead of "ratted."

Some of the freshmen have said that the rules aren't as bad as they expected them to be. That's all very nice for the brave ones,

Freshmen Find Rooms Complete With New Maple Furnishings

The 1950 freshman were met by a much pleasanter interior view of Longwood College this fall than in previous years, as they were directed to dormitory rooms completely refurnished with modern maple bedroom suits.

Each room on Ruffner Hall has been completely outfitted with a maple suit of furniture. The average room is equipped with an eight piece suit including two single beds, two chests with attached mirrors, two night stands, a desk and chair. A matching comfortable chair will be added to the ensemble in the near future, according to Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dean of Women.

The rooms on Library Hall and Post Office have been redone in walnut finished suits. Miss Gleaves stated that future plans include putting furniture similar to that in Ruffner Hall on these two halls. Eventually, the Business Office hopes to entirely refurnish every dormitory on the campus.

Damage Insurance

Upperclassmen as well as freshman are reminded that their ten dollars room deposit is being held to cover any damages that dormitory rooms may incur during the year. Several rooms have been completely repainted this year and any damage apparent at the end of the year will be charged to the occupant of the room at that time. In those rooms that have not been refinished, charts have been made by the home department showing what has been done to them up to the fall semester, any destruction not shown on this card will be charged to the occupants at the end of the year.

ond on the more humid days... and only those on the Dean's list will be allowed in Harry's.

No Passionate Welcome

You must realize by now why we have failed to work up a passionate welcome for you. If any of the old guard flashes his molars in extending a greeting to you, remember...those teeth are gritting, not grinning.

As long as you're here, though, we may as well get you straight on a few matters. First, disregard that item in the Handbook about discarding your Rat caps if you beat the Sophs in hockey Thanksgiving. The new rule is that you may throw away your rat cap only if the Juniors win the intramural song contest in May. Next, remember to run to the bookstore immediately after the first session of each class before your professors have a chance to change the editions of your texts. Don't go near the third floor of Stevens Hall. A few of the laboratory assistants are working on a nerve-shattering problem...finding the mechanical advantages of the lever. Start making contacts with the midgets in your neighborhood and work up an agreement of some sort whereby she will take your clothing after you have sent it to the college laundry.

Make Yourself Known

The most important thing you can do here at school is to make yourself known. Toss a firecracker into the mashed potatoes at the Dean's table; or get together with your roommate and butt heads for an hour or so in front of the rotunda; or sing "Marching Through Georgia" on your way to classes. There are all sorts of possibilities.

Well, you've got the general idea now. Just one parting warning—the administration frowns on manslaughter after sunset.

(With apologies to "The Wil-Hamand Mary Go-Round," of The Flat Hat).

15. White ducks or blue jeans rolled above the knee are to be worn topped by a long sleeved green shirt or sweater.

16. All hair must be tucked into a bathing cap which is to be worn at all times.

17. Each finger must be tied with a green and white ribbon.

18. Fifty-three green and white streamers must be attached to the bathing cap over each ear. The green streamers being 5 inches long and the white ones 3 inches.

19. Each rat must have a painted green handle bar mustache.

20. Wear a mans white undershirt over the long sleeved green shirt.

21. Wear saddle shoes or loafers.

22. Positively wear or carry nothing red (this includes cigarettes, chewing gum wrappers, etc).

23. Know all green and white songs printed in the handbook.

24. Attend all classes and meals.

25. Not go to the Snack Bar until after 6 p. m.

26. Give a left handed Indian salute to all sophomores when passing them in the hall.

27. Stand at attention when reporting for appointments until told to do otherwise.

28. Obey all sophomores.

29. Call "Charlie Hop" Mr. French and sing the Charlie Hop song whenever in his presence using the words Mr. French instead of Charlie Hop.

30. Have a rat tail of green and white crepe paper reaching to the back of the knee.

Dean Savage Announces Date of Registration For LC Evening Classes

Classes To Begin Week Of Oct. 7

Registration for the fall semester of the Evening Division of Longwood College, will be held Friday night in the West Wing of the College between 7:00 and 8:30, according to an announcement made by Dean William W. Savage. Classes will begin the following week.

Two courses have been planned so far for the coming session. One of these will be oil or watercolor painting and the other in music. The course in painting will be taught by Miss Annie Lee Ross of the college department of art. The course in painting is a continuation of the one offered in the Evening Division for the first time during the 1949-50 session.

The course in music, entitled "Music that We Hear Today," will be conducted by Dr. John W. Molnar, head of the college department of music. The course will consist of a study of the types, background and development of music heard today in the Concert hall, recital, church, theater, and radio, from the time of Bach to the present.

Each class will meet one night per week for a period of sixteen weeks. Tentative plans indicate that the course in art will meet on Thursday nights and the course in music on Monday nights. Class periods will run from 7:15 to 9:50 p. m.

Each class will be offered with or without credit as the participant wishes. Dean Savage added to his announcement "if a sufficient number of people do not register next Friday night, the classes will not be held."

Dean Savage added "Our experience has shown that the majority of persons interested in courses will register for them at the time of official registration." He pointed out that decisions regarding the operation of the classes will be made as soon as registration is over on Friday night. The nights tentatively designated for each class may be changed in the future if it is agreeable to all concerned.

Plans Are Made For 1951 Annual

Virginian Prices Remains Stable

At their first meeting of the year, Monday night, the annual staff made additions to their group, set prices for the 1950 Virginian, and made plans for the coming year.

Sale of the '51 Virginian will begin this week. The prices are the same as those of last year's annual: $7.00 plain, $7.40 with the engraved name on the cover, $7.55 with a padded cover, and $8.00 for a padded cover and engraved name.

A new photographer, Mr. Fred Dudley, has been chosen to do the photographic work this year. He is scheduled to begin taking pictures October 9. The annual staff believes that Mr. Dudley's photography will make the Virginian better than ever and urges each student to order his as soon as posible.

Other members of the staff are Edith Duvall, Vera Bryant, Polly Brothers, Sarah Graham, Gerry Newman, Kathryn McCready, Peg Perry, and Bobby Brown.

Capping Postponed

Senior capping has been indefinitely postponed according to Betsy Gravely, president of the senior class. A date for the ceremony will be set as soon as the class has been outfitted with caps and gowns.

New Longwood Buildings Cost Students Late Sleep

Look at 'em—we got buildings we haven't even used yet! Isn't it wonderful! Of course it is a little annoying to be awakened at the crack of dawn by hammering, riveting, etc., but what are a few such minor difficulties when the finished products will be such a thing of beauty and a joy forever?

Why just last spring our big, beautiful Edith Stevens Science Hall was little more than an empty brick shell full of workmen's tools, and crated furniture —just look at it now! There are still a few workmen about, and some of the furniture isn't quite all uncrated but any Longwood student lucky enough to be taking a course in biology, science, physics, or chemistry can trek right over and take up residence. Course we miss having Charlie Hop, Mr. Mac, Dr. Jeff, Dr. "B.," Miss Baron, and Miss Burger right in the middle of things over on the "old campus" but anyone can plainly see they are all about to burst their buttons with pride over their new headquarters. And quite rightly too!

The new, improved annex is not quite completed but when the seniors of '50 took their leave those bare girders were anything but inviting looking. Before we know it we will have a whole new set of dorms, plus a new registrar's office, parlors, and what have you right under our noses. One end of the colonnade still has that beat-up, slightly used look but won't be long now before it too will be right in style.

Hey all you "old girls," remember that forlorn looking bit of foundation they were beginning to lay over there beyond the library last spring? A far cry from the present state of our Jarman Hall isn't it? Our new auditorium and music building is really going to be a beauty. Even in its now embryonic stage we can tell that—a fitting place

by a Sophomore

Since the freshmen have expressed their opinions concerning "Rat Day," the sophomores hardly need to express theirs. After all the majority of the class's feeling came out when they approved the present "rat" rules.

Of course it is not the nature of the lowly sophomores to be cruel and heartless—if only we could seek out revenge on the present junior class—heh-heh! Since that is impossible we must let our blows fall where they may and that happens to be upon the heads of the innocent young frosh. Sophomore attitude seems to be mainly made up of the realization that "We know you all haven't done anything to us, but that's the way

Naturally, all the freshmen have expressed opinions about the recently published rat rules. Different words have been used for these opinions, but they all add up to the same general theme: "We don't like them!" That's putting it mildly, of course. The first thought that came into everyone's mind was, "I want to go home." But, after the first horrible shock had subsided, we all decided to take it with a big wide smile and keep in mind the day we will be "ratting" instead of "ratted."

Some of the freshmen have said that the rules aren't as bad as they expected them to be. That's all very nice for the brave ones,

Your Honor . . .

New students were given a chance to become thoroughly acquainted with the Longwood honor code during the recent orientation program. Now the problem arises, just how impressed will these new members of our society be with seeing the honor code in action? Will they fall into Longwood life with the realization that each student here puts his honor in all things above any personal desires? Or will these newcomers learn that the principles of the honor code are taken rather lightly by those here now.

The responsibility for showing our new associates the importance and benefits of an honor code that works, lies primarily with the old students of the College, but it cannot be done half way or by only a portion of the student body. Those who gleefully relate tales of how they "got by" some "petty rule", loudly complain of the regulations of the College and plead ignorance to their handbooks can do as much if not more to break down the honor code as a student who openly breaks the major rules of our society.

A careful examination of the regulations the adminstration and student governing bodies have imposed on us will reveal that each one is designed for a particular purpose. None of them are superfluous, they have been created with a reason, and that reason is to benefit each student.

A working honor system cannot be overstressed for college students, for these students will soon become citizens and leaders in a nation based on the theory of self-disciplined government.

Music Please . . .

Music, music everywhere! At least that seems to be one of THE topics of conversation in the halls of Longwood during these first few weeks of school. To the existing, chorus, choir, and Madrigals, Longwood wants to add an orchestra. Already the dream is materializing. Eighteen students have signed up to play or to take lessons and thus become part of the College orchestra.

The administration has proved its interest in such a musical group by adding two new members to the music department. With their aid Dr. Molnar will be able to devote more of his time to teach students who want to play an instrument and to conduct the orchestra when the time comes. The staff of Longwood has also shown its interest by seeing that music rooms were provided in the Jarman Auditorium building.

New instruments have been bought by the College for use of the students who do not own, or do not wish to own, their instruments. Enough pieces have been obtained to outfit a fair sized orchestra.

An orchestra would benefit the College in many ways. Assembly programs would be greatly enhanced by the sound of the Alma Mater and College color songs being played by our own orchestra. Everyone knows that music is a sure way of pepping up lagging spirits. Students who love music, but have no singing ability, could take lessons on an orchestral instrument and satisfy their appreciation of the art in a new way. College dramatics would be lent a "finished" air with an orchestra to play before, after and during the presentation of a play. With a growing music department Longwood will be able to take care of many music majors who saw little offered in the way of music in previous years.

The College has done much to make an orchestra possible, there are great advantages to having such a musical group. Surely the students of Longwood can see that the success of such an undertaking now depends upon them and their interested support.

Speak Up...

Once again the Rotunda reminds the Longwood students that the paper belongs to them. Although only a small percentage of the student body actually puts the paper out, the Rotunda strives to speak for the entire group. This is an impossible task unless we know the views of the students.

The Letters to the Editor department will print any and all letters received from the students, the faculty, the administration, the alumnae, or interested friends of the College. We stipulate only that the letters must be signed, in ink, by the writer.

Your opinion is valuable to us—give freely of it.

Our World

By BUNNY GIBSON

An oft repeated by-word in the various foreign offices of the western powers seems to be "Hold that line". However, matters have altered recently and the problem now is the crossing of that line. We are trying to keep one jump ahead of Stalin and the Commies.

The 38th parallel is not the only line we are penetrating, however. In a broader sense we are attacking the entire Iron Curtain by such methods as the Voice of America radio programs and our encouragement to Tito.

Many serious problems still remain in Korea. Although MacArthur's strategy surprised and trapped the Reds, a communist front remains and may readily result in borderline scrimmages paralleling the situation now in Germany. Russia still has her plans for the conquest of Asia and the western hemisphere. Knowing that the United States can match or surpass her in military strength, her tactics may change since we challenged Korea. It is unlikely, however, that the original plans of Lenin and Stalin will alter noticeably.

Roosevelt showed us to appease Russia might be fatal. It is further evident that the Reds will not bargain fairly and openly. Therefore, it appears we must meet force with force wherever the enemy may be. Even though congress did not forget the coming elections, they showed that they were aware of the dangers affronting the people by their last minute action on important defence bills. Mobilization was the password. Even Senator Byrd forgot the budget to come all out for "Invincible America." To preserve democracy this seems essential, regardless of the hardships and problems it entails.

Stecking My Neck Out

by Joanne Steck

Well, if one didn't know better, one would think Longwood was an army proving ground—course now we don't object too strongly. It's a source of entertainment and good fun and fellowship for us inmates.

This past week end has really been hopping! — for those who went away, that is. Oh, well, that's the breaks. Seems like the only way the inmates that stay here week end after week end can live is from the fantastic and numerous tales of the travelers that return.

Have you all noticed how the hair styles change after the first week or so of school? We all come back with long mops of flowing tresses; now all we have to show for ourselves is a hacked off brush —tooth brush we mean!

Freshman, the sophomores really appreciate your coming over to see them the other night. It just goes to show how quickly new girls can get in the swing of the ol' Longwood spirit. The sophomores ask you Frosh above all to remember puleeze not to take "Rat Day" and all that goes with it personally. You can be sure that every class ahead of you went through the same thing and are still here to tell the story and laugh about it. Our present seniors even had two days of ratting. It is all a part of that big phase in your life called college.

Remember girls if you are down and out on life, if your grey hairs are showing, if fatigue overcomes you in class, if your red corpuscles do the "Hot Foot Charlie," if you have gastric disorders, take HADACOL! To illustrate, we will give you the case history of Himan Hingle who had a wooden leg for nigh on to 40 years, but after taking six cases of Hadacol, his leg now has full size branches on it.

Aren't We Cute

Getting out this paper is no picnic. If we print jokes, people say we are silly, if we don't they say we are too serious; if we clip things from other papers; we are too lazy to write ourselves, if we do not, we are stuck with our own stuff.

If we stick close to the job all day we ought to be hunting news. If we get out and try to hustle, we ought to be on the job in the office.

If we don't print contributions, we don't appreciate true genius, and if we do print them, the paper is filled with junk. If we make a change in the other fellow's writeup, we are too critical. If we don't we are asleep.

Now like as not some guy will say we swiped this from some other paper. We did.

Campus Cogitations

How are you going to treat the Freshmen on Rat Day?

Sue Webb: Give them an easy time and protect them from some of those horsy sophomores.

Judy Cox: I don't know, but blood will be shed.

Helen Castros: I'm gonna feel sorry for them.

Caroline McDonald: All sorts of cute little things.

Lou Jamison: Chop them up and serve them for meat in the dining hall—the tender ones, that is.

Joyce Gatling: Give them a rest and let them write some love letters.

Elizabeth Stone: Just about kill them.

Babs Booker: Let them sing Green 'n White until they're green in the face.

Billie Rose Spivey: Make them scrub the floors with a toothbrush.

Virginia Manville: Let them come in and rest.

Betty Hoffman: They'll get no easy time from me.

Barbara Colton: Make them hang off the chandelier by their toenails.

Helen Barrow: Teach them what air raid means.

Betsy Hankins: Sit on a tack and hang their heels over the edge.

Jean Jinett: Collect enough Kools to last until next Rat Day.

Janice Pinkard: Make them wish they were frosh last year.

Bobbie Obenshain: It all depends on the way they act.

Mary Anne Johnson: The same way I was treated and that ain't good!

Nancy Lawrence: I'm gonna treat them just like rats!

Pat Lee: I am going to be real mice to them.

Betty Tyler: Censored!

Kitty Hamlet: The way I was treated.

Clara Borum: That's a secret!

Bobbie Caverlee: I'm not sure yet.

Natalie Lancaster: I will try to remember to be merciful, but—!

Charlotte Robertson: I'll never tell!

Joyce Cheatham: Time will tell!

Nancy Wooldridge: I'm going to be a nasty little girl.

Candy, Cake, Fruits Repay Suffering Student Teacher

"Today I got two grapes, a bite of cake, a slice of apple and a mound!" Box from home? Hard'y, just another student teacher listing her days' achievements as her ever suffering roommate applies a hot water bottle to her throbbing head.

And then there's the usual question "what did you play when you were in the fifth grade" and the glare we always get when we give the usual answer, followed later on by someone else's like question and the general complaint "how can we play that, all we have is one little bean bag and besides first graders are too young to play hockey anyway!

So it goes, we want to get up a quick game of bridge with the suitemates and what are they doing? One is wrapped up in a thing called units where one writes down every word they expect to say for the next week or two and the other is down on the floor trying to see if this latest game is too rough for "her children," but its really alright, we've got a stack of papers to grade anyway to say nothing of that P.T.A. meeting at eight o'clock.

But then we decide maybe it's all worth it, regardless, when at the end of a tiring thirty minute recess a chubby little first grader comes running up and hugging the knees (the extent of her reach) of

Don't Commit Suicide Yet! When Bored, Go Swimming

Say, have you heard what goes on each Wednesday and Friday afternoon in the pool room (swimming pool room, that is). As a rule everyone knows about recreational swimming, but few people realize that it is what its name implies. It is a planned recreation for YOU. There is no work involved; it isn't forced on you by any means; and above all, it's just down right fun.

Just about everywhere one goes around Longwood, we hear the same old cry: "There isn't anything to do around this place in my spare time—such as it is." There is something to do if you'll do it instead of constantly wailing the blues. The Physical Education Department has taken the time and energy to hold recreational swimming twice a week. Yet each day the pool is open it is practically empty. Now, it's just plain foolish not to take advantage of such wonderful facilities when you have the privilege of using them.

If you still aren't convinced, look up the word recreation in a dictionary. Above all, don't shy away from Recreation swimming because it is put on by a department of the college and therefore "Couldn't be fun." It is fun! Ask anyone who swims for that hour, and you'll get the same answer.

If the response to recreational swimming is enthusiastic enough, the H2O Club will probably sponsor an hours swim each Saturday night. Saturday night with nothing to do can be awfully boring. So get behind your college's efforts to make the week ends here more enjoyable.

I never think of the future. It comes soon enough. —Albert Einstein.

DR. FRASER REJOINS PIONEER COACHING STAFF; MALLOY ABSENT

Dr. A. C. Fraser, last year's coach of the Pioneer basketball squad has accepted once again the reins of the Longwood cagemen for the coming 1950-51 season. He will be unable to make the "away" trips with the team. The Faculty Advisor of Men's Athletics at Longwood last year, Mr. Thomas A. Malloy, immediately assumed this emergency coaching responsibility. However these heavy roles cannot entirely describe the extent of Mr. Malloy's services to Longwood men. His enthusiastic backing boosted the men's efforts throughout the entire men's activities. This year, Mr. Malloy has indicated that he will be unable to continue as the men's AA Faculty Advisor because of his prescribed work on his prospective doctrate degree. The men's AA is now seeking a new advisor.

COACH FRASER'S ACCEPTANCE BRINGS JOY, RELEIF

The acceptance of Dr. Fraser to head coach Longwood men's basketball team prompted a host of "hurrahs" from the Men's AA. With "THE" worry now off their minds the cagemen are raring to begin another hoop season, apparently with gusto.

COACH CALLS FIRST PIONEER PRACTICE: CITES IMPORTANCE OF GIRLS' SUPPORT

Coach Fraser issued a call for all prospective Pioneer cagemen last Monday night in the College gym. Coach Fraser is beginning "limbering up" practice sessions that will eventually develop into regular practice routines.

The Coach expects to be able to produce from last year's returning experienced veterans and this year's welcomed experienced freshmen, a squad that will stand up stronger and longer than last year. He stressed the significence of the lack of reserves and experienced men last year. "Despite crippling losses", he continued, "I think that a successful year can be ahead of us if the men continue to work as earnestly and faithfully as they have in the past, and if they get the needed support and interest of the women students on campus." Coach Fraser pointed out the overwhelming comparable support that the Madison men had last year from its women students. Madison edged us last year very closely. We just didn't seem to be able to match the opposing enthusiam. We definitely had the ability.

JOE LOUIS FAILS IN COME BACK ROLE

The fight is over. A dejected, old, but great fighter of the now past has undisputedly lost the Heavy Weight-Championship of the World that he so honorably kept for a longer period of time than anyother heavyweight in history. Louis, though defeated, will probably remain for a long time to come the greatest heavyweight fighter of all time. It is acknowledged by almost all of even his opponents that Charles is not the better fighter when compared to the great Louis of some years ago. No man, white or black, could have possessed the Title more honorably, or held it with more dignity, than the extreme example of clean sportsmanship and unequaled fighting of Joe Louis.

Athletic Association Gives Preview of Sports for Frosh

Sportin' Around

by Lou Jamison

Flash! This week I really have official news. Everyone who is interested in hockey has been waiting patiently for some information concerning our hockey program for this year to break. Lots of rumors have been going around, but up to now we have been in a quandry when it came to what was really official.

Just yesterday Miss Iler and Edith Kennon, varsity hockey manager, said that they were now ready to give out a little information about hockey events. Of course, we were very anxious to hear our schedule which you will find printed in another column on this page. They also stated that the varsity hockey team and squad will be posted on the A.A. bulletin board today. Tryouts have gone on right up to today for this all important list. And don't feel that they are ending even now! Edith said, "This is a tenative list subject to changes at any time, especially as far as the freshmen and transfer students are concerned."

All upper-classmen know Longwood lost some really terriffic hockey stars last year, and some of us are under the delusion that this is practically a death-blow to our team. Please don't live with such a false idea in your head. Hasn't our team lost fine players every year? This has never caused any great calamity, because we gain many new stars. Surely our experiences of past years will repeat themseives again, and we shall once more have one of the finest hockey teams in the state.

for the Jarman organ for which we and the alumnae have long labored. Cross your fingers, everyone, the class of '51 may graduate there yet in spite of rain, mud, hidden ice pits, and held up materials.

Except for the fact that the term got rather overworked several years ago we might refer to our present campus as Longwood College with the "New Look." But maybe we can get away with it any way since it really looks new to us!

Students Treated To Picnic Supper

A prevue of sports for the benefit of freshmen and transfer students was presented last Thursday by upperclassmen. The exhibition, which was viewed by new and old girls alike, gave a pictorial summary of Longwood's complete sports program.

A brief exhibition in basketball led the list of demonstrations, followed by a preview of what happens on the volley ball court. Techniques of modern dance demonstrated by Orchesis members were next offered to the spectators.

Onlookers were then led to the Athletic Field to view a mock hockey game and archery demonstrations.

Red and Whites and Green and Whites made up competitive teams in the demonstrations. A picnic supper was held in the recreation room of Ruffner Hall following the sports preview.

Kennon Announces Hockey Schedule For Varsity Team

Edith Kennon, varsity hockey manager for the 1950 season, recently announced the schedule for this year's varsity team. According to Edith, the first game of the year will be played on home territory October 20 with Roanoke College as the opposing team.

The Longwood team will travel to Richmond on October 28 to participate in the East Allied Hockey Tournament at St. Catherine's. As the schedule stands now, the final game of the season will be played against Lynchburg College on the Lynchburg field on November 1.

This should be a wonderful season for the Longwood hockey team. Everything has been working out according to plan so far, and all of our players both old and new are raring to go.

Churches Report Plans; Methodists Hold Meeting

Plan Conference

A conference of Methodist youth will be held at Randolph Macon College in Ashland this coming week end. Dr. Kagawa of Japan will highlight the conference with an address given to the gathered students at the Mosque in Richmond.

"Now is the Time" will be the topic of the student's program at the Wesley Foundation meeting Sunday night. The program will feature a Love Feast.

Gerry Speidel, director for the State Wesley Foundation, was the main speaker at the Methodist banquet for the freshmen last Thursday night. Among the entertainers were Sarah McElroy and Winston Johnson.

Baptist To Meet

There will be a meeting of YWA of the Baptist student group Thursday at 7 p. m. at the Baptist Student Center. Upperclassmen are challenging the freshmen on attendance records at Sunday School for the month of October. The winners will be feted at a Hallowe'en party given by the losers at the end of the month.

Catholics Supper

A buffet supper was held at the Catholic rectory in Blackstone last Sunday evening for new and old Longwood Catholic students.

Conference Report

Mary Crawford will report of her experiences at the Presbyterian Conference at Montreat next Sunday night at the Westminster Fellowship meeting. The meeting will be held at 7 p. m. at the Presbyterian Church.

was no holding them. Miller now has 36 points for the first two games of the season and threatens to break the State scoring record he himself set last year with 102 points. He also made "Little All-American". The Emory and Henry Eleven have not lost a game since 1948 . . . Hampden-Sydney got on the victory train Saturday with a 38-26 win over East Carolina Teachers College while Randolph Macon was fumbling away a 15-13 loss to Apprentice . . . The Marines are not lowering themselves on the gridiron—they defeated VPI 62-21 . . . North Carolina is not missing Justice apparently because they out played the nation's top ranked and four time undefeated Notre Dame for over three quarters and early game fumbles spelled the close 14-7 victory for the Irishmen. At that, Virginia lost control of the third quarter and the ball game against Penn came out a 21 7 loser . . . William and Mary came out of their embarrased Teepee's to gain a respectful 20-14 win over Cincinnati.

Spanish Club Choses Circus Booth Head

Bunny Gibson was apointed to head the committee in charge of the Circus booth for the Spanish Club at a meeting held yesterday in the browsing room of the library.

Ann McMullan, president of the club, also announced that Celeste Bishop will take over the post of treasurer of the club. Celeste will replace Bobbie Obenshiem who discontinued her studies in Spanish this semester.

New members were introduced to the group before the meeting was adjourned.

Lynch Names Chairmen Of Circus Festivities; Queen, Court Chosen

Freshmen To Serve As Clowns, Animals

Committee chairmen for the annual Circus sponsored by Alpha Kappa Gamma have been appointed according to an announcement by Anne Lynch, general chairman of the festivities. Anne added that the individual stunt chairmen have also been elected by their respective classes.

Virginia Spencer and Betsy Gravely have been appointed to co-head the stunt committee. This committee will organize the individual stunts presented by each class. Prizes will be awarded to the two best presentations selected by a board of faculty judges.

Lead Parade

Betty McRee and Mary Crowder will be in charge of the Circus parade. The parade, which will march through the streets of Farmville on the afternoon preceding circus will include a float from each class representing the theme of their stunt, a bevy of animals and clowns, and green n' white and red n' white representatives.

Mary Leigh Meredith and Jean Smith will head the group in charge of the animals and clowns. Members of the freshman class will serve as animals and freshman and upperclassmen will cavort as clowns. In addition to the parade Saturday afternoon, the clowns and animals will present a performance preceding the class stunts at the evening event.

Business Committee

Tickets and advertising will be under the direction of Anne Burnette and Romine Mahood. Tickets will go on sale several days previous to the affair and will also be sold at the door on the night of Circus.

Maria Jackson and Sue Brewbaker will take charge of the decorations and booths, according to Anne. Several organizations will sponsor booths or concessions that will be open to the public following the main event.

The Circus queen and her court will be chosen by secret ballot by the individual classes. Each class will elect a representative with the senior representative automatically reigning as Queen of

Dr. Moss Speaks To Men's Group

Nominations Made For Vice-President

Dr. C. G. C. Moss spoke to the Men's Student Government Association meeting concerning the men's Honor Code yesterday afternoon in the browsing room of the Library.

Dr. Moss spoke in answer to recent requests of the men students for a men's Honor Code. He introduced many ideas which should be considered when planning an honor code, and urged that, in contemplating an honor system, the men should think of future students who would profit under a functioning honor system. Dr. Moss pointed out the two aspects of such a system, using many illustrations from schools now using such a system. He reminded the men, that while a person living under this system has the prime duty of adherence to the standards set by the system, he also has the duty of honestly reporting any violations of the code.

Nominations were made at the meeting for the office of vice-

AKG Group Taps Eight LC Leaders In Assembly

7 Srs., 1 Jr. Recognized For Leadership

Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary leadership fraternity, tapped eight girls for membership at the assembly program last week.

Those recognized for their leadership were Sue Brewbaker, Ann Burnett, Maria Jackson, Charlotte King Jones, Betty McCree Mary Leigh Meredith, Jean Smith, and Miss Virginia Wall.

The Alpha Kappa Gamma hymn was sung by Mr. Joel Ebersole, new professor of music.

AA Vice-Pres.

Sue, a senior from Parkersburg, West Virginia, has served on the Athletic Association Council for the past three years and is this year vice - president of the group. She is president of the Pan-Hellenic Association. Sue is also a member of Pi Kappa Sigma, social sorority; Cotillion Club; Future Teachers of America; and the Monogram Club.

Ann Burnett who is a senior from Farmville is now serving as treasurer of her class and chairman of the Freedom Crusade currently being conducted at the College. Ann is a member of the Town Girls' Club, Granddaughters' Club, Theta Sigma Upsilon, social sorority, and Student Government Council. Ann, during her four years at Longwood, has served the College ably by playing the piano.

Jr. House President

Maria Jackson fills the post of junior house president this year. She has recently been selected co-chairman of the junior stunt for circus and is serving as vice-president of the French Club. Maria is also a member of Cotillion Club, Spanish Club, and Kappa Delta, social sorority. She is managing editor of the Colonnade this year.

A senior from Salem, Charlotte Jones holds the position of editor-in-chief of the Virginian, and co-chairman of the queen and court committee for circus. Charlotte was a member of Alpha Phi Sigma during her freshman and sophomore years, and has been a member of the College choir and Madrigals for three years. She is also a member of the Cotillion Club, French Club, and

475 Place Names On Scroll In Freedom Crusade Campaign Being Conducted At College

Signers Donate Toward Funds

The name of 475 members of the student body, the faculty, the administration and staff of Longwood College have been signed to the Freedom Scroll of the Crusade for Freedom at the College. The signers have also contributed $66.44 toward the Crusade funds.

The Longwood Crusade for Freedom is being sponsored by the women's Student Government Association. Ann Burnette is general chairman of the drive which was introduced in assembly last Wednesday by President Dabney S. Lancaster and Helen Agnew, president of the women's government.

The Crusade at Longwood will continue until tomorrow at 6 p. m. by which time it is hoped that every member of the student body, the faculty, staff and administration will have signed his name to the declaration of world freedom.

Campaign of Truth

The Crusade for Freedom is sponsored by the National Committee for a Free Europe, Inc., of which General Lucius D. Clay is chairman. "It offers every American an opportunity to play a part in a 'great campaign of truth' to win the war of ideas. It is a 'spiritual airlift' designed to give comfort and courage to the 80 million people now living in Eastern Europe who keep alive in their hearts the hope of freedom and self-government," said General Clay in an appeal to college and university students throughout the United States.

"The Freedom Bell," a replica of the American Liberty Bell, has been cast and is now on display in American cities and towns. It will be erected in Berlin, Germany, and in the base of the supporting structure will be placed the scrolls bearing the signatures of the millions of Americans who participated in the Crusade.

Build Freedom Shrine

The funds collected during the Crusade for Freedom will be used to build the Freedom Shrine which is to house the bell in Berlin.

According to General Clay, "The Crusade with its symbolic World Freedom Bell proclaims our inherent belief in man's dignity and right to freedom; it announces our determination to resist any aggression upon that freedom anywhere on earth; it declares our national unity and dedication to world peace with freedom."

Smith Announces Drama Selection

New Club Advisor Names Play Cast

"The Madwoman of Chaillot," a French play written by Jean Giraudoux, has been chosen as the fall production to be given by the Dramatic Club November 16, 17, and 18 in the small auditorium, according to Mary B. Smith, president of the club.

Mr. Alec W. Finlayson, new advisor to the dramatic club, revealed in a recent interview that the selected play was released a year and a half ago on Broadway, and only in September of this year was it released for amateur productions. "The Madwoman of Chaillot" is a poetic comedy taking place in present day.

Cast Chosen

As a result of the tryouts for parts during the past week, the cast has been chosen as follows: Cleo Holladay, will portray the Madwoman of Chaillot whose timeless existence is the focal point of the play; Jo Ann Utley will act the part of Irma, a young waitress who gives the play a touch of juvenile love. Ellen Porter, Virginia McGlaughlin, and Carolina Traynham will play, respectively, the parts of Josephine, Gabriel, and Paulette, three entertaining mad women.

The Rag picker, an old man who holds many surprises for the audience, will be portrayed by Josh Billings, while Charles Talley will act the part of The President, a business man who is looking for a profitable business venture. The Prospector, who looks for money will be acted by Fred Hopewell and William Robertson, respectively.

Ethel Straw will play the part of Constance; Geneva Tobinson, the Flower Girl; Amanda Wright, Elizabeth Browning, and Mary Ann Kin, the Ladies. Bucky Williams will act the part of Pierre, Bill Norcross, the Sewer Man; Madison McClintic, Dr. Jadin; Jake Williams, the Deaf-mute; and Atwell Motley, the Baron.

Other male parts are the Sergeant, to be played by Bucky Morton; the Policeman, Joe Gillespie; the Waiter, Bill Passano; the Little Man, John Dukker; Adolphe Bertaut, Bob Mathews, one of the Presidents, Grady

Journalism Group Bids 22 Persons

Nineteen student bids and three honorary bids were issued by the local chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary collegiate journalism fraternity, last Monday night.

Honorary bids were issued to those persons who have shown particular interest in the Longwood publications. Mr. M. Boyd Coyner, who is serving this year as faculty advisor to the Colonnade; Dean W. W. Savage, who served for several years as advisor to the Rotunda; and Mr. Harry Lancaster of the Farmville Herald received invitation to honorary membership in the fraternity.

Colonnade Members Chosen

Eight students were chosen from the staff of the College magazine, the Colonnade, to become members of the organization. Shirley Atkinson, head of the typing department; Flora Ballowe, poetry editor; Sara Creger, review editor; and Maria Jackson, managing editor, were among those issued invitations.

Other Colonnade staff members who will join Pi Delta Epsilon are Ludy Jane Morton, art editor; Peg Peery, photographic editor for both the Colonnade and the Rotunda; June Raines, advertising manager; and Betsy Wilson who is essay editor for the magazine and social editor for the College newspaper.

Six From Rotunda Invited

Six members from the newspaper staff were invited to membership. Among these were Helen Connelly, business manager; Jeanne Gilman, art editor; and Martha Kitchen, roving reporter. Lester Smallwood, men's sports editor; Mary Jo Smith, managing editor; and Polly Powers, advertising manager were also issued bids.

From the Virginian staff, five were recognized as meeting the fraternity standards. Charlotte King Jones, editor-in-chief; Betty Scott Borkey, photographic editor; Mary Crawford, assistant business manager, and Peggy Harris, managing editor were invited to membership.

Those students who were members of the Journalism Club last year, but who did not become Pi

Dr. Jeffers Appoints Five New Students In Science Labs.

Five student assistants in the biology laboratories have recently been appointed by Dr. George W. Jeffers, head of the department.

Chosen from the junior and senior biology majors, the assistants will work with the freshman laboratory courses and will set up and revise the lecture and display exhibits.

Joyce Hamlet, Frances Creger, Mary Leigh Meredith, Dolores Hoback, and Mary Frances Spurlock are the recently appointed student assistants for the 1950 fall semester.

212 Seditious Sciolistic Freshmen Sense Sophomores Are Sensationally Sagacious

I, rat—being a seditious sciolistic freshman and seem to sense that the sensationally sagacious sophomores—. Thus began rat day!

Rat "Day" really began the night before, however, when the "sensationally sagacious" sophomore showed up in mourning for something or other. Most of them looked like they were really taking it hard too, they were as pale as calumine lotion, and those black circles! They rapidly persuaded the frosh that it was really an occasion to be sad about too, as we slid under beds with amazing rapidity until our pajamas were slick with dirt and our skin was as black as the soph apparel. We praised '53 until we were hoarse, sang Green n' White till we were red in the face (just for spite) and got our noses so well acquainted with the floor boards that we'd be able to recognize them under any conditions.

All of a sudden these weird looking creatures who called themselves sophomores turned human and let us crawl into that luscious bed we'd been eyeing for an hour or more.

At four the next morning, bleary-eyed and in no mood to entertain anyone, about 212 seditious sciolistic freshmen were tying ribbons and arranging signs and mouse traps with unusual dexterity. As we dragged to our early morning appointments, the day started with a bang, the bang being our poor tummies smacking the floor as a cry of "Drop Dead" sounded through the halls. As we lay there shivering and awaiting the first atomic bomb to burst, we suddenly realized we were deserted and would probably lie there all day unless we got brave enough to sneak off to our various destinations.

Appointments! Classes, Meals! and in between times the eternal sound of "Drop Dead." We couldn't go to Snack Bar and weren't even allowed to get our mail. We made beds, we dusted and swept rooms, until the perspiration poured down our faces and tired backs. Our shopping bags were torn and our supplies depleted. The freshman of '54 had (for one day only) completely dedicated themselves to the sophomores.

This state of affairs lasted until 5 o'clock, after which, lo and behold! we were allowed to drag off the masquerade and clean up a little, very little though, for how were we to know whether or not we had to go to "Little Rat Court."

After dinner we soon found out, for about a third or more of the class had to endure the agonies

Sign For Freedom

Make Freedom Ring — Help Lift the Iron Curtain Everywhere! Those two phrases are the bywords of the Crusade for Freedom now being conducted on our campus. Already over four hundred students, faculty, staff and administration members have signed their names to the Freedom Scroll identifying themselves with the great campaign of truth about democracy.

But these signatures are not enough — the scrolls which go to Berlin to become a permanent part of the Freedom Shrine should bear the names of every person on the Longwood campus. By signing the Freedom Scroll with its declaration of world freedom each individual places himself on record in the roll-call of democracy proclaiming himself to the belief that all men derive the right to freedom equally from God.

In the great war of ideas the United States is making a mass bid for the world to go the way of democracy and individual freedom. Soviet Russia is making a bid for world totalitarianism — a bid which rests in large part upon complete and ruthless misrepresentation of American ideals and aims. No American can afford to have his name missing from the Freedom Scroll. All that America and Americans hold dear and sacred is dependent upon democracy winning this war of ideas.

As students in an American college we are preparing ourselves for lives of individual freedom. The education which we receive within the walls of Longwood is possible only because we live in a free nation. Our citizenship in a free society is a precious and priceless heritage which we must preserve for future generations. If we are ever to achieve a secure and lasting peace we must assure the other peoples of the world of our ideals of freedom and friendship for all men and all nations. Your name on the Freedom Scroll is a part of this effort — sign it now — you can't afford to wait.

Good Sports

Another year, another freshman class, another Rat Day. And, as we had expected, another set of good-natured grins on the faces of the "rats." Who can down a girl who has caught the spirit that goes with Longwood?

Rumors and much talk fly everywhere, just before and after the annual day for testing the frosh, about how mean the sophomores will be and have been and how Rat Day should be abolished. Yet the students here must concede that it's one big chance for the sophs to get to know many freshmen, and that it's a bigger chance for the new girls to show that unbeatable quality, good sportsmanship.

They did a good job of it. The frosh seemed to know that they were getting only what every other freshman class has received on Rat Day, and they demonstrated well the ability to take orders and do as they were told, even if it was all in fun. Dressing in a way that would scare any normal person, jumping up from a "drop dead" cry with a smile, reciting to a sophomore, singing, dancing, acting in most any foolish way required marks up as good sportsmanship in almost anybody's book.

Our freshmen sisters did a good job on Rat Day; we're proud of them. We Longwood upperclassmen are confident that they're going to keep that all-important quality during the four big years to come; then we'll be prouder yet.

Record Run

Grotesquely apparelled figures streamed from the Longwood dormitories last Thursday night to the weird sound of the fire siren. In exactly two minutes and fifteen seconds, every building has been cleared of students, a record unparalleled for the first drill of the year.

The freshman especially are to be congratulated for their prompt uniform reaction to the drill. In this, as in everything else, they seem to have caught the importance of living up to the standards and regulations of the College. In case of an actual fire, which many upperclassmen know is not an impossibility, a performance like that of Thursday night would probably save many lives. Such a performance is truly proof of the existence of that intangible Longwood spirit.

Our World

By BUNNY GIBSON

Hope was evident this week of the future creation of a new republic of Korea —from all of Korea. With the overwhelming approval of the United Nations General Assembly (excluding the Soviet bloc of course), MacArthur prepared to launch the final campaign of the war as he offered a surrender ultimatum to the communist forces.

Elsewhere, the western world is making plans to strengthen defense forces. Resolutions were submitted to the United Nations, establishing a peace observation commission which could observe and report on any situation where international tension exists. The U. N. also laid plans to call an emergency session of the General Assembly within twenty-four hours. Paralleling the nations' own efforts, recommendations were made that each nation make available forces for its own defense as well as for U. N. units in time of international crisis.

As a long term safety policy, the United States is building back the worlds greatest military machine. However, if we are called upon to demonstrate our might, we may find the world's battleground has shifted and we are not merely spectators. This fact is brought home to us as a State Civil Defense staff is created and Washington officials list the critical A-bomb targets in Virginia.

Names were in the news this week. Familiar names from a new angle. It's hard to imagine John L. Lewis as dog-catcher even though he seems able to class Truman and the state department somewhat in that category. Al Capone's name was in the headlines again this week in connection with the Senate Crime investigating committee; and some one still wants to talk peace with Stalin; this time it's Stassen.

Stecking My Neck Out

by Joanne Steck

Yes-sirec-bob—things are raring to go. By the time this is print Rat Day will be a thing of the past. The infirmary will be full, the hospital running over, and the sophomores will have food, cigarettes and goodies to burn. They will also have the cleanest rooms in the school. Mrs. Slayton won't even have to bother checking.

After the fateful day the "Rats" will be full fleged members of the Longwood tribe and entitled to all privileges, pleasures, burdens, etc., thereof.

Looks like all the Virginia football teams went plumb haywire over the week end, except, of course, dear ole U. of Va. Maybe it is a good thing Longwood doesn't have a football team — we might have lost 52-0, or something drastic like that and as it is we can always claim that we go to a college that has never been defeated in football.

Third floor sophomore annex really had a treat over the week end. Mother Agnew stayed there and it has even been rumored that Mother A. got a (shhhh — speak softly now) "Call-Down". If she didn't just about everybody else did.

What with the lights in the new section of annex and those cozy looking wire cages it reminds me of the old days in Sing Sing.

Guess everybody is looking forward to Circus. From all reports it appears that the 1950 festivities will be the best ever. That week end will also be old home week judging from the number of "See you Circus week end" reports received from our newest alumnae (the class of 1950, bless their dear little red 'n white hearts.)

By the way—I have a surprise for all my faithful readers—look for a big announcement in the near future in this column. It's gonna be the biggest, best paper selling, subscription getting thing we're had yet! You just wait and see!

What does the Honor Code mean to you?

Fran Harper: It means being honest to yourself and to others.

Evelyn Farrier: Observing the rules in the Handbook.

Kathryn Terry: Same thing that it does to Evelyn.

Cindy Mims: It means upholding the standards of the school.

June Foreman: That you're expected to live up to the highest ideals of the College and that your fellow classmates are striving for the same goal.

Frances Creger: It's up to the girl herself to obey rules and regulations set up by the administration and the Student Council. Why should I try to keep a watch for someone else who does not have honor enough to keep herself "in line.'

Maria Jackson: Living up to your own high ideals and applying them to Longwood College and trying to serve as a reminder for others.

Winnie Murdock: A standard by which one lives while at Longwood.

Joan Pritchett: The Honor Code makes the school a much better place to live and work.

Delores Hoback: To me the Honor Code is a foundation of the ideals and principles of the school.

Betty Abbitt: The Honor Code is what every Longwood girl should obey to uphold the standards of the Colege.

Polly Brothers: It means living up to the high standards of Longwood and gives you a feeling of assurance to know all of the students are trying to live by the Honor Code.

Lee Wingfield: It stands for clean scholarship in school as well as clean sportsmanship.

Mary Jean Carlyle: To me the Honor Code is the foundation of the Longwood spirit.

Donnie Dean: The grace by which we live.

Elizabeth McCloung: It means a lot, but I don't know how to explain it.

Dot Bankhead: It is in a sense a respect you have for yourself as well as for your fellow students.

Blank Looks, Red Gym Suits, Rat Caps Characterize New Hockey Students

Blank expressions ruled the day as the freshmen took their first whack at a Longwood hockey ball the last of September. The AA field was the setting; Miss Iler was the patient instructor—and oh what patience it took!

Gamely the frosh had turned out in their adorable little red gym suits. Here and there could be seen, standing out like a spot light, the familiar blue and white rat cap.

There were freshmen who had never held a hockey stick in their hands before; there were freshmen who had led their high school teams to victory—all were ready to do or die.

With time and much hard practice the blank expressions are beginning to fade and a little skill is beginning to creep into the game of even the most awkward of the novices.

For weeks now the frosh have been pouring onto the athletic field at each and every freshman practice with grim determination written upon their faces. They too have heard the rumor about the November game with the sophomores—a freshmen class has not defeated the sophs in hockey for many a year now. But this class is pouring their all into the effort—if they go down, they'll go down gamely. After all they have a lot to fight for—who wants to wear their rat cap until Christmas when they could discard it at Thanksgiving—IF—

LC Men Students To Be Interviewed

An informal interview of the Longwood men students will highlight the regular Longwood Hour on WFLO Thursday at 4:30 p. m.

The interview will be "an interpretation of men's life at Longwood" covering such phases as fraternity life, dramatics, honorary organizations, academic intentions, etc. The questions for the program have been planned, but the answers will be unrehearsed, according to Dr. Thomas A. Malloy who will be in charge of the program.

New men students taking part in the program will be Lester Trout of Cumberland County and Bob Williams, transfer. Berman Scott, Shepherd Elmore, John Cook, and Leonard Shaw, former students, will also take part.

Pan-Hel Sponsors Juke Box Dance

The Pan-Hellenic Council will sponsor a juke box dance in the recreation hall of Ruffner Hall Saturday night from 8 until 11:45 p. m., Sue Brewbaker, president of Pan-Hel has announced.

Admission to the dance will be ten cents per person.

THE YANKEES DOWN THE PHILS IN FOUR STRAIGHT

The mighty New York Yankees registered their 13th World Championship of baseball in 17 attempts last Saturday afternoon in Yankee Stadium, N. Y. It was the 6th time the Yankees have taken the Championship in four straight games. It was also their second consecutive World Championship. The 1950 club was a far cry from the Murderer's Row and Bronx Bombers of the Miller and Joe McCarthy eras, but it made up for it in a good many other respects. The Yankeemen seized every possible opportunity and made absolutely the most out of each. They literally stole the Series on the Phil's ordinarilly expected mistakes. However, the Yankee consistency at both the bat and in the field could not be matched by the Whiz Kids from Philadephia. It is felt that the Phils did better than popularly expected to hold the mighty Yanks to a keenly competitive Series right down to the last out of the last ball game.

THE GREAT NOTRE DAME FALLS AT LAST

The sophomore—dominated Purdue eleven turned in an unbelievable performance at South Bend, Ind. last Saturday when the highly spirited Boilermakers released such a stunning attack that the nation's top ranking gridiron terror fell humbly at its feet 28-14. The result was not just an upsetting defeat of the nation's top ranking '50 aggregation, but it was much more than that to everyone. It signified the end of Notre Dame's unmerciful reign of terror on the Gridiron that dates back as far as 1945. Its last home stand set back was in 1942. It was Coach Leahy's 4th Irish loss compiled with a record of 62 wins and 5 ties.

Many of Notre Dame's fans were relieved when they witnessed the shocking upset that ended the greatest national record in modern football. The terrific social pressure resulting from the Irish's glorious past records were becoming much too intense. But with more, there were sadness and remorse for the slain Goliath. Some of its players literally cried as they walked from the field. But the Boilermakers didn't receive a "lucky" decision. They outplayed their predicted 20 point masters in every department. Last week's 14-7 edging of North Carolina was a clear indication that Coach Leahy knew what he was doing when Notre Dame dropped several games this year from their slate. Despite everything the Irish were still ranked at the top.

MARYLAND BRINGS NATIONAL PRESTIGE TO SOUTHERN CONFERENCE

The Purdue-Notre Dame game seemingly was not the only great upset of the week last Saturday. Michigan State, who only last week upset the once mighty Michigan and vaulted into the nation's 2nd ranking position, was in turn whalloped by the fast rising Maryland Terps 34-7. The Terps have yet to clinch a Southern Conference Title much less receive national recognition, but the Terps now have at least the recognition and something tells me it won't stop there. The Maryland University plans big things in football in the years to come — they are now erecting a stadium that could eventually seat 90,000.

Duke, the once pre-season lightest favored team to take the SC Title this year, was beaten 28-7 by Tennessee. The Blue Devils are out of the "favorite" role at the present time.

WASPS ROMP ON — OVER TIGERS 48-21

The Emory and Henry Wasps paid little attention to Hampden-Sydney's hopeful expectations to be the 1st team since 1948 to upset the Wasp's apple cart. The Tigers scored first but their joyous lead was only temporary — the Wasps scored afterwards every time that they got their hands on the ball in the first half to net 41 points. The powerful Wasp machine besides having Little All-American Bob Miller, showed clearly that they were not dependent on one man. Bruce, Davis, and Solok were all dazzling on the field Saturday. Davis' keenly deceptive ball handling kept the Tigers off balance the entire game. The Emory and Henry squad would easily run close for top state gridiron honors.

SNAGS . . .

The Washington and Lee Generals now command the Southern Conference lead with a respectable 3-0 record . . . Randolph Macon ran into a big little team in Florida State and went down 40-7 . . . Catholic University defeated Bridgewater 32-0 for its season opener and also to open the Eagles second season of football at the college for years . . . VMI came from behind to defeate the Spiders 26-14 and according to Coach Nugent, the Keydets played only one quarter of real football—the last . . . Virginia had a field day at VPI turning in a 45-6 win that was but a warm-up for the coming W&L game this week end . . . The Wm. and Mary Indians received their worst scalping since 1923 as Wake Forest rolled up a 47-0.

Varsity Manager Announces Hockey Squad For 1950

Freshman Squad Will Be Selected

The 1950 varsity hockey squad has been announced by Edith Kennon, varsity manager. "The list is tentative and may be changed at any time," Edith stated.

Making up the hockey squad are Marion Becknor, Ann Biddlecomb, Clara Borum, Nell Bradshaw, Sue Brewbaker, Betty Collier, Barbara Caverlee, Anne Crowder and Nell Dalton.

Other members of the squad are Nancy Desportes, Nancy Driskill, Helen Egerton, Nancye Gillie, Betsy Gravely, Edith Kennon, Anne Lynch, Nancy Park, Marlie Patterson, Rachel Peters and Ann Ramsey.

Completing the varsity list are Jean Ridenour, Ilene Russell, Frances Stringfellow, Louise Trinkle, Betty Tyler and Sue Webb.

The freshman varsity squad will be chosen during the coming week. "So many freshman have shown interest and have come out to practice that we have had difficulty in choosing the squad," Edith said.

Sportin' Around

by Lou Jamison

There isn't any spectacular sports event to thrill you with this week, but all of our activities are progressing extremely well.

Hockey has been our main attraction lately. Every afternoon that there is a practice the Longwood athletic field is practically covered with eager freshmen. What's happened to all those sports minded upper-classmen though? Surely Longwood will have more than a freshman team this year. Everyone has always been so wonderful about coming out to practices. We can't fall down this year—it just isn't the true Longwood spirit! One hour must be free on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday. Try to make that free hour come at 3:00 or 4:00 and come out to the athletic field for hocky and recreation.

There was quite a response to recreational swimming last Friday. It was really terrific to see so many students taking advantage of our recreational program.

Say, all of you new Longwoodites, do you know that there is a golf course at Longwood. Perhaps you already know about it, but it's there for your use—free, too. Grab your clubs, and let's go. See you there some afternoon!

Sigma Sigma Sigma, social sorority.

Betty 'Mac,' active member of the senior class, is serving this year as president of Sigma Sigma Sigma, social sorority. She has served three years on Student Standards and four years on Student Government Association. Betty is also a member of Cotillion Club, Future Teachers of America, and American Childhood Education association.

Rotunda Editors

"Emul" Meredith, serving in a number of positions on the Rotunda staff during her four years at Longwood, is now co-head of the paper. This year she is secretary of Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary collegiate journalism fraternity. Mary Leigh is a member of Kappa Delta, social sorority, and held membership in Alpha Pi Sigma and the French Club during her sophomore year.

Jean Smith, also a Rotunda enthusiast, is the other co-editor of the College newspaper. This year, she is serving as president of Pi Delta Epsilon. Jean is also a member of Boerc Eh Thorne, national honorary English society, French Circle, the Dramatic Club, and Kappa Delta, social sorority. During her sophomore year, she was a member of Alpha Phi Sigma.

Miss Virginia Wall, assistant registrar, started school in Farmville kindergarten continuing through her sophomore year of college here, at which time she transferred to Hollins College. She returned here to receive her B. S. degree in education. After teaching several years in the elementary school in Winston Salem and High Point, North Carolina, she returned to the College in 1942 to become assistant registrar.

Miss Wall was elected last year to state membership in Delta Kappa Gamma, an organization which represents outstanding leadership in the field of education. She is now serving as advisor to Alpha Sigma Alpha, social sorority, and to the Granddaughters Club.

Monogram Club Issues 21 Bids

Twenty-one invitations to membership were issued by the Monogram Club recently to those students who have shown outstanding interest in Longwood sports.

Among those receiving invitations were Jean Ridenour, Marion Becknor, Shirley Livesey, Bunny Ricks, Margie Hood, Nancy Walkr and Nell Dalton.

Others recognized for their sports activities are Irma Poarch, Eleanor Weddle, Ilene Russell, Edith Kennon, Ann Biddlecomb and Charlotte Williams.

Dot Dunford, Shirley Bloxton, Bobbie Pollard, Isaac Valesquez, Helen Egerton, Peggy Harris, Jessie Curson and Rachel Peters also received Monogram bids.

These girls will be awarded the blue Longwood College insignia. Initiation of new members will be held in the near future, Marion Higgs, president of the club announced.

Biological Seminar Extends Invitations

Ten junior and senior biology majors have been invited to participate in the biological seminar this semester Dr. George W. Jeffers, head of the biology department has announced.

The seminar course is open only to junior and senior biology science majors, subject to the approval of Dr. Jeffers.

Frances Creger, Mary Leigh Meredith, Emma Mae Pittard, June Ritchie, June Raines, and Charlotte Williams are the senior members of the group. Juniors biology or science majors participating in the seminar are Mary Frances Spurlock, Frances Ramsey and Edith Walker.

Miss Vera Baron, biology laboratory instructor, Dr. Robert T. Brumfield, associate professor of biology, and Dr. Jeffers are also members of the seminar group.

Scientific Problems

The biological seminar meets once each week in the library in Stevens Hall. Each member of the group presents, at least once during the semester, a paper on some scientific problem or research of interest to the group. During the 1949-50 session papers were presented on such subjects as glutamic acid and its monosodium salt, the identification of snakes in Virginia, evolution, and antibiotics.

College Choir Appointments Announced by Dr. Molnar Several Vacancies Remain

Sixty Full-Members Twenty Alternates Will Make Up Group

Choir appointments for this year have been announced by Dr. John W. Molnar, director of the Longwood College choir.

Those students who will fill the first soprano section are Nan Bland, Roberta Browning, Donnie Dean, Betty Goodson, Shirley Grogan, Lucy Page Hall, Doris Horne and Nancy Lawrence.

Also filling out the first soprano group are Mildred Lewis, Romine Mahood, Sarah McElroy, Sarah Leatherman, Francis Marker, Elsie Page, Mary Thomas and Dollie Wells. Gloria de Silva, Louise Nelson, and Maria Thrift will be alternates to this group.

Second Sopranos

Appointed to the second soprano section were Joyce Adams, Jane Allen, Andrea Adams, Lena Beavers, Madeline Bigot and Sara Lee Bradshaw.

Others making up this group are Peggy Bryant, Frances Harper, Peggy Dee Hoover, May Henry Sadler, Elizabeth Stone, Martha Tomlinson and Virginia McLean. Barbara Dodd, Joyce Gatling, Anne Jones and Dorothy Stringfield have been appointed alternates for the second sopranos.

Among the choir alto group are Elizabeth Boswell, Nancy Driskell, Mary Mae Gray, Maria Jackson, Joyce Mattox, Virginia McGlothlin and Anne Moody.

Also appointed to this section were Calista Moore, Billie Tomlinson, Eleanor Weddle, Pat Tuggle, Patricia Lee, Charlotte Jones, and Elsie Hawley. Elizabeth McClung, Nell Copley, Jean Partridge, Jolene Sutton and Betty Jane Stoots will be alternates for this group.

Others Appointed

Lauralee Fritts, Katherine Anne Hamlet, Emma Harris, Betty Johnson, Winston Johnson, Margaret Ann Jones, June Lewis and Peggy Manning have been appointed second altos.

Other second altos are Joan Missimer, Kay Gilliam, Charlotte Robertson, Virginia Spenser, Jean Watkins, Virginia Westbrook and Bobbie Pollard. Mary Anne King, Bessie Matthews, and Betty Islin will be alternates for this section.

Chorus Participation

"Candidates who did not make the choir this year are urged to enter the Chorus," Dr. Molnar announced. He added "Next year's choir will be made up with preference going to this year's Chorus members. If a member of this year's Choir is dropped, a chorus member will be chosen to fill that place.

Several vacancies are still open in this year's choir. Students who wish to try out are urged to contact Dr. Molnar.

Moore; one of the Prospectors, Ed Goodwin; and a Press Agent, Bill Pauley.

Mr. Finlayson stated, during the interview, that Mademoiselle Bigot, new French informant of the College, will serve as supervisor of proper pronounciation of French words. Madelene Bigot has seen several plays written by Giraudoux, one of which was "The Madwoman of Chaillot." Madelene is very familiar with the Cafe Terrace of Chez Francis which figures largely in the stage setting; she will aid the club by giving actual drawings of the cafe, french furniture, and other details necessary for a finished production.

Alumnae Council Will Meet Here

50 Local Presidents Invited To Attend

The Alumnae Council will meet here Friday afternoon and Saturday, October 27 and 28. Approximately 50 chapter presidents have been invited to attend as representatives of Longwood alumnae throughout the state. The council is composed of the Alumnae Executive Board, who are officers of the national organization, and a representative of each local chapter.

A tentative program has been planned including an address by President Dabney S. Lancaster concerning "Longwood College, Present and Future." Mrs. Ruth H. Coyner, Alumnae Secretary, will speak to the group on "Chapter Activities."

An informal discussion will also be held during the two-day meeting concerning the "Handbook for Alumnae Chapters" which will be distributed to each delegate.

Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dean of Women, has extended a cordial invitation to the alumnae to visit and bring with them outstanding high school seniors for the week end.

Grading System Undergoes Change

Two new symbols have been added to the Longwood grading system this year. According to Dean Savage, a student who drops a course during the semester will be given a grade of Wp or Wf rather than just marking the course dropped.

A grade of Wp will indicate that a student dropped the course with a passing grade, while Wf will show that the student was failing the course at the time it was dropped.

The administration will keep the standing rule that any course dropped after mid-term estimate grades have been compiled, will automatically be given a grade of F. Any student who has a medical excuse, however, will be allowed to drop a course after the estimates have been turned in to the registrar.

Longwood Library Exhibits Paintings, Other Fine Arts

Other Halls Profit From Museum Loan

The Longwood Library now has on display a loan exhibit from the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts. Included in this loan exhibit are seven pictures which are now hung in various rooms in the College.

The exhibit includes, besides the paintings, a dispiay of fans in the main part of the library. Mother of pearl, black lacquer, hand-painted silk and amberpierce work design fans are among those on display.

Also included in the display are a group of plaster relief medallions, copies of Graeco-Roman seals; 35 original cartoons by Fred O. Seibel; blue ribbon winners from photographic contests; a group of 25 reproductions of drawings by some of the old masters; book plates by Dugald Stewart Walker; and book illustrations.

Portrait of Pocahontas

Among the paintings which are on display in the College is a portrait of Pocahontas by Richard Brooke which is hanging in the Honors' Room. Jeanne Bergsen's "Her Romance" in Junior Parlor, and Van Weeren Griek's "Victory" which is hanging in President Lancaster's reception room.

The two pictures in the Student Lounge are "Haystacks, Monterey" by Harold Holmes Wrenn and "Crossing the Stream" by Watler Clark. "The Idyls of Virginia Mountains" by George H. Ben Johnson and "Rocky Fields" by Elizabeth Nottingham are now hanging in the rotunda.

Pres' Announced For Dormitories

Bobbie Pollard, House Council president, has announced the names of the 27 newly elected hall presidents.

In Ruffner Hall, Julie Dodson, Paula Dovel, Donnie Dean, and Jackie Foreman will serve as hall presidents on second floor. On the third floor Pat Altwegg, Dolly Horne, Mary Denny Wilson and Mason Moore were elected to serve as presidents of the hall.

Martha Wilson will serve as hall president for second floor Post Office and Edith Frame for the third floor. Virginia Berry was elected hall president for Library Hall.

Upperclassmen

Natalie Lancaster will serve as hall president for first floor sophomore annex. Bobby Obenshein for second floor, and Uddie Bishop for third floor.

Barabara Caskey will serve as hall president on third floor of Student Building.

In Cunningham Hall, Ann Lawrence and Audrey Ramsey were elected hall presidents on first floor junior. Bunny Ricks and Ann Mosely will serve as hall presidents for second floor and Jerry Newman and Norma Gladding for third floor.

Elsie Hawley was elected hall president for first floor senior annex, Mary B. Smith for second floor and Virginia Westbrook for third floor.

Alma Bedinger will serve as hall president on first floor senior main, Helen Connelly on second floor and Frances Harper on third floor.

Kennon Appoints 28 Fire Wardens

Class, Hall Positions Filled For Session

Class and hall fire wardens have been appointed for the '50-51 session, according to Edith Kennon, Longwood fire chief.

Emma Mae Pittard has been chosen head fire warden for the senior class, Dolores Hoback for the junior class and Helen Castros for the sophomore class.

Serving as hall wardens for the Senior Main, are Lilly Langford, first floor; Ann Biddlecomb, second floor; and Charlotte Williams, 3d floor. For Senior Annex, Margaret Robertson will be fire warden for first floor; Helen Smith, second floor; and Martha Kitchen, third floor.

In Junior Building, Nancy Park and Ann Rosson will be first floor wardens; May Henry Sadler, second floor warden; and Frances Spurlock and Rachel Peters, third floor.

Natalie Lancaster was appointed warden on first floor sophomore Annex; Bobby Obenchain, second floor; and Ann Crowder, third floor. Dot Boswick and Lucy Page Hall will be on duty in Student Building.

Louise Nelson and Ann Thomas will be wardens on third floor Library Hall; Genevieve Welsh, second floor, Post Office; and Faith Smith, third floor Post Office.

Second floor of the east wing of Ruffner Hall will have Elizabeth Hoskins and Betty Hood as wardens; and third floor east wing are Adrian Jennings and Pat Loving; second floor warden is Phyliss Culpepper.

Newest Additions to Campus Include Instructor in Music

Among the newest additions to the Longwood campus is Mr. Walter J. Kerfoot, instructor of music. Mr. Kerfoot is at present director of the LC Chorus, and is working with the new band and orchestra.

A native of McKeesport, Pennsylvania, he received his B. A. in music at the Cincinnati Conservatory of music where he was a pupil of Dr. John W. Molnar, who is at present head of the Longwood music department.

Mr. Kerfoot's youthful ambitions were constant conflict between ministry and music, with music finally taking the lead. He is doing a little of both at the present time, however, for he is director of Johns Memorial Episcopal Church choir, which combines his music and church ambitions nicely.

During World War II, Mr. Kerfoot served in the U. S. Navy. At the moment, his future plans are somewhat restricted by the draft threat, but he plans to continue teaching for the time being.

In his college days, Mr. Kerfoot was editor of the Conservatory paper "Tout Ensemble". He played with several local Cincinnati dance bands, and also with symphony orchestras. His specialty instrument is the bass fiddle, and that is where he concentrated most of his studies.

Here at LC, our new faculty member has taken over the direction of the Chorus. He has also done radio work over WFLO. According to Mr. Kerfoot, he has two ambitions for LC. He wants to build a good band, and an orchestra. He has said that he expects to have an orchestra on campus before the end of this semester.

In regards to his Chorus work, Mr. Kerfoot stated "the only prerequisitee to be in the chorus is to be interested in music, and to like to sing, and I'd like for al those who fill these qualifications to come out for choral work."

Delta Epsilon members at the installation of the Longwood chapter last spring were also issued invitations to membership. Included in this group are Helen Agnew, Romine Mahood and Edith Duvall.

Membership Requirements

To be eligible for membership in Pi Delta Epsilon, a student must have shown outstanding interest in one or more of the College publications; have served at least one year on the staff of a college publication, including those on other campuses; and hold the position of departmental head or its equivalent. Honorary or faculty membership may be conferred upon individuals whose journalistic work warrants invitation at the discretion of the chapter.

The Longwood chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon was established on this campus last spring replacing the Journalism Club which formerly served to bring the publications together as a unit.

Committee Presents Tentative Honor Code For Men at Longwood

Male Student Body Will Discuss, Vote On Provisions Tues.

A tentative program covering an Honor Code for the men students at Longwood College was drawn up by a special committee including Jack Huegal, president of the Men's Student Government Association, Ned Orange, and Harold Hutter at a meeting Monday night.

The program is being printed below to give the men students an opportunity to become familiar with the plan in order to discuss and vote on it's provisions at the men's student body meeting next Tuesday afternoon at 1 p. m.

Meaning of Men's Honor Code

A high sense of honor, in all his relationships and activities should be one of a person's most cherished possessions. It is the one essential that enables a person to respect himself, and to merit the respect of others. It is the one thing that makes it possible for a group of people to live together with perfect confidence. Such an effective honor system is one of the oldest and highest traditions of Longwood College.

Long experience has proven that the highest degree the college can give is not enscrolled on paper but it written upon the souls of its graduates. It is that life time possession of a high and uncompromising honor that enables its owner to go through life always living up to all responsibility and capable of avoiding living constantly in a state of suspicion of other people. Honor is in a sense negative in that it means there are certain things one will not do but it is also in the far higher sense positive. It requires high living in the noblest sense of that phase.

Honor Assumed

Upon entrance here a student is assumed to be a gentleman of absolute honor until he proves himself otherwise. This means absolute honor in all academic work, financial and property matters.

The Honor Code is notably a high ideal but it is a very real and practical manner of life. In the classroom it means that all tests will be taken strictly on one's own, and that all appearance of seeking or giving aid will be carefully avoided. Furthermore all written work done outside of the classroom such as themes and term papers will be done without any aid save that specified by the instructor. It means that one's word given on any matter can be taken with implicit confidence. Finally the Code requires that any property of another person shall not be taken, injured or disturbed. It does not cover the purely social regulations of the Student Government.

Responsibility Two Fold

The Honor Code requires a student not only to remain honorable in his own conduct but to report all infractions of the honor system he observes. This latter in many respects the most difficult phase of the system. The measure of a student's love of the system and of his colleg's, nevertheless, is the extent to which he is willing to shouider this burden.

When a possible infraction of the honors system is reported to the Student Council a careful AKG Elects Miss Burger Sec.-Treas.

Miss Elizabeth Burger, associate professor of science, was elected executive secretary - treasurer of Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary leadership fraternity, last week end. The elections took place at the annual AKG convention held at the Univeristy of South Carolina, in Columbia, S. C.

Miss Burger has served for several years as the active faculty member of AKG in the capacity of advisor to the local group.

Romine Mahood, president of the Joan Circle; Mary Crowder, Helen Agnew, and Miss Betty Spindler, also an active faculty member, represented the Longwood group at the convention, which also included representatives from Queen's College, Charlotte, N. C.; Columbia College, Columbia, S. C.; and the University of South Carolina.

At this meeting, Miss Betty Spindler relinquished her duties as editor of the Torch Bearer, the Alpha Kappa Gamma semi-annual newspaper.

Library Exhibits Mexican Folk Art

An exhibit featuring a group of lithographs of the ancient Mexican city of Taxco which were built on hills with narrow streets and crowded structures, is on display in the Browsing Room of the College Library. These lithographs were loaned to Longwood by the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts.

The lithographs were done by Roberto Montenegro, a distinguished, contemporary Mexican painter. Montenegro has an important role in the new creative period of Mexican art, his chief interest being in the realm of folk art. Recognizing the creative talent of the untutored Mexican, Montenegro became famous for his association with folk art.

Lithography is the art of producing a picture on a flat, specially prepared stone with some greasy substance and of taking ink impressions from this as in ordinary painting. The technique of lithography was invented around 1795 by Alois Senefelder, a Bavarian. The first American experiments were made in the United States about 1819. The Currier and Ives lithographs were especially popular and lithography became the principal method for illustrations later in the 19th century.

Dr. Moore Revises Hours For Sick Call

Daily sick call hours have been revised according to an announcement by Dr. Ray Moore, College physician.

Sick call, held in the infirmary at which time Dr. Moore will see those students requiring his attention, will now be held each day of the week except Friday, Saturday and Sunday at 4:30 p. m. On Friday and Saturday, Dr. Moore will see students at 12:45 p. m. and on Sunday he may be seen only by appointment.

In case of emergency, a registered nurse is on duty at all times in the infirmary.

Education Board Sets Up Revisions For Certification Of Va. Teachers

Rules Of New Plan To Go Into Effect By Gradual Method

Virginia teacher certification regulations have been revised by the State Board of Education. The revisions will make more specific the requirements for the general education of all teachers.

The new rules are designed to:

1. Require potential teachers to spend more time studying what they plan to teach.

2. Demand more training on the psychology of children and less on teaching methods.

According to the revisions, each teacher will get at least two years of social science, including American history, two years of English, one year of mathematics or natural science and one year of health and physical education.

Effected Gradually

These new rules will be put into effect gradually giving the potential teachers currently in schools and schools themselves, time to adapt course of study to the new regulations, according to Dr. J. L. Blair who figured prominently in compiling the regulations.

A new certificate which is included in the new plan, will go into effect immediately. This certificate, called the graduate professional certificate, will be given to those who have earned a master's or doctor's degree and who have had not less than three years of successful teaching experience.

Other changes include:

1. Establishment of a two-year probationary period before a certificate can be issued to a new teacher for its full period of validity.

2. An increase in the minimum requirements for endorsing the following subjects: art, business education, dramatics, English, foreign languages, health and physical education, industrial arts, library science, music, social studies and speech correction.

3. Abolition of the practice of certificating teachers automatically to teach all subjects in the

520 Enroll In Crusade For Freedom

Signers Donate $70.22 To Fund During Campaign

The names of 520 members of the student body, the faculty, the administration and staff of Longwood College were signed to the Freedom Scroll of the Crusade which was closed at the college last Thursday. Ann Burnette, chairman of the campaign on the campus, also announced that the signers had contributed a total of $70.22 to the Crusade Fund during the campaign.

The Crusade for Freedom was sponsored on the Longwood campus by the women's student government association and was introduced in assembly on October 4 by President Dabney S. Lancaster and Helen Agnew, president of the women's government.

Ann expressed her satisfaction with the response of the Longwood students and personnel and added, "It was wonderful to return Longwood's allotment of 10 scrolls to General Clay with every scroll completed. We had hoped to have one hundred per cent of the student and faculty of Longwood sign the scroll but we are delighted to have come as close to that goal as we did."

The Crusade for Freedom is sponsored by the National Committee for a Free Europe, Inc., of which General Lucius D. Clay as chairman, "The Freedom Bell, a replica of the American Liberty Bell, has been cast and is now on display in American cities and towns. It will be erected in Berlin, Germany, the only stronghold of democracy behind the Iron Curtain.

In the Freedom Shrine, which is to house the Freedom Bell, will also be placed the scrolls bearing the signatures of millions of Americans who participated in and supported the Crusade for Freedom.

"Among these millions who have expressed their belief in man's dignity and right to freedom and their dedication to world peace with freedom will be at least 520 of our Longwood 'ites'," said Ann. "We are proud of that."

Juke Box Dance

The men's Student Government Association will sponsor a juke box dance in the Rec. of Ruffner Hall Saturday night.

Beating Scotch Tops Thrills For Miss Burger on Tour

Longwood Professor Receives Congrats

In 30,000 miles of travel with the U. S. Hockey Touring Team this summer, the greatest thrill for Miss Elizabeth Burger, team captain of Farmville, was the first victory ever scored by the Americans over Scotland, traditionally great in women's field hockey.

Miss Burger, an assistant professor of science at Longwood College, returned to the U. S. in time to receive a commendation from the Alumni Association of William and Mary College, her alma mater, congratulating her "on behalf of the College and Association for the distinction you have brought to yourself and the College through your leadership as captain of the All-American Field Hockey Team.

While on a 6,000 mile tour in South Africa and Rhodesia, the U. S. team played 19 matches winning eight, losing eight and tying three, against the finest women players in the world.

The additional 24,000 miles came with ocean crossings and visits in England, Scotland, Switzerland and France. In Africa, the team visited such places as Victoria Falls, the famed gold mines at Johannesburg, the world's diamond center at Kimberley, Durban, the Miami of South Africa, and Capetown.

The tour concluded with a final exhibition game on October 7 in New Haven, Conn., with the Touring Team meeting United States First and Reserve players who did not attend the International Hockey Conference in South Africa this summer. The score was 5 to 1 in favor of the touring team, extending by one more its enviable record compiled through 30,000 miles of hockey.

Chairman Announces 'Mardi Gras' Theme Of AKG Festivities

Judges Selected For Colonnade Story Contest

3 Faculty Members, 4 Students To Serve

Judges for the short story contest being sponsored by the Colonnade have been selected. Miss Lucille Jennings, Miss Carrie Sutherlin, and Miss Helen Draper will serve as faculty judges in the contest.

Nancy Garbee, short story editor; Maria Jackson, managing editor; Patricia Lee and Lauralee Fritz have been asked to fill the positions of student judges.

Prizes to be awarded for the three best stories are $4.00, $3.00, and $2.00. These stories will appear in consecutive issues of the Colonnade.

According to Nancy, the stories will be judged according to their originality, coherence, and interest value. Students are urged to write and enter their stories as soon as possible.

Nancy also said she would like to remind students that today, October 18, is the last day of the contest. Anyone who has written a story and has failed to enter it may do so after dinner tonight.

Philosophy Prof. To Attend Meet

Dr. John P. Wynne, professor of education and philosophy, will attend the annual convention of the Virginia Philosophical Association to be held at Washington and Lee University tomorrow and Friday.

Dr. Wynne, secretary of the VPA, is well known throughout educational and philosophical circles for his work in educational philosophy.

Teachers of philosophy from most of Virginia's colleges and universities will attend the meeting. The main address will be delivered by Dr. T. V. Smith, Maxwell professor of citizenship and philosophy at Syracuse University. He will discuss "How to Deal with Philosophical Differences."

Technical Talks

Technical talks by prominent Virginia philosophists will also be featured at the meeting. Dr. James W. Miller, of the College of William and Mary, will speak on "Burnet's Theory Concerning the Relationship of Socrates and Plato" and Professor Raymond E. Morgan, of Lynchburg College, will talk on "Problems in Teaching Philosophy to Undergraduates."

Longwood Radio Hour To Star Mlle. Bigot

Mademoiselle Madeleine Bigot, French and Latin instructor from Paris, France, will discuss Paris of yesterday and today on the Longwood hour Thursday at 4:30 p. m. She will include in her discussion, something about the French theatre and art.

On the program with Mademoiselle Bigot will be John Cook, who was in Paris during the war, Maria Jackson, Betty Collier, and Helen Tanner. Delores Hoback, president of Le Cercle Francais, will be student announcer.

Circus Committee Votes Cox Trainer

"We heard them say, Come to the Mardi Gras," will be the most popular tune on campus as students plan to attend the 1950 AKG Circus, the theme of which will be "Mardi Gras," according to Ann Lynch, chairman of the festivities.

Confetti, jesters, pages, and colored streamers will set the stage for the gay festivities to be held October 28. The gala festival theme will be carried out in decorations and in the Circus queen and her court who will represent the Queen of Mardi Gras and her princesses.

Trainer Chosen

Judy Cox was chosen by an Alpha Kappa Gamma special committee to train the "animals" for their stunt in the Circus celebration

As animal trainer, Judy will lead the animals and clowns through the streets of Farmville in the customary parade on the afternoon preceding the main event.

Judy will also "crack the whip" as her animals perform for the throngs of students, faculty, administration, alumnae and visitors on Circus night before the class stunts are presented.

The "animals" will be members of the freshman class appropriately disguised, and the bevy of clowns will be made up of freshmen and upperclassmen who will perform traditional "clownish" tricks for the spectators.

President Announces Hutter New Officer Of Men's Fraternity

Harold Hutter was recently elected sergeant-at-arms by the men's social fraternity, Tau Theta Pi, Ned Orange, president of the group, announced.

He also announced that Shepherd Elmore, vice president of the fraternity would serve as chaplain and rushing-chairman.

Plans were laid at a recent meeting of the fraternity to rush completion of Room 7 in the Post Office building, which is being remodeled for use by the fraternity. Present plans call for completion of the room well in advance of the major social events of the year.

Miss Bodouin Guest Of LC French Circle

Miss Alice Bodouin from Hague, Holland, was the guest of Le Cercle Francais at its regular meeting in the Audio-visual room of the College library last Tuesday.

Miss Bodouin was introduced to the circle as was Mademoiselle Madeline Bigot, new French and Latin instructor of Paris, France. The new members of Le Cercle Francais were also introduced by old members.

Delores Hoback, president of the circle, announced that Celeste Bishop would hold the office of Reporter, filling the vacancy left by Mary Frances Gilmer who has transferred to another college Rebecca Mann was appointed Circus booth chairman for this year.

Following the singing of a popular French song, "La Mer," the meeting was adjourned by the singing of "La Marseillaise."

That Timeless Phrase

Now that Circus is practially upon us, the hockey season has begun in full force, and the color rush isn't far around the corner, that much discussed "Longwood spirit" is going to take an important spot on the campus.

The newest members of our campus society haven't had a really good opportunity as yet to join with the upperclassmen in a demonstration of that enthusiasm. They were on lookers at one phase of it as the "old" girls welcomed them into Longwood life with a warmth and friendliness that is perhaps that very basis of this intangible thing we call spirit. On Rat Day, they showed they definitely had something to offer to it, and in the weeks to come we are looking forward to seeing them join with the upperclassmen in making Longwood truly conscious of what spirit means.

Too often in the past, we've been prone to misinterpret this inimitable phrase to mean noisy midnight get-togethers, sliced bell ropes, careless paint jobs, and just generally a lot of hub-bub. We hope that our most recent newcomers have gotten the idea from the upperclassmen that our "spirit' goes much deeper than that.

The originators of the expression as well as those who first recognized what a powerful influence it was becoming on this campus must have seen something besides noise and juvenile pranks. We think they saw girls going out for Circus practice no matter how tired or busy they were; throngs of enthusiastic specators at the intra-mural and inter-varsity sports events; a sincere and exacting respect for the honor code; and a desire to make Longwood scholastically tops.

But the job is strictly up to each and every one of us now, to see that we carry in all these ideals embodied in those three words — the Longwood spirit.

Looks Do Count

Everyone is talking about how well the dining room looks at 7:15 a. m. We want to add our voices to the cry of satisfaction.

Pin curls, scarfs, pajamas covered with raincoats, are few and far between of late. It looks better, and those students who have turned over a new leaf, so to speak, must admit that its much more comfortable not to have to hold the sleeve of a bulky raincoat when passing a platter.

Too, the dining hall food has improved to such a great extent this year that it would seem impolite not to show our gratitude in some way. What better way could we demonstrate our approval than to come to meals dressed as has been requested time and time again. To those few who just haven't been able to make it yet, try getting up one minute earlier (that doesn't do much damage to a nights' sleep) and see if it doesn't make a big difference.

The food isn't all that has improved; new glasses and additional silver are the first step toward better dining room utensils. New china has been promised in the near future. All this and dinner music (soon, we hope) to make a pleasant eating atmosphere. The students can make it almost perfect by appearing in the correct clothes and by keeping voices at a pitch where no one will be disturbed.

The dining hall is a good place to begin improving our college; there's a chance for every student to show his ability to cooperate. Let's see if we can't do our part.

Longwood Gentlemen

The men's student government has taken another forward step with the formulation of plans for a men's Honor Code. The plans for the Code which are announced on page one of this issue of the Rotunda follow closely the women's code and its regulations.

Longwood has long been proud, and rightly so, of its workable and working honor system. The men's plans will further link them to the College and serve as yet another indicator of their seriousness of intent to make Longwood truly and officially co-educational.

Our World

By BUNNY GIBSON

Even though we know that this is United Nations observance week, few of us pause to think what it really means. To see and understand its significance we have only to review the most recent activities of the UN.

The UN armed forces, under unified command, are now winning the fight in Korea. Some of these forces are already being prepared to shift to other positions if victory is soon established in this hot bed. They could well show up in Indo China, another promising "Korea".

Not only its military strength but also the UN's future capacity as a civil administrator has been furthered in recent days. This has shown up in the seven-member commission to rehabilitate Korea. It is attempting to prove it has supreme authority over international matters involving two nations when the commission limited the victor's control over the defeated. As a mediator for world peace, the UN is considering the long-range effect of action taken today.

The United Nations is as human as any of us. There are two elements in the organization which seemingly cannot work together in harmony on any issue. The western sector is in constant conflict with the Soviet Russian bloc. Known as the eastern sector, this bloc includes the Russian satellites who merely stamp their approval on Moscow-drawn plans and probably would continue to do so even if the plans called for their own annihilation, so much are they under the thumb of the Russian powers.

Russia cast her forty-sixth veto in the Security Council Thursday to block the re-election of Secretary General Trygve Lie. Considering parlimentary procedure and the workings of the UN as we know them, we assume and hope that the general assembly may be able to override the veto.

From an over-all viewpoint it at last seems that the UN may be coming into its own as a peacemaker and keeper. With this statement we hold our breath about the Korean situation and hope that scare tactics may work in Indo China before military strategy is needed.

Stecking My Neck Out

by Joanne Steck

Well, folks, you might be interested to know that this is National Letter Writing week. Maybe I'll get a little fan mail or something. The P.O. box has cob-webs so thick I have to take a pick ax with me to open the door.

This is also National Save a Horse Week—so girls watch out for your fellow-man. One never knows what fate may bring.

One would think this was a division of the Medical College or something to see all these Home Ec. majors running around in those "Nightingale" outfits. But we still love you, everyone. So don't hit me with a cake plate when you read this.

Hosie Cox must be running the bag and baggage concern for the College. She just keeps trunks and suitcases and what have you in her room 'till all hours of the night. Or maybe she has valuable "loo-les" in them. Who knows?

The girls on third floor Annex (Yes, they're back in the news again) have something quite unique. They are clean—even if no one else is. They have to be or they'll get a little red dot on the "Ivory" inspection patrol chart, and a red dot means STOP! You are not clean.

A yellow dot indicates — more care is needed in washing and dressing. An Ivory Bar, however, is the heighth of attainment—the badge of cleanliness. Only those children (We're still speaking of third floor Annex) who are well-washed, neat and tidy deserve the Ivory Bar. It is my desire that the whole school should adopt this program and go ever forward to that glorious goal—an Ivory Bar by every name.

Remember, chilluns, Circus is a-coming and Circus means WORK! So let's all come to practice and make that first prize ours by a wide margin.

That's all for now folks, but don't forget — National Letter Writing Week and National Save a Horse Week should be observed

Student Reviews Ancient Longwood

Close your eyes, everybody, relax and let your imagination run wild for a few minutes. I think you'll find it lots of fun.

Travel way back to 1899 when dear ole Longwood was known as The State Female Normal School of Virginia. The faculty then included the enormous number of 13 people. There's Robert Frazer, president of the College, resembling Colonel Robert E. Lee as far as the beard was concerned. And just imagine all the instructors being women, each with her hair parted in the middle and drawn neatly into a bun on the back of her neck. Can't you just feel the sting of that rule across the back of your hand?

A formidable looking character, if I ever saw one, named Mrs. Portia Morrison, headed the Home Department in 1902. I can see her now, sitting stiff and straight in a not-so-comfortable chair at the desk in the Home Office. She doesn't seem at all the type to listen to our little secrets and share our girlish glee.

That year the annual was named "The Virginian" and was dedicated to Professor J. L. Jarman "as a token of our admiration and esteem." Yep, the annual became the "Virginian." Know why? Simply because it had been formerly known as "Normal Light" and the name probably hit everybody the way it hit me just now. And the pictures! Makes you wonder what our grandchildren and great grandchildren will say about us when they see our pictures in the 1951 "Virginian."

Can you imagine a woman doctor in our College? Me either, but there was one. In 1909, the girls took their aches and pains to Dr. Luson W. Field. Looks like maybe the women were beginning to take things over way back then.

Aren't we lucky to have a big faculty, lots and lots of buildings and a beautiful campus? Specially when you looks at pictures and find that we have evolved from a one building institute with a handful of professors.

The Clash of The Colors

Campus Cogitations

Question: What questions would you like to have in the "Campus Cogitations" column?

Ann Mallory: What will you be doing ten years from now?

Jane Mallory: What was your most interesting experience?

Genevieve Welsh: What's the difference between your week ends here and your week ends at home?

Kitty Hamlet: What is your idea of a perfect day?

Nancy Purdum: What's your idea of a perfect date?

Dot Boswick: What do the new male members of the faculty think of dating students?

Sonia Kile: What do the girls think of the dating rules around the school.

Grace Booker: Which cigarette do you prefer, Doctor?

Mary Frances Joseph: What's your idea of the ideal Longwood girl?

Cleo Holladay: What do you like most about Longwood?

Dot Cassado: What's your pet dislike at L. C.?

Jo Ann Yow: Do you think women should be drafted?

Rachael Peters: What do you do to entertain a date on a week end at Farmville?

Edith Kennon: What can you find to do on a Saturday night?

Clara Cullip: Do you think Rat Day should be abolished?

Donna Staples: Where can I find a date for the Senior Dance?

Betty Johnson: What is the most interesting man you've ever met?

Nellie Hart: What do you do when you don't have enough money to buy a pack of cigarettes?

Betsy Wilson: Will the Seniors be able to graduate in the new auditorium, this June?

Chic Ritchie: Why don't they have a car for the student teachers to ride in to the high school?

Nan Bland: What do you think of the meals in the dining room?

Lillian Shelton: What do you think of the early morning hammering and drilling?

Joyce Richardson: Why do we have Saturday classes?

Jeanne Mercer: What's happened to that Longwood spirit?

Snack Bar Proves Lifesaver For Meal Missing Students

Do you ever wake up in the morning exactly fifteen minutes too late for breakfast in the dining hall and have the prospect of a foodless morning to stare you in the face? If you can just manage to live through the day until ten you will find that that haven of the Longwood student, the Snack Bar, has opened its doors to one and all. And what a lifesaver it can be!

In case you don't know what the Snack Bar is, and surely such odd characters must be few and far between at LC, just ponder on its name for a minute. Think carefully now—got it?—knew you would!—now on with the story.

The Snack Bar has saved many a Longwood student from starvation, that is a known fact. It has probably contributed a little toward that extra avoirdupois which is bitterly blamed on the dining hall. But then a few candy bars, a chocolate milk shake and a couple of cokes couldn't possibly cause one to gain weight—oh no, it must be the bread and potatoes they serve in the dining hall!

But back to the Snack Bar (that's a good idea—meet you there for a coke, okay?). Standard statistics show (no, this is not the sign off so dear to every freshman's heart) that dozens of doughnuts and buns, gallons of coffee, pounds of hamburgers, quarts of potato salad not to mention all the potato chips, candy bars, milk shakes, cokes, fruit juices, sandwiches of many descriptions, and ice cream are consumed in the Snack Bar every day.

It's the perfect place to take a date, provided you are lucky enough to have such, especially if he happens to have the price of a couple cups of coffee and a few tunes on the juke box in his jeans, the price, not the tunes. Your date will probably enjoy it too as, if you sit long enough, practically every member of the student body can be seen there at on time or another. And whose date doesn't like to feast his eyes upon the beauties of Longwood? And speaking of feasting, while he is busy looking over the field maybe you can twist his arm and in a weak moment get him to buy you a whole chocolate nut sundae just for you.

If you ever find it absolutely imperative to get in touch with any one at Longwood but don't know exactly where to find them just go down to the Snack Bar and park yourself. Sooner or later they will show up and you can transact all and any business over a cup of coffee and a cigarette (probably bummed from the girl in the next booth who unwittingly let someone see her buy a pack).

What does it all add up to—why simply this—at Longwood the Snack Bar is the place. Come on down and join us—the eating's fine!

Ants? We've Discovered Students Of Longwood Can't Do Without 'Em

Louise Trinkle

At first I was worried when I found out everyone had 'em. Classes? Well, yes, but what I really had in mind (mine, that is) was ants...red ones at that! Guess it just must be one of those things that goes along with college life. One of the seniors explained it to me yesterday, she said that "when you are a freshman you throw away all the food with ants on it, when you are a sophomore, you go a little further and brush off said attraction before eating, when a junior you simply go ahead and eat, while the battle worn seniors, if lacking any of this red seasoning, seek diligently until they find some and add them to their food."

I guess maybe I'm not quite broken into the act yet 'cause roomie and I spent the entire afternoon trying to figure out how we could preserve the ingredients of our latest box from home. Finally, we ended up suspending the loaf of bread and the half finished bag of cookies from our clothes line (between the slips and socks. Our tin box with the cake in it is floating around in the half filled bath tub, and our cherished bottle of pickles is on the top of a pyramid of tin cans, also in the bath tub.

We don't know how things will turn out but some of the juniors who were over visiting were just a bit dubious about the whole thing. In fact when we asked about some suggestions they weren't too helpful about that either, not in any manner that we can repeat here, anyway.

It's funny though, the things they like, for example the ants went to town devouring our nice brownies but do you think they would go near that box of stale raisins, no!

One of the suitemates got a brilliant idea the other day—wet cotton around the bottom of the box might work fine, maybe she should have tried first with just half our food, anyway the next day she found she had been out smarted once more, the little trouble makers had climbed up on the dresser and dropped into the box one by one and didn't even go near her cotton.

But I guess we'll get used to 'em after so long a time. They're bound to be good for something.

P. S.—Those ants can't tread water but if Mr. Bailey of Barnum and fame, needs any tight rope walkers I have a whole loaf of the peskey things"

MEN'S AA POSTS SUICIDAL HOOP SLATE

The Men's AA has used the moon as the limit this fall in formulating the ventures of the 1950-51 Pioneer basketball squad. Games have been scheduled with the varsities of RPI and the Medical College of Virginia. Both these teams play in the upper college bracket in state collegiate basketball.

Last year the first Pioneer intercollegiate game was with the varsity of RPI and the locals went down to the tune of of 96-27, a total diaster. When they came to Longwood to story was slightly different — RPI had a much tougher time in downing the Pioneermen, however, the end was never in doubt. Most specators and particularly the ones from your own school and town do not demand a professional turnout in talent but they do want to see a good ball game and the best way to assure that is to schedule teams in your own class. But finding enough teams in the Pioneer class is much more difficult than it would seem. There are 25 men here, and there are not many college teams with such little manpower from which to draw. Junior varsities of small colleges would in themselves be favorites in any game scheduled with Longwood.

A Pioneer slate consisting of the Farmville Town Team, Madison, Mary Washington, Lynchburg JV's, Furman Jr. College, VPI Extension of Danville, RPI's JV's, Hampden-Sydney's JV's would be a full slate and one within reason and praoticality. The Pioneers, through greatly improved this year over last, would have no easy time conquering this moderation of last year's 15 game schedule. If it is important to us to play a major team here at Longwood at the present time, one game would be sufficient until there are adequate resources formulated to make such desired ventures practical and within reason.

GENERALS KNOCK CAVALIERS AROUND IN TOBACCO BOWL

The W&L Generals, seeking their first win over Virginia since 1937, almost made their glorious dreams a reality Saturday afternoon in the Tobacco Bowl Festival held annually in Richmond. The final score was 26-21 with the Cavaliers pulling the game out of the fire in the final two minutes on several desperation pass completions.

The generals came roaring back after the Virginia scored the first touckdown of the game and held a comfortable 21-13 lead at the half time. The teams were deadlocked in the third quarter but slowly Virginia pieced together it's smattered offensive giant to bring an exciting victory to the Cavaliers. The Generals made a last minute bid for the game with several desperation passes and finally got the last one in the arms of their end Trammell where he was free as the air and goal to go — but alas. Casey struck out and Trammell dropped the ball and with it went one great ball game.

CHARLIE "CHOO CHOO" JUSTICE SIGNS WITH REDSKINS

After continuous and repeated refusals to join the professional ranks, Charlie Justice, one of the greatest backs in modern collegiate football history, finally gave in and signed with the Washington Redskins a contract for three years for an annual $50,000 in salary. The Redskins of the National Football League have been going all-out in an effort to bring a winning ball club to Washington. Justice should greatly take the load off of the immortal Slinging Sammy Baugh, who has found that he can't do it alone in the professional ranks.

SNAGS . . .

The Emory and Henry Wasps ran into a snag last Saturday in Guilford and lost their first ball game in 15 starts, and Miller, All-State Back, although performing well, failed to score a touchdown for the first time since 1948. The final score, 21-20 Guilford . . . Hampden-Sydney turned in a neat 25-14 win over John's Hopskins . . . Randolph Macon overpowered Catholic University 26-21 . . . Wake Forest turned an intercepted pass into a final winning tally in the last 10 seconds to edge UNC 13-7 . . . VMI lost to the Texas A&M Aggies by a 52-0 score — the Keydets said they were outclassed . . . Richmond lost to West Virginia as expected by a 46-7 score . . . Duke scored in the fourth quarter to take NC State 7-0 . . .

Hockey Season Will Open On Home Field Friday As LC Meets Roanoke

Oct. Deadline Set For First Rounds Of Tennis Meet

October 19 has been set as the deadline for the first rounds in the fall tennis tournament. By nightfall tomorrow the last loser in the first round must have posted on the A.A. bulletin board the results of her match.

The deadline for the second round in the tournament has not yet been announced by Betsy Gravely, tournament manager.

Playing in the first round will be Lou Jamison for Green 'n White against Dolly Vaughan for Red 'n White; Jean Ridenour defending junior colors against Nell Bradshaw for the sophomores.

Color Clash

Betsy Gravely, senior, will meet Marian Beckner, junior; Ilia Desportes, freshman, will play Dot Boswick, sophomore; and Romine Mahood, senior, will play Eleanor Weddle, junior, in the mighty clash of the colors.

Nancy Huff, freshman, has been matched against Sue Webb, sophomore; and Helen Castros, sophomore, against Elsie Wenle, freshman, to finish off the first round of the singles tournament.

The winners in the first round will vie against one another and against Nancye Gillie, senior; Dolores Hoback, junior; Helen Agnew, senior; Louise Minor, freshman; Betty Tyler, sophomore; Frances Marker, freshman; and sophomore Clara Borum to decide the players in the third round of the tournament.

Following the third round the semi-finalists will meet and the finalists for each color will decide that all important factor of the tournament—which color gets the Color Cup points for the fall tennis tournament.

Ridenour, Beckner Appointed Chairmen Of Water Pageant

Jean Ridenour, junior from Richmond, and Marian Beckner, junior from Lynchburg, have been appointed co-chairmen of the annual Christmas water pageant according to an announcement by Nancye Gillie, President of H2O.

The H2O sponsored pageant is held annually each year preceding the Christmas holidays. Members of the H2O Club and of the swimming classes will take the main parts in the water ballet.

The water fete last year took as its theme "Christmas Island" and included the personal appearance of the good-natured spirit of Christmas Santa Claus, as well as many aquatic ballet numbers.

Kennon Announces Tentative Starters

Longwood's varsity hockey team will meet Roanoke College on the home field this Friday in the opening game of the LC season.

The following girls have been listed as probable starters by Edith Kennon, varsity hockey manager, and Miss O. T. Iler, coach: Marian Beckner, Ann Biddlecomb, Clara Borum and Nell Bradshaw, Helen Castros, Ann Crowder, Nell Dalton and Ilia Desportes have been tentatively scheduled for the original line-up.

Edith Kennon, Nancye Gillie, Anne Lynch, Maxine Patterson, Rachel Peters, Audrey Ramsey, Jean Ridenour, Louise Trinkle, Betty Tyler, and Sue Webb are also among the group from which the starting line-up will be taken.

The game is scheduled for 3 p. m. Student admission is free and non-participants are urged to attend the event.

Sportin' Around

by Lou Jamison

Everyone should be interested in hockey this week. Our first big game of the season will take place this Friday. You won't have to travel anywhere to see this one either, because it's going to be no other place than our own Longwood athletic field. At 3:30 p. m. the Longwood varsity will meet Roanoke College. I'm betting my money on Longwood after watching them play during practices. What about you?

The tennis tournament is here at last. The first round of the fall singles will be played off by October 19. Trying to predict the outcome of this years tournament is exceedingly diifficult and next to impossible. Last year Clem Allen ran away with the championship for the Red and Whites. This year with Clem gone the tables may be turned. Clara Borum and Nancy Gillie are heavy favorites along with Helen Agnew and our new freshman star. Why bother guessing though all we have to do is wait and see.

The H2O Club has begun planning that famous Longwood water pageant which is presented every year. This year's pageant should really be something worth seeing. The co-chairmen in charge of the pageant are Marion Beckner and Jean Ridenour, both of whom have had experience working with water ballet before. It should really prove to be terrific this year, so keep your eye out for the date of the presentation. Above all else, don't miss this one.

Twenty-two upperclassmen received bids to the eight sororities on campus, according to Sue Brewbicker, president of the Pan-Hellenic Council.

Eddie Ann Abbitt of Madison Heights and Jo Ann Yow of West Point accepted bids to Alpha Sigma Alpha. Helen Edith Castros, Roanoke; Marjorie Hall, Richmond; Katherine Hamlet, South Hill; and Frances Thomas, Roanoke, accepted bids to Alpha Sigma Tau.

Those accepting bids from Delta Sigma Epsilon were Paige Bunn, Newsoms; Joyce Gatling, Suffolk; and Audra Hawkins, Farmville. Kappa Delta bid Barbara Ann Caskey, Richmond, and Mary Rebecca Mann, Cypress Chapel.

Betty Abbitt, Madison Heights; Billie Dunlap, Portsmouth; Marian Higgs, Toano; Carolyn Lusk, Galax; Anne Carter Moseley, Roanoke; and Joan M. Pritchett, Bluefield, W. Va. accepted bids to Pi Kappa Sigma.

Margaret Taylor, of Suffolk, accepted a bid to Sigma Sigma Sigma. Theta Sigma Upsilon issued bids to Christine Davis, Branchville, and Frances M. Harper, Dry Fork. Accepting Zeta Tau Alpha were Jean Jinnett, Richmond, and Janice Pinkard, Roanoke.

Chairman Announces Annual Pan-Hel Tea To Be Held October 24

The annual Pan-Hellenic tea will be held in the lounge of Student building from 5 to 6 p. m. October 24, according to a recent anouncement made by Pat Tuggle, chairman of the tea.

Jill Pifer heads the refreshment committee, while Shirley Livesay is in charge of decorations. Entertainment during the tea will be provided by Billie Dunlap, Anne Burnett, Charlotte K. Jones, and Sarah McElroy.

The scholarship plague, given annually to the sorority which has earned the highest scholarship rating for the previous year, will be presented at the tea.

Advisors to the groups, sorority members and newly bid girls are invited to attend the tea.

Campus Committee Purchases New Flag

A new American flag to be flown over the main entrance to Ruffner Hall has been purchased by the Campus Committeee in cooperation with Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dean of Women.

The five by eight foot bunting flag was purchased through the discretionary fund.

It was found necessary to remove the old flag during the summer and since that time no flag has flown from the rotunda.

National Officer Makes Annual Call

Mrs. Helen B. Terrill, second vice-president of Pi Kappa Sigma social sorority, is visiting the local chapter this week during the national annual inspection period.

While studying at Lock Haven in Pennsylvania, Mrs. Terrill was president of the local chapter of her sorority there. Last year, she served as chairman of the National Convention of Pi Kappa Sigma at Grand Canyon. Mrs. Terrill has also studied at the University of Pennsylvania.

During her visit here, Mrs. Terrill will meet with the group to discuss future plans as well as to have a careful inspection of their present activities and procedures.

Teaching Profession Is Favored By 1950 Longwood Graduates

Of the 148 students graduated by Longwood in June, 102 are now teaching, according to an announcement made this week by Mrs. Mary W. Watkins, Director of Placement. Of the 46 not teaching, 20 are married, 13 are employed in other type of positions, seven are engaged in graduate study, and no information is available on the status of six.

During the 1949-50 session, the Placement Bureau received notices of 295 teaching agencies. The largest number of these was for elementary teachers, totaling 156. The second largest demand was for 25 teachers in home economis. Ranking third in the list was business education with 22 vacancies reported. Fields in which five or more vacancies were reported were: mathematics, 14; science (usually a combination of general science and biology), 11; history and social studies, eight; English, seven; physical education, seven; art, six, and English and history combination, six.

Twenty-six superintendents of schools visited the college to interview prospective teachers. Out of state calls for teachers were received from Hawaii, Maryland, Missouri, New York, North Carolina, Tennessee, and points overseas.

Fifteen vacancies in positions other than teaching were reported. These were in the fields of radio, stepography, home economics, chemistry and mathematics.

New Faculty Members Are Honored By Tea

New members of the faculty and administration were honored at an informal tea today held by the Home Economics Club.

Honor Code

and secret trial is conducted. The accused will be given every opportunity of proving his innocence. If the verdict is innocent, the minutes of the trial will be destroyed, but if the verdict is guilty the decision will be announced to the student body.

Rules Governing Enforcement

I. Organization of the Council: The Honor Council shall consist of the officers of the Student Government Association, namely, the president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer. Also on the Honor Council will be the chairmen of the permanent committees. The secretary shall keep minutes of the proceedings in a minute book, which shall be filed for safe-keeping.

2. Any persons having knowledge of, or who is a witness to, an overt act believed to be in violation of the Honor Code shall report the same personally along with a list of any witnesses to the act to a member of the Honor Council or to the Dean of Men within a period of twenty-four hours, excluding Sundays. The Council member or the Dean of Men shall in turn present the charges with the list of witnesses to the Chairman of the Honor Council. All persons receiving notification to attend a trial shall be bound not to reveal the details of the alleged violation of the Honor Code before the trial.

All sessions of the Honor Council shall be closed to all except those immediately concerned in the case, except that by the expressed wish of the accused the trial shall be open. In case of a closed hearing, all persons present at the trial shall be bound to disclose no more than the Council does in its official report on the case. The deliberations of the Council shall take place in private and remain secret. All voting shall be done by secret ballot.

In cases in which the accused is adjudged not guilty, the minutes of the proceedings shall be burned immediately. In cases of guilt, the minutes shall be permanently filed in the closed records of the Honor Council. The accused shall be adjudged guilty if there is no more than one dissenting vote among the members of the Council sitting in the case.

The decision of the Council on all cases shall be posted, but the name of the accused shall not be made public.

All decisions of the Council shall be approved by the President of the College before becoming effective.

Pledged Work

Each student will sign such work as requires it with the following pledge:

"On my honor as a gentleman, I have neither given nor received aid."

Requires Pledge

1. No test, examination, term paper, theme, or parallel reading report will be accepted which does not have the customary pledge written out in full and signed.

2. The placing of the pledge on a test or examination paper means that the student has used no books, notes, or other aids except by explicit permission of the instructor.

A. When a book is used by permission of the instructor, it must be free from annotations in that part of the book used.

B. When an oral test is given, no books or notes are to be used except by explicit permission of the instructor.

3. The placing of the pledge on a term paper or theme means that the work is the student's own and contains no plagarism—that is, theft from another writer. There are two kinds of plagarisms: copying the ideas or fact belonging to another; and copying his words.

A. To avoid the first kind, it is necessary whenever the student consults any reference work or other source, hat he give in the body of his paper or in a footnote the name of the reference work or author.

B. To avoid the second, it is necessary, whenever the student uses the words of another that he enclose them in quotation marks and give in his paper or in a footnote the name of the author.

C. Plagarism is not avoided by using the words of another with a few alterations.

In general, it is not undesirable for students to cooperate or to help one another in preparation for their themes. It must be clearly understood, however, that the actual papers must be written without aid.

4. The placing of the pledge on a parallel reading test or report means that the student has actually read the book or the number of pages claimed.

To Sign Pledge

The following pledge to uphold the Honor Code will be signed by those students who wish to do so.

"I ..... having a clear understanding of the basis and spirit of the Honor Code created and accepted by the Men's Student Body of Longwood College, Farmville, Virginia pledge myself to govern my college life according to its standards and to accept my responsibility for helping others to do so, and with sensitive regard for my college to live by the Honor Code at all times and to see that others do likewise."

Trout Wins First Place In Short Story Contest Held By Colonnade

Garbee Announces Holladay, Brickman As Other Winners

Nancy Garbee, short story editor of the Colonnade, announced today that Lester Trout won first prize in the short story contest with his entry One Way Home. Second and third prizes were won by Cleo Holladay and Sally Brickman respectively.

Lester, a freshman from Cumberland, attended Farmville High School until he went into the Navy to serve for five years. He then attended and graduated from Belfry High School in Kentucky. During his high school years, Lester served as president of the Student Council and Photography Club. At Longwood he is taking pre-medical course.

According to Lester, composing poetry as a hobby is the only experience in writing he has had. His story, One Way Home, is an account of the experiences and thoughts of a man who is seeing and feeling the ravages of war. It tells of death and what it means to a man fighting for his country.

Holladay Wins Second

Second prize was won by Cleo Holladay for her story The Persecuted, which relates the struggle of a man's mind against the unkindness of society. The reader is lead through the very agony of being alive in a world where a man feels he doesn't have anything or anyone on his side.

Cleo, also a freshman, graduated from Suffolk High School where she served as literary editor for the "Peanut." She did creative writing during her high school years, one of her compositions receiving distinguished rating in a district contest. Cleo was an active member of her high school dramatic club, and is now playing the title role in the dramatic club presentation, "The Madwoman of Chaillot."

Brickman Third

Sally Brickman, junior from Roanoke, was awarded third prize for The Friends, the story of a girl whose whole life is dominated by her father. All potential friends of this girl were driven away by her ruling parent. Lack of friends and social life had kept her from developing a pleas-

Men's Government Chooses Hutter As Vice-President

Council Presents Honor Code Plans

Harold Hutter, a Longwood College junior, was elected vice-president of the Men's Student Government yesterday in a student government meeting in the browsing room of the library. Hutter was elected from among five men who had been nominated at a previous meeting.

Harold was graduated from Brookville High School, Brookville, where he served all four years as a member of the Student Government and of the annual staff, and in his senior year as president of the Student Government and editor of the annual. He was also an active member of many of the school's other extra-cirricular activities. He took part in track, basketball, dramatics, and debating. At present, he is a resident student at Longwood College majoring in mathematics. He hopes to teach if he is not drafted into the armed forces.

Government Plans Sock-Hop For Nov.

Tentative plans are underway to hold a "sock-hop" sponsored by the Student Government Association on November 11 in the main recreation hall.

According to the theme now being considered, guests will deposit their foot wear at the door and sock clad "trip the light fantastic" to the background music of the juke box.

An intermission entertainment will include several musical selections and expositions of Longwood talent.

Refreshments will be sold throughout the dance and at intermission.

Smith Releases Ticket Price For 'Madwoman of Chaillot'

Mary B Smith, president of the Dramatic Club, has announced that tickets for "The Madwoman of Chaillot," to be presented November 16, 17, 18 will be on sale in the near future.

Tickets for the first five rows in the small auditorium will be sold at the price of $1.00, and for the last row at .45. All other seats will be priced at .60.

The play is being directed by Mr. Alec Finlayson (accent on the first syllable, by request of Mr. Finlayson), who began his acting career as a member of the Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs in 1940, when he played Joe Cruickshanks in Little Minister. Miss Leola Wheeler directed the play, and Mr. Finlayson feels that her polished productions were a shining example.

In 1942 when he attended the University of Richmond, Mr. Finlayson played in You Can't Take It With You, Cat and Canary, Our Town, and in U. S. Army. Following this, he was in England for eleven months, where he played the trombone in the army band. He also played the piano in British and American army dance bands.

After the war, Mr. Finlayson attended the University of Delaware, where he again took part in dramatics. This time he played the Poet in Cradle Song, and the title role in Physician in Spite of Himself. At Columbia University Mr. Finlayson portrayed Segliato in Barber of Seville, Dr. Syringe in Imaginary Invalid, and Asa in Little Hell.

Mr. Finlayson played twelve weeks stock at Ridgewood, New Jersey, acting, singing, and doing scenery work after doing the part of Van Brent in Janie at Chapel-Theater.

A jack of all trades, the Dramatic Club advisor did most every job imaginable when he was with the company of Secret Garden. Mr. Finlayson was the company manager, played the part of Ben, drove the truck (sometimes 200 miles between shows), made arrangements, hotel reservations, met sponsors, and called rehearsals.

Later he went to Nantucket Island, Massachussetts, where he played twelve week's stock at the Straight Wharf Theater. During this time, Mr. Finlayson played the piano in Streets of New York, acted Byron in O Smothering Sea, Starbuck in Moby Dick, and old actor in Sconset Heyday.

In 1948, Mr. Finlayson toured with the "Blue" company of the Barter Theater in the production of Arms and The Man. The tour, which was intended to cover all 48 states, was called

Dr. Wynne Elected President of VPA

Dr. John P. Wynne, professor of education and philosophy, was elected president of the Virginia Philosophical Association at the annual convention held at Washington and Lee University last week.

Dr. Edward A. Myers of Washington and Lee was elected vice-president and Dr. McDonald of William and Mary Extension in Norfolk was elected secretary.

Dr. Wynne was the retiring secretary of the V. P. A. and succeeds Mr. D. Morris Allan of Hampden-Sydney as president. Dr. Wynne is the author of several books on educational philosophy among which is Philosophies of Education which is now in use at Longwood and a number of other teacher's colleges.

Teachers of philosophy from most of Virginia's coleges and universities were in attendance at the meeting last Thursday and Friday. The main address "How to Deal with Philosophical Differences" was delivered by Dr. T. V. Smith, Maxwell professor of citizenship and philosophy at Syracuse University.

Alumnae Association Publishes Handbook

An Alumnae Handbook has recently been published by the Longwood College Alumnae Association, according to Mrs. Ruth H. Coyner, executive secretary of the association.

The handbook has been compiled to give practical assistance and suggestions to the chapter officers for the conduct of chapter affairs. It includes organization suggestions for old and new chapters, membership requirements, officer and committee regulations and financial suggestions. The booklet also contains information regarding the local chapter's responsibility to the national Council and a calendar of the year's activities.

Mrs. Coyner will speak to the Council which meets at Longwood this week end concerning the handbook, and also about the association's constitution which is to be adapted soon.

Clowns, Animals Floats To Parade Through Farmville

Confetti will fly in the Longwood College Gym this Saturday night as Alpha Kappa Gamma raises the curtain on the annual Circus festivities. The theme of the gala event, which will begin at 8 p. m., will be "Mardi Gras," and will be carried out in the decorations and will be enacted by the queen and her court whose identities will be revealed that night.

The arrival of circus will be heralded by a parade through the streets of Farmville Saturday afternoon at 3:30 p. m. Leading the line behind the escort of state police will be freshmen carrying the circus banner, followed by a bevy of clowns and animals. Mounted marshals, class floats and the official "green 'n white" and "red 'n white" color cars will also be included in the parade.

The parade will form in back of the College dining hall at 2:45 p. m., and at starting time it will proceed down Pine street by the library. From there it will move through High, Randolph, Third and Main streets, and then back up the High street hill to the College rotunda.

Tickets on Sale

Tickets to the circus performances were put on sale at the beginning of this week to participants in the event. They will be offered to the general public during the week. Admission for students and visitors alike is 25c.

Ann Burnett and Romine Mahood, ticket and publicity chairmen of the circus, announced that since there are only a limited number of tickets available, students should purchase tickets

20 Upperclassmen Bid To Membership In Kappa Delta Pi

Twenty upperclassmen were issued invitations to membership by Kappa Delta Pi, national honor society in education, last Monday night.

Those receiving bids were Georgia Bailey, Flora Ballowe, Mildred Blessing, Betty Scott Borkey, Harriet Butterworth, Laura Lee Fritts, and Nancy Garbee.

Bonnie Gerells, Norma Gladding, Sarah Graham, Betty Lou Harman, Peggy Harris, Jack Heugel, Maria Jackson, Katherine McCready, James "Ned" Orange, and Mary Jo Smith also received invitations to membership.

Concluding the list of invitees are Mary Frances Spurlock, Mary Patricia Tuggle and Martha Alice Wilson.

Kappa Delta Pi recognizes students who have attained high accademic achievements and have shown an outstanding interest in the field of education. It encourages the maintenance of higher professional and scholastic standards.

Only those students of full junior standing whose grades are within the upper quartile are eligible for membership.

Home Ec. Dept. Head Invited By President To Wash. Conference

Miss Fern Staggs, head of the Longwood home economics department, has been invited by President Harry S. Truman to participate in the mid-Century conference on children and youth.

The conference will be held in Washington, D. C., from December 3 through December 7. Attendance at the conference is limited to those receiving invitations from the White House.

132 Frosh Sign For Y' Committees

One hundred and thirty two freshmen have recently signed up to serve on the committees of the Longwood YWCA according to an announcement by Bobbie Obenshain, chairman of the membership committee.

Twenty-three freshmen will serve on the Prayers committees which is under the direction of Lucy Page Hall. Serving with Virginia McLean on the Church Cooperative committee will be 13 freshmen.

Nell Dalton, chairman of the Sing committee, has announced the addition of 14 freshmen to that committee and three freshmen have signed up to serve on the Library committee with Mary Helen Cook.

Twenty-two freshmen will serve on the membership committee with Bobbie. Three members of Longwood's newest class will serve on the Music committee under the direction of Barbara Dodd.

Eloise Hodges, chairman of the Public Affairs committee of the Y, will have four freshmen serving on her committee and 29 freshmen will serve with Jane Seward on the Social committee.

Twelve freshmen will serve on the Publicity committee with Roberta Browning and nine on the Service committee under Patty Walker.

Bobbie added that the freshman additions to the YWCA committees bring the total number of students serving on the committees to 255.

Greetings to Longwood Birds Received From Founder of National Bird Society

Greetings herein reproduced have been received from the ex-president of the Alpha Chapter of "The Society for the Progression of the Brotherhood of Birds." According to Carol Bird Stoops, aforementioned big wheel, October 27-29 has been designated as "On the Wing" week end.

Sara Bird Creger, present president of the Alpha Chapter of the Society, Mary Helen Bird Cook, present vice president, and Patsy Bird Kimbrough, ex-vice president, join Carol Bird in extending a big birdie hello and welcome to all faculty, alumnae, and undergraduate members of the Alpha Chapter.

Traditionally Circus week end is the time for the southern, northern, eastern, and western flight of the birds and all routes lead to Farmville. Those fledglings most recently ousted from the nest are expected to return to the scene of their old triumphs, disappointments, passes, and failures in droves during "On the Wing" week end.

Communiques from far and wide have loudly announced to all concerned or unconcerned that the bluebird of The Society for the Progression of the Brotherhood of Birds will be flying high and wide this week end. The number of alumnae Birds to be hunting for their nests has yet to be estimated. If all sources of information can be considered reliable, the bird-call will be the rule of the day and the local aviary will be far from deserted.

The call "Here Bird" down any hall during the sacred week end should produce results both astounding, and, to the uninitiated, confusing. Local members may be heard practicing so as to be call-perfect when the big week end arrives and a songful three days may be predicted.

President Sara Bird has issued a proclamation asking all fellow birds to polish up their feathers and calls and be on hand to welcome the returnees back to the

Here Bird

A big birdie hello and welcome to all faculty, alumnae, and undergraduate members of the Alpha Chapter of "The Society for the Progression of the Brotherhood of Birds."

October 27-29, 1950, has been designated as "On the Wing" week end. Let's all help to make it a big success.

Carol Bird Stoops, Patsy Bird Kimbrough, Sara Bird Creger, and Mary Helen Bird Cook.

Bored? Must You Show It?

"You're a big girl now," at least a college student is supposed to be. Do we act it? Up to now, everyone, even the College officials, has had to say yes. The students of Longwood have upheld the school in every way, including conduct.

But only up to now. Last Thursday's assembly program was not a success, and it must be admitted that the speaker was not responsible. Longwood students simply forgot themselves for an hour, and important hour really, for it is only once a week that the men and women of the College are required to attend much needed cultural programs.

Whispering, laughing, knitting, reading, and sleeping could be witnessed from the speakers stand. Students were apparently bored to tears. Boredom is not a disgrace, but demonstrations of it are. It can and should be hidden, if not from a trained politeness then from a sense of respect due the speaker and the College.

Few students in this College would laugh in the face of a visitor in their home, nor would they intentionally act as though they were completely uninterested in what that guest had to say. Yet Longwood is our home for nine months of the year, and last week's speaker was the guest of the College as will be every other speaker on the assembly programs. Shouldn't the principle be the same? Isn't it important that Longwood be a college whose student body is recognized for its courtesy as well as spirit, scholarship, and other important qualities? We think so.

Tomorrow is assembly day, and every student will have the chance to show that he does know how to act at such a time. Let's have one hundred precent cooperation.

Your Guests and Mine

Two members of the senior class of the high school nearest here have been invited to Longwood this week end by each member of the Alumnae Association Council. The council members and their guests will begin arriving at the College on Friday and for most of the week end the members of the council will be tied up with committee meetings, general sessions, etc. It is up to every undergraduate member of the College to feel that he or she is a personal host or hostess to the other guests of the College, the high school students.

These high school students have been frankly invited to give Longwood the "once over". It is up to the students of Longwood to make sure that the impressions these girls take back to their high schools are good ones. They will want to see the College campus and understand a little of life at Longwood. Some will be most interested in the science laboratories, some in the art facilities; some will want to see the home economics department, some the physical education. Life in the dormitories, the social life of a Longwood student, the extra-curricular activities, almost every phase of life at Longwood will be of interest to these students. Show them around; they will want to see Longwood in all its phases.

Take time out this week end to give these high school seniors a big friendly "hello" and see what you can do to make their stay here more enjoyable — it is up to you; they are your guests for the week end.

Don't Be Too Eager

In a recent complication of campus statistics 43 organizations were counted on the Longwood campus. Its no wonder students complain bitterly that they have little or no time for sleep, study, or honest-to-goodness thinking.

The Student Standards Committee drew up a new set of regulations last spring in an effort to alleviate this situation, but the problem is still pertinent.

According to the new regulations, a student may belong to only eight organization during a school session. These eight do not include membership in the Athletic Association, Y. W. C. A., Student Government Association, class and the required academic groups such as the French Circle and the Spanish Club. Its easy to see the wide scope this leaves. Any Longwood student can readily assure you that it would be physically impossible to take active participation in this many groups, or even half of that number.

Too often, the result is "dead wood" in an organization. Students who are so active in other phases of extra-curricular life do not have time to make their membership in certain organizations really active and worth while. In other cases, a student may get so wrapped up in carrying out her numerous organizational duties that classes and study become secondary. Either situation is not good. And too, there is always the student who attempts to make a success of both and finds himself run down both mentally and physically.

Unless rigid restriction pertaining to organizational membership are introduced, a situation equally undesirable, the student will have to take the solution of this problem into his own hands. He must learn to say no, and plan his extra-curricula schedule with an eye toward study hours and playtime.

As Time Changes

By BUNNY GIBSON

One can almost see a smile on the immobile face of General Douglas MacArthur as once more he gathers together the threads of victory. His battle has been and is to bring freedom to oppressed people. One wonders how completely the battle is won by military victory. A people who showed no respect for decency in war surely have to learn to respect individual rights in peacetime. The challenge is, fortunately, being squarely faced by the UN.

In our own country, news of the international crisis predominates. But there is one thing Stalin and his potato bugs couldn't wipe out—our inevitable elections and politics. The nation is watching with wary eye those seven seats the Republicans need to gain control of the Senate. The Democrats are in there pitching, however; even Taft's changes are debatable.

Sensational rumors are audible. One shock (if you are a Republican) was created by the now famous Hanley letter. Who knows—this might split New York wide open—look now—here comes a Roosevelt!

This isn't 1952 but everyone is trying to find a president for that eventful year. Harry S. hasn't refused. General Ike, a big favorite, is tactfully biding his time before making a commitment. Things have only begun to happen but by watching the speculation one gets an insight to that exciting game of politics—about the same sensation you get watching a merry-go-round.

Stecking My Neck Out

by Joanne Steck

Well. I'm glad to see that some people who evidently have some principles about them observed National Letter Writing Week and also National Save a Horse Week. Below you may read one of my most recent fan letters from one of my most prominent fans. In fact below you will find printed, in its entirety, my fan mail to date.

October 20, 1950
Miss Joanne Steck, Editor
"Stecking My Neck Out"
Longwood College
Farmville, Virginia
Dear Miss Steck,

I am writing this letter during National Letter Writing Week and National Save a Horse Week to let you know that I have saved a horse. Your friend and mine, smiling Mary Margaret Truman of Independence, Missouri, and Washington, D. C., was a house guest of mine during the first few days of this memorable week.

One morning (Wednesday, to be exact), at 5:45 a. m., we were out on a Bird Walk. We were so excited for we thought that we had caught sight of the "Nasal Bobolink" but to our dismay it turned out to be a "Yellow-bellied Sapsucker" (No. 93 in the catalogue put out by Joseph H. Dodson, Nankaker, Illinois). To get on with my story, we, in chasing this bird and calling it with all our might, ended up in a strange place. When I say strange, I mean ever strange. It was a combination of Mr. Graham's backyard, the elevator in Senior Building, the pocket of Miss Bugg's smock, and the back booth of the College Shoppe. This was indeed an unusual area.

Well, Mary Margaret noticed some people shouting and crowding around something in the street and called my attention to the disturbance. We dashed madly over to see what could be causing all this trouble and were we ever surprised to find S. T. C. (Stanley The Colt) racked back in the road. That foolish horse had been a friend of ours for neigh on to 10 years. He used to be with the Truman family until they gave him to some Birdland Avenue folks.

Well, we recognized poor old S. T. C. and the two of us picked him up and took him home where his keeper gave him some "Birdecol" and soon he was fine. This is the true story of how Mary Margaret and I saved a horse this very week.

I just received a night letter from M. M. and she is going to your annual AKG Circus.

Orchids to you for your great efforts in the field of journalism and may your P. O. box always be overflowing.

Respectfully yours,
(Miss) Carol Bird Stoops
Ex-Pres. Alpha Chapter
Soc. for the Progresion of
The Brotherhod of Birds

And there you have it—my fan mail (to be uttered in hallowed tones). I would like to add to the above that I have received word from a most reliable source that Mary Margaret is joining Catch a Bird Kimbrough and the ex-president of the Bird Club and will be flying low over Farmville come Saturday and Circus-day.

Point of View

A Long Island potato married an Idaho potato, and eventually they had a little sweet potato. The little one flourished and in time announced to her parents that she wanted to marry Lowell Thomas. "But you can't marry Lowell Thomas," declared her parents. "He's just a commentator."

Campus Cogitations

Question: What is the difference between your week-ends at home and your week-ends at Longwood?

Bonnie Gerrells: Fun!

Flora Ballowe: That would be telling.

Liz Browning: A question like that doesn't need answering.

Ginny Mentz: You mean there's a comparison?

Doris Underwood: Food.

Phyllis Culpepper: Wilson Barnes, that's my difference.

Mary Anne King: Not having to sign out for a date.

Fifi Carter: Sleeping late and driving the family car.

Frances Evans: Hampden-Sydney isn't as close to my home as it is here.

Betty Hancock: There aren't as many rules at home.

Bobbie Obenshain: I can't sleep at home because I don't have Steck raising cain upstairs.

Nan Bland: It depends on whether he's here or there.

Joyce Richardson: I don't have Katherine Anderson at home.

Andy Adams: The week ends at home are more exciting (I live in Charlottesville.)

Lucy Jane Perkinson: There's no place like home.

Shirley Atkinson: There couldn't be a difference.

Sally Smith: I don't have any week ends at home, but I can dream can't I?

Joyce Hamlet: At home I can sleep.

Charlotte Williams: Good food and no rules at home, but it's always good to get back.

Lou Jamison: The ones at College are boring, and the ones at home are fun.

Ann Crowder: Don't get homesick at home.

Mary Jo Smith: Depends on who's here to see you.

Helen Castros: There ain't no difference now. Everybody in Roanoke has joined the Marines.

Jean Kreinbaum: Do you really expect me to answer that?

Marian Beckner: That's a dumb question!

Jean Ridenour: None whatsoever (ha ha).

Jane Lively: I don't know, I've never spent a week end here.

'50 Circus Practices Bring Odd Condition to LC Halls

Peace reigns in the Longwood dormitories these days. At 10:15 the halls are as quiet as the home department would like them to be at 8:15. The reason? Well, chile, didn't you hear that gal screaming "Circus practice" down the halls on the stroke of 10?

But let's take a peek down in the Rec. Things aren't quite so peaceful down there. As we hit the bottom of the stairs we're greeted with a shout of despair, "It's time for the trio, what happened to the trio, WHERE'S THAT &%.$-- TRIO!" Trying to be helpful, we start searching under the tables and behind the juke box only to learn that the errant ones have been dragged from a far corner where they've been trying out a three-way shag.

Convinced that now all is well, we pull up a chair and settle ourselves to watch the procedure only to fall flat on our faces as a voice screams in our ear, "Don't sit in that chair! Don't you know that's Scene II?" Completely chagrined, we reluctantly return the coveted chair and prepare to retire to the sidelines, but luck is not with us.

Before we can reach a nice quiet corner, we've found ourselves in the middle of the floor and the stunt director keeps pointing to us with a cry "Sing! You've forgotten your cue! You haven't memorized your lines! SING!" After lengthy explanations, we convince this skeptical personage that we couldn't sing if Circus depended on it, we never had a cue and we're just innocent bystanders. With a scorning expletive she sends us sneaking off to the sidelines. Fervently we try to quiet our knocking knees for fear we'll be attacked again, until suddenly we realize that 'twerent our knees at all but the tap routine practicing their next number to the tune of the "hammer staccatto."

Our eager eyes light happily on the busy little workers hammering and sawing in one corner. At last we can offer some little suggestion, some worthy phrase of wisdom. But unfortunately, we didn't say "Oh, that looks swell," or "You're really coming along there," instead we opened our mouths, stuck both feet in and said "What is it?" With a howl of pain a distracted carpenter mistook her finger for a nail, recognized us as spys and escorted us bodily into the night.

Well, one thing we're sure of, they won't even have a stunt to present. How could they make anything presentable out of that hub-bub. But wait a minute. Isn't that what we said last year? and the year before? It didn't take us a second to remember how the audience cheered the four sparkling performances presented last year and previous years. Reassured, we smiled knowingly, admitted casually that we could see a really great stunt beneath the exterior confusion and dragged our broken bodies and bruised pride home.

Longwood Students Trudge Through Rain and Sludge

How rainy can it get! Just trek on down Longwood way and see. Once again the monsoon season has descended on our fair campus —it does almost every week, gets boring as the dickens.

The juniors and seniors in Cunningham valiantly don their rain garb and strike out for Ruffner or Stevens, or Student, or maybe even the Library although such pleasures as parallel reading are usually foregone during the rainy season. If there were enough rowboats to go around they would doubtlessly make better time—might even get to class on time for a change.

The frosh and sophs consider themselves lucky to live right in the midst of things—at least they don't halfway drown three times a day trying to get a morsel to eat. But there are an unfortunate few (?) who deplore the day Stevens Hall was completed as they calmly or not so calmly spread red clay over its sparkling floors (well they were once)!

The physical education classes have taken to shelter. The tennis courts now make dandy outdoor swimming pools (aren't we classy —four outdoor pools and one inside!) and the AA field looks like a lake (no boating allowed and the fishing is lousy).

The physics classes have a new problem to rack their weary brains over—they are now studying "The gravitational pull of certain areas in the western hemisphere upon the accumulation in the atmosphere of minute particles of the liquid compound whose formula is H_2O; its cause and effect," In other words—Why does it rain so much in Farmville?"

And just because the writer of this feature has spent many many hours of backbreaking labor digging up the material and carefully wording each sentence the sun will probably be out with all its glory and it will look as if it has never and never will rain in Farmville or vicinity again.

Gravely Announces Tennis Tournament First Round Winners

The first round of the fall tennis singles tournament has been completed, acording to Betsy Gravely, tennis manager. The second round will be played off before Thursday, October 26.

Dolly Vaughan took the lead in her first round match over Lou Jamison with a score of 6:2, 6-2. Jean Ridenour won her first battle with Nell Bradshaw 2-6, 6-3, 6-3 and Betsy Gravely netted a triumph of 6-4, 6-3, 9-7 over Marion Beckner.

Ilia DesPortes lost her match with Dot Boswick to the tune of 6-2, 6-0, while Romine Mahood lost to Eleanor Weddle by 6-4, 6-2. Sue Webb was victorious over Nancy Huff to the score of 6-2, 6-4 and Elsie Wente won over Helen Castros 8-6, 6-0.

Those now scheduled for the second round of the tournament are Dollie Vaughan against Jean Ridenour, Betsy Gravely battling Dot Boswick and Eleanor Weddle versus Sue Webb.

Helen Agnew and Elsie Wente are matched for the forthcoming round, Louise Minor will play against Betty Tyler, and Clara Borum will play against Frances Marker. Nancy Gillie versus Dolores Hoback are also scheduled for this round, and Nancy Walker versus Challice Hayden.

PIONEERS TO BE TALLEST SMALL TEAM; AVERAGE OVER 6' 2"

The 1950 Pioneer cagemen have a student body of only 25 men from which to draw their manpower. This almost automatically places Longwood in an underdog role in each and every scheduled contest. But despite the relative smallness of the club, they are destined to be the biggest little team on record. This year the club has back its towering 6' 5" center, Ned Orange, who is determinedly making excellent use of last year's experience. But Orange isn't the only or even the tallest giant in the Pioneer practices today. Two new men, Forest Pillow, a 6' 4" center or forward is all-out for a starting berth, and Johnnie Peace, a 6' 6" Goliath is hopefully nursing an old knee injury which when strengthened may allow him to toss in a very strong bid for either center or forward.

BUT PIONEERS POSSESS NOT HEIGHT ALONE; SHEVICK STARS

The Pioneermen are hopeful this year of maintaining by height almost complete control of the backboards, which in itself should set the stage for an extremely effective defense as well as offense. In the ranks this year a new man, Jerry Shevick, 6' 1" forward, has little worry of losing his ticket to a starting berth. In fact, the former Duke cager threatens Smallwood's 16.7 point scoring average of last year. Shevick has showed in the scrimages dazzling speed, form, and uncanny hoop accuracy. His presence greatly boosts the morale as well as promises needed offensive power.

But the Pioneers promise to be anything but a one man team this year. With its incredible giants who should score frequently and consistently, Bob Williams, another new man and a former track star, will add life-giving speed and proficiency to the guard positions which are the backbone of and key to any team's fate. With center and forward positions taken constantly by the three giants, and with Shevick adding power to the offense at forward, Williams and Smallwood at guard will probably complete the Pioneer starting five.

RESERVES STRONGER — KEY TO SUCCESS

This year the starting five will not have to carry the load alone. Veterans Thompson, Clark, Bradshaw, Hutter, and Elmore should see plenty of action during the year. Thompson, who won a starting berth last year but finds himself midgetized among this year's prospects will give way only slightly if need be. The reserves will be spiked by the additions of Bill Overbey and Bill Carter. With the reserves stronger, the starting five even taller, and proficiently faster with a several-barreled offense, the Pioneers rightfully and confidently look forward to a much more successful season. Longwood should be proud of its potentital basketball team —the Pioneers will be a lot stronger than the small enrollment of men indicates.

WOMEN HOLD KEY TO PIONEER MORALE

The attendance of the women students at the Pioneer basketball games this year will supply the all-important moral boosting factor that the Pioneers will need. This however, is out of their hands and in the hands of the women students. Won't YOU come out and cheer on YOUR Pioneers that we feel sure this year more than deserve your enthusiastic support ? ? ?

"CHARLIE HOP" FRENCH TO ADVISE PIONEERS

"Charlie Hop" has accepted the advisory position of the men's basketball team this year. His acceptance has been over-joyously received by all the men students. Mr. French will make the eight or nine trips with the team and work with the head Coach, Dr. A. C. Fraser in directing the squad through its usual sixteen game slate.

SNAGS . . .

The VMI Keydets brought back out some of their power that made possible the Wm. and Mary defeat Saturday but fell in the 4th quarter to the Virginia Cavaliers 26-13—they lead the Cavaliers for almost three quarters but the Virginians again came through . . . The W. & L. Generals racked up their 4th straight Southern Conference victory Saturday as they handed the Davidson Wildcats a convincing 47-12 decision . . . The underrated Wm. and Mary Indians came back with a 54-0 mauling of VPI . . . Maryland, who was expected to go further than any sectional team has for many years, was upset by North Carolina State 16-13 . . . Randolph Macon played outstanding ball in handing Washington College its first defeat 13-0 Saturday . . . Emory and Henry and Hampden-Sydney came roaring back this week with high scoring victories . . . Army, the nations No. 1 football team today, handed Harvard another blot on their 77 year old gridiron history. Army beat them 49-0 for the worst beating that they have ever had. Last year Army posted a 54-14 victory over Harvard and that then was the newest "worst" mark that has been set upon Harvard's glorious gridiron history.

Sportin' Around

by Lou Jamison

The weather really has ruined our fun this week. Everyone had counted so much on seeing that first hockey game last Friday, but it seems someone forgot to tell the weather man about our plans. When Friday rolled around, the athletic field was too wet to even think about playing hockey on it. We're hoping to reschedule the game, so kinda keep your spirits up.

My goodness, what was all that energy people were displaying on the tennis courts last week? From the way it looked to me someone was either taking Hadacol on the sly or playing off the fall singles tennis tournament. After looking the situation over, I discovered that it was the first round of the fall singles. Some wonderful shots were going over that net too. If you want to see some terrific playing and missed the first round, go out and watch the second one. The deadline for the second round is October 26.

The rumor that the freshmen want to take off their Rat Caps has been going around lately. Well, Frosh, it won't be long now until that fatal hockey game will be here to determine just how long you'll wear those caps. I don't need to tell you what will happen if you win. And now a word to the wise (sophomores that is). If we're going to beat the freshmen, we've got to practice as a whole team. Come out to the scheduled hockey practices, and we'll show them we mean business. You like the looks of rat caps on freshmen's heads, don't you?

Dr. Franseth Visits Longwood, Madison To Study Program

Dr. Jane Franseth, specialist in rural education, and working with the United States Office of Education, visited Madison and Longwood colleges last Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

Dr. Franseth conferred with the social science faculty and the fine arts faculty, making a study of the courses for study and methods of teaching while here. Her work is in connection with the overall study being made of the Longwood program.

On Monday of this week Dr. Leeland Schubert, chairman of the English Department of Madison, was here to confer with the members of the Longwood English Department. Dr. Schubert is chairman of the faculty study group at Madison where a survey similar to the one at Longwood is being conducted.

President Lancaster To Attend Meeting

President Dabney S. Lancaster will attend the semi-annual meeting of the Virginia Advisory comittee on Schools and Colleges, in Richmond tomorrow.

Dr. Lancaster will attend the meet as one of a committee of twenty-five representatives of the State Department of Education for state supported, private and junior college, superintendents, supervisors, and high school principals.

The duty of the advisory committee is to consider problems of interest to both high schools and colleges.

2 White, 4 Blue Blazers Awarded

Last night at the student body meeting the blazer awards were given for this year. Anne Lynch, Mary Crowder, Sue Brewbaker, and Helen Egerton each received blue blazers. Betsy Gravely, and Nancye Gillie were awarded white blazers.

Blue and white blazers are awarded at the beginning of the year to those seniors who have been outstanding in athletics during their colege careers. The awards are based on sportsmanship, variety of participation and scholarship. White blazers are received by those who have participated in a variety of sports while blue blazers are awarded to those who have been outstanding in only one or two.

White Blazers

Betsy Gravely, who received a white blazer, played on the varsity and class basketball teams during her freshman, sophomore, and junior years. She was also on the varsity and class hockey teams for her freshman, sophomore, and junior years. During her sophomore and junior years, she participated in the tennis, archery, and swiming meets. Besides this Betsy has three years of class volleyball to her credit.

Nancye Gillie, who was also awarded a white blazer, has played on the varsity and class hockey teams during her freshman, sophomore, and junior years. For those years she participated in the tennis tournament, and the archery and swimming meets. Last spring Nancye won the Longwood golf championship, and she was also on her class volleyball team.

Blue Blazers

A blue blazer was awarded to Sue Brewbaker. Sue played on the varsity and class hockey teams her freshman, sophomore, and junior years. During those years, she played on her class basketball team, and played on the varsity basketball team her junior year. She also participated in the tennis tournament her sophomore year.

Helen Egerton received a blue blazer. Her freshman, sophomore, and junior years she played on the varsity basketball team, class basketball team, and class volleyball team. During her junior year she played on her class hockey team and is playing on the varsity hockey team this year.

Anne Lynch, who is president of the Athletic Association this year, was awarded a blue blazer. Her freshman, sophomore, and junior years she played on her class basketball team, class hockey team, and class volleyball team. Her freshman, sophomore, and junior years she was on the varsity basketball team, and is playing on the varsity hockey team this year.

Mary Crowder, who received a blue blazer, played on her class basketball and volleyball teams her freshman, sophomore and junior years. Her sophomore and junior years she was on the varsity basketball team.

Theta Sigma Upsilon Wins Pan-Hel Scholarship Plaque

ZTA Places Second In Scholastic Race

The local chapter of Theta Sigma Upsilon scholastically led the other seven social sororities Alpha followed with an average of 1.97 for the year 1949-50 according to a recent announcement made by Sue Brewbaker, president of the Pan-hellenic Council.

Zeta Tau Alpha placed second in the scholarship race with an average of 1.84. Alpha Sigma Alpha followed with an average of 1.81 and Kappa Delta had an average of 1.79.

Pi Kappa Sigma made a scholastic average of 1.72 for the year, and Alpha Sigma Tau had a 1.65 average. Sigma Sigma Sigma followed with a standing of 1.62 and Delta Sigma Epsilon with an average of 1.54.

The sorority which attains the highest scholastic average annually is presented with the scholarship plaque by the local Pan-Hellenic Council. The plaque will be awarded permanently to Theta Sigma Upsilon this year as they have held the lead in scholarship among the chapters for the past three years.

Scholarship averages are computed on a basis of 3 which is considered the equqivalent of an "A" grade average.

MRS. FREDERICK MORSE, president of Alpha South Province of Kappa Delta Sorority, who will visit the local chapter here next week.

Longwood Professor Teaches Psychology At Randolph-Macon

Mr. M. Boyd Coyner, professor of education at Longwood, is now teaching educational psychology two periods a week at the Randolph-Macon Woman's college in Lynchburg.

Mr. Coyner explains that the classes he conducts are not, technically, extension work, but that he is being "a friend in need" to help alleviate the shortage of teachers at Randolph-Macon. The size of the classes number about twenty-three.

Over half the class at Randolph-Macon are junior and senior students who have already had some psychology; therefore, says Mr. Coyner, it is necessary to teach the introductory course given here as an advanced course to those students.

Mr. Coyner feels that, although the extra classes keep him busy, they are a worthwhile, enjoyable experience because they give him many new contacts. He reports that all students and faculty members at Randolph-Macon have been very cordial and have made him feel welcome.

Officer To Visit Local KD Chapter

Mrs. Frederick T. Morse, President of Alpha South Province of Kappa Delta Sorority, will visit the local chapter October 30 and 31 and November 1 for the national annual inspection period.

Mrs. Morse, of Charlottesville, supervises the programs of Kappa Delta chapters at Longwood, Randolph-Macon Woman's College, Duke University, Queens College, College of William and Mary, and the University of Virginia.

Mrs. Morse was graduated from Louisiana Polytechnic Institute. She became a member of Kappa Delta while at Tech and served her chapter as scholarship chairman. Since coming to Charlottesville, where her husband is a member of the faculty of the University of Virginia, Mrs. Morse has served as financial advisor and as chairman of the alumnae advisory board for the Kappa Delta chapter at the University.

A member of the University of Virginia Hospital Circle, Mrs. Morse was president from 1947 to 1949 and is now second vice-president. She is chairman of the finance and publications committee for the Monticello Cook Book. From 1946 to 1950 Mrs. Morse was regent of the Jack Jouett Chapter of the D. A. R. and is now second-vice-regent.

Scene From Play To Be Broadcast

Helen Tanner, newly appointed student representative to the radio committee, has announced that a fifteen minute scene from the "Madwoman of Chaillot" will be presented on the Longwood Hour over WFLO Thursday at 4:30.

Mary B. Smith, president of the Dramatic Club, will introduce the scene noted as the "maddest" of Act II. This scene involves an argument over "Dickie," the imaginary dog; Gabriel's voices in her hot water bottle; Josephine's disappointment in not meeting President Wilson; and the Madwoman's classic remark, "Constance, you must be mad" !"

Cleo Holladay will play the Madwoman, while Ethel Straw will portray Constance. Irma Josephine, and Gabriel will be played by Jo Ann Utley, Ellen Porter, and Virginia McGlothlin respectively.

Pan-Hel Association Gives Sorority Tea

Members and pledges of the eight campus sororities were honored at a tea given by the Pan-Hellenic Council yesterday afternoon in the lounge of Student Building.

At this time, the local chapter of Theta Sigma Upsilon was awarded the Pan-hellenic scholarship plaque for the highest scholastic average among the sororities. Theta Sigma Upsilon's chapter average for the 1949-50 term was 1.97. Sue Brewbaker, president of the Council, made the presentation.

Sarah McElroy, Virginia Spencer, and Charlotte Jones, accompanied on the piano by Billie Dunlap, provided a musical program to entertain the guests.

Hostesses for the tea were representatives of each of the eight local sorority chapters.

Local Church Groups Plan Social Activities For Coming Weekend

"Echoes of the Roslyn Conference" will be presented to the Canterbury Club this Sunday. Those students of Longwood and Hampden-Sydney who attended the Richmond conference will be in charge of the program.

Ann Hundley and Ellen Senton were Longwood representatives to the conference. From Hampden-Sydney student participants were M. Haskins Coleman, James W. Derrickson, A. Heath Light, and Jack Mace.

Rev. Thomas Frazier of Price Church, Alexandria, was the main guest speaker for the conference.

Hold Prayer Meeting

The Baptist Student Union will be in charge of the Wednesday night prayer meeting at the Baptist Church this week.

A large group of Baptist students will attend a state convention in Bluefield West Virginia, on November 3-5. A charter bus will be going from Longwood. All who plan to go are urged to sign up by Friday, Oct. 27. The theme of the conference will be "That All May Know Christ." Lodging and breakfast for students attending the meeting will be furnished by the members of the Baptist churches in Bluefield.

A Hallowe'en party will be sponsored by the Baptist Student Union this Sunday at 9:00 at the student center.

LC Librarian Names Staff

Dr. M. Beverly Ruffin, College librarian, has announced the library student staff for the 1950-51 session.

Those students who will assist in the library are Barbara Booker, Bunny Gibson, Page Joyner, Dolores Klak, Nancy Lawrence, and Ann Lawrence.

Others included on the student staff are Shirley Livesay, Rebecca Mann, Virginia Manville, Winnie Murdock, Donna Staples, Betty Jane Stoots, Maxine Watts, Helen Tanner, and Barbara White.

These students are in the library to be of service to those who need aid in using the library and are glad to be of help in any way, Dr. Ruffin stated.

U.N. Display

The library is now displaying informative posters showing the organization and operation of the United Nations Assembly. Also on exhibit are pamphlets and bulletins published by different organizations under the auspices of the United Nations.

New Administration, Faculty Members Honored At Tea

The new members of the Longwood faculty and administration staffs were honored at an informal tea given by the College at the Home Management House on Beech street last Tuesday.

Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster and Mrs. William W. Savage poured for the occasion.

The committee on arrangements for the tea included Miss Margaret Hall, Mrs. Katherine Tabb, Mrs. Savage, and Dean Ruth Gleaves.

The ringmaster, whose identity is traditionally kept concealed until the Circus night, will be presented by the clowns at the onset of the festivities.

Class Stunts

The class stunts will be presented immediately after the entrance of the circus queen and her court.

Following the traditional procedure the freshmen will present their stunt first, followed by the sophomores, juniors, and seniors in that order.

Cleo Holliday and Mary Denny Wilson are in charge of the freshman stunt for Saturday night; Barbara Caskey and Virginia McClean are in charge of the sophomore presentation; Maria Jackson and Ethel Straw are co-heading the junior stunt; and Betsy Wilson is in charge of the senior stunt.

A committee of impartial judges will decide the winner of the class stunts. The ringmaster will anounce the first and second place winners at the end of the performance.

Booths to Open

After the announcement of the stunt winners, the booths sponsored by the various organizations on the campus will be open to the public. The usual circus foods, peanuts, popcorn, cracker-jacks, and popsicles as well as fortune telling and games will be found in the festively decorated booths.

Jack O'Brien, of the University of Richmond, visited the campus as the guest of Doris Underwood.

Attend Wedding

Dot Dunford attended the wedding of Marian Dunford in Richmond. The ceremonies were held at the Central Methodist Church of Richmond.

Queen of Fete

Helen Smith was crowned queen of the festivities at the annual Amherst County Horse Show and Tournament held as part of the County Fair last Saturday. Helen was crowned at a dance which followed the afternoon activities. Her escort was Lawrence Massie, the winner in the mock tournament.

Halloween Dinner

The annual Hallowe'en dinner will be held next Tuesday, October 31, in the College dining hall.

According to Dean Ruth Gleaves, this dinner will also be the "birthday dinner" for all those students whose birthdays fall in October.

The dining hall will be decorated with the traditional colors and favors of Hallowe'en for the occasion.

Visiting Alumna

Mrs. Charles Gordon, graduate of 1892, recently visited Longwood campus. This was Mrs. Gordon's first visit since 1892, and she stated that she was quite impressed by the many changes that have been made since then.

back at Christmas to continue touring in Virginia. "I returned to New Brunswick, New Jersey," said Mr. Finlayson, "and worked as an announcer over W.C.T.C. I finally decided that professional acting was a very risky livelihood unless you are an exceptionally good actor. Being only average," he continued, "I got my M.A. at the University of North Carolina in Dramatic Art."

Mr. Finlayson believes that the future of the theater does not depend on whether or not great plays are produced on Broadway, but whether the people in towns, cities and communities all over America are willing to devote their time, money, and creative talent to their local theater. The success of "The Madwoman of Chaillot," he stated, depends on you, our readers.

LC Alumnae Association Presented Duvall Home By College For Offices

Pres. Lancaster Addresses Group At Council Meet

The Duvall cottage, located in Farmville, will be presented by the College to the Longwood Alumnae Association, according to an announcement made by Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster at the Executive Board meeting held Friday evening in Dr. Lancaster's office.

The cottage will house the Alumnae office and will contain bedrooms for returning alumnae. While the College will furnish the home, lights, and heat, the alumnae will redecorate and furnish the house.

Receives Handbook

During the business proceedings of the Alumnae Association on Saturday, Mrs. Ruth Coyner, Alumnae secretary, reviewed the newly published alumnae handbook. Dr. Lancaster gave an address in which he told of present activities at Longwood and of plans for the future.

The council meeting was attended by thirty members representing chapters all over the state. Many of these alumnae brought high school seniors with them to see and take part in the week end's activities.

During their stay, the alumnae were entertained at an informal tea held at Dr. and Mrs. Lancaster's home Saturday afternoon. Mrs. William Savage and Mrs. George W. Jeffers poured, while Mrs. Alice Carter and Miss Kay Trent served.

Date, Cost Announced For Richmond Opera; Students May Attend

The opera "La Boheme" will be presented in Richmond at the Mosque, Tuesday, November 28.

Miss Jessie Patterson has announced that $3.50 will take care of ticket price and bus fare to and from Richmond. The bus will leave the College at 6 p. m. Tickets will be sold Monday, November 6 after dinner.

WRVA Honors Longwood Student For Contributions

Mrs. Bunting Works For Degree Here

Mrs. Irene C. Bunting of Roanoke, was honored recently by WRVA's program "Today's Virginians." Mrs. Bunting is now a student at Longwood College.

The program, which was presented in connection with the station's 25th aniversary, honored persons who had been nominated by the public for outstanding contributions to the State.

Mrs. Bunting taught school in Roanoke and Roanoke County Public Schools for 24 years and was connected with the recreation department there for 15 years. She also worked with educational radio programs while in Roanoke. Mrs. Bunting was instrumental in founding the radio series, "Let's Educate," which is broadcast over the Roanoke station regularly for the Roanoke schools. According to Mrs. Bunting, this was the work she enjoyed most in her career in education.

At present, she is at the College establishing residence for her degree requirements. In the past, she studied at Elizabeth College in Salem, Roanoke College, and Radford College. She has also studied under the University of Virginia extension services and at the College of William and Mary during the past summer.

Mrs. Bunting's daughter, Mary Ann Bunting, is an alumnae of Longwood College. Of the college, Mrs. Bunting has said. "I am enjoying thoroughly my stay here. The girls have been very hospitable and friendly."

NOTICE

Students who are granted Dean's List cuts are not permitted to take unlimited cuts for chapel, according to a recent announcement from the office of the Dean of Women.

Dr. Lancaster Will Address Principals At VEA Meet

Richmond Chapter Richmond Alumnae Will Sponsor Tea

President Dabney S. Lancaster will deliver an address before the principals of the high schools of District C of the Virginia Education Association tonight in Richmond.

Dr. Lancaster will speak after a dinner to be held in the John Marshall High School cafeteria on "Providing for the Needs of the Individual through Mass Education."

The dinner meeting will be part of the opening sessions of the 44th annual convention of the Virginia Education Association to be held in Richmond November 1-3.

To Address Fraternity

Dr. Lancaster will also address the members of Phi Delta Kappa, national honorary men's education fraternity at a luncheon to be held at the Hotel King Carter on Thursday.

The Longwood College alumnae will hold a tea at the Hotel John Marshall on Thursday from 3 to 5 p. m. Mrs. William H. Bass, president of the Richmond alumnae chapter is in charge of the affair.

Faculty Will Attend

Among the members of the Longwood faculty and administration who will attend the meetings of the VEA are Dr. George W. Jeffers, Miss Vera Baron, Miss Betty Spindler, Miss Virginia Bedford, Miss Janice Lemen, and Dr. John P. Wynn.

Miss Madeline Bigot, Miss Helen Draper, Mrs. Mildred Davis, Miss Mary Nichols, Dr. Edgar M. Johnson, and Miss Jessie Patterson will also be among the faculty members attending the convention.

The theme of the 1950 VEA convention is "Fundamental Education for Successful Living," and the programs of the thirty section and division meetings as well as those of the general sessions will follow this theme.

The VEA convention is held annualy in Richmond to allow the educators of Virginia to get together to solve common problems and to better education throughout the State.

World Student Service Fund Begins Drive on LC Campus; Canvass Opens On Nov. 11th

Director Gives Dramatic Background of 'Madwoman'

According to Mr. Alec Finlayson, director of the "Madwoman of Chaillot," which is to be given November 16, 17, 18, in the small auditorium, Cleo Holladay and Frank Williams, two of the cast who have lead parts, are seasoned amateur actors. Both were members of the Richmond Summer Theater Company.

Cleo, a freshman from Suffolk, worked actively at dramatics in high school. She worked in the Dramatics Work Shop for three years. During her high school career, Cleo played Miss Montague in "Merton of the Movies," Peg in "Peg O' My Heart," and Olga in "You Can't Take It with You." She also played in "Georgie Porgie" and "The Trysting Place." Cleo was a member of the National Thespian Society during high school.

Cleo was with the Richmond Summer Theater during the summer of 1948, during which time she portrayed Gertie in "What A Life," and Katherine Fallet in "Years Ago." She also acted in "Yes, My Darling Daughter," and "Petticoat Fever." Nansemond Players was the title given to a stock company formed by Cleo. Her group presented "The Campbells Are Coming" and "Bolts and Nuts."

Debut at 4

Frank Williams, Hampden-Sydney student, who plays the part of Pierre in "Madwoman of Chaillot," made his debut as an actor at the age of four with the Richmond Theater Guild. Several of Frank's early summers were spent in touring with the Richmond Children's Theater when he acted in "Rumplestilskin," "The Twelve Dancing Princesses," "Cinderella," and "Rip Van Winkle."

A member of the National Thespian Society, Frank was active in Thomas Jefferson High School productions. He took part in several one act plays and major productions which included "Best Foot Forward," and "A Date With Judy." According to Frank ,the part he enjoyed most

'Hour' to Give Circus Talent

Talent from the class skits presented at Circus Saturday night will be featured over the Longwood Hour this Thursday afternoon.

From the senior skit, "Cleopatra's Court," Caesar, Cleopatra and the three mummies will perform with Charlotte King Jones accompanying on the piano. The juniors will present the pennant dolls, the china dolls, the bride and groom of the Wedding of the Painted Doll, and the toy skunks from their Circus skit, "The Doll Shop."

From the sophomore skit, "Come to the Circus," Sis Burton will give her presentation of the jazz pianist and Mary Frances Graube will act as the barker.

ACE Issues 28 Bids To Uupperclassmen

Twenty-eight bids to membership were issued by the Association of Childhood Education last night according to Lillie Lankford, vice-president of the group.

Initiation services were held this afternoon in the honors room for those who accepted the bids.

Among those students invited to membership were Claudia Bradshaw, Mrs. Irene Bunting, June Foreman, Nellie Hart, Eloise Hodges, Charlotte Sears Jones, Mary Palmer and Mary Jane Stansbury.

Other receiving bids were Mary Thomas, Mary Brame, Betty Barns, Bobbie Brown, Vera Bryant, Mary Helen Cook, Mary Crawford and Sarah Graham.

Ines Hughes, Ann Lawrence, Jerry Korback, Sue Nelson, Ann Rosson, Donna Staples, Margaret Thomas, Katherine Toxey, Nancy Walthall, Billie Wood, Virginia Dare Woody and Jo Zitta also were invited to become members.

Students majoring in elementary education who have an academic average of "C" are eligible to join this organization which tends to unite students who have chosen elementary education as their profession.

Library Displays Local Art Works

An exhibit of the works of members of the Longwood art department is now on display in the browsing room of the library. These works include water colors, oils, ceramics, linoleum block prints and jewelry. The subject matter ranges from religious themes to familiar local scenery.

Miss Ross, new art instructor, has used scenes from Colorado, her home state, for the subject of many of her paintings. Also included in Miss Ross's works are linoleum block prints of saints.

Local scenes have been used by Miss Virginia Bedford. One of the paintings now on display is a picture of Longwood rotunda. Ceramic sculpture, pottery and jewelry done by Miss Bedford are also on exhibit.

Miss Janice Lemen's works include water colors, oils, two enamel paintings on plywood and one batik. A scene of peaceful New England and an abstract depicting the eyes of owls are two of Miss Lemen's favorite works. Her painting of a New England church was displayed in the member's loan library of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts for a year.

Students To See Film In Thurs. Assembly

A colored film of the International Hockey Team and the International Hockey Conference in Johannesburg, South Africa, will be shown in assembly tomorrow by Miss Elizabeth Burger who is in charge of the program.

Parts of the game with Scotland will be included in the film which was taken from a newsreel. Miss Burger will explain the movie while it is being shown, as the film is a silent one.

YWCA Sponsors Annual Campaign

The World Student Service Fund drive will open on campus this Monday and will close Friday, October 11. The drive, which is annually sponsored by the Y.W.C.A., is under the direction of Eloise Hodges, chairman of public affairs of the Y.

Contributions to this fund will directly benefit students and teachers in the universities and colleges in the war devastated nations of the world, Eloise said today.

Representatives from each hall will be appointed to canvas the dormitories during the drive. Virginia Spencer, president of the Y, has asked that each student contribute something to the drive every night during the coming week. She added that she hoped by Friday every student and faculty member would have contributed at least one dollar.

Assembly Program

On Thursday, October 10, the Y.W.C.A. will present a speaker recommended by Mr. John C. Gleason, regional secretary of the WSSF. The speaker, who is a native of Greece, will discuss the work of the WSSF and the need for student support of the campaign in the United States.

WSSF is the agency by which American students and professors, at the prep school and university levels, may share materially and intellectually with their needy contemporaries throughout the world. WSSF is a part of the World Student Relief organization through which students all over the world contribute to help others.

According to Virginia Spencer, WSSF aid falls into five major categories: food, clothing, medical aid, books, and housing. The WSSF also supports student self-help projects in the countries where it operates and cooperates with CARE in channeling good products to students overseas.

"WSSF spells out friendship and understanding, Virginia stated, "and it erects a bridge of sturdy student cooperation."

High School Seniors Visit LC Campus During Past Weekend

Twenty-six high school seniors visited Longwood campus this past week end as guests of returning alumnae and of the College.

Carolyn Hunter and Grace Garnett were two Farmville seniors who spent the week end here. From John Marshall high school in Richmond came Jane Porter and Elizabeth Cheatham. Jane Sowers, Sue Sowers, and Nancy Slonaker from Winchester; Mary Dabney Longhorne, Danville; Jenny Wrenn Luck, Bedford; Barbarbara May Ellerson; and Susie Hartbarger, Waynesboro; were at the College for the week end.

Other girls visiting were Connie Bowles and Ann Burchill, Martinsville; Betsy Ross Sanderson and Pearl Cheek, Pocahontas; Elizabeth Easterling and Claudia Smith, Arlington; Trianne Lampkin and Mervia Yoffey, Norfolk; Kitty Camper and Olma Saville, Fincastle; Eloise Macon, Josephine Burley and Ann Jeta, Lynchburg; and Dorothy Morris and Bessie McCarthy, Hampton.

To Give Help, Materials to Acting Group Mr. Finlayson Proposes Production Center

by Alec W. Finlayson

"Who stole our flats?" "That costume's too brief" "Where'll we get the lights?" "What kind of make-up do you use for highyaller?" "Where'll we practice?" All this could be solved by a production center. Its purpose would be to provide facilities, scenery, costumes, make-up, lighting, useful information, student guidance, and general supervision for all productions, presentations, concerts and recitals. There is no point in anyone having to build, construct, or sew together, production materials if they already exist—nor any point in destroying, misplacing, or keeping as "souvenirs" materials already used—nor any point in building units which can not possibly be used by anyone later.

When all productions are given in the new Auditorium, scenery will have to be self-supporting (wood frames covered with canvas) or hung from the gridiron (canvas drops supported by wooden battens). The old paint can be washed off the canvas and the same flats used over and over. This means that the Men's Athletic Association or Orchesis or the Dramatics Club or a Longwood Operatic Group or a visiting club from another college would be able to use any flats made by another organization. They would have standard widths and be interchangeable.

A production center could also handle all costumes and properties, making available the materials already collected and storing new ones.

"But we want our costumes and scenic effects to be kept secret." This idea is utter nonsense. The scenic designs for Circus should be kept secret, yes—until they are turned over to the judges and awarded merit points. Costume designs and scripts should also be submitted. If the scripts and designs were then brought to the production center, trained students could work with the individual shows, making sure that the designs and plans were followed to the "T." The finished costumes, properties, and settings would not be judged, since they were made under the supervision of trained students, and of materials available to everyone. When the merit points for the smoothest, most interesting, and most entertaining performances were added to those received for costume and scenic designs, and scripts, the class with the greatest number of points would win first prize. Even the judges at Atlantic City don't try to select Miss America in one day. There is a night devoted to judging talent, another to judging poise, another to judging the contestant's ability to model evening gowns, and on the final day they parade by in standard bathing-suits. Suppose there were only four contestants. I would Keep 'Em Clean!

The posters on the bulletin board say, "Write A Short Story for the Contest," "Come to the Church Supper, October 12," and "Sign the Freedom Scroll." We'd like to, but they're all over and done with. Too often posters are left on the bulletin boards long after the events have taken place.

What's wrong with that? First of all, there's no room left for new, important posters announcing events that are to come. Many times posters will draw attention that an announcement in the dining hall will not; students will stop to look at a brightly painted sketch. But there has to be space to put these new notices. Of course, some posters are taken down, but almost invariably they are the attractive ones that are taken to the rooms for souvenirs. This only makes the matter worse, because all the unattractive ones are left hanging.

Too, students stop reading the posters after a time and actually become tired of seeing the same old thing on the board, not only day after day but week after week. If anything new does happen to be there, little attention may be paid simply because so many of them are such "old stuff" that the new aren't noticeable.

Those who put up the posters should see that they are taken down after the event, but, if they fall down on the job, any student has the right to toss obsolete signs into the waste basket.

Happy Birthday, Rotunda

Today we're singing Happy Birthday to us, cause today we're thirty years old — speaking for the Rotunda that is.

For thirty years the Rotunda has kept a running record of Longwood life, the serious mixed with the comical and the good mixed with the bad.

More than thirty editors have held the reigns for nine short months and then reluctantly passed their precious prodigy on to eager ambitious successors. There have been good years and bad. We've written of wonderful events and great catastrophes. We've fussed and fumed at students, faculty and administration, and we've praised them too. We've won honors and recognition and we've been harshly criticized. But in all of this, we've tried to hold the advancement of our College society before us as our ideal.

We feel that we can speak for our twenty-nine predecessors in saying that printer's ink, sweat and tears (editors don't have blood) have been poured into our four page weekly all these years in hopes that the Rotunda could be a part in putting Longwood on top. And today we're as ambitious and eager for a successful college newspaper as were those few girls in 1920 whose jounalistic ideals led them to establish the Rotunda.

As Time Changes

By BUNNY GIBSON

Since the turn of this century, most people have forgotten the futile dream of isolationism. We have realists, extending the Monroe Doctrine beyond our own hemisphere. Each diplomatic move that is made can set off of chain of reactions that might mean the "game."

When the Chinese communist government ordered the invasion of Tibet, she may not have realized the precarious position she was getting into. Certainly her chance for recognition in the United Nations was lowered. By this act of aggression, India has been betrayed and might swing away from her neutrality policy. This, of course, would be one move in the Western allies' favor.

The partners on this fascinating checkerboard are not always the same shade of color. The U. S. has two friends of a suspicious nature, both clamoring for material support. However, they are promising to be real assets. Since Yugoslovia is inside the iron curtain she may become a base from which to pierce the Soviets' grasp of the East. But this is dreaming, and the facts remain; the Yugoslavs' food crisis and the U. S. money that is able to combat it. Yet it seems that if we send food for the stomach, it might be accompanied by food for thought — truths to be nourished by op-

Our other questionable friend is dictator Franco of Spain. Why recognize a totalitarian nation when we have always fought for liberty? Back in 1946 we faced the issue and stood pat. Now, however, we find that has only enhanced the glory of Franco in the eyes of his people, and we are forced to reverse our decision. After all, when the stakes are high, practicability pays.

Last week President Truman promised the U. N. we would back up our moves with force. The North Atlantic Pact nations made a decisive jump forward when they agreed to set up an integrated force under unified command.

Stecking My Neck Out

by Joanne Steck

Things seem to be turning almost back to normal after a most eventful week end. Want to congratulate the winners of Circus. They did a fine job. The losers were great sports and remember somebody has to win and somebody has to lose.

Sho' was good to see all the ole' (excuse adjective) alumnae back. Heard one senior say she woke up Sunday morning to find several of them asleep on her floor. (Just make yourself at home).

Guess we won't be seeing many student teachers this week end; having those days off I guess they'll be homeward bound.

Hope you all noticed and read my one fan letter. Sorry you girls didn't observe National Letter Writing Week any better than that.

One never knows these days whether you're seeing the same girl you thought you saw yesterday or not. Now yesterday she had blond hair today she's got red. 'Course now it seems to be all the rage to have the colors of the rainbow.

This is National Pharmacy Week, girls, so I want you all to observe it to the fullest extent. You can get your cosmetics (Hadacol included) at half-price, practically at no cost to the consumer. Want fullest cooperation on this national observance.

Visit Out of Town

Iris Sutphin, Ann Kemp, Bill Wall and Bill DesPortes attended the Hampden-Sydney - Western Maryland football game in Westminster, Maryland Saturday. After the game they traveled to Philadelphia, Penn., to visit Colonel and Mrs. R. C. Duncan, III.

Patty Derring spent the week end at V.M.I. as the guest of Dick Bailey.

Betty Baker and Frances Everett attended the William and Mary-University of North Carolina game in Chapel Hill, N. C., with Bill Rhyne and Bill Booth.

Lieutenant Ronald Biddle, on leave for Germany, visited his sister-in-law, June Lea Wilmouth this Sunday.

Alumnae Tea

A tea, honoring the visiting alumnae, was held Saturday afternoon at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster. Guests were served by Mr. William W. Savage, Mrs. George Jeffers, Mrs. Alice Carter and Miss Kate Trent.

Hallowe'en Dinner

The annual Hallowe'en dinner was held in the College dining hall last night. Decorations suitable for the occasion and entertainment between courses was provided.

Guest Honored

Kappa Delta entertained Mrs. Frederic Morse, national officer who is visiting the local chapter of the sorority this week, with an after dinner coffee Monday evening. Among the guests were members of the faculty, staff, administration and alumnae.

Kappa Delta Patroness

Miss Genevieve Brockenbrough has recently become patroness to the Alpha chapter of Kappa Delta. Miss Brokenbrough who came to campus this year, is a member of the physical education department.

CHURCH NEWS

In the Canterbury Club a panel discussion will be held next Sunday by students on the Roslyn conference. Ellen Sinton, Ann Hundley, M. Haskins Coleman, III, and Jack Mace, will be the participants. The topics will be, "What is Love?," "The Purpose of Work is to Earn A Living," and "Hope is a Poetical Expression."

* * *

The program for the Wesley Foundation this Sunday will be on Christian Vocations.

A large delegation of Baptist students are journeying to Bluefield this week end to a statewide conference. Elizabeth Stone, Max Acree, Babs Booker, and Dolly Horne will represent Longwood on the program.

Campus Cogitations

Question: How do you think Longwood college prepares you for the Future?

Lillie Lankford: It depends upon the individual.

Rena Hayes: That's a good question.

Frances Everett: It gives you knowledge, but it's up to you what you do with it.

Catherine Stevens: You prepare your own future, but with a college education your preparation is better.

Dot Dunford: It better prepares you for your life's profession.

Edna Rodriques: It is preparing me to get my MRS.

Isaac Welaxques: It all depends. Millions of students go into college, but college does not go into them.

Betty Campbell: It gives me a broader outlook on life.

Maxine Watts: It helps you meet the future more securely.

Frances Ramsey: I wish I knew, so I would know how to study.

Dot Gregory: The degree is a great help when looking for a job.

Chris Davis: I'll know more about it when I get out.

Mary Frances Spurlock: It teaches you how to live better with people.

Drue Balton: It makes me postpone my wedding for two years.

Clara Cullip: I haven't decided yet.

Betty Hoffman: I'm learning how to cook and sew so I can make that "certain man" happy—if my cooking doesn't kill him first.

Iva Jean Hurst: Teaches you how to get along with people.

Charlotte Robertson: Four years practice darning socks.

Boots Hamner: Gives you a broad outlook on life.

Betty Jane Stoots: Helps you understand world affairs and mob psychology.

Billie Rose Spivey: Teaches me the better qualities of a moron.

Beulah Carter: Teaches me to stand on my own two feet.

Rotunda Began Existence As Normal School Dummy

by LOUISE TRINKEL

Volume 1! Number 1! The date was October 29, 1920; the size "7x9"; they called it the Dummy and to editors Helen Skillman and Mary Stephenson especially it was the beginning of something new and exciting...their school's first paper!

This issue had no other name than just Dummy, no pictures and just a few stories, but to the six hundred and some girls at "State Normal School," Dr. Jarman, the president, and the two enthusiastic editors their new weekly looked pretty good, and it was good.

Their second issue showed a special interest in sports, not the up and at 'em game of hockey (they didn't seem to go for that then) but tennis and basketball and some sport called "hiking." It seems the seniors went in for early morning hikes. The paper failed to mention just when this exciting sport went out of style but we are sure it did.

The paper did, however, give mention to the fact that Hampden-Sydney was around and the boys just the same. We understand there was some sort of fire in the downtown section and our H-S friends came flying to the rescue thinking it was our school but had to return somewhat deflated having not saved one girl. It was an old warehouse.

Ads at this date included Baldwin's, Davidson's and Shannon's Home Bakery among others. And our editors were pleading for a name for their paper via editorials. The staff had tried; Dr. Gammon had tried; the faculty had tried but all to no avail... "The News" was too old; "The Mirror" too relective; "Norma Light" to bright and "Blue and White" hadn't enough local color and on it went...Y.W.C.A. activities and articles would have made Ginny Spencer burst with pride and the whole school probably burst with the announcement of a day off honoring Armistice Day.

At last issue number five came forth with the announcement that a name had been decided upon, "and as in the famous quests of 'ye olden times' what we sought was not far away but right here at home...the rotunda has always been the center of school life here as it is the center of the great building that houses our life....Rotunda is the most suitable name for the paper. Hereinafter it will be called by this name!"

The "Carnival" that year featured such popular songs of the day as "My Alice Blue Gown" and "Let the Rest of the World Go By." And this issue was on slick paper with the name ROTUNDA across the top in big black letters. Two weeks later the paper sported its first cut, a picture of Dr. Joseph L. Jarman, and a sports headline stated that the Juniors trampled the Seniors in their annual basketball game.

The next big caption that caught our eye came under a drawing of a "Student's Building" and ran "If enthusiasm will

Longwood Is Great Say Hockey Visitors In Response To Inquiring Reporter

"What do you think of Longwood?" "Well, I haven't seen much of it, except the locker and the outside of the buildings; they look okay to me."

This was just one of the many answers that were received from the Roanoke girls, who came up to Longwood Tuesday to play hockey.

The main question asked them was what they thought of the game. With a smile on their tired faces they, each very willingly gave their opinions.

The first person asked about what she thought of the game was Lannie Rosselcom, from New York, who said that the game with Longwood was much better than the other two that they had played. This same opinion was also expressed by Elleanor Watson and the Captain of the team, Jean Beamer, along with Miss Ramser the coach.

Down in the locker room another player, Peggy Patrick was asked what she thought too.

"Well," she said, "I think it was a pretty open game the second half, also Longwood is a good clean team." Then she turned to another of her teammates who expressed the same feeling.

Some of the Longwood players said that they thought it was very nice game and it was a shame that the ball just wouldn't go in ;upon which Miss Iler said, "Ditto." Then last but least, Charlie Hop, who was a spectator, was asked what he thought. He replied, "A cracker jack game."

So another Hockey game went down in history to be remembered for many a day to come.

Pi Gamma Mu Bids Six Upperclassmen

Three senior and three junior students have been issued bids by Pi Gamma Mu, National Social Science Honorary Society. Those receiving bids were Betty Lois Baker, John Randall Cook, Lauralee Fritts, Peggy Dee Hoover, John Edward Huegal, and Virginia Spencer.

Murphy Made Head Of LC Cheerleaders

Anne Murphy, sophomore from Danville, will lead the Longwood cheerleaders for 1950-51, Ann Lynch, president of the Athletic Association, recently announced.

Among Anne's followers will be Betty Hancock, cheerleading veteran of 1949-50, and freshmen Betty Islin, Nancy Adkinson, and Liz Crockett.

Cheering plans for this year's sports events call for the addition of many new yells to their repertoire.

Anne has asked the entire student body to come out

HOCKEYWOMEN FIGHT TO A DRAW AGAINST ROANOKE

Perhaps this year's varsity hockey team can't match the offensive power of last year's armada, but it at least stands up to it on defense. The goal defense knitted by Longwood Thursday afternoon against Roanoke College was spectacular. Climatically, Sue Webb's brillian returns at goalie save Longwood's "goose" on several occasions.

But Longwood's offense was not napping either; in fact it was able to hold possession of the ball predominately throughout the contest. However, after having worked the ball all the way up the field, repeatedly the drives would thin out at the goal line stripe. Much of the credit for Longwood's failure to produce the points here can justly be given to Roanoke's goalie who capably managed the goal line for the Maroons. All things being considered, Longwood did seem to possess the stronger team, but Roanoke made excellent use of its thin but capably faster network of guardsmen, and effectively kept the ball in play and out of serious scoring positions. The game was an extremely exciting defensive battle all the way.

CHEERING SECTION MEAGER — SPIRIT POOR

The cheering section for the Roanoke-Longwood hockey game was numerically meager, and the spirit of those who did attend was not what it should have been. It's fortunate that the varsity team did not play the game as nonchalantly as we spectators did in the stands.

Either absence or lack of participation and support of the college's intercollegiate events is undesirable for outsiders to see. In any function in which we stack our college's reputation, we must loyally support our Alma Mater faithfully. When we miss these events, we are actually missing an important phase of College life. Participation in and support of such events is important in capturing the "spirit" that Longwood's past and present points to with pride. Support Longwood — YOU need it, and IT needs you.

W & L LOSES ITS WAY INTO PROBABLE SC TITLE

The Washington and Lee Generals lost to Tennessee Saturday 27-20, but the Generals in the game netted everything but the points. Three long touchdown runs in the first half of the game put the game on ice for the Vols—they held a comfortable 27-6 halftime lead. But after the half W and L elevent, heavy underdogs, caught fire and scored twice in the last period. They quickly downed any feelings that Southeastern Conference football is vastly superior to Southern Conference or Old Dominion play. Holding the Vols to a stand still in the last half also eliminated any scepticism about W & L's ability to command the SC lead which they now hold with a 4-0 record. The Generals are in a good position to hold the lead and obtain their first title since 1937.

SNAGS . . .

Virginia began early for a change and then went ahead after being tied to down West Virginia 28-21 in a thriller . . . Bob Miller, the Emory and Henry Express, got back in touchdown form Saturday to take back command of the Old Dominion scoring lead. Miller now has a total of 84 points, 18 points ahead of Gruver of H-SC.

Biddlecomb Elected Captain Of Allied East Hockey Team At Tourney In Richmond

Sportin' Around

by Lou Jamison

Longwood has really been in the sportlight lately. No one can say we haven't some of the finest athletes in the state after our success last Saturday at the hockey games in Richmond. We overwhelmed R.P.I. by the fabulous score of 6 to 0. Our success in the first game didn't go to our heads either. Later the same day we trounced on the Norfolk Division of William and Mary defeating them 3 to 0. Just how much more could you ask for? Besides all this, four of the girls on our team were chosen to play in the East Allied Hockey Tournament.

The tennis tournament is getting closer and closer to the final match. The second round was finished Monday, and some of the freshman are still in there among the winners. It won't be long now until we know the final outcome.

Roanoke college girls came to Longwood last Thursday to play our varsity hockey team. Believe me, it really was a terrific game with both sides fighting as hard as they could. In spite of our efforts to make a goal the score remained a lowly 0 to 0. Roanoke put forth a noble effort to score too, but our half backs, full backs, and goalie proved too strong for hem to get through.

Varsity Hockey Squad To Meet Norfolk

The hockey team from the Norfolk Division of William and Mary will journey to Longwood on November 9 to battle against the Longwood varsity. The game will be played on the LC home field.

This will be the second meeting of the two teams this season. Both teams took part in the Allied East Tournament last Saturday in Richmond. Longwood defeated the Norfolk team to the tune of 3-0 at that time.

Anne Murphy, head cheerleader, has urged all students to be on hand for the game to cheer the blue and whites on to another victory.

LC Defeats RPI, Norfolk In Meet

Ann Biddlecomb, senior physical education major from Lilian, was elected captain of the Allied East Hockey Team at the Allied East Tournament held in Richmond Saturday. Ann will play center half - back on the team.

Nell Bradshaw, sophomore from Suffolk, was also named to the Allied East Team. She will play center forward when the team plays at Sweet Briar Friday and Saturday.

Two other Longwood sophomores were chosen to play on the substitute team. Clara Borum from Burkeville will play left inner, and Sue Webb from Danville will play goalie.

The members of the East Allied Team were chosen after the tournament held at St. Cathrine's Saturday. The Longwood team played against the team from Richmond Professional Institute and against the Norfolk Division of William and Mary.

Longwood defeated RPI 6-0 and the Norfolk girls 3-0.

Among the teams taking part in the tournament were those from Mary Washington, Longwood, Lynchburg, Norfolk, and RPI.

Longwood girls making the trip were Marian Beckner, Ann Biddlecomb, Clara Borum, Nell Dalton, Nancye Gillie, Edith Kennon, Hilda Lewis, Nell Bradshaw, and Helen Castros.

Also in Richmond with the Longwood team were Ann Lynch, Rachel Peters, Audrey Ramsey Jean Ridenour, Betty Tyler, and Sue Webb.

Students From Lynchburg, Southwest Va., Form Club

Shelton, Cregar Chosen as Pres.

Two new regional clubs, the Lynchburg Club and the Southwest Virginia Club will petition student standards for a place on the campus.

These clubs will serve in the same capacity as other sectional clubs on campus, that is to bring girls from that part of the State together; to encourage, and invite to the campus, prospective students; and to further active alumnae participation in that area.

Lynchburg Club

Margaret Ann Shelton was elected president of the Lynchburg Club at its first unofficial meeting, and Marian Beckner was elected secretary-treasurer.

Making up the group are Marian Beckner, Barbara Brown, Emma Harris, Eddie Ann Abbitt and Betty Abbitt.

Southwest Va. Club

Frances Creger was elected president at the first meeting of the Southwest Virginia Club. Ann Mosely will fill the position of vice - president and publicity chairman, and Peg Peery will serve as secretary. Eleanor Weddle was elected treasurer of the group.

This club, which includes 63 members is open to students who live in the area west of Roanoke to West Virginia, and south to Tennessee and Kentucky.

Theta Sigma Upsilon Nat. Representative Visit Local Chapter

Mrs. John Harkins, of Erie, Pennsylvania, spent Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week on the Longwood campus as guest of the local chapter of Theta Sigma Upsilon.

Mrs. Harkins, who is vice-president of the National organization of Theta Sigma Upsilon, is here on a periodic visitation to the chapter.

"I have really experienced true southern hospitality on this, my first visit to the south," Mrs. Harkins said. She added that she had been impressed with the friendliness of those she had met here.

was Algernon in "Importance of Being Ernest." Later he became a member of the Richmond Opera Group during which time he played in "New Moon," "Vagabond King," and "The Merry Widow."

Frank was with the Richmond Summer Theater Company during the summers of 1947, '48, and '49. Other aspects of dramatics in which he is interested are make-up, direction, costuming, and staging.

National Officer Visits AST Group

Mrs. S. Carl Robinson, national president of Alpha Sigma Tau, was a guest of the Zeta Tau chapter here on October 26 and 27 for the national inspection period.

Mrs. Robinson of St. Louis, Mo., supervises and inspects the programs of Alpha Sigma Tau Alumnae chapters at Ware, W. Va., Bluefield, W. Va., Richmond and Norfolk. While in Roanoke, she installed a new alumnae chapter. She also supervises and inspects the collegiate chapters at Concord College, Athens, W. Va., and Longwood College.

Mrs. Robinson graduated from Harris Teacher's College in St. Louis, Mo., where she was a member of the Pi chapter of Alpha Sigma Tau. As an almuna member she served for four and a half years as national vice-president in charge of extension. During this time, she organized four new chapters in her district. She became national president of Alpha Sigma Tau in 1949.

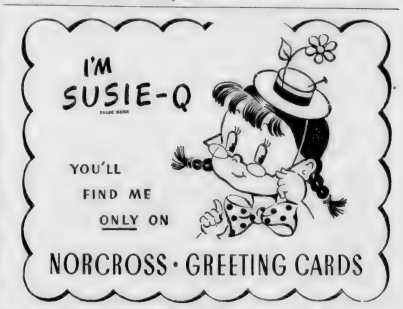
build it in two years we'll do it. And sure enough several years later the headlines greeting us state "Student Building Completed." Oh, yes, this was the year we beat Harrisonburg in basketball!

And then our first hockey game, the seniors and frosh played the victorious sophomores and juniors. Score 2-0. The seniors got a new dorm and two years later in 1929 the College purchased Longwood Estate and as a minor item the Rotunda came up with a new column "Among Our Caps and Gowns," and graduated to the present size paper.

In the years following, the Rotundas' pages showed a championship basketball team, a column by Helen Rubinstein and of perhaps more interest the dedication of a new library. One of the questions of the week was "Should we be allowed to go to the movies on Sunday afternoon? Why?" "After Bedcheck" and "Just Looking, Thanks" were lead columns.



Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster assumed the duties of president of the college upon the resignation of Dr. Jarman and the same year headlines revealed the fact that "State Teachers College" was now co-ed! A 1949 Rotunda announced to the students that the State Board had named the College Longwood and this was the year our paper received one of the highest awards granted college newspapers in the country.

Reflecting on these things as we close our files of old Rotundas we can't help but think maybe editors Skillman and Stephenson would be rather proud of their school paper today for both have grown together and both have come out on top.

'Y' to Present Leader Of WSSF In Greece As Speaker Tomorrow

Director To Speak Concerning Drive

Mr. A. G. Elmendorff, Director of the World Student Service Fund in Athens, Greece, will speak to the student body at assembly tomorrow, Eloise Hodges, student chairman of the College WSSF drive announced today.

The Y. W. C. A. is presenting Mr. Elmendorff in connection with the drive which opened here Monday. He has worked for the past two years in Greece as director of the program in that country. He will present to the students of Longwood the need for this program as he has seen it abroad.

Mr. Elmendorff studied at St. Lawrence University, Canton, New York and Southwestern University, Los Angeles, Calif. Besides his work with WSSF, Mr. Elmendorff is assistant manager of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in Dallas, Texas. Mr. John C. Gleason, regional secretary of WSSF, said in his letter recommending Mr. Elmendorff for a speaker, "I think you will like his informal sort of approach and the sincerity of his appeal."

Need Great

"The students in war-torn countries look to us for the things they cannot possibly produce themselves," Eloise said in relation to the drive. "They need things like X-ray machines; medicines that do not exist in their own countries; books containing the knowledge from which they were cut off for so long; goods and vitamins to help them fight the war-borne diseases."

"It is important that everyone at Longwood contribute to the WSSF," Eloise added. "They still need you."

Editor Sets Deadline For '51 Virginian; Prices Announced

The deadline for subscriptions to the 1951 Virginian is November 15, Charlotte King Jones, editor-in-chief of the annual has announced. After that date no orders for the Longwood yearbook will be accepted.

The plain annual is priced at $7.00; plain with embossed name is $7.40. With a padded cover the Virginian is priced at $7.55 and with a padded cover with embossed name is $8.00.

Group pictures for the 1951 yearbook were taken yesterday.

Caskey, Steck Elected To Head Soph Production

January 12 Chosen As Tentative Date

Barbara Caskey from Richmond, and Joanne Steck of Fredericksburg, were chosen by the sophomore class to head their production at a meeting held last night in the small auditorium.

The probable date of Sophomore Production will be Friday night, January 12, 1951, it was revealed by the sophomores at this meeting when they chose their co-chairmen.

Barbara Caskey served as chairman of the sophomore Circus skit this year, and is experienced in working with Production from her service as chairman of the theme committee of Freshman Production.

She is a member of the Dramatic Club, where she serves as lighting chairman, vice-president of the Richmond Club, and sergeant-at-arms of the Perudigated Club.

Joanne Steck has served on both the Rotunda and the Colonnade staffs during the past year. She was a member of Freshman Commission, and is a sophomore representative on Student Standards. She has played on the class hockey team both years.

The sophs will begin to work immediately, the co-chairmen revealed, and committee chairmen will be chosen within the next few days.

Rabbi Postpones Visit To Campus

Dr. Ariel Goldberg, Rabbi of the Bethahaba Congregation in Richmond, who was scheduled to visit the campus November 9, will postpone his visit until December 7.

At this time, Dr. Goldberg will speak to the student body at assembly on the topic "What is Judism?" His visit here will be sponsored by the Chautauqua Society which serves to forward a system of Jewish religious education. Emphasis is laid on lectures on Jewish topics delivered at American universities

'Madwoman' To Be Given At Longwood Nov. 16, 17, 18

Tickets On Sale To Student Body Tonight In Hall

Tickets for the "Madwoman of Chaillot," the French play to be presentel by the Longwood Club and Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs, will be sold to the entire student body tonight at the table in the hall after dinner .The play will be presened November 16, 17, 18 in the small auditorium.

The tickets, which are priced at $1.00, 60, and .45, must bring a total of $75.00 by Saturday to pay a required royalty, according to Mr. Alec Finlayson director of the group. This royalty, which will be paid to the Dramatist's Play Service, is required of all acting groups five days before the production is to be given. Unless paid, the play cannot be held.

Towns people of Farmville and Hampden-Sydney may begin to purchase tickets at Patterson's drug store today Seat prices will be the same as for students.

Edith Kennon, head of staging, has announced that one set for the play has been completed and set up for use. The building of other pieces is moving along rapidly and will be completed in time for the final presentation, says Edith, although all help by members of the club is welcome.

"Madwoman of Chaillot" won the critics award while being played in New York last year. It has been released only recently to amateur groups for production. This play is being given in Chapel Hill, N C., at the same time as the Longwood presentation.

Pres. Lancaster Will Cap Seniors

The members of the graduating class of 1951 will don their robes and receive their caps tomorrow night at 7 p. m. in the Methodist Church. President Dabney S. Lancaster will cap the seniors.

The Rev. Mr. John Myers of the Methodist Church will give the invocation for the capping services.

The robed members of the senior class will be accompanied by their senior little sisters or brothers.

The faculty, administration, and all upperclassmen have been invited by the seniors to attend the ceremony.

The seniors with their little sisters and brothers will practice for the services tonight at 7 p. m. in the Methodist Church. Betsy Gravley, president of the class of 1951, reminded the seniors that it is important that each member of the class be present with their little sister or brother.

Student Government Plans Sock Hop Sat.

Students will be flocking shoeless to the Rec. Saturday night, as the Women's Student Government Association sponsors a "Stoo-roo Sock Hop."

Tickets for the dance, which will last from 9 to 12, will be 25 cents drag and 15 cents stag.

Helen stated that tentative plans have been made to have a small combo, of which Mr. Walter Kerfoot is director, to provide entertainment at the dance.

Madrigal Singers Chosen For Choir

Director Selects 'Ensemble Singers'

Nine upperclassmen have been selected to compose the Madrigals group for this year according to an announcement by Dr. John Molnar, head of the music department.

First sopranos will be Sarah McElroy and Mary C. Thomas; second sopranos Andrea Adams, Joyce Adams, and Jane Allen. Charlotte King Jones and Ann Moody will sing first alto and Bobby Pollard and Winston Johnston second alto.

The Madrigal Singers are a group chosen from the members of the College Choir. During the year they will sing both with the Choir and alone at the Choir concerts, on the Longwood Hour and at such special functions as the Christmas dinner and at th baccalaureate service.

Five underclassmen have been chosen as the nucleus of a group of "Ensemble Singers" Dr. Molnar also announced. Other underclassmen will be added to this group at a later date.

Present members of the Ensemble Singers are Nan Bland, Lura A. Beavers, Martha Dean Tomlinson, Mary Mac Gray, and Calista Ann Moore.

Executive Council Will Revise Gov't.

The Men's Student Government voted yesterday to have the Executive Council meet as a committee and draw up a draft of changes and revisions to the present Men's Government's Constitution. The draft will be up for approval at the next regularly scheduled Government meeting on November 21.

The main issues that they will consider at the present time are (1) Putting into law the present powers of the Executive Council; (2) To install permanent "Oath of Office" procedures; (3) Insertion of the recently accepted Honor Code and system; (4) Radification of the Honor Council which now is composed of members of the Executive Council. This latter radification is to be temporary, to exist only so long as the male enrollment is limited in quantity.

The Executive and Honor Council is composed of the officers of the Men's Student Government and the major Committee Heads which are appointed by the president and radified by the Government. They are: Jack Huegel, chairman, Harold Hutter, Madison McClintic, Leonard Shaw, Lester Smallwood, and Jimmy Thompson. At present there are six members of the Council. Ordinarily there are seven. One member, at the present time holds two major offices. This is not general procedure but the authority was granted on an emergency basis for term of this year only by the Men's Student Government.

Seniors Plan AnnualDance December 9

Jackie Moody, senior from Toano, was appointed chairman of Senior Dance at a recent meeting of the class. The dance will be held in the College gymnasium Saturday, December 9. Seniors only will wear white formals to the dance.

Ann Nock, graduate of 1950 class will return to lead the figure for the dance, with Betsy Gravely, president of the Senior class. Ann was chosen last year by the class of 1951 as honorary classman.

Committee chairmen for the dance have also been appointed. Mary Jane Stansbury will, as head of the music committee, direct the selection of an orchestra for the annual event. Jeanne Farmer will serve as head of the figure committee.

Leading the committee on decorations are Anne Biddlecomb, Jimmy Thompson and Shep Elmore, while Betty McRee will serve as head of the group for arranging for programs. Helen Agnew and Frances Everett are heading the floor and ticket committees respectively.

Library Celebrates American Education This Week, Nov. 5-11

The College Library will celebrate American Education Week November 5 to 11 with a display of pamphlets dealing with the 1950 theme, "Government of, by, and for the people."

One of seven subtopics of the main theme will be featured each day with a special exhibit of books dealing with that particular subject.

The seven topics into which the main theme has been subdivided are moral and spiritual values, responsibilities of the citizen, the meaning of the ballot, urgent school needs ,opportunity for all, home - school - community teamwork, and freedom's heritage.

A display of pamphlets dealing with American Education Week and its general theme will be in the Library the entire week.

Wimbish, Dovel Serve On Gov't.

Mary Denny Wilson, from Danville, was elected president of the freshman class at elections held Monday night. At this meeting also, Betty Islin, from Hilton Village, was chosen to serve her class as vice-president, and Blanton Ferguson, from Richmond, was elected treasurer of the class. Jeanne Hamilton, from Roanoke, was chosen to fill the post of secretary.

Student government representatives chosen from the freshman class at this time were Paula Dovel, of Cristobal, Canal Zone; and June Wimbish, of Rocky Mount. Mason Moore, of York, S. C., was elected by the freshmen to be House President of th first year dormitories. Nell Copley, of Blackstone, and Mary Evelyn Bennett, of Rocky Mount, were also chosen to represent their class on the student standards committee.

New President

Mary Denny, the newly elected president was president of the Student Government at George Washington High School in Danville. She was also a member of the National Honor Society, vice-president of the Y-teens, and a member of the annual staff. At Longwood, Mary Denny served as co-chairman of the freshman stunt in the recent Circus. She is also president of her dormitory hall.

Betty Islin, known as "Betty Boop" to Longwoodites, graduated from Warwick High School where she was secretary and president of the Student Government Association. In her high school days, Betty served as vice-president of the junior class, and as feature editor of the annual. She was also state secretary of the Student Government Association and a representative to Girl's State. Upon graduation, Betty received the D.A.R. award for citizenship.

Paula Dovel who will represent her class on the Student Council graduated from Cristobal High School, where she was a member of the band, orchestra and glee club. She was also a member of the Varsity Club and was a member of the all-star volley ball and soft ball teams for

Mass 'Madwoman' Rehearsal Minus Voice, Cast, Curtains

Where are the members of the cast? Where has Cleo's voice disappeared? What shall we do for a curtain? Please, everybody get quiet for a minute so we can get started!

Has everyone gone completely insane? No, it's just the first night of mass rehearsal for the "Madwoman of Chaillot." All this chaos can easily be explained. Only fourteen out of a cast of twenty-two showed up, and the stand-ins just didn't make it. Boys, you know you can't depend upon hitch-hiking as a sure way to get back on time.

Not only that, but the female lead can't talk—seems she lost her voice at a football game. That should be finding it's way home soon. No, that's not all. When the questions of a curtain came up, somebody said "we have three, don't worry." There were three, but oh the condition of them! The first one was only a half of one and it was made for a circular stage anyhow. The second was distinguished by a tear down the center, the third is really in one piece and presentable looking, but how shall we hold it up without any rings on top?

But wait, it's not all bad. There's the nine-foot-long feather boa that was needed and actually turned up to everyone's great surprise and joy. And the post-

Former Longwood Teacher Transforms College Estate

Creating an atmosphere is an unusual job.

But with a lovely, old home like Longwood House, and with the ideas and efforts of a kind and gracious woman like Miss Grace Moran, former Longwood teacher, an atmosphere is being created for Farmville citizens and Longwood students.

Launching a new career after 24 years of teaching, Miss Moran opened Longwood House for teas, parties, and social gatherings Sept. 12. Long one of the most scenic and beautiful old homes in Prince Edward County, Longwood House is quickly becoming the social center of Farmville.

"I've always had a desire to operate a home," Miss Moran said.

And Miss Moran's desire is coming true in the dignity of a home that was built sometime between 1811 and 1823 by Nathaniel E. Venable, son of Samuel Woodson Venable, of Springfield, who was a soldier of the Revoluntary War.

Longwood House was purchased by the State for Longwood College in 1920 for the price of $200,000. Until World War II, the college oporated a tea room in the house and used the surrounding area as a reception center. During the war the tea room was closed.

Miss Moran's tea room venture is the first attempt to reestablish the hospitality of Longwood House.

Longwood House is still owned, maintained, and furnished by the college. Miss Moran has rearranged the furniture and added some of her own.

When Miss Moran retired from the teaching profession after 22 years at Longwood College, she de-

Y' President Cites Need

We all complain about our long assignments, our tests, our term papers and think the dreadful things have been pushed upon us, but I believe that not one student is here because he was forced to be. We are all here because we wish to better ourselves. Many of us, and our families, are struggling so that we may have an education, but yet how fortunate we are. We have an undisturbed, well-equipped, Alma Mater. We shouldn't take this for granted. We should thank God that we have the wide opportunity that we have for education.

You were luckily born in a country that was not ravaged by war. We have no right to complain. Imagine your struggle if you were using one text book on shifts with 20 or 30 other students, and your turn came in the wee hours of the night. Or imagine our Longwood science laboratories with one microscope among all the students. Then we might have a complaint.

Many students with ambitions and ideals like our own are facing just such a situation, and worse, in countries where colleges and facilities have been destroyed by war. The only way to express our gratitude for our own opportunities is to help others who are struggling against greater obstacles than we can imagine. You can help, you should help, by giving all you possibly can to the World Student Service Fund. This is no sham, no pretense. All funds collected go directly to the aid of students the world over, to give them the education that they have as much right to as we.

By giving a little every night this week to the girl collecting on your hall, you can easily spare your dollar. But you're almost broke? How thankful are you? How deserving of your glorious heritage? Is one dollar too much to express your gratitude? Could one dollar compare with just how lucky you are? Count your blessings and think of others. Give to the World Student Service Fund; they need you.

Virginia Spencer

President of the Y. M. C. A.

What's Your Opinion?

Do you feel that Rat Day, as it exists now, is of prime importance to the Freshman's welfare? That's only one of the pertinent questions asked in a questionnaire submitted for the vote of the students in today's Rotunda. Rat Day is a student activity, originated and carried out by the student body of Longwood, and it is the duty of every one of us to consider these questions seriously.

Why? Because, in the minds of many, Rat Day has come to mean something different from what it was intended to mean. As it once existed, the annual day for orientating the new frosh was a day of fun for all; the control over freshmen by the sophomores was unlimited, but the sophomores didn't feel that they were required to take out vengence on their inferiors. Has it come to mean that now? Many believe so, and those many also believe that something should be done by the students to return Rat Day to its old standing.

When it comes to Rat Day's interfering with studies of students, everyone knows that it's not for just one day and not for just the "ratted". The night before Rat Day and for many days after, the frosh and sophomores are often too tired to bother with lessons. Having Rat Day on Saturday might eliminate much of this trouble. If ratting were held from noon on Saturday till dinner time that day with Little Rat Court on Saturday night, the freshman student wouldn't have to spend half the night before getting ready, and both classes could use Sunday as a day for rest.

Are the sophomores crying that the freshmen could escape the whole ceremony simply by leaving that week end? There are such things as closed week ends at Longwood, and if the students were willing to co-operate in some of the above-mentioned ways the faculty and administration might be talked into making the designated week end a closed one.

The last question, "Would you be in favor of having Rat Day abolished altogether and a friendly program of spirit-building activities substituted?", is going to bring many loud cries of "yes" and "no" and "what is a friendly program of spirit building activities?" That's for the student body of Longwood to decide. For many years now there has been long discussion after long discussion on Rat Day. Here's our chance to state, definitely, our feelings on the matter. Speak up, and take part in a question that's of great importance to us all.

As Time Changes

By BUNNY GIBSON

The Chinese Communists captured the spotlight in the past week's news as the world watched in suspense. Everyone felt uneasy as the Reds marched into fabulous Tibet. Few protests were audible. Indeed, her Asiatic neighbors are far too weak to challenge Mao's regime.

The invasion was moving too fast to permit diplomatic action on the part of the western world whose military forces were employed elsewhere. Therefore, we seemed reluctantly reconciled to the Chinese conquest of Tibet, formerly a part of China. Then our GI's and Leathernecks in Korea met face to face with the Chinese Reds. With reinforcements from China the North Koreans gave us a terrible scare.

Some people are voicing fear that a third world war is started. Everywhere the situation is grave, and diplomatic as well as military action will be required to restore peace with China. One thing is certain, the U. S. cannot afford to become involved in a long war with China.

The Puerto Rican incident was regrettable but showed us what a handful of fanatics, inspired by Moscow, can do to upset even our domestic peace. It brought home the challenge to educators and statesmen that our democracy constantly needs improving. These rebels were poorly instructed and embittered over what they considered injustice on the part of the U. S. government.

After the 1950 census count was tallied, the old dominion beamed proudly! enough population gain for another seat in Congress.

Stecking My Neck Out

by Joanne Steck

Well folks, looks like it's gonna be a long hard winter and from the feel of things winter's here already. When the wind comes a-whistling through that new building by Annex, I believe twould be convenient to have a little Armstrong heafer in each room.

Longwood girls have a regular reunion on the buses (the bus companies should pay us a commission) these week ends, what with everybody taking off somewhere at different times, but all trying to get back on the same one bus come Sunday night.

Heard one of the ladies last week end speak of how so many of the girls had young "suitors" up here all the time. Longwood ladies do get around these days it seems.

Well since green n' white and red n' white came out fairly even on the Circus deal, I guess the hockey games will attract all the energy and fight in us now. May the best team win!

If somebody wants to work their way through school, I've thought of a worthwhile easy way by which one can make a small fortune. All you have to do is buy a mop and dust rag and on the mornings you don't have an 8:05, go to the people's rooms who don't get up for breakfast and don't get to the 8:05 on time. Charge a small fee for giving the room a quick once over and I'll bet you could make your way through ten schools.

Guess you know by now, that it wasn't because everybody felt like spring last week that flowers were sprouting up all over the place, but in observance of National Flower Week.

This week is National Education week, and you can observe that any way you like. Me? I'm ready to let education go for a while and just sit back and repair my health.

Campus Cogitations

Question: "What's your idea of a typical Longwood girl?"

Lou Jamison: Anybody wise enough to come to Longwood must be typical.

Jimmy Thompson: Out of this world—so far out, they can't even be found.

Emma Harris: She's one with bags that have changed from suitcases to trunks to desks to rest her pupils on.

Betty Hoffman: Elizabeth! ! !

Dot Reed: I'll never tell.

Maragret Turner: "Quacky."

Nancy Walthall: One who finds cobwebs in her mail box dusted out daily by letters.

Ann Mallory: A girl with a different shade of hair every day.

Nan Bland: An all-around person that doesn't worry herself to death.

Bob Williams: Cute! Nice! Pretty!

Flora Ballowe: Who's typical?

Ginny Welch: A friendly, wholesome, appealing American girl.

Jerry Korbach: They never quack back.

Bobbie Brown: All the quacks eat quackers. (Quack Club members).

Marquerite Smith: One that leaves school every week end.

Jean Mercer: Easy to get along with and with a lot of friendly spirit.

Jack Huegel: Bandanas and sleepy eyes.

Bobby Roby: One who majors in men and minors in studies.

Jane Mallory: One who plays all day and gets late lights to study at night, but WONDERFUL.

Bill Carter: Friendly, vivacious and chic.

Charlotte Robertson: One with lots of Southern hospitality (and then there's us from the North).

Catherine Anderson: A darling personality.

Shirley Perkins: Always looking for men!

Fifi Carter: They are forever hungry.

Caroline Traynham: Friendly and schoolspirited—'Love' to stay here on week ends.

Pat Altwegg: They've got "it!"

Paula Dovel: Friendly, and love to have fun.

Visit To Farmville's Old Warehouse Reveals Much Of Longwood History

Not too far from the present site of Longwood College is an old warehouse where relics of our past are stored in all their forgotten splendor. Just to look at it from outside, you would never think that much of the history of L. C. from its Normal School days to now is stored in among the cobwebs and dust. The building which is of old brick, and which has become more or less decrepit throughout the years, was formerly a stable and was bought by the college for storage purposes. There is nothing in the basement at the present time, but in its younger days it served as an office for a livery stable, which as a matter of coincidence was one of the most flourishing enterprises in Farmville.

Some of the faculty members remember when library hall was just what its name implies, a library. At that time, there was a huge balcony around the top and books were stored up there, the banisters left when the balcony was torn down are now in repose, having served many years of usefulness.

One of the most interesting single objects found in this storage spot was an old pewter meat dish used when the school was first established. It's a huge old thing with a heavy round lid and was used to serve meat on the table. They had long tables in the dining hall then, too. Can't you see it now the proverbial turkey and plum pudding served, on that long table, with everyone looking at everyone else. Yum, yum, what a nice thought.

Old washstands used in those bygone days are part of the "curiosities" there, too. There are no pitcher and bowl sets, but the stands themselves are wrought iron and painted cream colored. Imagine again that you are a student here in the 1800's and think of getting up at 6:00 in the morning and breaking the ice in a pitcher of water to wash your face, and in a cold room, too.

An old filing cabinet that was used on the desk in the old registrar's office is also stored amid the dust and cobwebs, along with the wrought iron beds which match the washstands. There too are the beds and dressers and desks which were taken from Main this year, when the freshmen were lucky enough to get new furniture. If you're wondering what happens to this furniture when it has been stored there a couple of hundred years, well it's sold to one of the state hospitals or to a state penitentiary, or jail.

It's a fascinating place even if it is dirty, but most of all it holds real memos of our history. A history we can all be proud of, because of the many fine things which it holds.

Meet The Handsome Mr. Ebersole But Remember, Girls – He's Engaged

Say, do you remember one day weeks ago in assembly when all the girls were sitting on the edge of their seats and leaning over the balcony rail to listen to "the voice" coming from the front of the Methodist church? Know who it was? If not, may I introduce one of the College's new music instructors—Mr. Joel Ebersole.

Mr. Ebersole is a native of Springfield, Ohio, where he lived with a mother, father and sister. Although, he claims, his father couldn't carry a tune, it seems that his mother and sister were quite musical. In fact, his grandmother, who is now 85, still sings very well. It must have been a background such as this that influenced Mr. Ebersole to choose music as a career. After ten years of practicing violin lessons, he decided to be a singer. "That ambition still exists," says Mr. Ebersole, " but I must wait and see what the future brings."

If schooling and experience mean anything, our new instructor has qualifications knee deep. Only last June he graduated from the College of Music of the University of Cincinnati; top it off he spent part of his summer doing graduate work at the Indiana School of Music. Oh yes, Dr. Molnar, Mr. Ebersole told us confidentially that you were the first sane teacher he had run into during his studies. Speaking of education, doesn't it seem strange that our three male music instructors all attended schools of music in Cincinnati—must be a good place.

Now for experience. Mr. Ebersole spent his time in the post war service doing shows for soldiers in Japan, Korea, and surrounding areas. As an actor and singer, he traveled with his group giving shows under any conditions on stages that ranged from 10 by 15 foot platforms to the Ernie Pyle Theater stage, which is one of the largest of its kind.

To All Those Who Feel Concerned: Mr. Ebersole is happily engaged to a young lady whom he hopes to marry in the near future, if Uncle Sam doesn't decide to interfere.

Sportin' Around

by Lou Jamison

An exciting week end was spent last Friday and Saturday by the four members of our hockey team who played on the state team in the East Allied Hockey Tournament. The only goals that were scored during the one game in which our girls played were made by Nell Bradshaw, center forward, and Clara Borum, inner. I'd say everyone at Sweet Briar saw some fine hockey playing. The team on which our girls played won, and our girls deserve a big cheer for their top athletic skill and good sportsmanship. Congratulations girls—you really deserve them!

Tomorrow we're in for another treat. You remember how much all of us enjoyed the hockey game with Roanoke College. Well, our varsity hockey team is playing the Norfolk division of William and Mary right here on our own athletic field tomorrow. If you enjoyed our game with Roanoke, above all, don't miss this game.

Nancye Gillie, H2O Club President, told the H2O Club members last Friday night that practices for the forthcoming water pageant would begin next week. The theme for the pageant is based around Christmas and the winter season. So far, the club has planned an intricate snow flake formation, a parody on "Rudolph the Red Nosed Reindeer," a visit from Santa, and a host of other fascinating formations to thrill the spectators. The club feels that there are students who aren't members of H2O who would like to take part in the pageant, so we are opening it to any student wishing to participate. Remember, you don't have to be an excellent swimmer to take part. If you are interested, listen for an announcement concerning the practices and then come down to the pool at the scheduled time.

DEFENSIVE STICKMEN HOLD OPPONENTS SCORELESS

The hockey team this year is certainly satisfied with no secondary position in comparison with either past Longwood great elevens or other present State teams. Correspondingly, the impressive beginning that the team has made thus far in the season this year, gives it undisputed possession of the last word for the present time at least. At any rate, the team seems destined to rank in the upper bracket of State teams this year.

The offensive power of the 1950-51 stickmen broke loose in the Allied East Tournament. It clicked tallies six times against RPI and marked up three against the Norfolk Division of William and Mary. But the most impressive factor about the team's performance thus far is the strength of the holeless web that the defense has spun around the vital scoring stripes that Webb capably captains. In three games Longwood's goal has never been crossed. What better support could an offense ask of its partner guardsmen. With the defense maintaining such a solid wall and the offense opening its manifolds, the Longwood eleven is developing a momentum that has gained the respect of all State teams this year.

GILLIE SWEEPS INTO TENNIS FINALS; BORUM & WENDE CLASH

One of the most well participated fall singles tennis tournament is now drawing to a near successful close. The begining slate contained 24 players. Nancy Gillie, a top seeded veteran, has easily brushed through all of her opponents to gallop into the finals; she lost only a total of four games. The lower bracket contains much keener competition. In an interesting quarter-final match Elsie Wende, a freshman stand out, continued to plow herself successfully through the field as she turned down a stubborn Sue Webb 6-0, 6-3 to gain the semi-finals without dropping a set.

WENDE CARRIES RED & WHITE HOPES ALONE

Wende now faces Clara Borum ,an experienced sophomore. If she should happen to upset Borum she will then face an even slightly stronger Green & White in Gillie in the finals. However, Borum and Gillie have similar hard hitting games. Both have strong services and good vollies, but have an erratic ground game that when on is proficient, but when off its fatel; Borum bows slightly to Gillie here only. Wende's game is almost entirely defensive. She concentrates on consistency and accuracy with well stroked back hand, fore hand, and service drives. If the harder hitting games are on well placed, they should have little difficulty against an even perfectly placed weaker game. However, if the harder hitting games are off (as they sometimes are) then the consistent and well placed game usually wins out. Either Borum or Gillie can beat Wende this year if their games are on. If not Wende will out-place them both.

PIONEERS GET INTO INTENSE CAGE DRILLS

With the possible opening game only a matter of three weeks away, Coach Fraser is now preparing his team for its 16 game slate by putting them through intense court drills to cap early instructed fundamentals, and to better condition the team for its first game.

ORANGE, PEACE IMPROVE

In late practice sessions comforting performances have been coming from both Ned Orange, 6'5" center and Johnnie Peace 6'6" forward. Peace is displaying an extremely effective defensive postion as well as steady offense. Orange is passing, moving, and shooting with more speed and accuracy than he ever has.

SEASONAL TICKETS GO ON SALE

The Pioneer seasonal tickets go on sale tonight for all home basketball games. Sales will be made until the opening game. The Pioneers feel that they really have a basketball team this year. Won't YOU support them? In doing so they confidently promise you some exciting games this year.

Gillie Wins Semi-Finals Over Boswick

Green n' White scored the wins this week in the third round of the tennis tournament which ended October 30.

Nancye Gillie took a 6-0; 6-1 win over Nancy Walker. In the same round, Dot Boswick defeated Dolly Vaughan in three sets 6-0; 6-8; 9-7. Clara Borum won over Louise Minor by a score of 6-2; 6-3, and Sue Webb went down in defeat to Elsie Wente by a score of 6-0; 6-2.

In the semi-finals which are under way at present, Nancye Gillie took a 6-0; 6-2 win over Dot Boswick, Clara Borum will play Elsie Wente during this week. The winner of that match will meet Nancye Gillie in the final round of the tournament to determine the fall singles tennis champion.

Home Economics Club To Sell Fruit Cakes Plum Puddings Here

The Home Economics Club will sponsor a sale of fruit cakes and plum puddings this fall, according to Jane Seward, president of the group.

Orders for the cakes may be given to any member of the Club. Jane stated, however, that all orders must be placed before Thanksgiving.

At the regular meeting of the Club held Monday night in the Y' Lounge, Evelyn Farrier presented a report about her trip to Huntington, Pa., where she attended the Province Workshop Convention for Home Economics students.

LC Staff Members Visit High Schools

Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dean of Women, and Miss Virginia Wall will tour several Virginia high schools next week to interview prospective students for the College.

Miss Gleaves and Miss Wall will be at Granby High School in Norfolk on November 16 to take part in the observance of "College Day." During their trip they will also visit Waverly, Franklin, Hampton, Mathew Waverly in Williamsburg, Ivor, Windsor, Courtland and Holland.

Carrsville, Waverlyville, Oceana, Newport News and Toano will also be visited on the week long trip.

Methodist Conference Set; BSU to Have Future Rally

College Students Will Attend Meet

"To Serve The King of Kings," will be the theme of the Methodist Conference to be held at Natural Bridge Nov. 11 and 12. Mr. A. G. Elmendorff and his wife will speak to the meeting concerning their experiences in Eastern Europe. Ethel and Archer Turner will also tell the group of their escape from Korea.

Attending the conference from Longwood will be Elsie Hawley, Jo Zitta, Sally Smith, Bobbie Roby, Pat Taylor, Allene Harris, Ellen Porter, Winnie Murdock and Andrea Adams.

Others who will also be present at the conference are Nellie Culpepper, Billy Tomlinson, Ann Webber, Shirley Adkinson, Ann Lawrence, Max Acree and Marion Hallock, who is director of the Farmville Methodist Student Program.

The BSU is holding a rally from Monday through Thursday of this week. The first meeting will be held Monday night at the Student Center. The meeting will be followed by a supper for which students are urged to sign up by Sunday.

The BSU is also sponsoring Howdy Doody week in connection with the rally. During this week all BSU council members must learn the names of all freshmen. The penalty for not knowing one of the freshman is one penny.

Miss Reese Watkins, a foreign missionary to Nigeria will speak to the Baptist YWA meeting this Thursday night at 7 p. m.

cided to make her secret desire about a home come true. "I'm trying to create an atmosphere at Longwood House," Miss Moran said. "A wholesome, homelike place to entertain guests."

Miss Moran graduated from the George Peabody School in Nashville, Tenn., with a major in geography. Before coming to Longwood, she taught and supervised schools in Prince William County, her native locality.

When Miss Moran greets her former students or any guests at the door, they enter a home with a wholesome, friendly, and warm atmosphere because a retired school teacher didn't retire.

This creating an atmosphere is an unusual job—and a difficult one. But Miss Grace Moran need not worry. She has accomplished her desire.

19 LC Seniors Chosen To Represent College In '50-'51 Who's Who

Pres. Lancaster To Present Awards

Nine senior students have been named by a faculty-administration committee to represent Longwood College in the seventeenth edition of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges for the current college year.

Local students recognized this year in the collegiate directory are Helen Agnew of Burkeville; Betsy Gravely of Martinsville; Charlotte King Jones, of Salem; Ann Lynch of Tazewell; Romine Mahood of Emporia; Mary Leigh Meredith of Front Royal; Lucille "Bobbie" Pollard of Richmond; Jean Smith of Pearisburg; and Virginia Spencer of Scottsville.

Helen Agnew, who is an English major, fills the post this year of president of the Women's Student Government Association. Serving as secretary of that organization last year, she was also secretary of her class during her freshman and sophomore years, and secretary of the Spanish club last year. Helen is a member of the H2O club, and Pi Delta Epsilon, journalism fraternity. She was a member of the annual staff for two years, serving as managing editor last year. She is also a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary leadership fraternity. Doerc Eh Thorn, literary society, the Cotillion club and Alpha Sigma Alpha social sorority.

Senior President

Betsy Gravely, president of the senior class, has served as president of her class since her sophomore year, and as vice-president of the class during her freshman year. She is a membe. of Alpha Kappa Gamma, the Monogram Club and H2O club. Betsy is also serving at present on the Athletic Association Council as tennis manager. She is a member of the Cotillion Club and Pi Kappa Sigma social sorority.

Charlotte King Jones, an English major, serves this year as editor-in-chief of the 1951 Virginian, the College annual. Serving as assistant editor of the yearbook last year, she is also a member of the College Choir and Madrigal group. Charlotte holds membership in Pi Delta Epsilon, Alpha Kappa Gamma, the Cotillion Club and Sigma Sigma Sigma social sorority.

Anne Lynch, a physical education major, is president of the Athletic Association. Last year, she filled the post of secretary for this organization. She is a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, the Monogram club and the Cranddaughter's club and served as sports editor for the Rotunda last year. Anne is now a member of the Cotillion club and Pi Kappa Sigma social sorority.

Goal Not Yet Met In WSSF Drive; Deadline Extended

Hodges Stresses Importance of Cause

The annual World Student Service Fund drive has been extended to the end of this week in an effort to meet the $500 goal set for the campaign, Virginia Spencer, president of the YWCA which is sponsoring the drive, announced recently.

"Not even half our goal has been reached," Ginny stated, as she urged the heads of all organizations and the faculty members as well as the individual students to contribute to this cause.

"Remember that this fund is for the aid of faculty as well as student," Ginny pointed out.

Collections will continue to be made each night this week in the dormitories and a box for contributions has been located in the main hall of Ruffner across from Dean Savage's office.

'49 Goal Reached

Last year well over $500 was raised by Longwood students in this drive. For many years Longwood has been outstanding in the state for its contributions and participation in the WSSF drive.

Eloise Hodges, director of the drive on the Longwood campus, in stressing the importance of this cause, said, "The World Student Service Fund winds together the world student community in a crusade against poverty, disease, ignorance, and despair. The war has caused delay in the education of many students. They want an education, and many of them are enduring great hardships to get it. It is so easy for us to help them by our small contributions, which none of us would miss for long.

"This is an inter-related world. Their future is our future. Every bit of education we help them to get is securing our own future as well as theirs."

Seniors Select Ambassadors From Duke For Dance

Moody Announces Holiday Theme For Annual Ball

The Duke Ambassadors will provide the musical background for the annual Senior Dance to be presented in the College gymnasium December 9 from 8 to 12 p. m., according to an announcement by Mary Jane Stansbury, chairman of the music committee for the dance.

"The Night Before Christmas" has been chosen as the theme of the first formal dance of the year according to Jackie Moody, general chairman of the dance.

The theme will be carried out in the decorations and in the pre-intermission figure by the seniors and their dates.

Tickets for the dance will be placed on sale after the Thanksgiving holidays. Tickets for the dance will be priced at $2.50 for a date ticket and $1.80 for a stag ticket.

17 Man Band

Fifteen musicians and two vocalists under the direction of Roddy Shull comprise the Duke Ambassadors from the school that gave the world Les Brown and Johnny Long.

The Duke Ambassadors is one of the two college bands in the nation listed in Who Is Who in Music (fifth edition), the other being the Yale orchestra. They play all special arrangements which are designed exclusively for this band by the top arrangers in the dance field. According to Mary Jane this plus the high quality of musicianship blends to make music played by the Ambassadors exceptionally listenable as well as danceable.

The Ambassadors have had several engagements at Hampden-Sydney but this will be their first performance at Longwood.

No Rotunda

There will be no Rotunda published next Wednesday due to the Thanksgiving holidays. The next paper will be issued Wednesday, December 6.

Lively, Gala 'Stoo-Goo Hop' Enjoyed By Shoeless LC'ers

By JEAN JINNETT

Enjoy a good time? Then you should have attended the gala affair held Sat. nite in the College Rec.! Yes sir, boys, things were really movin' fast at the Sock-Hop. It seems half of Longwood and Hampden-Sydney was there dancing to the jivey music of the L.C. Combo. The highlight of the wonderful nite was the entertainment provided during intermission and throughout the evening. Seems we were really fortunate in listening in on one of the daily broadcasts of Locomotive Luke and his Six Musical Mountaineers. I heard yesterday that Miss Foster, Miss Bugg, and Dr Moss were indeed surprised to learn that "Good Ole Mountain Dew" had been dedicated to them by this group of musicians. Blackfaced Sis Burton put Sugar Chile Robinson to shame with a version of "Eight Numbers Boogie" that started everyone jitterbugging like nothin' you ever saw before.

Sure was glad to see (for the first time) more boys than girls. That do make it nice. Thought Randolph-Macon was gonna take the place over. Don't get me wrong now, I'm not complaining, merely marvelling that this is probably the first real boy-break dance in Longwood history.

Even the faculty was there in full swing. The debonaire Dr. Moss and handsome Bobby Brumfield twirled thru every dance with a different pretty girl and still left a waiting list of many disappointed females. Better luck next time!

Many congrats to government from all the students for planning a dance that was really tops. Now that it is all over (we regret) our only complaint is how in heck will we ever get those well-worn socks clean!?

Local Organist To Give Recital In Thurs. Assembly

Varied Selections Comprise Program

Mrs. Marion Herrington, organist of the Farmville Methodist Church, will give an organ recital in assembly tomorrow at 1 p. m., in the Methodist Church.

The program will open with "Prologue de Jesu," a seventeenth century traditional air, by Clakey. Following this will be four of Bach's compositions: a movement from the Third Sonata, "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring," "Prelude and Fugue in G," and "Cathedral Prelude and Fugue."

Also included in the program will be "Piece Heroique" by Franck, Tschiakowsky's Theme from Symphony Five, "Finlandia" by Sibelius, and "Grandmother, Knitting," an American folk song, by Clakey. "Now Thank We Our God," by Karg-Elert, will conclude Mrs. Herrington's recital.

Mrs. Herrington earned her Master of Sacred Music degree at the Union Theological Seminary in New York, where she studied under Dr. Clarence Dickenson.

Va. Schools To Be Toured

Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dean of Women, and Miss Virginia Wall will tour several Virginia high schools this week to interview prospective students for the College.

Miss Gleaves and Miss Wall will be at Granby High School in Norfolk on November 16 to take part in the observance of "College Day." During their trip they will also visit Waverly, Franklin, Hampton, Mathew Waverly in Williamsburg, Ivor, Windsor, Courtland and Holland.

Carrsville, Waverlyville, Oceanna, Newport News and Toana will also be visited on the week long trip.

During their visits to high schools in the tidewater region of Virginia this week, Dean Ruth Gleaves and Miss Virginia Wall, assistant registrar, will be entertained by the alumnae groups of Franklin, Norfolk, and Portsmouth.

House Council Bands Use Of Coke Machine

Students are requested not to use the Coke Machine at the entrance to Annex on second floor Ruffner Hall from 8 to 10 on week nights, according to an announcement by Bobbie Pollard, House Council president.

Bobbie also stated that campus cards will be issued only on Tuesdays and Thursdays in the future, rather than any day in the week as has been the past practice.

She also reminded students that visiting during study hour should be eliminated. Failure to uphold the House Council regulations may result in a "call down" for the violator.

College Choir H-S Glee Club Plan Concert

The Longwood College Choir and the Hampden-Sydney Glee Club, under the direction of Dr. John M. Molnar, will present a joint concert at the Robert E. Lee Junior High School in Lynchburg on December 2, at 8 p. m.

Sponsored by the Longwood and Hampden-Sydney Alumni Associations of Lynchburg, the two choral groups will each present several selections, and will join in offering several mixed chorus numbers.

The Longwood Madrigal Singers will present two numbers at the concert, accompanied by Billie Dunlap, who will also accompany the entire choral group.

A reception and dance for the Choir and Glee Club is being planned by the Alumni Associations following the concert.

The annual Christmas concert is to be presented by the Longwood and Hampden-Sydney choral groups at Longwood on Sunday night, December 10, and at Hampden-Sydney on December 11.

The concert here will be held in the dining hall. Two pianos and an organ will furnish accompaniment. The Hampden-Sydney concert will be held in the chapel there, with both piano and organ accompaniment.

Mr. Lane, Mr. Sardo To Be Interviewed Over Longwood Hour

Mr. Charles Lane and Mr. Sardo will be featured on the Longwood Hour at the WFLO studio tomorrow afternoon. Mr. Lane is a new member of the Longwood faculty and geography department, and Mr. Sardo is a seventh grade teacher at the training school.

They will answer questions asked them by Ed Parks on such aspects of geography as surface, features, climates, agriculture, and industry.

Mr. Lane will discuss the location and description of different physical regions in Virginia. He will explain how the regions are formed and how they differ. A description of the climate of Virginia, including the average temperature in the different sections and the average rainfall will also be stressed.

Mr. Sardo will give the important crops of Virginia and explain why these crops are growing within the physical regions. He will also discuss what advantages industries have in Virginia.

Mr. Lane and Mr. Sardo are trying to show that there is a direct relation in any region between the agriculture, industry, and human response with that of the climate and surface features.

The Longwood Hour, Longwood's own student planned radio program, is presented each Thursday afternoon by WFLO. Different organizations, individual students and faculty members participate. This geographical discussion, however, will be the first of its kind to be presented.

Tickets For Play Now Being Sold

"The Madwoman of Chaillot," a French comedy written by Jean Giraudoux, will be presented tomorrow night, Friday and Saturday nights in the small auditorium at 8 p. m. Tickets for the play are now being sold for $1.00, $.60, and $.45.

The play was released a year and a half ago for Broadway production, but only in September of this year was it released for amateur productions. The presentation being given here is one of the first. The cast consists of students from Longwood and Hampden-Sydney.

"The Madwoman of Chaillot" is a poetic comedy taking place in the present day. The madwoman as portrayed by Cleo Holladay is a woman whose lover jilted her when she was young and lovely. She exists in the present day, but she lives in the past, dressed as she was in her days of courting. Her mannerisms mark her as being insane, but her ability to solve the complex problems of today, remarkable. This play, though filled with dry wit and humor, was written to show the complex simplicity of today's world.

Mr. Alec Finlayson, director of the play, has been working with all departments of the Dramatic Club, instructing and aiding them. He urges all students to buy their tickets to the play as soon as possible.

"The Madwoman of Chaillot" is the first play to be given by the Longwood Dramatic Club since the burning of White House dormitory and auditorium. The loss of nearly all costumes belonging to the club, make-up materials, and a place to present the performances plus the resignation of Miss Leola Wheeler caused the College's acting group to remain inactive for a year.

Mr. Finlayson has expressed the hope that the Dramatic Club will soar to new heights as they gradually acquire new costumes, make-up, and a new practice room as well as a stage in the Jarman Music-Auditorium building to be completed in the near future. "This play," he stated, "is only the beginning of what we hope will be a successful year for our group."

Spencer Announces "Gift Basket" Plans

A new plan has been formulated this year to urge students to contribute to the YWCA sponsored Thanksgiving "gift baskets," Patty Walker, chairman of the Y Service committee has announced.

Tomorrow, baskets will be placed at the main entrance to the dining hall. Students are asked to fill these baskets with canned goods and unperishable food. At Thanksgiving, the baskets will be presented to needy families in the Farmville area.

Estimates Due

All professors must turn in mid semester grade estimates by noon on Saturday, November 18, according to Miss Virgilia Bugg, College Registrar.

Let's Give 'Once'

Familiar cries of "It's too close to the end of the month" or "I just can't work it into the budget this week" have been echoing in the Longwood halls this past week in answer to the plea for funds for the WSSF drive. According to the sponsors of the drive, not half of the $500 goal has been reached so far, but surely everyone at Longwood realizes the desperate need of their fellow students in the war-torn countries abroad. What then is the answer to the general laxness toward the campaign?

As students, we feel that there is too often truth in these financial excuses. The majority of the students here are on pretty slim budgets, and as the year wears on, it gets increasingly difficult to find an extra dollar every few weeks for one drive after another. But we can't go through the year contributing so negligently to every drive. Many of the campaigns such as the present one depend largely on student donations for support. We can't be the ones to let them down.

At the beginning of the year, the majority of students are granted lump sums from their parents to cover book costs, school supplies and other set expenses. Why wouldn't it be easier to include donations among these set amounts than draining it from the student's allowance? A campus chest would serve such a purpose.

By setting a concrete sum for each student, and perhaps each faculty member as well, one drive at the beginning of the year could amply take care of the many fund raising campaigns that come up during the year. By a group meeting of the heads of all organizations, which would represent the entire student body, such an organization could be easily brought into existence.

Can you afford a monthly drain on that sparse allowance? Would it be less of a strain to get a set sum from your parents or your own funds at the beginning of the year? Your answers will either reject or bring into being a Campus Chest.

Questions Without Answers

Last week the Rotunda printed a questionnaire concerning Rat Day — at press time 32 responses to the questionnaire had been received. From a student body of over 500 students 32 responses can be interpreted to mean only that the vast majority of the student body have little opinion on the subject of Rat Day pro or con.

For the sake of the record the answers to the five highly controversial questions have been tabulated although they can bear little weight in any argument.

The 32 answering students were evenly divided in their feelings as to whether Rat Day, as it exisits now, is of prime importance to the freshman's welfare. Twenty-seven students felt that the upperclassmen should not be given unlimited control over the freshmen on Rat day while only five felt they should.

Twenty-one students voted in favor of improving the Rat Day activities so that they do not interfere with studies and ten took the negative side of this question.

Of the 32 students responding, only ten were in favor of having Rat Day on Saturday and 21 voted against this suggestion. Twelve students were in favor of having Rat Day abolished altogether and a friendly program of spirit-building activities substituted and twenty voted against such an idea.

This week the Rotunda is reprinting the questionnaire in the hopes of securing a better picture of student opinion. Clip out the questionnaire, answer the questions and turn it in NOW — we want your opinion on this subject — it may be of greater importance than you think.

Stay Alive

Who doesn't want to get home for Thanksgiving holidays? Students of Longwood and every other college and university who don't want to are few and far between. Yet there is a chance that some of us may not get there.

The thought isn't a pleasing one, and in reality there are few who bother to stop and take notice of the fact that approximately one-fourth of the drivers involved in traffic accidents are between 18 and 24 years of age. That's us — College students. Most of the students at Longwood are in this age group and if we want to be alive to give thanks on the day especially set aside for it, then SAFE-DRIVING is the watch word. It is up to the student who sits in the driver's seat or in the seat next to the driver to do his part in preventing needless accidents.

There are always traffic rules to obey, rules set up to insure the safety of every motorist on the highway. Strict adherence to these rules is the only positive way of assuring yourself and every other person a safe way home through the unusually dense traffic that comes with holidays. Jumping lights, cutting in and out of traffic, speeding, and disobeying rules of good driving are ways of gambling millions of minutes of fun with family and friends against the odds of saving one minute to get to that fun.

As Time Changes

By BUNNY GIBSON

The heat of the battle is over. But the reconstruction of the two armies and a settlement of the differences is yet to come. Even though the Democrats held a bare majority in Congress the Republicans were proud of their showing — and justly so. The election of Senator Taft and other midwestern Republicans who strongly opposed the Branhon plan and other Fair Deal acts which have been branded as having sociolistic tendencies shows the conservative trend in American thinking.

However no great changes in domestic policies are likely to be made by the 82nd Congress since a coalition of Republicans and southern Democrats have been a conservative check in the past.

On the other hand, our State Department may be in for an overhauling. Some Republicans — and Democrats — are demanding a review of our present and future commitments. They ask that the State Department recognize our limitations in military power and resources and concentrate our efforts accordingly. Certainly this would be wise. It is hardly possible to give aid and complete attention to all the nations who are asking for our help. Korea, Formosa, Indo-China, Tibet, and other Asiatic countries, as well as Europe, are all important in our quest for peace. However we must consider a policy that considers all as a unit and pursue the course that furthers the cause of freedom.

Here our newly elected conservatives enter the picture. And we hope they do not prevail — records prove there are still degrees of isolationists in our midst — when today we could reach even Moscow and never touch ground.

Letters To Editor

(Editors' Note: The following are letters or exerpts from letters recently received by Miss Emily Barksdale from former Longwood students now in Puerto Rico. It is evident that the writers are concerned about the Longwood students knowing the true situation in Puerto Rico and how they and the majority of the Puerto Rican people feel about the recent uprising. The editors feel that these letters are of interest to the Rotunda readers).

Mayaguez, Puerto Rico
November 4, 1950

Dear Miss Barksdale,

Perhaps you know of the insurrection that has occurred on the island these last few days and also of the most humiliating act, the attack against the President. Now everything is quiet not withstanding that the events have affected us a little. A group of Nationalists (fanatics who wish to gain the independence of Puerto Rico by force) have risen against the democratically established government and have committed acts that the Puerto Rican people (the immense majority) condemn and repudiate. The attack on the life of Governor Muntz Marin and the President have distressed us all and at the same time filled us with shame. Never has our country enjoyed such liberty as now and it has progressed economically and socially. Thank God, here in Mayaguez the Nationalists surrendered in mass, preventing bloodshed. If any were killed, they owe it more to accidents and ignorance.

Of myself I will say that I work in the afternoons at Farragut School where Olga's mother is principal. I teach Spanish and social sciences to four eighth grade groups. I have much work for I also teach two nights a week. Dalila works in the same school in the mornings.

Well, please write me when you have a little time. If you write in English, I will get a little practice in that language, don't you agree? My greeting to Miss Draper, to the girls, and to the teachers, especially to Miss Moran.

Affectionately,
Patria Perez

Jayuya, Puerto Rico
November 6, 1950

My dear Miss Barksdale,

I ask a thousand pardons for not having written before, and I hope this finds you happy, as well as my other friends at old S. T. C.

During these past days, you've already heard Puerto Rico has passed through a period of anxiety, suffering, and disturbance of the public peace. Most of us are filled with indignation and shame about the attempt against President Truman by two crazy fanatics who, to our disgrace and dishonor, are Puerto Ricans. The great majority of our people continues to be the same as you know them; a peaceful, law-abiding people who admire and esteem the American nation and your president as well as the principles which they uphold.

A small nucleus of nationalists and communists want to impose their principles, which they try to call "liberty," using all the anti-democratic methods available, such as terror, hi-jacking, etc. Those of us who really desire liberty feel honored to form a part of the United States, and we would also be honored to secure independence through dignified means by honorable and intelligent citizens. Because of this we deplore the events of this week, not so much for the losses we have suffered (which are of possessions as well as of lives) but for what it represents as a whole and for the opinion which our friends from America could form from it. In spite of the fact that we are ashamed to be compatriots of these bandits, we are happy that Mr. Truman came out unharmed.

I hope that you understand the situation as it is, and I will be grateful if you will explain it thus to everyone who talks to you about what has happened this week in Puerto Rico.

I am writing to Edna and I

Campus Cogitations

Question: "What has been your most interesting experience since you started your student teaching?"

Shirley Bloxton: Teaching itself.

June Divers: Sitting in Mr. Gordon's current events class.

Rena Hayes: Bombardment with apple cores.

Edith Duma: Having some of my dear children throw firecrackers at me.

Lillie Lankford: Eating in the lunch room with the children.

Mary Palmer: Being called Miss Palmer by a group of fifth-graders.

Joyce Mattox: Going over to teach only to find out that assembly was being held and missing the train.

Helen Smith: Finding out that this is "National Cat-Nip Week" instead of "National Cat Week."

Polly Powers: Learning Virginia history while teaching it to my fifth graders.

Georgia Bailey: Getting the pupils' reactions to my way of teaching.

Iris Sutphin: Getting out of class at 9:55 and trying to be at the high school by 10.

Anne Kemp: The horror of finding out how much I don't know.

Patty Walker: Having to teach the first day.

Hop Critzer: Seeing a child learn to read.

Jill Pfer: When one of my students told me I was the meanest teacher he'd ever had.

Evelyn Farrier: I've had so many of them that I couldn't begin to tell you.

Fran Harper: When I walked in and found five people were there to observe me.

Kathryn Terry: When one of my students asked me to go to the dance with him.

Donna Staples: I have had so many that I just cannot narrow it down to one incident.

Dennise Calvo: The time when I was teaching modern dance and 32 out of 38 girls refused to take it.

Betty Johnson: Visiting the home of one of my pupils.

Peggy Bryant: Seeing their vocabulary being built from nothing.

Martha Atkinson: When one of my boys winked at me the first day I taught.

Dot Dunford: They've all been very interesting.

Margaret Robertson: Getting married!

Martha Kitchen: Finding and observing the different mentality levels among students.

Anne Biddlecomb: Getting all the treats after Hallowe'en.

June Foreman: Just living through Hallowe'en.

Billie Barber: The time all but two students had to be X-rayed and they told me jokes.

Claudia Bradshaw: Overhearing some of the children's remarks.

Stecking My Neck Out

by Joanne Steck

Seems like Thanksgiving must be many moons away if you go by the mucho number of tests we've been having. I always thought one test in each subject would be sufficient for the first semester anyway. Seems not.

And then there's days that I shoulda had classes all day long. Those days go something like this: First thing in the morning there's the Tea Room which you support about four mornings a week; then there's that little period before lunch when you just gotta have a snack. So it is off to the Snack Bar. Then comes lunch and after a couple of classes you just have to have an afternoon push of energy—so it's to the College Shop by all means. So you diddle around 'till supper and you're so full you can't do that meal justice. But by ten you're simply starving and you gotta eat again—oh well, can't be rich, cute and well-fed too.

Perhaps it would be better if everybody was to open their own delicatessen right in their room—then there would just have to be a pool parlor—then a floor show—now you're making so much money you don't have to go to school—say! that's an idea!

From the looks of things (or rather the sound), all must be fair in war but not in love. Sometimes I think we should revert to the cave-man days when a big, brawny hunk of man dragged the lady? of his choice off to his den by her locks to live happily ever after. Things would be much simpler.

Congratulations to the freshmen officers. You've got a big job ahead of you, but I'm sure you can do it, if you look to your elders in most respects.

Now folks, this is National Pocketbook Week. Want to see everybody opening their purses (loaded, of course).

LC Defeats Norfolk

Longwood took a fast and furious victory over the Norfolk Division of William and Mary last Thursday, in a hockey game that resulted in a 3-2 score.

This adds another to the growing list of the '50 varsity hockey achievements. So far this year, the squad has come off the victor in every contest.

Alumnae News

Miss Helen Costan of Lynchburg, national president of the Longwood College Alumnae Association, and Mrs. Thomas Starke of Richmond, a former Alumnae Association president, will visit Longwood Saturday for a conference with Mrs. Coyner and President Dabney S. Lancaster.

The Lynchburg alumnae will hold a reception for Longwood alumnae and prospective students December 2 after the Christmas concert to be presented in Lynchburg by the Longwood College choir and the Hampden-Sydney glee club.

RANDOLPH-MACON GAINS M-D TITLE — THUMP HSC 21-13

All is joyful at Randolph-Macon College in Ashland these days. The Yellow Jackets started the season with two stinging defeats at the hands of larger classed schools, Richmond and Florida State, but came roaring back with a thundering momentum that ran up five straight wins including a 13-0 upset over Washington College who had been previously unbeaten. The result is the second Mason Dixon Conference Title for the Jackets within two years. Also it hoisted Randolph-Macon to the top of the Little Six but they are expected to come down next week when they face the mighty gridiron machine from down Emory and Henry way.

A victory by either Randolph-Macon or Hampden-Sydney in their traditional Little Six "game of the year" is in itself a comforting factor that to the winner brightens the year's scoring results regardless. In Saturday's game with the Tigers, the Jackets, although not matching the Hampden-Sydney ground game, found ample holes in the pass defense and ran through a host of completions to rack up a 14-0 half time score. Ted Keller, RMC's brilliant quarter back was all over the field and proved to personally destroy all Tiger hopes by passing for 2 touchdowns and running back a 4th quarter kick 95 yards to score the back breaking clincher.

EMORY & HENRY ROMPS ON — MILLER BREAKS STATE SCORING RECORD

Emory and Henry continued to plow over the majority of its opponents last Saturday as they piled up a 41-0 win over Western Carolina. The Wasps have lost but one game since 1948 and that by a one-point upset this season. Emory and Henry will again this year be host in the Burley Bowl game in Johnson City, Tenn.

Bob Miller, the Wasp Express, scored 3 times in the Western Carolina rout to boost his scoring record to 114 points so far this season. The feat broke the record of 102 points set by Miller himself last year.

VIRGINIA DOWNS WILLIAM & MARY IN RESUMED CLASSIC

Johnny Papit got back into last year's form in the state's biggest game of all time. He lead Virginia to a 13-0 triumph. The game was attended by 32,500 people—the greatest number to ever see a football game in the state of Virginia. William and Mary's line played outstandingly — it held off three heavy thrusts of the strong Virginia line and forced them to go great yardage to gain only two touchdowns. It was strictly a defensive battle for the Indians, though they did threaten. But the statistics were all Virginia. It was the first meeting since 1940 for the two teams.

VMI DOES IT AGAIN — UPSETS GA. TECH 14-13

The erratic VMI erased all doubts that within their military fences there exists plenty of top notch football. Last Saturday the Keydets trimmed Georgia Tech 14-13.

Sportin' Around

by Lou Jamison

Wow! What a game! That's the comment about last Thursday's hockey game with the Norfolk Division of William and Mary. In truth it was the fastest game ever seen on the home field by most of us. When Rachel Peters, right wing, got the ball, there just wasn't any stopping her. She dribbled the ball down the field passing the Division's defensive players each time they tackled—or tried to tackle I should say. One of our three goals was scored by Clara Borum, left inner, who was really playing a terrific game. During the second half of the game Clara was forced to leave the field because of an ankle injury. This put a damper on our high spirits, but didn't stop us by any means. Nell Bradshaw, center forward, went on to score two more goals before the game was over, leaving the Division defeated by a score of 3-2.

The Green and Whites are really happy this week. In the semi-final round of the fall singles tennis tournament, the Green and Whites were victorious. The last Red and White left in the tournament was Elsie Wente, freshman, who was defeated 6-0; 6-0 by sophomore Clara Borum. The final match between Nancye Gillie and Clara Borum is yet to be played. Maybe there will be a green ribbon along with that white one on the color cup this year. What do you say?

This week is filled with the thrills of class hockey games and color rush. Say, what color is that banner hanging on your building? If it isn't your class's colors, maybe your lack of participation had something to do with it. I know this doesn't apply to everyone by any means, but if the shoe fits, wear it.

Final Match Winner To Be Fall Champion

Green and White has finally done it! In the semi-finals of the tennis tournament Clara Borum, sophomore Green and and White, defeated Elsie Wente, the last Red and White left in the tournament by a score of 6-0; 6-0. The final match which still must be played is between Nancye Gillie and Clara Borum, both of whom are Green and Whites. This match will determine the fall singles champion, but the points toward the color cup have already been determined. Due to an ankle injury received by Clara in a recent hockey game, the final match will probably be postponed for quite a while.

Last year the Green and Whites went down in the fall singles to Clem Allen, star Red and White tennis player. The final match was between Nancye Gillie and Clem. Apparently no Red and White has risen to take Clem's place, but instead two Green and Whites have shown terrific ability and stamina. There's no doubt now that the Green and Whites are really fighting for the color cup.

Carter Elected Mgr. Of Basketball Team For 1950-51 Session

Bill Carter was unanimously elected manager of the Men's basketball team for the coming year 1950-51 recently. He succeeds Buddy Gentry who was manager of Men's Athletics last year. Carter automatically heads the committee that is responsible for scheduling the games for the basketball team. Serving with him on this committee are Harold Hutter, and Jimmy Thompson. Besides these additional official capacities, the manager also is held responsible for the routine functions of a team manager.

Carter graduated from Crewe High School in Crewe in 1944. He played varsity baseball for 4 years. He also belonged to the Hi-Y club. Carter has attended VPI and night and summer courses at Longwood College. He has served in the United States Navy.

Martinsville LC Alumnae Plan Fete

Tonight the Longwood alumnae of Martinsville will sponsor a party for the girls of the senior class of Martinsville high school. The party is being given to acquaint the girls with Longwood.

Several Longwood faculty members and students will journey to Martinsville tonight to help with the entertainment. Those going are Mr. Walter Kerfoot, musical instructor; Miss Vera Baron, biology instructor; Miss Betty Spindler, audio-visual instructor; Mrs. Ruth Coyner, alumnae secretary; and Betsy Gravely, president of the senior class.

The program will include several musical numbers and a series of slides showing scenes at Longwood.

Mrs. Coyner, alumnae secretary, added that the 16 Longwood alumnae who are teaching at Martinsville will also be present.

Orientation Classes Honor 22 Visitors From High School

Twenty-two visiting high school seniors were honored by a tea in the Student Lounge Saturday afternoon from 4 to 5 p. m.

The tea was sponsored by the freshmen orientation classes under the supervision of Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dean of Women, and Mrs. James Tibbs, assistant Dean. Several members of the faculty and administration were invited.

Betty Anne Johnson served as chairman of the Reception committee, while Julia Dodson headed the refreshment committee. Marjorie Fore served as chairman for the invitation committee, and Wilma Spurlock was chairman of the entertainment committee. Serving as decoration committee chairman was Jean Southern, and Mattie Thomas headed the clean-up committee.

Julia Dodson and Mary Fleming Carter poured for the guests. Sarah McElroy and Lou Beavers provided musical entertainment.

Faculty To Observe Progress On Organ

Dr. and Mrs. John Moinar and Miss Emily Clark of the music department will visit the Standard Organ company in Suffolk next week to observe the progress being made on the Jarman Organ.

The Organ is a memorial gift in memory of Dr. Joseph L. Jarman, former president of the College. The drive for the Organ has been sponsored by the Alumnae Association and contributions to the fund have been made from alumnae, students and the faculty and administration.

The Jarman Organ is scheduled to be completed in time to be installed in the Jarman auditorium and music building before the opening.

LC Choir, H-S Glee Club To Give Annual Concert In College Dining Room

Students, Instructor To Solo on Program

The Choir will combine with the Glee Club of Hampden-Sydney College to present their annual Christmas Concert in the dining hall the evening of Sunday, December 10, at 8:30 p. m. The program will be under the direction of Dr. John W. Molnar, head of the music department; he will be assisted by Mr. T. E. Crawley of Hampden-Sydney.

Soloists for the performance will be Keith Light, of Hampden-Sydney, and Sarah McElroy, Joyce Adams, and Winston Johnson, of Longwood. Mr. Joel Ebersole, Instructor of Music, will sing the solo passages of one of the anthems, "The Noel of the Bressan Waits." Billie Dunlap, of Longwood and Howard Hanson will accompany the groups.

The Christmas program will include "The Angel's Song," by Tschesnokov, "Springs in the Desert," by Jennings, "And the Glory of the Lord" from the "Messiah" and "Wake, Awake," arranged by Christiansen.

The Longwood College Madrigal singers will present "Glory to God in Heaven," by Bortnianski, and "Before the Paling of the Stars," by Kramer.

Included in the Songs of the Christmastide sung by the Hampden-Sydney Glee Club will be "Break Forth, O Beauteous, Heavenly Light," by Bach; "Carol of the Russian Children," arranged by Gaul; "In Dulci Jubilo," arranged by Davison; and "Carol of the Bells," arranged by Leontovich.

Sarah McElroy, Joyce Adams, and Winston Johnson will offer "The Virgin's Slumber Song," by Reger; "Glory to God in the Highest," by Pergolesi; and the Longwood College Choir will present "Jesu Bambino," by Yon; and "What Can This Mean?" by Pergolesi.

The Choir and Glee Club will join in the Christmas folk music which will include "De New Born Baby," arranged by Cain; "Noel of the Bressan Waits," arranged by Davis; "A Merry Christmas," arranged by Warrell; and "Hallelujah" from the "Messiah" by Handel.

The new electronic organ will be used in accompanying the Choruses. Mr. Walter Kerfoot, Instructor of Music, will play the organ passages.

The committee in charge of decorations is headed by Andrea Adams. She is assisted by Bert Browning, Nancy Lawrence, Lucy Johnson, and Frances Marker.

Fraternity To Hold Christmas Banquet

Tau Theta Pi, the local fraternity, will have a Christmas banquet Saturday night, December 9, at Longwood Estate. Charter members of the Fraternity who graduated last spring will be guests of honor at the banquet.

Special guests will include Dr. and Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster and Mr. and Mrs. Norman Myers. Mr. Myers serves at present as chapter advisor to the fraternity.

The banquet will precede the senior dance as part of the week end festivities. The banquet committee, headed by Berman Scott, and including Harold Hutter and Jimmy Clark, expects twenty-six guests at the affair, including alumni, active members and their dates.

Annual Pageant To Be Presented Thursday, Nov. 13

Groups To Donate To White Christmas

The Christmas pageant, annually sponsored by the YWCA will be presented next Thursday, December 14, Lucy Page Hall, chairman of the prayers committee, has announced.

The pageant, which is centered about the theme, "O Holy Night," will be presented in the small auditorium right after dinner. Students are invited to participate in the chorus which will sing such familiar carols as "While the Shepherds Watched Their Flocks By Night," "We Three Kings of Orient Are," "Silent Night," "O Little Town of Bethlehem," and "Hark the Herald Angels Sing." A solo, "O Holy Night," will be sung during the pageant.

Following the pageant, heads of all organizatons will participate in "White Christmas," in which they contribute to a fund used by the Y for Farmville welfare. This part of the annual pageant has been a part of Longwood tradition since the College was founded.

The entire program is being presented under the direction of the prayers committee and the music committee of the Y.

Christmas Dinner To Be Held Tues.

"The Other Wise Man," told by Dr. Marvin Schlegel will highlight the Christmas dinner festivities to be held December 13. Dr. Schlegel will recount the traditional story in the Episcopal Church following the formal banquet in the College dining hall.

Hanging of the green, and group caroling in the Rotunda will follow the telling of the story.

Rotunda Gets Honor Rating At VIPA Convention

Top Awards Given To Va. Spectator, Bugle, Flat Hat

The Rotunda received a rating of honorable mention in the newspaper class at the fall convention of the Virginia Intercollegiate Press Association held in Lexington December 1-3.

The College of William and Mary, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, and the University of Virginia shared top honors for collegiate publications during the closing session of the convention.

First-place certificates and cups were presented to The Flat Hat, Wm. & Mary newspaper; The Spectator, U. Va. magazine; and the Bugle, VPI yearbook.

Take Second Place

Second-place awards in the three fields went to The Proscript, Richmond Professional Institute newspaper; the University of Richmond Web for yearbooks; and the Virginia Tech Engineer for magazines.

In the field of newspapers honorable mention ratings were given the Rotunda, Campus Comments from Mary Baldwin College, The Virginia Tech from VPI, and the Ring-tum Phi from Washington and Lee University.

The Tattler, Randolph-Macon Woman's College literary magazine, received an honorable mention award.

Washington and Lee's yearbook, The Calyx, received an honorable mention in its field.

Judging the collegiate newspapers were Charles R. McDowell, Jr., and Hugh Haynie, of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, and Martin Millspaugh, of the Richmond News Leader. The Washington bureau of the Curtis Publishing Company judged the magazines, and the Benson Publishing Company of Nashville, Tenn., judged yearbooks.

On Saturday the assembled college journalists heard Dr. Marshall W. Fishwick, professor of American studies at Washington and Lee, speak on "The Implications of a Free Press."

LC Gals Christmas Wish-- A Date for Senior Dance

by Virginia Moon

All I want for Christmas is—Yes you guessed it, a date for the senior dance. I've tried everywhere and there just aren't any available males left. Of course, I mean by an available male one who at least knows how to two-step.

I thought of inviting some nice boy over from Hampden-Sydney, but like most of us, I don't know any; my roommate doesn't have a brother there either. And then another idea struck me, maybe if I sorta hinted around one in the college shop, but that wasn't successful either. They all gave a scared look, paid for their cokes, and left.

However, this didn't discourage me I went to the Pickett dance Friday night with high hopes. I had a marvelous time, but one thing still puzzled me. How could all the boys be on duty Saturday night?

Now don't think I am that bad looking, 'cause I could have had a date. But when I found out he was a Farmville High School boy my dreams once again collapsed.

Then I thought, why not invite my steady boy friend? So I began busily with pen and ink. Oh! how excited I was! I knew he'd just be thrilled to come. Several days passed and still no answer. What had happened to my last chance? Could the mail train have wrecked? Maybe he is sick or forgot to mail his answer.

Here it is Friday night and I am still biting my fingernails. Oh! there goes the telephone. Could it be? Heck! it is for the girl next door and it is from her date telling her he has arrived in town.

All Saturday morning I am busy meeting myself going to and fro from the Post Office and still no answer.

Saturday night — Everyone is getting ready for the big dance. My new evening dress is still in the box looking as crumpled as I feel.

At 9:30 I give up hopes and then a telephone call for me—it's from my boy friend. He is so very sorry but he just couldn't make it this week end. He did so hate to miss the dance.

Oh! well, I can start making plans for next year.

'The Night Before Christmas' To Be Theme of Senior Dance; Duke Ambassadors Will Play

"The Night Before Christmas" and all through the Longwood gymnasium the seniors and their dates will be dancing to the music of the Duke Ambassadors. The annual senior dance will be the occasion, December 9 at 8 p. m., in the College gymnasium.

The traditional figure by the seniors and their dates will be led by Betsy Gravely, president of the class of '51, and Anna Nock, '50, honorary senior classman, and their dates while the Ambassadors play a medley of Christmas music.

In addition to the fifteen musicians under the direction of Roddy Shull, the Ambassadors will bring with them a girl vocalist from "the school that gave you Les Brown and Johnny Long."

The Duke Ambassadors are one of the two college bands in the nation listed in the fifth addition of Who Is Who In Music, the other being the Yale orchestra. They play all special arrangements which are designed exclusively for this band by the top arrangers in the dance field.

According to Mary Jane Stansbury, chairman of the music committee for the dance, this plus the high quality of musicianship gives the music of the Ambassadors a unique styling as well as making it highly "listenable" and "danceable."

The pre-holiday dance has as its theme "The Night Before Christmas" which will be carried out in the decorations as well as in the senior figure.

All seniors attending the dance will be gowned in the traditional white while underclassmen have been requested to wear gowns of a brighter hue.

Rabbi Goldburg, Richmond, Will Speak to Student Body

Dr. Ariel L. Goldburg, Rabbi of the Beth Ahabah Congregation in Richmond, will speak to the student body in assembly tomorrow, December 7, on "What is Judaism?"

Dr. Goldburg graduated from the University of Cincinnati and was ordained Rabbi by the Hebrew Union College. He has done post-graduate work at the University of Chicago, Harvard and Oxford, England. In recognition of his community and state-wide achievements in the fields of religion, literature and social work, Morris Harvey College honored Rabbi Goldburg with the degree Doctor of Divinity.

In Richmond, Rabbi Goldburg has shown himself to be a very civic minded individual. He serves on the Board of Directors of the Richmond Open Forum, the Red Cross, the Traveler's Aid, the Richmond Jewish Community Council, and the Richmond Jewish Center. In addition, he is a member of the Richmond Ministerial Union, the Rotary Club, and the Speaker's Bureau of the Richmond Community Fund.

RABBI ARIEL GOLDBURG, who will speak to the student body on "What is Judaism" at assembly tomorrow.

Dr. Goldburg's visit to Longwood is being sponsored by the Jewish Chautauqua Society. The aim of this organization is to forward a system of Jewish education, especially at American universities, in the form of lectures on Jewish subjects.

Library Lists New Displays

A display on Jewish culture is being featured on the mainfloor of the library this week in the Newspaper Room. Included in the display are gifts to the library from the Jewish Chautauqua Society, including a set of The Universal Jewish Encyclopedia sent to the Library last year after Rabbi Fred I. Ryppin's visit to the College.

The show case on the bottom floor of the Library is featuring this week, articles made by the students in Art 201, which is a course in crafts under the direction of Miss Virginia Bedford. Among the work exhibited are leather purses, photograph folders, and cigarette cases. Hand worked silver rings, broaches and bracelets are also included in the display.

Rounding out the group of Library displays is a collection of books in the Exhibition Room concerning various holiday customs.

Y' Asks Students To Fill Baskets

The YWCA service committee has placed a basket at the entrance to the dining hall for student contributions to the needy at Christmas, according to Patty Walker, chairman of the committee.

Students have been asked to fill the basket with toys, scrapbooks, canned foods, and any non-perishable goods that might make Christmas a little pleasanter for needy families in the Farmville area.

Patty added that in a similar drive held before Thanksgiving, student contributions were generous and a large assortment of canned foods, candy, and other goods were collected and distributed in Farmville.

Language Clubs Plan Annual Party

The annual Christmas party sponsored by Le Cercle Francais and El Club Espanole will be held in the Main Recreation hall this Friday from 8 to 10 p. m. French and Spanish students will take part in the program which will depict Christmas customs observed in France and the Spanish-speaking countries.

The program to be presented by the French students will include group singing of such traditional French Christmas carols as "La Marche des Rois," "Mistaut Veillait," and "Entra le Boeuf et L'Ane Gris."

Group to Give Dance

Jean Smith, Sarah McElroy, Dolly Wells, Polly Brothers, Mary Carlyle, Donnie Dean, Ann Mallory, Mason Moore, Mary Jo Smith, Jo Anne Utley, Phyliss Entsminger, Betty Frances Gillette, Caroline Traynham, Louise Trinkle ,and Geneva Robertson will participate in a typical French folk dance.

A one-act play entitled "Noel en Provence" will also be presented by the French students. In the cast are Helen Tanner, Betty Collier, Patsy Taylor, Nancy Lawrence, Barbara Blackman, Nancy Draskill, Celeste Bishop, Diane Murray, Sally Brickman, Margaret Turner, Betsy Hankins, Cleo Holladay, and Louise Minor. During the skit, Marla Jackson will sing "O Magoli," and Sarah McElroy will sing "Adeste Fideles" and "Le Marche des Rois." Also included in the playlet will be two folk dances by the group. Virginia McLean will accompany the songs and dances at the piano.

Spanish Group Depict Customs

The Spanish students will present some of the customs in the Christmas celebrations of the Spanish-speaking countries which begin on December 16 and last until January 6. Group singing will include "Las Posadas," which is traditionally sung at the begin-

Journalism Fraternity Publishes Directory Of College Statistics

The Longwood Student Directory, a new publication on the campus, has recently been published by the local chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon, journalism fraternity.

The thirty-eight page booklet contains pertinent information on the student body and campus personnel, and is being sold by Pi Delta Epsilon members each day in the Snack Bar at 50c a copy.

Included in the directory is an alphabetical list of the student body together with their college box numbers, resident building, year in college and home addresses. Also included is a similar listing of faculty and administration members with their College offices, and Farmville addresses. The marital state of faculty and administration has been indicated to aid in addressing invitations.

Other features of the booklet include a classified list of campus organizations. The president, sponsor, and meeting time and place has been listed with each organization.

"As a group we feel that the campus has needed such a publication for a long time," Jean Smith, president of Pi Delta Epsilon, stated in connection with the directory. "The directory will give each student a conveniently accessible reference to pertinent campus information," she added.

Be Wise - Stay Alive

Every Longwood student returned to the Alma Mater in one piece. We can and should be proud of the fact that none of us were injured in a traffic accident during the holidays. Others were not so fortunate — five lives were claimed on Thanksgiving day as a result of careless driving.

Those five lives and the eight lost the following day could have been saved. We say this with good reason — on Sunday and Monday following the holidays, when the pavements in many parts of Virginia were covered with ice and snow and the falling snow made clear vision practically impossible, not ONE death occurred as a result of an automobile accident. The reason for this is a simple yet an extremely important one — careful driving.

Virginia motorists realized that the roadways were dangerous and that they must look out for the other's lives as well as their own; they were careful. They did more than observe traffic rules; the drivers watched the other cars so that they might do their best to avoid any kind of accident. For two days we were wise, and on the third we forgot because the obvious danger was disappearing. More deaths occurred.

No truly wise person is thoughtful for two minutes and careless the third, for in that moment he may lose everything he has gained. Safety is a rule without exception.

Trite but true, Christmas, one of the happiest holidays of the year for many of us, is fast approaching. And with it perhaps, rainy, snowy, icy weather. But even if the sun shines and such a phenomenon as the trees bursting into bloom should suddenly occur, traffic accidents can still take place, and they will if you or your driver is not careful. College students seem to go "broke" about this time of year, and Christmas gifts for the folks are often a task, with no money. They'll be happier with the knowledge that you reached home safely, stayed that way during your vacation travels, and came back to school the same way, than they would be with an expensive present and a son or daughter with a broken leg just because, "We were talking and didn't see the other car."

Virginia could set a record this holiday with the lowest fatality toll yet, but it can't be done without the help of every citizen. We college students can help set that record. BE CAREFUL.

Wheels Vs Personalities

Immediately below this editorial we have printed a questionnaire concerning the "Senior Personalities" traditionally featured in the Virginian each year. Recently, the question has come up in the student body as to whether those chosen for this honor really live up to the heading "Personalities".

According to the annual staff, this title has come into usage only in the past few years. Previously, a group of outstanding seniors were represented in the annual with no title or explanation other than their activities on the campus.

Under the present title, however, it hardly seems justifiable to merely select seniors who hold the major offices whether or not they are outstanding personalities. Of course, the question arises, "how do you define a campus personality?" If it means popularity and contribution to campus life, then those who have been elected by you to fill the important positions on campus will fill the bill.

On the other hand, all of us can easily point out those seniors whose vitality, support, and spirit have made them known and liked by all classes even though they are not "wheels".

Since the group that is selected for the annual is limited, and the nominating board who will present a list for the student body to choose from must have some basis for their selection, we must indicate our preference in some manner.

As we have seen in the past, too often the "Senior Personalities" are drawn from that familiar group we've seen in AKG, Who's Who, and the major campus offices, while others who have made their personalities felt on the campus are overlooked.

In the past few weeks, the Rotunda presented to you another controversy in the form of a questionnaire. We were both shocked and disappointed at the seeming lack of interest on the part of the student body to contribute their opinions. In the present question, we hope that you will take the time to fill out the questionnaire and have your opinion represented in the final decision in this matter.

Please Clip and Answer

☐ I would like to have the outstanding seniors elected for the annual chosen in the same manner as they have been in the past.

☐ I would like to have the outstanding seniors chosen for personality, not necessarily for the campus leadership.

As Time Changes

By BUNNY GIBSON

Longwood College is an institution of higher learning, a realization — we hope — of the dream of Jefferson and others of his caliber. It is situated in the state of Virginia, a part of the U. S. of America. It didn't get here by chance. Men have fought and died for the privilege we have of coming here and learning facts—basic, whole truths — so that we may know of all things and judge as to which is best for ourselves and our country. Men, some of our best friends, are dying today in order that Longwood, her traditions and honor may stand.

We may not have realized the graveness of the Korean crisis; our country was only helping a friend in need, a very small friend with a very small foe. But the mole hill grew into a mountain — our foe increased enormously and took a new shape; hordes of Chinese communists. Everyone woke up, at least for a few winks.

Fortunately, the people whom we must trust for guidance are not dozing. The immediate danger facing us, the possibility of World War III, brought Prime Minister Atlee of England to Washington yesterday to confer with out present chief foreign policy maker, the commander in chief of our armed forces. They discussed the prevention of a devastating war. No doubt Atlee wanted to be assured that nothing we did in Asia would cause a Russian attack on Western Europe. We understand his uneasiness; we're worried about the same thing. Our president didn't request an extra 17 billion dollars plus to build trolly cars in Saint Louis. He's not even contributing to Longwood's new auditorium. However, he does have the interest of Longwood and all other products of the American democracy in mind.

At the conferences of Truman and other important diplomats of the world, the fate of America — and Longwood — will be decided. To survive, our neighbors must survive also — by words or weapons. We do not want our children to learn, at Longwood, that Solavoski so and so invented the reaper and not McCormick.

Stecking My Neck Out

by Joanne Steck

I'm proud I could get back with you for a spell, but you know how it is—one has to take a small rest sometime. I always say—take my advice (don't try it twice) "Eat drink and be merry, for tomorrow — — ??!

Looks like we're gonna have some real weather in these here parts after all. The white stuff falling outside makes us think of Christmas—and Christmas makes us think of not studying—and not studying makes us think of exams and flunking exams makes us think of leaving these parts—and I tell you, it's bad all around!

Seems Longwood is really showing off these days, having Gene Kruppa and the Ambassadors here all in one week! No joke—it really does me ole heart good. I like to see the young people get out and "have a time."

You know Hadacol has brought many people together. Its spell is cast on many. Hear tell some of the girls have acquired some handsome Hadacol pen pals. Who knows what strange ways fate may work? To quote one Hadacol pal—"Thats what Hadacol can do." (Large family size only three dollars).

I want to leave you all with a most advisable motto. Always carry yourself well—try to be somebody, and have some principle about you. You gotta have principle and stability to be somebody.

Campus Cogitations

Question: "Do you think Longwood College should allow men stags to come to its formal dances?"

Donna Staples: I think it would be a good idea and I think the College should invite them.

Kathryn Terry: I don't think it would be such a good idea.

Betsy Wilson: Definitely yes! We don't have enough men here anyway. I think the school should make the dance known to other colleges and ask the men to come.

Gin Spencer: Yes, I think it would give more interest to the dances We can't be kept out of the path of men forever. I think co-eds and groups should be invited by the College.

Harriet Butterworth: No, I don't think it is a very good idea.

Ella Sue Smith: I don't think so.

Anne Moseley: Yes, but I think the College should invite them.

Connie Rice: Any boy who has the energy and nerve to put on a tux and go to one of our dances without a date should be allowed to come to the dances.

Sara Creger: It would make more girls go stag, but I don't think the boys would want to go to all that trouble.

Marty Miller: I think they ought to have a stag list from different colleges and invite those from one college at a time.

Frances Thomas: I definitely think so 'cause I think it would help the dances a lot.

Sally Brickman: Let's not beat around the bush—yes.

Carolyn Lusk: I think each girl should have a date bid and a stag bid.

Edith Goff: I think it would make the dances more interesting and help everybody have a good time.

"Hop" Critizer: Sure, the more the merrier!

Jackie Sell: Yes, it would balance the people at the dance.

Mary Evelyn Bennett: Yes, it would give the girls without dates a chance to dance.

Peggy Jones: It's okay if you have stag girls.

Mary Jean Carlyle: The more, the merrier.

Mildred Parker: Yes, because it would keep girls from having to break so often. There are a lot of boys who would like to come.

Margie Steele: Yes, because it would give you a chance to dance with your own date more often.

Bobbie Obenshain: It would lift the morale of the girls like me, who aren't very cute.

Longwood Conventionites Enjoy Visit; Impressed By Lexington Hospitality

Hastily throwing suitcases in the back of the car, we were off —off to the "VIP-A," otherwise known as the Virginia Intercollegiate Press Association Convention, to see what other journalists had up their sleeves.

First stop—the Herald Office—the Colonnade, fresh from the pressed, must accompany us. Gotta show off our talents!

Now for a map so we can see just where this place called Lexington is.

At last—Lexington, W&L, VMI. Now to find out where they're registering us conventionites. (Thirty minutes and ten inquiries later) "Here we are"—"sign here"—"pay here"—"this way to your hotel"—that was quick to say the least.

If VMI eats this way all the time, theyve really got a setup—turkey and all the trimmings. And trimmings included a welcoming address by Dr. Francis P. Gaines president of W&L. Freedom of the College press is as important as freedom of the national press, he assured us. But college journalists must remember that they, like all journalists, must write for their public and their public deserves the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth on all issues, he explained. Dr. Gaines added that freedom of the press carries responsibilities as well as privileges.

With a few uniformed (VMI, of course), attendants to guide us, we arrived safely at the reception at W&L. Even at these strictly social functions the atmosphere was definitely tinted by printers ink and collegiate journalism was the topic from arrival to departure.

First attention the next morning, of course was breakfast. After a hearty meal (at 9 a. m.—Longwood was never like this) we felt strong enough to face the criticism of our publications by fellow journalists.

Plans, problems, solutions, criticisms and congratulations were the order of the morning. In every hand was a notebook, which was soon filled with new ideas and new solutions to old problems and on each face was a gleam of resolve that next year their own brain child would deserve no adverse criticism. Somehow the convention planners broke up the session to herd us off to lunch.

Following our sojourn to the W&L Beanery, we congregated at the historic Lee Chapel, where Dr. Marshall W. Fishwick addressed the conventioners while General Robert E. Lee peered anxiously over his shoulder.

We were again reminded of the importance of the freedom of the press by Dr. Fishwick. "When we can sell the people of the world American democracy as we sell them American coca-cola's we will really have done something" he admonished us.

With Dr. Fishwick's speech still ringing in our ears, we turned to thoughts of VIPA policy as the business meeting of the 1950 fall convention was officially opened by Priscilla Smith of Randolph Macon, president of the association. An amendment was presented and quickly passed concerning the manner in which the

Pioneers Fall To Powerful Opponents In Opening Games of New Season

NBC Top Locals 82-39; MCV, 79-40

Longwood men's basketball team opened the new cage season over the past week end on the home court by absorbing two decisive defeats at the hands of two top class State hardwood squads, National Business College of Roanoke, 39-82, and The Medical College of Va., 40-79.

The two final game scores were almost identical, but the games were very different. In the opener Friday night against NBC Longwood jumped into the lead but fell behind before the quarter ended. The Pioneers kept the games relatively close for almost 3 quarters. Afterwards, NBC pressed the Pioneers all over the court and starved the local thirteen to only 3 last quarter points. Jerry Shevick led the local cause with 15 points.

Saturday night the Pioneers faced an even stronger foe in the Medical College. Longwood scored first but fell quickly behind in the first quarter. Gradually the Pioneers clicked and steadily garnered sufficient tallies to accumulate a respectable 40 point total. The Medicos, though greatly out-classing the locals, found it impossible to press the Pioneers over the whole court at any time, thereby duplicating NBC's last quarter debacle. Les Smallwood hit the hoop for the Pioneers for 21 points in the Medical College game to grab high scoring honors.

This week the Pioneers get into competition in their own class and optimistically hope to break well in the winning column. Games with Lynchburg JV's, Mary Washington, Crewe Town Team, and the Farmville Town Team are coming up before the Christmas holidays. The Pioneers are expecting a winning season this year.

FRASER CHALKS UP LOST WEEK END TO EXPERIENCE

Dr. A. C. Fraser, Pioneer Coach, quickly got his team back into lengthy court drills Monday night in the regular practice sessions in preparation for what he calls "the real schedule". According to Coach Fraser, the opening games with the National Business College and the Medical College last Friday and Saturday nights could not be considered as a measure of this year's team. NBC and MCV are teams far out of the Longwood class. This week the Pioneers settle down to games with teams which are at least within their class range. Coach Fraser insists that this year's squad has many more possibilities than last year's 3 game winner and that a winning schedule should be within their grasp.

PIONEERS ARE LED BY SHEVICK

Jerry Shevick, former Duke JV standout and this year's Pioneer co-captain, bears a heavy load of responsibilities on the court this year but there is no question now of his ability. He by far out-classes all of his team members in every department. His offensive leadership is assured and his defensive aid is outstanding. In fact, the question practically has been to get him to slow down in order that the squad may be able to work along with him.

ORANGE, PEACE, PILLOW HOLD KEY TO WINS

Offensive tallies by Shevick and Smallwood seem to be netting approximately 25 or 30 points per game at the minimum. With this double-barreled offensive must come at least supporting tallies from the Pioneer's three gaints, Ned Orange, Johnnie Peace, and Forest Pillow. With these men collecting at least 6 or 8 points apiece, which their height should almost guarantee, the Pioneers then would be an offensive threat to almost any team. So far getting these men to score has been difficult despite their height.

WILLIAMS, OVERBY, CARTER WIN ROLES

Bob Williams, Elon College transfer, has posted a starting five berth this year at guard. Williams does not attempt to score very often but his aggressive game has become extemely vital to the Pioneers thus far in the season. He capably fills that post. A new addition to the squad this year is Bill Overby. He plays forward and, although handicapped by a week knee, adds a good eye for the basket for the Longwood hoopsters. Bill Carter, another addition, started out as manager of the team, but has become so effective in practice sessions (in emergency roles) that he is expected to eventually hold down a good forward reserve position.

COACH FRASER TO EMPLOY PLATOON SYSTEM

In an effort to relieve the last quarter general fatigue failure that the Pioneers are hampered with, Coach Fraser will slip Smallwood and Shevick definitely up to all-forward positions. Jimmy Clark, Jimmy Thompson, Bobbie Bradshaw, Harold Hutter will togethei maintain the guard positions, and accept the responsibility in getting the ball up the court and into the hands of the offensive forwards and centers who will then be able to direct more effort toward getting the ball in the basket. To do this effectively Coach Fraser philosophies that fresh men are effective guardsmen. All of these men are experienced Pioneers and greatly improved over last year.

NAVY UPSETS ARMY

In true Army-Navy style upsets come often. Last week one of biggest upsets of all time was performed. Underdog Navy defeated recently top ranked Army 14-2. The set back deflated Army's long win streak and sank them to 5th in the national rankings.

VIRGINIA MURDERS NORTH CAROLINA

In another terrific upset, the University of Virginia became the first team to score on North Carolina over twice this year and they did it in no cheap style. Final score: 33-12. Papit played his last game for Virginia and broke a national record in yards gained in three years with 3,047 yards.

'Christmas Symbols' To Be Theme of Water Pageant Presented by H20 Friday

Admission Price Set At 15c Per Person

The annual Christmas water pageant which will be presented Friday, December 8, at 5 and 7 p. m. is "Christmas Symbols." Admission for spectators will be fifteen cents, and will be collected at the pool entrance.

The Snowflakes, one of the traditional symbols of the yuletide will be represented by Betsy Gravely, Ann Crowder, Elizabeth Hoskins, Mary Ann King, Ann Harding, Eleanor Weddle, Hilda Lewis, Jackie Moody, Donna Kunkler, and Lou Jamison.

A group representing Christmas Trees will include Elsie Wente, Nancy Walker, Blanton Ferguson, Charlotte Williams, Dot Boswick, Pat Altwegg Ann Kemp, Eleanor Koch, Betty Collier, and Betty Islin. Following the trees will be a group of eight swimmers in the guise of poinsettas. Nancy Huff, Lucy Page Hall, Helen Agnew, Chick Ritchie, Neil Bradshaw, Helen Castros, Jackie Foreman, and Betsy Gravely will make up this group.

The Jingle Bells will consist of Charlotte Williams, Hilda Lewis, Jeanne Gilman, Ilia Desportes, Margie Hood, Dollie Vaughn, Nancy Adkins, Jackie Moody, and Boots Fussell. This group of swimmers will be followed by the Peppermint Sticks to be portrayed by Blanton Ferguson, Marian Beckner, Jean Ridenour, and Nancy Walker.

Natalie Lancaster will take the part of Rudolph, the Red-Nosed Reindeer, while the part of Grandpa and the Little Girl, the narrators, will be taken by Cleo Holladay and Liz Crockett respectively. Buny Ricks heads the costume committee.

According to Marion Beckner and Jean Ridenour, Co-chairmen of the pageant, the traditional clowns, divers, and H2O figure will appear during the water festival.

Sportin' Around

by Lou Jamison

What a time we had this past week! Everyone was certainly filled with that old class spirit. Believe me, it did the heart good to see our girls carrying on such fine tradition as Color Rush and class hockey games. Inter-mural sports are the backbone of any student body. Without them things usually go on in a sort of hum-drum way.

Fortunately we here at Longwood have a fine inter-mural sports program, and its effects really show in our students. Did you notice the cooperation, good sportsmanship, and teamplay that went on during the class games? Those wonderful characteristics that are brought out during the games last not for a game, or a day, or a year, but go on for much longer, making a girl into a wholesome person for the rest of her life. Let's give a cheer for our sports program and make it a point to see that it continues in the same manner in the future.

Do you like to watch mermaids? You haven't long to wait then. This Friday is the day for the annual Longwood Swimming pageant, and there'll be mermaids galore. As you probably already know, the theme of the pageant is the season of winter. The show will be complete with snow flakes, Christmas trees, and to top it all, there'll be Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer. The H2O Club has decided to put on two performances for your convenience. Remember, this is one thing you don't want to miss, so make sure you get to see one of the shows.

Pioneers Will Meet Lynchburg Thurs.

The Pioneers, after being set back decisively twice by top-class squads are making an earnest bid to break even in the next few days by optimistically venturing to Lynchburg College on Thursday. They'll tackle the junior varsity for the third time. The Pioneers lost to the JV's twice last year, but only after extremely hard fought games and fell under the heavily reserved and experienced Hornets in the latter stages of the contests.

Red 'n White Teams Win Hockey Games

The Red 'n Whites have emerged victorious from the round of six class hockey games that have been played this year. At the end of the first game, played just before Thanksgiving holidays, the juniors topped the frosh by a score of 3:0.

The seniors tied their sister class in the game played on Monday, November 27, and the junior class players defeated the sophs on Tuesday by a score of 1:0. Wednesday found the freshmen struggling against the seniors only to tie the score at 0:0. On Thursday, the juniors beat the senior team with a total score of 3:0.

The game of all games took place on Friday when the fresh-

Commission Heads Elected by Frosh; Holladay Is Pres.

Cleo Holladay from Suffolk has been elected president of the Freshman Commission. Other officers chosen to head the Commission were Fifi Carter of Hopewell, vice-president; June Horton, of Richmond, secretary; and Nell Copley of Blackstone, treasurer.

Elected to serve on the Commission were Pat Altwegg, of Hilton Village; Betty Islin, Hilton Village; Laura Beavers, Cedar Bluff; Betty Lou Garrett, Roanoke; Sally Smith, Newport News; Dolly Horne, Smithfield; Nancy Huff, Richmond; Sylvia Reames, Petersburg; and Mary Denny Wilson, Danville.

Cleo graduated from Suffolk high school. There she was a member of the Dramatic Club and literary editor of the annual. Cleo served as co-chairman of the Freshman Circus.

Fifi graduated from Hopewell high school, where she was a member of the editorial staff of the annual. She was also in the choir and belonged to various other organizations.

June is a graduate of Thomas Jefferson high school and attended Pan-American Business School in Richmond.

Nell was a member of the Beta Club and National Thespian Society at Blackstone high school. She was in the Student Council for four years and served as co-captain of the basketball team her senior year.

men strove to remove their rat caps by whipping the sophs. The excited players were topped only by the more excited crowd when neither team was able to score. The sophomores, in honor of the freshmen's spirit and ability, let the rat caps be stowed away in a closet for the rest of the year. Thus ends another year of class hockey games.

Appomattox Alumnae Will Sponsor Party For High School Srs.

The Appomattox alumnae chapter is sponsoring a party for seniors from Appomattox high school and from nearby Pamplin on Thursday evening, December 7, in the Appomattox high school cafeteria. Several Longwood faculty members and students will be on hand to help with the entertainment. Mr. Joel Ebersole of the music department, Lucy Page Hall and Dolly Wells will sing, accompanied by Peggy Hoover on the piano.

Miss Betty Spindler of the audio-visual department will show slides of familiar scenes at Longwood, and Mrs. Ruth Coyner, alumnae secretary will tell the students about Longwood.

Norfolk Entertains

On Saturday, December 9, the Norfolk alumnae chapter, of which Mrs. Sally Woodward Pate is president, will entertain prospective Longwood students of Norfolk at the officers club.

publications would be judged for awards in the future. An invitation was extended and accepted to hold the spring convention at William and Mary. The date will be set by the host school in the near future. The president read the group a letter from Hampton Institute and a discussion on VIPA policy in such matters and the questions raised by this letter followed.

The meeting then recessed until the following morning, and conventionites were free to take in the sights of Lexington—which they did with gusto.

The group again assembled in the Ball Room of the Dutch Inn that evening where they danced to the music of a VMI combo. We of Longwood thought the music of the combo greatly enhanced when they accompanied Charlotte Jones, singing "Thinking of You."

It wasn't until Sunday morning that we finally learned the winners in the fall competition. Tech, William and Mary and Virginia walked off with shiny silver cups while others proudly claimed their honor certificates. And so another convention drew to a close and with cries of "See you at William and Mary in the Spring," it was back to Longwood for us.

ning of the Christmas festivities to represent the search of Mary and Joseph for lodging on the trip to Bethlehem. The group will also sing "Los Aquinaldos," which is sung on Christmas day in Puerto Rico as gifts are presented to people of special service; and "Pastores a Belen," and "IO Santisimo!".

Edna Rodriquez will perform a dance, "The Lady of Spain," and Olga Rodriquez, Issac Velazquez, Edan Rodriquez, Liz Crockett, Jo Anna Utley, Anne Foster, Joyce Smith, Moneda Key and Patsy Derring will present a dance "La Raspa."

A Christmas day bull fight will be also presented by the Spanish group and a skit entitled "La Noche de los Keyes," which represents the arrival of the Three Kings before the Christ child on January 6. The cast for this skit will include Barbara White, Helen Tanner, Joyce Booth, Norma Gledding, and Gene Moore.

As a special Christmas treat, the French Circle will have Santa Claus distribute oranges to the guests. Four pinatas made by the various Spanish classes will be broken, and a shower of candy and nuts will fall as all sing "Al Quebrar La Pinata."

The student body is invited to attend the Christmas party. Tickets are now on sale by French and Spanish students at 25c per person

Dance Group To Present Recital On February 17

Beckner Announces Increase In Number Of Solo Selections

Orchesis will present their annual recital on February 17, Marian Beckner, president, announced today.

A number of solo parts have already been assigned and are now being worked up. Group numbers and the remainder of the solo parts will be given out after the Christmas holidays.

The recital this year will feature more solo numbers than have been done in the past, according to Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, advisor to Orchesis.

One of the numbers to be done in this year's recital will be character sketches from the novel The Wise in Heart by Nancy Kendall which is to be released by the publishers early in 1951. This novel is the story of a domineering, repressive mother, her six children, and Monie, the girl who dares to defy her and marry one of her sons.

The dedication of the buildings of Longwood College will be portrayed in dance form with the use of music and poetry.

Portray Phobias

Another section of the recital will be concerned with phobias. Nancy Walker will portray a person suffering from claustrophobia. Marian Beckner will dramatise the feelings of a person afflicted with the fear of crossing a street, dromophobia, while Ann Crowder takes the part of a policeman directing traffic.

Edith Duma and Hilda Lewis will do a duet called "I Have a Willowy Soul" in which they will represent two different sides to the personality of one person, one the sweet, demure side, and the other the irresponsible, devilish side.

Mary Jane Stansbury will enact the part of a restless, pensive, adolescent personality in a series of "Doodle-dances" which at-

Miss Wheeler To Tell 'Littlest Angel' Story Tonight At Banquet

Longwood's annual formal Christmas banquet is being held tonight in the College dinning hall.

Entertainment between courses will be provided by the Madrigal Singers, and the Senior Trio consisting of Virginia Spencer, Ann Burnette, and Bobby Pollard. A solo, "O, Holy Night," will be sung by Frances Marker. Everyone attending the banquet will be requested to join in the singing of Christmas carols, accompanied by Billie Dunlap on the organ. Miss Leola Wheeler, former Longwood English and dramatics professor, will tell the story of "The Littlest Angel."

The menu for the banquet is as follows: half of a grapefruit served with a green cherry for first course; turkey, dressing, giblet gravy, sweet potato casserole with orange, cranberry salad, spiced pear pickle, and rolls and coffee, for the main course; plum pudding with hard sauce will be served for desert. The tables will be decorated according to the season and assorted hard candies will be distributed among the tables.

Immediately following the meal, everyone will adjourn to the Rotunda where the Hanging of the Green will take place.

Yuletide Greetings From 'Big 3'

To the Students of Longwood College:

As you prepare to leave for the Christmas holidays you may go with the assurance that each and every member of the faculty and staff joins me in wishing you a happy vacation.

The critical state of affairs in the world today gives added meaning to the need of all of us for the Christmas promise of Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men. In the midst of our holiday celebrations may we find time to pray that this Christmas message may find a place in the hearts of men and women everywhere.

Dabney S. Lancaster
President

* * * *

My sincere good wishes to all of you and your families for the holiday season.

Amid these chaotic days may you find continued peace, health, and happiness and return safely to us New Years.

Ruth Gleaves
Dean of Women

* * * *

In these troubled days it is no less important that we celebrate the birthday of the Prince of Peace. He gave to us the only truths of which we can be certain, the only course of action that will make a peaceful world.

Mrs. Savage and I extend to every Longwood student our sincere wishes for happiness at Christmas. May peace and love be present among you and yours throughout the season and the year ahead.

William W. Savage
Dean of the College

Notice

Christmas Holidays will officially begin Saturday, December 16. Classes will resume January 2, at 8 a. m.

Gala Decorations Give Ruffner Hall Real Christmas Look

Longwood's halls have been decked, not with holly, but with angels to celebrate the coming holiday and festivities.

The angels adorning the doors of the administrative offices were done by a committee of students taking Art 211 under the direction of Mrs. Janice Lemen. Lucy Jane Morton was chairman in charge of the door decorations.

The mural depicting "The Littlest Angel," was also done by art students under Mrs. Lemen's direction.

The Christmas tree in the rotunda was decorated by members of the Freshman Commission and those in the Student Building lounge, and junior and senior parlors in Cunningham Hall by members of the sophomore, junior and senior classes working with the Home Department.

Summer Session Catalogue Printed

The catalog for Longwood College's 1951 summer session will be delivered to the College from the printers during the Christmas holiday according to Dean William W. Savage.

The 1951 summer session will run eight weeks from June 18 to August 11.

Courses in art, biology, business education, chemistry, general science, home economics, history, government, sociology, and geography will be among those offered during the summer session.

Other courses to be taught during the 1951 summer session will be in the fields of physical and health education, mathematics, music, English, library science, education, philosophy, and phychology.

Applications for attendance at the summer session are now being accepted and all those wishing to attend Longwood during the summer are urged to make application as soon as possible.

'Y' To Give 'Wise Man' Tomorrow

White Christmas To Be Included

"The Other Wise Man," the annual YWCA Christmas pageant will be presented tomorrow night after supper in the small auditorium. The pageant is under the direction of the prayers committee of the Y, headed by Lucy Page Hall. White Christmas offerings from the students and organizations will be presented at the end of the program.

Emme Mae Pittard will take the pert of Mary in the manger scene tableau with Catherine Stevens as Joseph.

Nancy Lawrence, Betty Abitt, and Virginia McLean will take the part of the angels. Natalie Lancaster, Sally Brickman, and Dolores Hoback will portray the three kings.

Judy Cox, Ann Crowder, and Betty Tyler are cast as the three shepherds and the three wise men will be portrayed by Barbara White, Helen Castros and Helen Tanner.

The Madrigal Singers will make up the chorus for the pageant and Sara McElroy will be soloist.

The pageant will be presented in the small auditorium right after dinner. Students are invited to participate in the chorus which will sing such familiar carols as "While the Shepherds Watced Their Flocks By Night," "We Three Kings of Orient Are," "Silent Night," "O Little Town of Bethlehem," and "Hark the Herald Angels Sing." A solo, "O Holy Night," will be sung during the pageant.

Students To Choose Heads Of Committees For 1951 May Day

The May Day committee chairmen will be elected in a called student body meeting to be held in assembly tomorrow, according to an announcement by Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, faculty advisor to May Day.

The selection of the May Day queen and her court will be held after the Christmas holidays and the 1951 May Day theme will be revealed the first of the year.

Co-Chairmen Announce Soph Production Date, Act, Committee Heads

Tickets To Be Sold To Students At 35c

Sophomore production will be presented January 12 at 8 p. m. in the Recreation Hall of Ruffner Building, Barbara Caskey and Joanne Steck, co-chairmen of the production have announced.

Betty Collier will be in charge of act one. Heading act two will be Dot Boswick, and Jane Lively will produce the third act.

Ginny McLean is to head act four.

Several committee heads have been chosen. Sonia Kyle will do the costuming, and Bert Browning and Charlotte Robertson will be in charge of the back drops. Lee Wingfield is to be chairman of the properties committee.

Jean Partridge will render piano accompaniment for the presentation. In charge of the dances for the production will be Jane Liveley.

Tickets will go on sale to the student body soon after the holidays. Tickets will be 35c per person, Barbara said recently. Seats will be reserved for the sister class of the sophomores—the seniors.

A committee headed by Betty Abbitt will sell cokes and nabs during intermission which will be held between acts two and three.

Barbara revealed in a recent interview that "with the cooperation of the entire class, this can be one of the best productions ever presented here. But we need that coopration."

She and Joanne are working with the persons in charge of each act as a Theme committee.

Each class gives two productions during its college career. The usual procedure is for these productions to be given during the freshman and sophomore years.

Home-Ec Teacher Attends Meeting In Washington

Section Studies Developing Youth

Miss Fern Staggs, head of the Home Economics Department, has recently returned from Washington, D. C., where she attended the fifth in a series of White House Conferences. Miss Staggs was a member of Section II, Group 7, whose purpose was to further healthy personality development through such social institutions as the home, church, and school.

The purpose of the conferences, as obtained from a report on the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth, "shall be to consider how we can develop in children the mental, emotional, and spiritual qualities essential to individual happiness and to responsible citizenship, and what physical, economic and social conditions are deemed necessary to this development."

Miss Staggs stated that plans for the conference has been in preparation for two years. The plans included three reports printed in book form by the young people from the Advisory Council on Youth Participation, Advisory Council on Participation of National Organizations, and the third by the Advisory Council on Federal Government Participation.

The conference was made up of approximately 6,000 participants including psychiatrists, obstreticians, child specialists, representatives of all religious denominations, social case workers, representatives of health departments and agencies and home economists. Also participating were college youth representing such groups as Future Homemakers of America, Future Farmers of America, and Young Men and Women Christian Associations. All government agencies were represented.

Of the four conferences held previously, the first two were concerned with problems of groups of socially disadvantaged children in the United States. The second two gave major attention to certain social and economic aspects of well-being of all American children. The recent fifth conference met to consider old and new problems in the light of a new conception of children's needs which has developed in our society.

Dean Savage To Visit Hopewell High School

Dean William W. Savage will attend a College Night to be held at the Hopewell High School tomorrow. During the day he will talk to prospective Longwood students at Petersburg High School.

Last week Dean Savage attended College Day celebrations at Jefferson Senior High School and William Fleming High School in Roanoke and at the William Byrd High School in Vinton.

Mrs. Mary Watkins, Executive Secretary of the College, represented Longwood at a College Day held in Orange last week for the high school seniors in that county.

Longwood Publishes Information Booklet For College-Bound

"Going to College?," a booklet put out by Longwood College to guide college-bound high school students, will be received by the College from the printers during the Christmas holiday.

Included in the 24-page booklet are a number of scenes about the Longwood campus. The booklet is designed to be of value to any college-bound boy or girl and not only to prospective Longwood students.

Among the topics discussed in the booklet is "Do Colleges Differ?" In the discussion which follows it is pointed out how and in what areas colleges differ and why it is important for the college-bound student to know as much as possible about the college of his or her choice.

Each area in which colleges tend to differ is taken up separately in the booklet. Among the areas discussed are size, student bodies, location, accreditation, faculty, buildings and equipment, courses of study offered, and admission requirements.

Also discussed as areas in which colleges differ are the difficulty of studies, the cost of attending, financial assistance, honor systems, religious life, the student health services, the placement of graduates, and social fraternities and sororities.

Each item is discussed as it applies to colleges as a whole and an explanation of some of the differences to be expected is made.

Dr. Goldberg Enumerates Basic Concepts Of Judaism In Address to Student Body

"What Is Judaism?" was the topic of a speech given by Dr. Ariel L. Goldberg in assembly last Thursday. Dr. Goldberg is the Rabbi of the Beth-Ahaba Synagogue in Richmond and is a scholar of Judaism.

"Judaism believes in one God and one humanity," said Dr. Goldberg in beginning his speech. His message was directed towards giving a better understanding of the Jewish people. He traced the beginning of his people back to four thousand years ago, giving much credit to the "human heritage" for many of their beliefs and practices.

"The Jewish people substituted prayers for sacrifice," he said. "We sounded our complete protest, and brought about a new religion."

Dr. Goldberg pointed out that there are many different outlooks among the Jewish people. "However," he stated, "there are certain things they all believe. These are tried and tested principles. No where has anyone turned aside from them."

He went on to list these five basic concepts of Judaism.

"The Jew believes in one God, the Father of all men." Dr. Goldberg broadened this statement by saying, "His whole life and outlook is based on this monotheistic view."

"We believe that man is born with original virtue," Dr. Goldberg stated as the second great principle of Judaism. He went on to say that this is in conflict with many churches views concerning original sin.

"The worthwhileness of man himself" is another of the leading concepts as pointed out by Dr. Goldberg. "Man has a place on this earth. He was placed here powerful. He is not to be subdued or enslaved," he continued. The Jewish people are against anything that would regiment man. "Man is worthwhile; his life can be love; his home can be a temple."

In his fourth point, the speaker stated that Judaism believes that "work outweighs faith; conduct outshines belief; deed is more noteworthy than creed."

The fifth and final concept of Judaism as interpreted by Dr. Goldberg concerns a stress on the whole social scheme, for, he said "The individual finds his own value in the part he plays in the society."

"In spite of many changes, and many mistakes these principles have remained: The unity of God, the purity of man, the worthwhileness of the individual, work over faith, and social righteousness."

Rabbi Goldberg ended his address on a note of hope that our understanding may lead all of us to live in accord with all our wonderful faiths."

"Regardless of your denomination," he concluded, "may your religion help you achieve noble, righteous lives, and help to usher in an era of brotherhood and lasting peace."

Dr. Goldberg's visit to Longwood was sponsored by the Jewish Chautauqua Society.

Are You Under 25?

The countryside has suddenly become beautiful with its blanket of white snow; the streets and highways of that countryside have suddenly become dangerous with a sheet of ice on which the wheels of your car must turn. Can you and will you drive that car safely, observing all traffic rules and watching out for the other fellow so that you won't be one among those of the "under-25" age group who will lose their lives this year in automobile accidents?

According to statistics, 37,400 drivers of all ages were involved in fatal accidents, with 11,400, or 31 per cent, in the under-25 age group. The number is high, almost higher than we can grasp. With the number of deaths so high, there must have been many college students (nearly all of us are under 25 years of age) who never reached their destination when they gleefully started out for a football game or a weekend dance. Many of them too never reached home for the Christmas holidays, or if they did, perhaps they didn't get back.

You've read the slogan, "It could happen to you!" It could, and it will if we young drivers of America do not sit up and notice that it is we who are involved in so many of our country's traffic accidents. Do you drive well, or can you "just" drive? It's important to be able to handle a car well, particularly when the roads are wet or icy — the perfect control is essential. Do you know your road signs, hand signals; do you respect the other driver, do you obey traffic rules even when you don't see the need for them; and most important, do you want to stay alive? If your answer to the above is No, then it may be YOU who won't return from Christmas. Let's be sane and safe, rather than daring and dead.

Mutual Admiration

The administration and student body should be heartily patting each other on the back these days in view of their equally splendid performances of last Thursday.

Not one student who attended assembly last week came away with anything but praises for the administration in having brought Dr. Ariel Goldburg to the campus. Dr. Goldburg's pertinent and down-to-earth explanation of "What is Judaism?" left us feeling that at last something concise and definite had risen from the fog of generalities and moralities that had formerly clouded this issue.

If any member of the faculty or administration present had diverted his attention from the speaker long enough to realize the attentiveness of the usually restless audience, they too must have been impressed.

The problem of assembly has long been a student-administration controversy. The administration and rightly so, could hardly feel justified in seeking out eminent speakers and taking the chance that a whispering, knitting, reading, sleeping audience would embarrass the school as well as the speaker. On the other hand, the student body has proven that these disturbances cease when they are presented an interesting and informative program as they were last week.

Peace On Earth

Along with Santa, the Rotunda staff wants to wish all of you a very Merry Christmas: students, faculty, administration, alumnae, college hostesses, and every one!

This may not be an ordinary Merry Christmas, for to many of you it may be a best time for seeing a brother or sweetheart for the next few months. It could easily be the last Christmas for a while that every member of a family is present. Or there may be empty seats at the Christmas table — those usually occupied by some loved one in the service.

It would be easy to become unhappy and bittter with such thoughts as these. This war threat hits home with every one of us, for this time it is our generation, our age, who will do the fighting. We must hold in our minds at this Christmas time that they are again training to be prepared to bring peace to men on earth.

Let us go into the next year with a determination to hold high the hope in our hearts for a Happy New Year for all the peoples of the world, carrying the true spirit of Christmas with us through the year.

And again, a very Happy Christmas, and a Merry New Year!

As Time Changes

By BUNNY GIBSON

For the past week everyone has been on his toes, wondering what to expect next, and from whom to expect it. One future expectation, caused by the events of the past weeks, is the declaration of a state of national emergency by President Truman. This means mobilization, possibly exceeding that of World War II.

As one writer put it, "for the last five years of delusion on the part of the American peoples, we must now pay. Simply because we thought, with all of our men at home and a declared peace, everyone would want to live forever in domestic bliss. We failed to recognize the significance of the vast red army that never disarmed."

Now we are worse off, perhaps, than we have ever been. If we should be hurled head long into a military conflict with Russia, we have not a 50-50 chance to win . . . while she has been building man-power, we dropped almost to rock bottom. As Thomas Dewey recently put it, we now need speed and skill to mobilize our resources and find out who our real friends are.

To effect this mobilization we need friends—friends in the form of patriots. Americans will have to be patient and willing to sacrifice for freedom; the future will bring more work and less money for most laborers, after controls are levied. However, a temporary lowering of our standard of living seems minute in the face of the results which are almost certain to follow if we remain inactive.

In Korea the scene is gloomy and in another part of Asia, the picture is the same. With no victory in sight in Korea, the French are discouraged to hold on to their small beachhead. No troops will be coming to relieve them; they were counting on victorious UN troops to shift from Korea.

With this gloomy picture in front of us, we know why we must mobilize. There seems to be no other way. An appropriate present from Santa is needed badly this year — happy thoughts on Christmas day.

Looks like we've had our bit of "weather." Only thing is when it snows and you wanta return to your second childhood and "play" in it, by the time you're out of "adult" classes, ye ole sun has been out and the white stuff is all gone

Congrats to the seniors on a very good shin dig. It really put "the feeling" in your blood. Does ones heart good to see all these males around this female institute. Yes-sir boys can't do anything with these Longwood ladies.

Just think you all, next week this time Christmas will be well on the way and we'll all be getting all our gifts and "cheer" and what have you.

This joint was really rockin' along about Wednesday night last week, when Gene Krupa and his boys were here. Just don't see how one human can "get with" dreams like that!

One thing is, L. C. girls are seldom at a loss for a date 'cause Camp Pickett has moved in! Looks like this might be headquarters for General Marshall or somebody.

All you people best be saving your ready cash to vote for the third floor annex Snow Queen. Who knows, she might be Miss America someday. You know you can't go wrong if you stay with 3rd floor annex. Merry times ahead.

Don't you all forget to take Hadacol over the holidays. Just cause you don't have to study doesn't mean you're supposed to fall down on the job. Why the Hadacol folks would go broke."

Now, we want everybody to carry themselves well during the Christmas holidays, too. And at all times be somebody—and Happy New Year everybody.

Tau Theta Pi Sets Social First for Men Sat. Night

Longwood's men added another "first" to their long list of such triumphs Saturday night when Tau Theta Pi, the first men's social fraternity on the campus, held a formal banquet at Longwood Estate before the annual senior dance.

Saturday night also witnessed the first intermission party to be held in Tau Theta Pi's new chapter room in the basement of the Post Office building.

Red Grange, president of the men's fraternity and master of ceremonies at their banquet, in addressing the assembled group of fraternity men and their guests remarked, "This occasion tonight marks another 'first' on the campus of Longwood College to be witnessed by our president Dabney S. Lancaster. He has seen the first men's student body, the first men's student government, the first organized men's athletics, and now the first men's social fraternity."

To Dr. Lancaster, guest of honor at the banquet, Ned continued, "We hope, Dr. Lancaster, that there will be many more firsts for the men on the campus of Longwood College and that these organizations which many of us here tonight have participated in will continue to grow and become a permanent part of Longwood College."

Dr. Lancaster, as he addressed the group, remarked that the organization of a social fraternity marked another step for laying a firm foundation for co-education at Longwood College. He congratulated the men and also the women of the College for the cooperation they have given the men in forming this organization.

"Tau Theta Pi exemplifies the Question: What do you want Santa Claus to bring you for Christmas?

Eleanor Koch: Not all clothes. I always like to get some kind of toy or game to brighten things up.

Maria Jackson: "All I want for Christmas is a month's lost sleep!"

Nat Lancaster: A promise that there will be no more blue Mondays following marvelous week ends.

Ethel Straw: For Christmas I simply want food, food, and more food.

Donna Staples: I want Santa to leave me a package about 6' tall that weighs about 180 pounds and has broad shoulders and—well anyway you get the idea, Santa.

Judith Spindler: Ditto, Donna. H-S gets dull when all the boys leave!

Ruth Lacey: I want two things. Jerry here and a trousseau. That would seem to bring April of '52 closer.

Betsy Wilson: A stocking full of goodies—what else?

Charlotte K. Jones: Rudolph the red-nosed reindeer.

Bert Browning: A really old fashioned Christmas with snow and everything that goes to make it that way—and peace! If Santa can do it.

Madeleine Bigot: A little trip to France???

Janice Pinkard: A man! (Good luck Santa).

Lou Jamison: Some solitude and relaxation in front of an open fireplace—like to see my Dad, too!

Jill Pifer: A big New Year's Eve party.

Shirley Bloxton: $1,000,000 in a billfold that is in a man's suit pocket and that suit is being worn by a man.

Joyce Hamlet: Just plain Bill.

Billie Barber: Plenty of snowmen!

Mrs. Tabb: Just Jack for Christmas.

Norma Saunders: A big sprig of mistletoe and the right man to go with it.

Jo Anne McCombs: Snow, so we will be snowbound.

Winnie Murdock: Snowbound in the Star City.

Joanne Steck: Goodies.

Faye White: A sus-prize.

Mrs. Cox: A little rest from the band, piano, and hammering around on Post Office corner.

Dr. Moss: Some of Mrs. Cox's ability to talk.

Dean Savage: A little more peace in this world.

Jane Branch: A private coach in English class.

Gwen Tibbs: My husband!

Audrey Hawkins: A few term papers.

Blanton Ferguson: My man from Carolina

Nancy Adkins: Some male in my mail box.

June Wilmoth: Somebody to give my cold to.

H2O Water Pageant Tells Tale of Old-Time Christmas

The annual water pageant was held in the college pool December 8. The story was that of an old grandmother relating to her granddaughter, the story of the things she used to do to celebrate Christmas when she was a little girl.

She began with one of the most important and traditional things about Christmas, snow. She told of their playing in it and how much it added to their celebration; of the beauty and peace of it. Aquatic members of the Club then proceded to form different snowflake designs in the water. Next in the Grandmother's tale was her story of how the poinsettias they used to decorate with added gaiety and color to the Christmas celebration. Meanwhile, the poinsettias had been sitting by the window calmly planted in their respective flower pots. When she uttered these words, they promptly proceeded to form a huge red and silver poinsettia in the water.

Then Rudolph, the famous red-nosed reindeer came in, and showed that he didn't care that the other reindeer didn't like him, for he swam and played very gaily all by himself. He was followed by the sleighbells, who seemed to represent the other reindeer who liked Rudolph, now that Santa has noticed him and asked him to lead his sleigh.

Then the traditional and best-known part of Christmas was introduced—a huge Christmas tree. The pageant ended by the girls spelling out H2O.

PIONEERS PICK UP NEEDED WIN WITH CREWE

The Longwood Pioneers received at least a win last Monday night in the home gym when they turned back the Crewe Town Team 38-23. Previously the Crewe Team edged the Pioneers 49-47 in the final minutes of a top turvey contest in which the home team just got started just a little too late. The recent victory was just what the doctor ordered for the locals. After being trounced by much superiorly experienced and reserved larger schools of Medical College, National Business College, and the junior varsity of Lynchburg College, the Pioneers have settled down to contests within their own class range. The team should now go with full power displaying a much classier ball club than last year.

THUS FAR PIONEERS SHOW LITTLE IMPROVEMENT

Besides the fact that the Pioneers have been the only state team that has held the Medical College under 80 points so far in MCV's three straight wins, the locals have definitely not looked the part of an improved ball club on the hardwood floor over last year. In practice it is clearly evident that the squad this year has much more inclusive potential alities than last year. On the court in games, the club has floundered around unconfidently and has actually scored less than last year's feebly knitted offense. It is felt that a win will snap the Pioneers out of the rut and into a brand of ball that potentially they at least sum up to be.

SHEVICK WEAKENED PHYSICALLY

Jerry Shevick, the Pioneer backbone, hurt his back in the Medical College game and has been able to play only restricted ball in the last few contests. Shevick tallied 22 points in the Lynchburg game and is slowly coming back to his cat-like court game on offense and defense. With Shevick weakened much of the scoring responsibility falls on Smallwood, who amply produced last year but oddly enough is not measuring up this year to last year's performance. Rebounds are now falling into the hands of Williams, Shevick, Peace, and Smallwood. The offense must now come through as it can.

AMERICAN LEAGUE ELIMINATES RAIN DETERMINED FLAGS

The American League has eliminated all possibilities that the flag may be determined by the weather from now on. By unanimous vote, it was decreed that after the close of the season the president could assign two extra days for the playing off of postponed contests which might affect the championship.

TAR HEELS OUT TO CHALLENGE NC STATE'S SC TITLE

The North Carolinians are getting a fast start this year on the basketball court and promise to give North Carolina State a run for their money in the bid for Southern Conference Championship. In five games to date UNC has defeated McCrary, 84-57; Elon, 57-48; Hane Hosiery, 75-58; Richmond, 69-46; and Davidson, 72-49. Coach Tom Scott has a smooth-working, fast breaking, predominately sophomore squad which he believes to be the best Tar Teel potential since 1946.

LC Pioneers Defeat Crewe For First Win of Season

Sportin' Around

by Lou Jamison

The water pageant that was presented last Friday certainly offered a wonderful spectacle to those who saw it. Do you realize the practice and preparation that went into those two performances? First of all, the theme had to be made so that it would fit swimming formations. Each formation had to be worked out on paper before practices could begin. After all this, practices were held. The girls in the pageant spent anywhere from one to three hours in the water each night when their group practiced. When all these preparations had been completed, you saw the annual water pageant. It was really worth the work! Hats off to the H2O Club and the rest of the girls who were in the pageant—it was swell!

The battle's on. What battle?—why the one for the color cup, of course. As things stand now the Green and White have five points for winning the fall singles tennis tournament, and ten points for having the most members on the varsity hockey team. The Red and Whites have ten points for winning the class hockey games. Now, the basketball and volleyball seasons are here. What will be the score on these, girls?

There is no doubt whatsoever about the basketball season being here. The opening practice was held last Tuesday, and from the looks of the gym, practically half of the student body was there. Some class is really going to have a wonderful team this year, not to mention the Longwood varsity. Tryouts for varsity will continue throughout this week and possibly part of next week—oops, there I go leaving out Christmas vacation—a body could

Shevick Nets 15 As High Scorer

The Longwood Pioneers broke into the win column last Monday night with a convincing 38-23 victory over the Crewe Town Team on the local court. Longwood scored first with a hook shot from the left corner by Pioneer co-captain, Jerry Shevick, and never thereafter relinquished the lead. Crewe threatened in the second quarter and pulled up within one point at the half time, 13-12, but the Pioneers steadily forged ahead after the intermission to grab a relatively comfortable lead.

High scorer was Jerry Shevick, of Longwood with 15 points. Les Smallwood, who for the past 3 games has been terrifically off his game, finally warmed up a bit after a scoreless first half to closely follow Shevick with 14 tallies. Crewe's scoring honors was divided three ways with McCann, Sydnor, and Beamer each netting 6.

In a previous contest with Crewe, the Pioneers collected only 7 points in the first half and despite a 32 point last half barrage lost in the fading minutes 49-47.

Zeta Tau Alpha National Officer Visits Local Group

Miss Jan Doty, of River Forrest, Illinois, is visiting Zeta Tau Alpha Fraternity on this campus this week. Miss Doty is Chapter Counselor for the fraternity.

A graduate of Iowa Wesleyan College Miss Doty majored in sociology. During the past summer she worked at the Central Office of the Fraternity in Illinois. She began her work as Chapter Counselor September 5 of this year.

Before her visit to the Longwood campus, Miss Doty journeyed to Washington University in St. Louis, Mo.; University of Louisville, Louisville, Ky.; University of South Carolina, Columbia, S. C.; George Washington College, Washington, D. C.; Chestertown, Md., University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Penn.; University of Virginia, Charlottesville; Madison College, Harrisonburg; and Randolph-Macon Woman's College, Lynchburg.

Information Booklet

Then the situation concerning each item at Longwood is briefly outlined and discussed.

The second section of the booklet, entitled "How?," gives suggestion as to how the college-bound boy or girl may obtain information about the colleges in which he or she is interested.

The third section in the booklet is called "Some Suggestions" and gives briefly a few general facts and hints which will be of use to the new college students, at Longwood or at any other college.

Dean William W. Savage has asked that any Longwood student or faculty member who wishes to have this booklet sent to some high school student leave the name and address of that student in the Dean's office.

Chesterfield Selects Creger To Serve As Representative

Sara Creger, junior from Roanoke, has been selected by the Liggett and Myers Tobacco Company as the student Chesterfield representative for Longwood College.

Sara has announced the intentions of the Chesterfield Company to sponsor a contest in which the contestants will be asked to pick the probable scores of future Pioneer basketball games. Prizes in the contest will be cartons of Chesterfields. Exact details and the date of the contest will be announced at a later date.

Any student who is planning a trip to New York City in the near future and wishes to see any of the Chesterfield radio programs while there has been asked to notify Sara at least two weeks prior to the visit. With two weeks notice, Sara can secure from the Chesterfield company complimentary tickets to the broadcasts.

LC Library Sends Books To Philippines

On December 1 the Longwood library sent over one hundred books to the Legarda Memorial College library in the Philippines. This donation was part of a national project with Baltimore serving as a receiving center for the books before reshipment to the Philippines.

The books sent were duplicates which had been given to the College library.

Tau Theta Pi's new chapter room witnessed its first social function during the intermission of senior dance. The newly decorated and furnished chapter room in the old biology department was open during the intermission to all members of the fraternity and their guests.

Still in the stages of completion in the room is a mural being done by Gene Moore under the direction of Miss Virginia Bedford, of the College art department.

According to Ned, the fraternity was able to open its room Saturday night only due to the cooperation of Mr. Samuel Graham, business manager of the College; Mr. Paul Trear, and Mr. Baldwin, College painters; Mr. Cox, College electrician; and many members of the student body, faculty, and administration who contributed time, effort, and advice to the fraternity.

Co-Chairmen Announce Date for Nominations For Queen, Attendants

Students To Vote Tues., January 30

Nominations for the 1951 May Day queen and court will be held tomorrow from 8 a. m. until 4 p. m., according to an announcement by Hilda Lewis and Marian Higgs, recently elected general co-chairman of the festivities.

Nominations will be received at the table in front of the Dean of the College's office in Ruffner Hall. Each student will nominate two students for queen and ten for the May Day Court. Each list of nominations should include at least one girl from each class, Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, faculty advisor to May Day, observed.

Election of the queen, the maid-of-honor, and the court will be held Tuesday night, January 30, immediately after supper in the main recreation hall. At that time the four nominees for queen receiving the highest number of nomination votes will be presented for queen and her maid-of-honor.

The queen, her maid-of-honor, and the court will be announced in the following issue of the Rotunda.

Heads Selected

Max Acree will serve as business manager for the 1951 May Day and Edith Duma and Helen Egerton as dance co-chairmen. Helen Castros and Sue Webb are co-chairmen of the staging committee and Hilda Bauserman is in charge of transportation.

Laura Beaver and Billie Dunlap are music co-chairmen and Gladys Savage is in charge of costumes with Amanda Wright and Janice Pinkard as her assistants.

The theme of the 1951 May Day pageant will be centered about the polka. The pageant will be presented in the amphitheater a the Longwood Estate, on Saturday, May 5, and will be followed by the traditional May Day dance sponsored by Orchesis in the College gymnasium that night.

Virginians To Play For Junior Dance Sat., February 17

Tuggle Announces Committee Heads

Pete Weaver and his band, the Virginians, of Emporia will provide music for the annual Junior dance to be held Saturday, February 17, at 8 p. m., in the College gymnasium, according to May Henry Sadler who is chairman of the music committee.

Pat Tuggle, chairman of the dance, has announced committee heads selected at a meeting of the junior class. Marian Beckner will act as chairman of the floor committee while Emma Harris, Maria Jackson, Lois Ash, Gene Moore, and Edith Kennon will be in charge of decorations for the dance.

Publicity heads are Mary Moore Starr and Bunny Ricks, and Fobe Straw will be in charge of tickets. Inez Hughes will act as head of the invitations committee while Betty Scott Borkey and Dolores Hoback head the committee for the junior party. Favors will be planned by Joan Pritchett and Mildred Blessing.

Schedule Deadline Set

Students must have their spring schedules completely approved by the head of the department in which they are majoring and the Dean of the College, and turned into the Dean's office by 5 p. m. Friday, January 12. According to an announcement by Jean Savage, those students who fail to do so must remain here and complete their schedules on Saturday, January 27.

Classes for the spring semester will begin at 8:05 a. m., on Monday morning, January 29.

Mr. Hamilton Will Speak To Students In Assembly

Journalist To Talk On World Situation In Present Time

Mr. Thomas Jefferson Hamilton, chief of the New York Times United Nations staff, will speak to the student body tomorrow at assembly. He will speak on a topic concerning the world situation today.

Mr. Hamilton's work and experience make him well qualified to speak on this topic. He has covered the entire atomic-disarmament controversy in the U. N. and his reports have won high praise for their value in educating public opinion. These reports on the U. N have been widely distributed throughout the United States and Canada by the New York Times syndicate.

As a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the University of Georgia, he won a Rhodes Scholarship which he used to take an honors degree in Modern History at Oxford in 1930. The following year he began his newspaper work with the Atlanta Journal, and three years later he joined the Washington Bureau of the Associated Press. He was sent to London by the A. P. in 1936.

At the end of the Spanish Civil War he was sent to Madrid as correspondent of the New York Times. After two years in Spain, he returned to the U. S. to join the Navy. While Mr. Hamilton was waiting to be accepted in the Navy, he spent there months in Chile as an exchange journalist.

In 1943, his book on Franco-Spain, "Appeasement's Child", became a best seller. The book incured the official displeasure of the Franco government and Spain formally demanded that Mr. Hamilton be dismissed from naval service. After this, he served on a propaganda unit in France and later in the Pacific as an air combat information officer.

Sophomore Class to Present Four-Act Production Friday In College 'Rec' Hall at 8:30

Standards Group Presents Ruling To Student Body

A recent recommendation passed by Student Standards committee will be presented to the student body at its next regular meeting. The resolution states that no student may serve more than one term as a class officer.

According to Margaret Thomas, chairman of the committee, Student Standards recommends that the ruling go into effect this spring with class elections. Those students now holding class offices would not be allowed to run for re-election under the ruling.

To become effective the resolution will have to be passed by the student body. In its present form it is only a recommendation.

Student Standards feels that the passage of the resolution would allow the classes to recognize more leadership and give a wider selection of capable students eligible for election to major offices. The committee also feels that such a system would encourage the interest of more students in the activities of the class.

The members of Student Standards in releasing their actions for publication expressed a wish to familiarize the students with the recommendation before they are asked to vote on it and have asked that each student give it their earnest consideration before the next student body meeting.

Library Fines Due

Each student's Library record must be cleared in regard to overdue books and fines by January 20, 1951 before he can receive final grades for the semester, Dr. Beverly Ruffin, Librarian, has announced.

Dramatic Groups Choose Play, Date

"As You Desire Me,' a mystery play, was selected last night at the Dramatic Club executive board meeting as the next production to be given by the club. The date scheduled for the play is March 30 and 31.

"As You Desire Me" was written by Nobel Prize winner, the Italian author, Pirandello. Catherline Cornell played the leading lady in the play while it was on Braodway. Tryouts by the Longwood and Hampden-Sydney students will be held on January 29, 30, and 31 following exams.

During the meeting plans were discussed for an essay contest based on the play. A prize will be offered to the student who is able to write a paper giving the most convincing evidence on their opinion as to whom "Cia," the leading lady of the play is.

A plan to develop the present apprentice groups into classes for credit was also discussed.

Executive Secretary To Visit Warick High

Mrs. Mary Watkins, executive secretary of the College, will go to Warick High School in Morrison, January 11. While there she will take part in the College Night program being held.

Dr. Wynne To Preside At Meeting

Dr. John P. Wynne, head of the department of education and philosophy, will preside over the annual meeting of Region III, Philosophy of Education Society, at Wilson Teachers College, Washington, D. C., January 12-13.

Dr Floyd F. Swertfeger, associate professor of education, will lead a discussion on the different meanings of Philosophy of Education during the morning session on Friday.

Dr. Wynne will present a resume of the report of the director of the study on the teaching of Philosophy of Education on the criteria for use in evaluating courses in Philosophy of Education.

Region III of the Philosophy of Education Society includes North Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee, Maryland and the District of Columbia and is part of the national society of philosophers.

Orchesis Changes Date of Recital

The date of Orchesis recital has been changed from February 17 to March 17 according to an announcement by Marian Beckner, president of the group.

Preliminary plans for the recital were announced before the Christmas holidays at which time a number of solo parts were assigned. Due to the postponement of the recital no additional parts were announced at this time.

The recital this year will be presented concurrently with the annual "Dance Day" to which students from the high schools in this vicinity are invited to learn more about modern dance.

Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, Orchesis advisor, will visit the high schools in Buckingham, Victoria, South Hill, Kenbridge, and Chase City during the last of January or the first of February to observe the progress in modern dance.

'Hour' To Feature Gov't Discussion

"The Longwood Hour" will feature an informal round table discussion concerning the basis for representation in the Virginia General Assembly. The discussion will be presented by the Government 442 class.

The group will discuss the representation problem from a population standpoint bringing in other factors during the discussion.

Mr. Thomas A. Malloy, instructor in history and social sciences, and instructor of the government class, will lead the discussion. Members of the class who will participate are Jack Heugel, James Clark, Madison McClintic, Robert Williams, and Joanne Messmer. Faye White, Betty Scott Borkey, Bunny Gibson, Martha Atkinson and Margaret Turner will also take part in the discussion.

The program is heard weekly over station WFLO at 4:30 p. m.

Tickets On Sale In Ruffner Hall

"Quartet", a production in four acts, will be presented by the sophomore class in the College Rec hall at 8:30 p. m., Friday night.

Tickets for the presentation went on sale today after lunch and after dinner on second floor Rotunda for 35c.

Portions of the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta "The Mikado" starring Nan Bland, Sarah Leatherman and Nancy Driskill, will be given in the first act.

Shifting from the oriental to the fantastic "The Wizard of Oz" will be the theme of the second act. Sarah Harvie will be Dorothy, with Barbara White, Nancy Lawrence and Margie Hall as the other main characters.

"A feature attraction will be presented during intermission time", Barbara Caskey, co-chairman of the production recently revealed. "Spike", Anne Jones and his city-slickers will perform numbers at this time.

Dance Featured

Featured in "Dance Fantasy" will be Jane Lively and Anne Murphy, in "Slaughter on Tenth Avenue," and Celeste Bishop and Sarah Anne Jones in "The Red Shoes." All of the dances are under the direction of Jane Lively.

Lucy Page Hall and Winston Johnsor will hold the lead roles in the portion of "Showboat", presented in the fourth act. Also singing in this will be Betty Collier Sis Burton, and Billy Dunlap.

Billy and Jean Partridge will act as accompanists for the entire production.

Doughnuts and cokes will be sold by the class during intermission at one end of the Rec.

Seats will be reserved for the seniors, sister class to the sophomores. The entire production is being held in honor of the Class of '51.

14 Seniors Observe Richmond Hospitals' Physical Therapy

The senior physical education majors enrolled in physical education 340, physical education for the handicapped, went to Richmond yesterday to observe the physical therapy practiced at McGuire Veterans' Hospital, the Baruch Center of Physical Therapy at the Medical College of Virginia, and at the Crippled Children's hospital.

The trip was undertaken as a part of the class work and the group was accompanied by Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, associate professor of physical education, who teaches physical education 340.

The class is a study of and practice in presenting activities for the handicapped, typical and temporarily disabled. During the trip the class was able to observe physical therapy as applied to both adults and children.

Among the senior physical education majors who made the trip were Ann Biddlecomb, Denise Calvo, Jessie Carson, Helen Egerton, Jeanne Farmer, Nancye Gillie, Betsy Gravely and Margaret Hines.

Hilda Lewis, Ann Lynch, Romine Mahood, Minnie Pridgen, Edna Rodriguez, and Inge Velazquez also made the trip.

Rotunda Headlines Tell of Triumphs, Setbacks, Laughs, Tears of Past Years

by Sally Brickman

Pasting the noisemaker, a bit of confetti, a dance program into the last page of 1950's scrapbook culminates a year of changes, "firsts," laughs and tears. Leafing through we note Rotunda headlines that tell of Longwood's triumphs and setbacks, her traditions—all connoting pride in the past and and inspiration for the future.

Among Longwood's firsts was the birth of her first college band, the installation of Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary collegiate journalism fraternity, the founding of Tau Theta Pi, Ned Orange, president. "Fats" Bobb wagged into a girdle, and Hunter Joe perfected an appealing dance routine in the Men's A.A. production, "How To Be An Educated Fool'. Science students rode haughtily up and down the elevators in Stevens Hall, and the immensity of the auditorium is now competing with that of the library. Freshmen crowed and upperclassmen snared bungees at the new maple furniture in Ruffner Hall.

Tradition was challenged when students and alumni, alike, questioned the reason for Chi's existence. The Red and White's copped the color cup in June and Clem Allen piled up record-breaking points in athletics. Sara Creger headed Bird Club as the SPBB announced 1950's goals. Changes carried shocks. There was an audible sigh from the Student Body when we were given an extra set of cuts, and cries of disbelief when the Virginia Senate killed a bill destined to make Longwood co-educational. The eyes of Longwood students watched a spic and span new building rise from the piles of brick which had once been Whitehouse.

Rotunda headlines proudly proclaimed literary triumphs for Longwood, as the Colonnade was placed second and the Rotunda first in CSPA competition. Again at the spring VIPA meet The Rotunda received awards. Longwood students and college guests witnessed the moving and laudable performance of Hilda Edwards as she danced through the sorrows of the "Plum Tree," Orchesis' dramatic recital. And later, we laughed and cried through the French comedy, "The Madwoman of Chaillot." Miss Wheeler, former dramatics professor, warmed our hearts with her recital of "The Littlest Angel," at our annual Christmas banquet. All of the upperclassmen had missed that rich voice.

The "Longwood Hour," voicing the gamut of our cultural interests, gave Farmville Miss Burger's trip to South Africa, Mlle. Bigot's review of French theatre and art, women and men students battled through a quiz program on which the men were bested.

Juniors danced through the "Swinging Doors" to the sweet music of the Virginians and as seniors, their theme was "The Night Before Christmas." Sophomores, as Greek gods decided that "Women Are Here To Stay."

In response to the world's need for understanding, assembly programs brought Dr. Asirvatham from India, Mr. Roger Carter, British Education Officer, Mr. Lawoyin from Nigeria, and Dr. Goldberg, Rabbi of the Beth Ahaba Synagogue, Richmond.

And so 1950 is gone. The new year begins on a serious note as Korea takes our friends and we are reminded sharply of 1951's obligations. As we open a new scrapbook, we anticipate even more seriously, headlines of new challenges and new firsts.

'Standards' Recommends Officer Change. . .

At the next student body meeting a recommendation made by the Student Standards Committee will be presented for a vote.

This recommendation states that no student may be allowed to hold a class office for more than one term. In effect this would mean that each class, in its four year existence at Longwood would have four entirely different sets of officers.

With such a plan in effect, more student leadership could be encouraged, recognized, and utilized. The members of each class would be challenged to seriously consider the qualities of their office seekers; they could no longer adopt the principle of "as long as they have done nothing drastically wrong, let's reelect 'em."

But the picture has two sides—under such a ruling extremely capable students would be forbidden to guide the destiny of their class during more than one fourth of their college career. Valuable experience would be thrown by the wayside. And since it is true, if not publicly admitted, that every student does not possess the qualities of good leadership, some junior class will wonderingly approach their final year aware of the fact that they have a suitable president for every other organization in school except their senior class.

There is argument, and good argument, both pro and con the recommendation. Each member of the student body should be aware of these arguments and ready to take his or her stand when the question is put at the next student body meeting.

As it now stands the recommendation is just that—a recommendation. The students may select or reject it—but they must do one or the other wisely.

The Easiest Way. . .

From frosh to senior the general topic of conversation this week is schedules. More specifically, the topic of conversation is "How can I rearrange my schedule so as to get the easiest classes at the best times."

The general attitude among the student body seems to be that the ideal situation is no classes before 10:05 a. m., no classes after lunch and of course, no Saturday classes. And if you can manage to squeeze into these few periods only those classes that you can "shoot the bull" in and don't have to crack a book for, you're top man on the totem pole this week.

Unfortunately, these students haven't stopped to realize why they are signing up for classes at all. Surely, they must have some other motive for being here besides sleeping all morning and going away every week end.

Dozens of students that we have talked to have honestly admitted that things would be a lot easier in college if they'd done less "getting by" in high school. The same theory applies to college, only more so. A person can fairly easily skimp through, taking only required courses and putting into them only the required effort. And with a degree he can get a job without too much trouble, but the length of the job and the success of it will depend on a lot more than he can then offer.

For most of us, this is the last formal education we will get before having to make our way in the world. Why waste it?

Look Before You Leap. . .

Just the other night in a room on second floor Cuningham we heard a group of girls discussing possibilities for May Court participants. Not only the juniors, but every student at Longwood, it seems has already begun to think about the qualities they want to see in Longwood's May Day representatives. It's almost inevitable; after Christmas, what can be bigger than the coming May Day festivities?

When we nominate tomorrow, there are several things of prime importance that we must keep in mind about the girl we choose to represent us. Everyone immediately cries, "Beauty!" and they're probably right. An attractive face and figure are very important, for the young lady who sits or stands before a large crowd for hours should be pleasant to the eye.

As important as beauty, grace, and poise are, never has the May Day come and gone that the Longwood lovelies have not had to walk and dance. The ability to do both of these gracefully and with ease makes the annual pageant much more effective.

So Longwood students have selected in their own minds the girls cut to this pattern? Good! But does she have a last important trait—her average? When it comes time to vote for the May Day Queen and her court this year lets remember to find a girl with the lucky combination of beauty and brains. That shouldn't be too hard, since the requirement has been lowered to only the average she needs to stay in school —; just look around. Keeping in mind these requirements that are so important to a sparkling representation, our May Day dreams will materialize.

Stecking My Neck Out

by Joanne Steck

Well—back to the grind! Nothing like a nice long vacation to get you nice and tired out. Looks like we all came back broke and ready for exams to boot. It's something like the vacation you take in the summertime.

A vacation is something you take (usually for two weeks) for which you go too far, spend too much money and get too tired so that when you return you're too worn out to work for another vacation which you shouldn't have taken in the first place! Humans are funny things, aren't they?

I 'spose—least it sounds like—everybody had the best and merriest Christmas they ever had. Party! Party! Party! Tell you you can't do anything with these Longwood ladies. Like I always say, "It does you good to get away!"

Seems like the new buildings, and what have you, are coming right along. For a while there on third floor annex, I didn't think they were gonna have enough plaster to finish.

Saw something the other day I thought you folks might enjoy. It's called "Why worry." It goes something like this. There are only two things to worry about. Either you're well, or you're sick. If you're well, then there's nothing to worry about. But if you're sick there are only two things to worry about. Either you will get well or you'll die. If you get well, then there is nothing to worry about. If you die there are only two things to worry about. Either you will go to heaven or down below. If you go to Heaven, then there's nothing to worry about, but if you go down below you'll be so busy shaking hands with friends, you won't have time to worry. So I ask you—why worry?

See you next week (I hope!)

Letter to Editor

To the Student Body:

What have you done today as a self-governing member of the Longwood College Student Body?

Democracy is a funny thing. The democratic system of government, such as we profess to have here at our school, entails an election of a student council which serves as an executive body and also functions to formulate student rules and regulations necessary to the welfare of the entire Student Body. This type of government is of student origin. It is not up to the Council alone to enforce student regulation. They cannot be successful in this without the cooperation of the entire Student Body. You may ask how such cooperation can be brought about. Attendance and participation in Student Body Meetings would be a major step in this direction. It is the duty of each student to bring to the attention of everyone at these meetings anything which is dissatisfactory to them, whether it be concerned with some petty rule or regulation or with some major question of interest to all. It is then the Council's duty to see what can be done about it. The Student Council does not exist simply as a Police Force, but as a group which tries to carry out any improvement seriously recommended by their fellow students.

The beginning of a New Year seems to be a good time for us to look at our self-governing organization and try to make improvements. It has been suggested that we consider the organization of an Honor Council — a council elected seperately from the Student Council, which will deal only with cases involving infractions of the Honor Code: lying, stealing, cheating, and falsification of records. The advantages of such a two-body government would be primarily that it would make for a more smoothly functioning organization; more capable students would be able to serve in responsible positions; and the very existence of a separate Honor Council would serve to strengthen the Honor System of our school. A step such as this would not be altogether advantageous in that our school is fairly small in enrollment for such

By BUNNY GIBSON

A week ago today the 82nd Congress of the United States convened. New leaders were holding the reins of the Democratic party. But it soon looked as if McFarland and McKellar were majority leaders leading a minority. The Dixiecrats, at last, had found a way to bottle up the administration's fair-deal program—or so they hoped. A coalition with the Republicans was formed with this in mind.

This new congress, now in session, has an unpredictable year ahead. One prediction, however, seems safe—that '51 will be stormy for them. Much important legislation is on the calendar; increased draft quotas and/or UMT, price and wage control power to the president. Not the least of the worries is the matter of appropriating money for defending ourselves and our neighbors.

Already a controversy is underway. One important question is how good—or how important to our safety—these neighbors should be before we aid them. The pros and cons are not all in the open yet, however the proposed re-examination of our foreign policy could hardly hurt our lawmakers in deciding the wisest course to take.

We know President Truman and others are in favor of keeping all the non-communists countries free, if possible, by diplomatic action, if not, by force.

Campus Cogitations

Question: What is your greatest ambition for 1951?

Hilda Bauserman: To invent something that will make lesson plans

Faye White: To go to California.

Chris Davis: To become a senior.

Joye Humphreys: To gain ten pounds and add two inches to my height.

Peggy Harris: To learn to sing like Mary Margaret.

Inez Hughes: To learn how to play the ukelele so I can accompany Peggy.

Eloise Hodges: To swim the English Channel.

Billie Marie Wood: To graduate from kindergarten.

Anne Motley: To get out of school.

Maria Jackson: To fall in love.

Pat Tuggle: To plant my feet on 5th Avenue.

Bootie Poarch: To see what they see in New York.

Jane Seward: To pass student teaching.

Anne Moseley: To pass business math.

Shirley Grogan Duncan: To go to Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Alma Bedinger: To get a job in Norfolk.

Edith Duma: To finish my philosophy paper.

Virginia Petts: To survive student teaching.

Betty L. Baker: To get out of here and create a life of my own.

Frances Everett: To explore the world for a change.

Joanne Steck: To get the most I can for the least.

Lou Jamison: To fall out of love and get back to my studying.

Millie Carter: To progress.

Kitty Hamlet: To be a good girl.

Millie Lewis: To party every week end.

Betty Johnson: To get married as soon as Uncle Sam and Poppa Sam will let me.

Jackie Foreman: To pass psychology.

Juanita Hudson: To have a long vacation.

Frances Graube: To quit school and take in washing.

Jean Jinnett: To make S. P. N. S. a better organization.

Helen Barrow: To find out who my secret admirer is.

Amanda Wright: To be ambitious enough to have an ambition.

Anita Belle Bagley: To get my pin from P. C.

Cleo Holladay: To go to Duke every time I want to.

Jean Smith and Mary Leigh Meredith: To be able to stand up under the strain until March

Sophs Request Guys, Gals To Save Money for Musical

by Jean Jinnett

Listen, all of you guys and gals who enjoy a true demonstration of real talent and good looks. The sophomores are hard at work on another of their productions, so those of you who seem to find yourselves forever broke (like me) had better quit favoring the Snack Bar and Tea Room with your overwhelming business.

This year the production will be a musical, and the sophs are already convinced that it's gonna be even better than last year's silent movie theme. Of course, the entire theme of this predicted Academy Award winner cannot yet be announced, but I will say that the entire class will make up the cast, and if I know the class of '53, there will be more laughs than you can find in U. Va.'s latest edition of the Spectator.

And (as if that weren't enough) you should see those dance numbers. I was watching practice last night (you know me; somehow my talents have managed to stay hidden so far, and I usually end up either just watching or playing the part of a clown or a witch). Oh, well—anyhow, like I said, I was watching practice and boy was I surprised to find out what our own Murphy, Kunkler, Blade, and Kitty could do with those jazz tunes! On the other hand, if you like the high brow side, you'll be happy to hear that Stinky, Winston and several others have also been practicing like mad.

Sonie Kile is already bursting with ideas for the costumes, and from what I hear, they alone will be worth the price of the production. You know, you can always count on the sophs for one thing if nothing else—they always manage to come up with the type of entertainment that could be enjoyed by anyone from Mary Margaret Truman to Mae West.

Yes sir, boys! Keep in mind the date, January 12th, for another demonstration of what Stuck and Gaskey, along with 100 other versatile sophomores can do. It's predicted to be the greatest sensation since "Gone With The Wind."

an extensive governing organization as the above move would create.

As active members of student government we ask you to give this question serious thought. A student body meeting will be held in the near future at which each student will have the opportunity of expressing her views on the subject. Also at this meeting recommendations for modifications in rules and regulations generally will be accepted. We urge you to take advantage of this opportunity. You do not complete, but merely begin, your functioning as a self-governing member of this student body by voting once a year for members of the Council.

Sportin' Around

by Lou Jamison

Basketball seems to have captured the sportlight this week. Everyone has been anxiously awaiting the basketball season ever since the beginning of this semester, and at last it's here.

Just before Christmas vacation, tryouts for the Varsity Squad began. Our basketball minded students played as well as they could and patiently waited for the list of the Varsity Squad to be posted. Now that the Varsity Squad has been practicing together, it is easy to see that Longwood is on its way to a good season. What a team we have!
